In the first century of the Christian era, Tacitus (perhaps the greatest of Roman historians) wrote that the object of history was "to rescue virtuous acts from the oblivion to which the want of records would consign them."
BIOGRAPHICAL

CHAPTER LII.

THE PART OF BIOGRAPHY IN GENERAL HISTORY—CITIZENS OF SANGAMON COUNTY—PERSONAL SKETCHES ARRANGED IN ENCYCLOPEDIC ORDER.

The verdict of mankind has awarded to the Muse of History the highest place among the Classic Nine. The extent of her office, however, appears to be, by many minds, but imperfectly understood. The task of the historian is comprehensive and exacting. True history reaches beyond the doings of court or camp, beyond the issue of battles, or the effects of treaties, and records the trials and the triumphs, the failures and the successes of the men who make history. It is but an imperfect conception of the philosophy of events that fails to accord to portraiture and biography its rightful position as a part—and no unimportant part —of historical narrative. Behind and beneath the activities of outward life the motive power lies out of sight, just as the furnace fires that work the piston and keep the ponderous screw revolving are down in the darkness of the hold.
So, the impulsive power which shapes the course of communities may be found in the moulding influences which form its citizens.

It is no mere idle curiosity that prompts men to wish to learn the private as well as the public lives of their fellows. Rather is it true that such desire tends to prove universal brotherhood; and the interest in personality and biography is not confined to men of any particular caste or vocation.

The list of those to whose lot it falls to play a conspicuous part in the great drama of life is comparatively short; yet communities are made up of individuals, and the aggregate of achievements—no less than the sum total of human happiness—is made up of the deeds of these men and women whose primary aim, through life, is faithfully to perform the duty that comes nearest to hand. Individual influence upon human affairs will be considered potent or insignificant according to the standpoint from which it is viewed. To him who, standing upon the seashore, notes the ebb and flow of the tides and listens to the sullen roar of the waves, as they break upon the beach in seething foam, seemingly battering at their limitations, the ocean appears so vast as to need no tributaries. Yet, without the smallest rill that helps to swell the "Father of Waters,"n the mighty torrent of the Mississippi would be lessened, and the beneficent influence of the Gulf Stream diminished. Countless streams, currents and counter currents—sometimes mingle, sometimes counteracting each other —collectively combine to give motion to the accumulated mass of waters. So is it—and so must it ever be—in the ocean of human action, which is formed by the blending and repulsion of currents of thought, of influence and of life, yet more numerous and more tortuous than those which form the "fountains of the deep."
The acts and characters of men, like the several faces that compose a composite picture, are wrought together into a compact or heterogeneous whole. History is condensed biography; "Biography is History teaching by example."

It is both interesting and instructive to rise above the generalization of history and trace, in the personality and careers of the men from whom it sprang, the principles and influences, the impulses and ambitions, the labors, struggles and triumphs that egress their lives.

Here are recorded the careers and achievements of pioneers who, "when the fullness of time had come," came from widely separated sources, some from beyond the sea, impelled by divers motives, little conscious of the import of their acts, and but dimly anticipating the harvest which would spring from the sowing.
They built their primitive homes, toiling for a present subsistence while laying the foundations of private fortunes and further advancement.

Most of these have passed away, but not before they beheld a development of business and population surpassing the wildest dreams of fancy or expectation. A few yet remain whose years have passed the allotted three score and ten, and who love to recount, among the cherished memories of their lives, their reminsicences of early days.

Among these early, hardy settlers, and those who followed them, may be found the names of many who imparted the first impulse to the county's and the city's growth and homelikegress; the many who, through their identification with commercial and agricultural pursuits and varied interests, aided in their material progress; or skilled mechanics who first laid the foundations of beautiful homes and productive industries, and of the members of the learned professions—clergymen, physicians, educators and lawyers—whose influence upon the intellectual life and development of a community it is impossible to overestimate.

Municipal institutions arise; Commerce spreads her sails and prepares the way for the magic of Science that drives the locomotive engine over the iron-rails. Trade is organized, reaching forth to the shores of the Great Lakes and stretching its arms across the prairies to gather in and distribute the products of the soil. Church spires rise to express, in architectural form, the faith and aspirations of the people, while schools, public and private, elevate the standards of education and of artistic taste.

Here are some of the men through whose labors, faith and thought, these magnificent results have been achieved. To them and to their co-laborers, the Sangamon County of today stands an enduring monument, attesting their faith, their energy, their courage, and their self-sacrifice.

[The following items of personal and family history having been arranged in encyclopedic (or alphabetical) order as to names of the individual subjects, no special index to this part of the work will be found necessary.]

AARUP, Peter, a successful dairyman and gardener living near Springfield, was born in Vejle, Denmark, January 15, 1894, son of Wilhelm and Annie (Olsou) Aarup, both natives of Denmark, the former born September 16, 1830, and the latter March 15, 1826. The father was for many years Superintendent of the system of waterworks in the city of Vejle, and has now retired on a full-pay pension. He came to the United States at the time of the World's Fair in 1893, and visited his son again in 1906. Both Wilhelm Aarup and his wife were children of Danish parents, who spent their entire lives in their native country.

Until he reached the age of sixteen years Peter Aarup attended school in his native city, then for two years attended the Horticultural College in Copenhagen, after which he secured positions where he could use his knowledge of landscape gardening, and laid out several handsome parks in his native country. He sailed for America June 20, 1883, arriving in New York July 4. He worked about nine months in Springfield, Mass., then came west, and after spending a month in Chicago came to Springfield, which he reached in April, 1884. He has since spent his time in expert gardening and now has a fine florist and greenhouse business. He has lived in Springfield continuously since first locating there, except for two years spent in gardening in Greencove Springs, Fla.

January 10, 1889, Mr. Aarup was married, in Springfield, Ill., to Miss Eriikka Klausen, born in Denmark, December 20, 1863, daughter of Edward and Maria (Zesophus) Klausen, both natives of Denmark. Mr. Klausen died in Russia and his wife in Denmark. Children as follows blessed the union of Mr. Aarup and his wife: Annie, born December 20, 1890; Olive, March 8, 1891; Edwin, July 19, 1892; May, May 13, 1897; George, April 15, 1899; Helen, February 17, 1901; John, March 4, 1903. All were born in Sangamon County and all reside at home. Mr. Aarup has reason to be proud of his children, all of whom are a credit to their parents.

In political principles Mr. Aarup is a Republican, but in local affairs prefers to consider the man rather than the party. As to his religious views he endeavors to follow the Golden Rule as far as he can, and he is always ready to treat his fellows with consideration and fairness. He is most highly esteemed in the community where he lives, and enjoys universal respect and confidence. He is a man of intelligence and excellent business ability and has won success by untiring industry and careful attention to every detail. He owns six acres in Section 10 of Woodside Township and there owns a beautiful home. His land is easily worth $2,000 per acre, as it is on the edge of the metropolis, and is in a most pleasant locality and desirable location. Mr. Aarup has served as School Director and is now a School Trustee. Fraternally he is a member of Camp No. 333, Modern Woodmen of America, and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

ACKERMAN, Philip, Jr. (deceased).—With the passing away of a prominent man comes the realization of his many good traits of character, and an appreciation of what he accomplished in his brief span of life. To the dead is given an appreciation seldom accorded the living, and this comes as balm to the wounded hearts of those left behind, who sorrow over their loss and weep for the sound of the voice that is forever stilled. The family of Philip Ackerman, Jr., was called upon to sustain a sorrow of this kind, when he was taken from this life, September 6, 1896, while in the very prime of useful manhood. He was born in this city November 16, 1850, being a son of Philip and Elizabeth Ackerman. Philip Ackerman, Sr., came to Springfield at an early day and built up a large business, becoming one of the wealthy men of this part of the State. Philip Ackerman, Jr., grew up in Springfield and from boyhood was esteemed for his excellent, industrious habits. He became an expert bookkeeper and was noted for his faithful and painstaking work. Musical in his tastes, Mr. Ackerman became secretary of the musical club here and was also Secretary and Treasurer of the Capital City Cycling Club. Fraternally he belonged to Tyrian Lodge No. 333, A. F. & A. M., of Springfield. His religious connections with the Lutheran Church were of the most pleasant and he was regarded as one of its most useful members. In political faith he was a Democrat.

On September 14, 1888, Mr. Ackerman was united in marriage at Springfield, Ill., with Alice C. Fagan, daughter of James and Bridget Fagan. Mr. Fagan was born in Ireland but his wife was a native of Galena, Ill. Both are now deceased, the father dying on September 10, 1896, at the age of eighty-six years, and the mother at the age of fifty years. Mr. Fagan was a farmer, carpenter, merchant and stockman, and a very wealthy man at the time of his death. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman: James Waldo Philip, born August 29, 1880; and Helen Marie, born May 25, 1885, died on July 25, 1896. James Waldo Philip lives at home with his mother and is a bookkeeper. Mrs. Ackerman presides over her pleasant home at No. 913 South Fourth Street, where she dispenses a charming hospitality.

While he never aspired to public office, Mr. Ackerman exerted a strong influence during his too short life. He was recognized as one of the most honorable of men and his strict integrity and devotion to the interests of others committed to his charge made him popular with all with whom he was associated.

ADAMS, Edward, settled in New Haven, Conn., in 1640; moved to Milford 1646; and to Fairfield 1650. By his will, dated 1671, on record in Fairfield, he gave his estate to his wife Margaret and his children, viz: Samuel, Abraham, Mary, Nathan, Nathaniel, and John Adams. Edward Adams was buried in the Millis Plains churchyard and his gravestone is still in existence.

Nathan son of Edward and Margaret Adams, was living in 1714, and deeded land to Nathan, Jr., who settled at Greensfarms, now a part of Westport, and in 1712, married Rebecca Clappan, daughter of Peter Clappan, a large land-holder in Norwalk and Fairfield. Nathan, Jr., died early in life leaving two sons, Nathan and Nathaniel Adams. Nathaniel Adams married Mary Burr of Fairfield. Nathan and Mary Adams had twelve children, viz: Peter; Nathan; Joshua; Molly, who married Barnabas Marvin; Sarah, who married Obadiah Wright; Betsy, who married Burr Keeler; Anna, who married John Hurlbutt; and Jabez, Aaron, Stephen, and Daniel, (latter dying without issue) and Benjamin, who joined the English Army in the War and was never heard from afterward. Aaron, son of Nathan and Mary Adams, married Rhoda Hanford, daughter of Rhineas Hanford, on March 4, 1784, and had seven children, viz: Jabez, born Jan. 28th, 1785, Sally, born September 28th 1787, married Dan Taylor, Aaron born April 9th 1789, Zalmon Isaac, born June 11th, 1792, Polly, born April 19th, 1794, married Burr Bennet, and Betsy, married Rhineas Hanford. Aaron (III), for his second wife married Hannah Morehouse and had five children, viz: Nelson, married Eliza Mallory, Amanda, married Clark Gunnan, Malvina, married Coley Bartram, John R., married Jane Burr, and Esther, married Samuel Gorum, Jabez, son of Aaron (I), married Anna Bennet, and had five children, viz: Catherine, married Frederick Morehouse, Wm. H., married Elizabeth Bradley, Eliza A., married Andrew Nash, George S., married Polly Coley, Mary, unmarried, and Aaron, Jr., married Sally Hecock.

ADAMS, James. (Vol. I, pp. 10-11.)

ADAMS, John Porter.—Although pioneer days are now a thing of the past, memories of them are present with those who passed through their hardships and participated in the early struggles which have resulted in present developments. Looking back upon those days, however, there are some who believe that the lessons they taught, and the molding of character that resulted from self-denial, more than made up for what was lacking in other ways. An excellent representative of those now engaged in tilling the soil which the efforts of pioneers redeemed from the wilderness, is John Porter Adams, of Section 15, Loami Township. He was born in Clark County, Ky., October 30, 1858, being a son of Robert and Sarah (Black) Adams, both natives of the same locality, and the families on both sides were numbered among the pioneers of that great State.

Robert Adams had five children by his first marriage: John P.; James R., a farmer of Wilson County, Kan., Martha, wife of A. Anderson, a farmer of Oklahoma, eight children; and two who died in infancy. After the death of his first wife, he married again, his second wife being Lucinda Aldridge, who reared her step-children as her own. By the second marriage there were eight children, five of whom are surviving: Ellen, wife of William McPheeters, of Dodge City, Kan.; Anna, wife of George Shertz of Kansas; Minnie, wife of William White, of Kansas; Ettie, wife of Homer Bristo, and Claud. Robert Adams moved to Hendricks County, Ind., about 1889; thence to Neosho County, Kan., locating on a farm, where he died in 1890, leaving an excellent property. In politics he was a Democrat. An earnest member of the Christian Church, he aided in its support, and advocated good educational advantages. His widow survives him, residing in Kansas. John Porter Adams was educated in the several localities in which the family resided, remaining at home until he attained his majority, when he commenced working by the month for others. In 1857 he left Kansas and, coming to Loami Township, Sangamon County, found employment, continuing to work by the month for five years, when he married, and in 1893 rented a small farm. In 1894 he moved to Curran Township, renting 100 acres, and was so successful that in 1901 he moved to Chatham Township and rented 280 acres. In 1894 he sold his personal property and came to Section 15, Loami Township, where he bought seventy-five acres, paying $100 per acre. Since then he has so improved the property that it could not be bought today for double the price. Early in his operations Mr. Adams recognized the fact that nothing pays like a good grade of stock, and carries nothing but that kind, raising cattle, horses, hogs and sheep. His farming is carried on scientifically and he knows how to secure abundant crops and large returns on all his investments.

On December 24, 1861, Mr. Adams was united in marriage with Elizabeth Carson, daughter of W. P. Carson, one of the pioneers of this locality. Mr. and Mrs. Adams are the parents of three children, who are as follows: Charles, born in Curran Township August 30, 1894, and William, born in the same township September 15, 1896. They have been carefully reared, well educated and are sons of whom any parents might well be proud. Mr. Adams has always given his support to every measure he deemed would work out for the betterment of his community and is now serving as Clerk of the School District, being identified himself with the Republican party. Both Mr. and Mrs. Adams are active members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and take their religion into their home and daily life. During all of their married life Mrs. Adams has been her husband's found a sympathizer and assistant, and he appreciates how much of his success is due to her influence while her children rise up and call her blessed. Never forgetting the lessons inculcated in his father's home, Mr. Adams has endeavored, with the hearty cooperation of his wife, to surround his sons with the same elevating influences. In this high standard of living has influenced others outside the home circle and it would not be possible to estimate properly the good these two have accomplished in their own quiet way. Mr. Adams is an excellent farmer, a loyal citizen and a home-loving man, whose pride in his fine farm and still finer family is fully justified.

ALEXANDER, Milton K. (Vol. I, pp. 13-14.)

ALLEN, Alfred M., a retired farmer, living at Pawnee, owns a comfortable home in that village, and also 160 acres of excellent farming land in Christian and Montgomery Counties, Ill. He was born in a log house, near Jerseyville, Ill., November 14, 1853, son of Augustus L. and Betsey L. (Davis) Allen, the mother born in Vermont, February 3, 1824, died at New Douglas, Ill., August 15, 1875; and the father, born in Vermont, April 22, 1818, died in Montgomery County, Ill., September 29, 1858. Augustus L. Allen was a farmer. His widow married (second) John C. Long, who died in Missouri. Augustus L. Allen was a son of Alfred B. and Violet C. Allen, who had children as follows: Adeline C., born February 23, 1829, died July 25, 1872, having married Cyrus Chamberlain; Alonzo W., born December 1, 1815, married Margaret Conley, May 27, 1857, died April 21, 1882; Alfonso, born March 15, 1820, married Lucretia Holdridge, died August 27, 1898; Aurelia M., born April 2, 1818, married September 13, 1848, to William J. Davis, died July 16, 1899; Adell H., born October 4, 1824, lived at New Haven, Conn., died unmarried, in 1907; Arthur A., born May 28, 1828, married, August 17, 1871, died June 9, 1901; Alvin M., born March 15, 1830, died May 11, 1852; Amelia J., born August 15, 1832, married Nelson Prindle, died March 25, 1892.

Alfred M. Allen was the only child of his parents, and was educated in New Douglas, Ill. He lived with his mother until her marriage to Mr. Holdridge. He then lived in Montgomery County, and in 1872, when 25 years old, he came to Sangamon County, where he worked at farming two years, and in 1874, returned to New Douglas, where he spent a year in a mercantile business. In 1876, he worked at farming by the month, and in the same year attended the Centennial at Philadelphia. In the spring of 1877, he began farming on his own account, which he continued with excellent success until 1900, when he brought his family to Pawnee in order that his children might have better educational advantages than they had heretofore enjoyed. He continued to carry on farming, however, until 1905, and has since been retired. He is very fond of all outdoor sports and has always been very energetic in all work. He has spent rather an uneventful, hardworking life, but is one of the sterling, useful citizens of his community having the respect of all who know him. Always been fond of reading, he now subscribes to an evening paper and monthly periodicals. He is an earnest Christian, and a friend to all. His old family home is fifty-six years old, and he owns several fine volumes of good works. He has always kept an account of his business deals and makes a note of everything he thinks will be of use to him, not purchasing so much as a postage stamp, unless he makes a note of it, and in like manner keeps account of his receipts, so that at the end of a year, or a month, he is able to recall his various transactions. He is a Democrat in principle, but, in local matters, votes for the man rather than the party. He has served as School Trustee. Though not a member of any religious organization, he is a regular attendant of the Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Allen was married, January 1, 1879, in Taylorville, Ill., to Ella McCoy, born in Sangamon County, December 17, 1857, her father a native of Virginia, and her mother of Illinois. The father, Martin Macbride McCoy, a farmer, died near Divernon, Ill., and the mother, Ellnor Mc-
They were of Scotch descent, but their ancestors were early settlers in Virginia. Mrs. McCoy was a daughter of a Mr. Laswell, an early settler of Springfield, where he conducted a flour mill. Mrs. Allen was one of the following children: Joseph, Thomas, Max, Andrew, Charles, Catherine, Female, and Elia.

Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Allen: Rolla M., born April 14, 1880, died February 14, 1895, in Montgomery County; Orlan, born February 2, 1890, in Montgomery County, died there August 17, 1899; Mearl, born in Montgomery County, June 11, 1885, is unmarried and runs an interurban car between St. Louis and Springfield; Zola, born January 23, 1881, married W. Manning, lives on the old home farm of her father, issue.—Willard and Ernest, born on the farm; Lelan, born October 9, 1892, lives with his father in Pawnee; Vernon, born July 15, 1898, lives with his father. Mrs. Allen is now in a hospital at Jacksonville, III., and Mr. Allen has taken a mother’s place, so far as he could, to his youngest son, since he was six months old. Mr. Allen has a fine family of children, all of whom are a credit to him.

ALLEN, John.—Fortunately Sangamon County still has some of its noble veterans of the Civil War and its people are never weary of according a full measure of appreciation to those who defended the Union in its darkest hour. One of these old soldiers who is also a representative farmer of his locality, is John Allen, of Spaulding, Clear Lake Township. He was born in the county, April 11, 1844, a son of William and Martha (Cherry) Allen, the former born in Clark County, Ky., and the latter in Clear Lake Township.

William Allen emigrated to Sangamon County as early as 1840, locating in Clear Lake Township. While operating a farm, he furnished ties for the construction of track for what was then the Great Western Railroad, but now the Wabash; he also furnished lumber for the present Court House, and a number of residences which were being put up in Springfield and locality. He was a busy man, but found time to enlist for three months’ service in Company A, Missouri Rifles, at the expiration of which time he was mustered out at St. Louis. His death took place March 4, 1873, in Missouri, where he had moved. His wife had passed away in 1854, in Adair County, Mo. John Allen is proud of the fact that not only was his father, a defender of his country, but that his grandfather, Benjamin Cherry, served in the Black Hawk War. His name appearing on the list of soldiers enlisting from Sangamon County.

John Allen did not enjoy the educational advantages of the country boy of today, but went to school in a primitive log building in Clear Lake Township, at the same time assisting his father, with whom he remained until his enlistment, May 11, 1861, at St. Louis. Discharged, August 14, 1861, from Company A, First Missouri Volunteer Infantry, in which he had enlisted for three months, he remained at home until July 25, 1862, when again he offered his services, in the One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from which he was mustered out May 30, 1865. During his service, he participated in many engagements including the siege of Vicksburg and the battle of Gun- town, Miss., where he had the misfortune to be taken prisoner. From there he was sent to the infamous Andersonville, and for eleven terrible months underwent hardships which no mere words can describe.

Broken in health and spirits after his dreadful sufferings, he returned to Sangamon County, and from 1865 to 1871 was engaged in farming. Following this he went to Jasper County, Mo., where he continued farming for three years, then returned to Clear Lake Township. After trading stock for a time, and traveling about in the prosecution of his business, he opened a meat market in Riverton, and for twenty years was one of the leading retailers in his line in the county. In 1888 he went to the southern part of Missouri, engaging in sheep raising, but five years later came back to Sangamon County and, locating in Spaulding, once more engaged in a meat business. Drawn to New Mexico, he took up a claim there in 1906, but is now farming in Clear Lake Township, where he owns ten acres of land, valued at $200 per acre.

The marriage of Mr. Allen occurred in Clear Lake Township, to Alice Mann, on April 2, 1867. She was born in Sangamon County and died there in 1904. Her parents came to the county from Kentucky, locating on a farm in Clear Lake Township, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Allen: William, of Riverton; Ed- win, of Springfield; Ernest, deceased; Robert, of Clear Lake, residing with his father, as does Chester; John, of New Mexico; Frank, of San Francisco, is in the regular army; Carrie, wife of Frank Clippenger, of Riverton, where he is a carpenter; Josephine, wife of Richard Rogers, of Riverton; Jessie, wife of Bert Taylor, of New Mexico; Mae, wife of Joseph Thompson, of Springfield; and Emma, also of Springfield.

Mr. Allen is a staunch supporter of Republican principles, having learned them from his warm personal friend, Abraham Lincoln, with whom he was very intimate. The two often went swimming together and Mr. Allen felt the loss of the great man as though he had been a blood relative.

ALLISON, Isaac F. (deceased), a farmer all his life, was born in Virginia in 1803, but was reared in Kentucky, where he married Deborah Callarman, in 1827. They moved to Sangamon County, where he farmed for thirty years, and then went to Crawford County, where Mr. Allison took up land, but after two years, on December 23, 1869, he died in Kansas, where he had removed. The family remained in Kansas six years, but were driven out by the grasshoppers and returned to Sangamon County. Mrs. Allison died May 15, 1860, firm in the faith of the Methodist Church. In politics Mr. Allison was a Republican. Their children were: John W., died in the Mexican War, being in Colonel Baker's regiment; Joseph married Hannah Kneudson and died in Sangamon County; John W. (II) died in Kansas; Susan died at the age of nine years; Elizabeth E.; James died in Sangamon County, having married Julia Dombray; Ethel M. died in Sangamon County; Elizabeth, of Springfield.

Miss Elizabeth Ellen Allison, born on the Athens Road on her father's farm, four miles north of Springfield, February 14, 1837, attended Liberty School and received an excellent education. She taught school for five years in Kansas. She is a member of Laurel Methodist Church, and when able is among its efficient workers.

AMBROSE, George J., a well-known citizen of Springfield, Ill., who has filled various public offices in Sangamon County, is a native of the city, born February 22, 1847, and is a son of John Ambrose and Bridget (Hickey) Ambrose, the parents both natives of Limerick, Ireland, the father born June 7, 1848, and the mother February 2, 1847. John Ambrose came to America in 1865 and located in Springfield. In his native country he had followed the trade of coal miner, but after coming to Springfield he entered the bakery business, his first location at the corner of Nineteenth and Washington Streets, and continuing in that business until 1899, when he retired from active life. His death occurred February 14, 1908. He was prominent in many circles, being a member of the Court of Honor, the Western Catholic Union and the Catholic Church, and in politics was a Democrat. When a young man he had been drafted for service in the English Navy. His widow now lives in Springfield. They were parents of five sons and one daughter: George J., the oldest; Thomas F., also of Springfield; James died in 1885; Catherine E. married Henry E. Halseman; John was killed March 8, 1888, on the tracks of the Wabash railroad, while on his way to school, being then eight years of age; Stephen died July 5, 1890.

Mr. Ambrose received his academic training in St. Mary's School at Springfield and later took a course at Springfield Business College. Upon leaving school he worked two years in his father's grocery store, then worked four years in the mines, and December 5, 1888, was appointed Deputy Clerk of the county, continuing in office until August 30, 1907, when he took the position of Clerk, serving in the office until January 10, 1911. In his public service he has shown himself practical and efficient, and in the primaries held February 28, 1911, was a candidate for the office of Commissioner.

Mr. Ambrose was married November 1, 1888, to Catherine Moore, a native of Springfield, born August 6, 1876, daughter of James B. and Frances (Walker) Moore, the father born at Westchester County, N. Y., May 14, 1852, and the mother in Springfield, April 2, 1888, and died there May 4, 1908. Mrs. Ambrose was one of ten children, seven of whom are now living: Catherine (Mrs. Ambrose); William A., of Springfield; Mary L., deceased; James E., of Chicago; Daniel, of Springfield; Nellie died in infancy; Laura died in infancy; Stephen T.; Michael Joseph, of Springfield; Alexander, of Chicago. To Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose five children have been born: George, born May 26, 1899, died October 14, 1906; Stephen F., born July 26, 1900; Mary C., June 8, 1902; John, April 27, 1904; Frances, September 23, 1906; Elizabeth, October 1, 1908; Helen, February 2, 1909; Rose, March 15, 1911. Mr. Ambrose is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Court of Honor, and belongs to the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church, of Springfield. In politics he is a Democrat and has always taken an active interest in public affairs. He has spent most of his life in the city, where his character is well known, and he has many firm friends.

AMRHEIN, Christoph.—When one line of business has been conducted by the same family generation after generation, the father passing his interests down to his sons, along with his knowledge, gained through many years of practical experience, and they in turn passing it along to their successors, it is safe to assume that business is assured. Christian Amrhein, who conducts one of Springfield's leading baking establishments, comes of a long line of bakers of Germany, which country has the acknowledged reputation of furnishing the leading bakers of any country in the world. Mr. Amrhein was born in Germany, December 29, 1834, and is a son of Lorenz and Mary (Kizetener) Amrhein, both of whom died in the Fatherland.

Mr. Amrhein's grandfather was a well-known baker in Germany, where the family had conducted the same business for more than 400 years, and the branch of the family in that line in the old country is now represented by Mr. Amrhein's brother Carl, to whom he paid a visit in 1908. Christoph Amrhein learned the baking trade of his father and came to Springfield direct from the place of his birth, arriving in this city October 15, 1881. Being enterprising and energetic, he soon established a place of his own and for twenty-nine years has been a rated among the leading men in his line in the city. He is a Catholic in his religious views, the family being prominent in German Catholic circles in the city, and is connected with the Western Catholic Union, St. Vincent's Society and the State Federation of Catholic Germans, of which latter he is the President. He is a Democrat in politics but is liberal and votes rather for the man than the party.

On May 7, 1885, Mr. Amrhein was married to Josepha Gefaell. The family came to Springfield from Germany in 1846, but after six years went back to Germany, returning to Springfield in 1862, and again going back to the Fatherland in 1868. The father’s death occurred in 1904, but the mother still survives. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Amrhein, namely: Mary, born December 4, 1886, residing at home; Nicholas, tanner, in the First National Bank of Springfield; Kate, at home; Carl, who is working with his father; and Luella. All of the children received good educations in the parochial school of SS. Peter and Paul’s Catholic Church.

ANDERSON, George W., a retired engineer living at Springfield, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and a well-known and highly respected citizen of the city. He was born near Salem, Marion County, Ill., November 7, 1855, son of Crittenden and Elizabeth (Breeze) Anderson, the father born in Scotland and the mother in Hanover, Germany. Crittenden Anderson was a cabinet-maker and followed this trade most of his life. He came to America as a young man and settled at Boling Green, Ky., where he lived many years, then moved to Salem, Ill., where his remaining years were spent. His wife also died at Salem.

The paternal grandfather of Crittenden Anderson came to America from Scotland before the Revolution, served as a soldier in the Continental Army, and at the close of the struggle returned to Scotland for his family. He lived to be one hundred ten years of age and the father of Crittenden Anderson lived to the age of eighty-five years.

George W. Anderson received a meager education in a little log school-house near his birthplace, which he attended about three months altogether, and as both his parents were illiterate, when he was small he had his own way to make early in life. He went to Vermont as a boy and found employment in a large mill there, where he learned to be a stationary engineer, and was working at that occupation when but fifteen years old. After remaining in Vermont about four years Mr. Anderson moved to Centralia, Ill., where he became employed as engineer on a construction train for the Illinois Central Railroad Company. He remained with this company until the war, when he enlisted for one hundred days in Company C, Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry. At the expiration of his term of service he re-enlisted in the same company, which was later consolidated with Company C, Eleventh Missouri regiment. He served three years and three months and was mustered out at Jefferson City, Mo. He participated in many important battles, among them: Chickamauga, Corinth, Fort Donelson, Jackson (Miss.), Atlanta, and many others. He served under General Lew Wallace and Colonel Samuel. He won a good record and is an influential member of Wallace Post G. A. R. of Centralia, Ill.

Mr. Anderson moved to Centralia at the close of the war and re-entered the employ of the Illinois Central Railroad Company as engineer, working in this capacity until 1879, when he located in Springfield. He did no work for about a year after coming to the city, but later took a position with the Barker Mine Car & Foundry Company, as engineer, and worked for them fifteen years, after which he run a dummy engine for the old Springfield Street Car Company. For the past few years Mr. Anderson has retired from more active life, but is now employed as janitor for the Kumler Methodist Church. He is an active and useful member of this church and one of its most valued workers. Fraternally he belongs to Egyptian Lodge No. 102, A. F. & A. M., of Centralia, and Metropolitan Lodge No. 108, I. O. O. F., of Centralia. He has made many friends in Springfield and has been able to accumulate some property. He resides at 435 North Fourth Street.

Mr. Anderson was married (first) in Marion County, Ill., in May, 1857, to Miss Mary Hughey, a native of Dublin, Ireland, who accompanied her parents to America and with them located at Boston, Massachusetts, where she was born, and then went to Germany, where she spent three years. Mr. Anderson married (second), in Centralia, Miss Emma J. Keane, a native of Indiana, who died in 1895. Mr. Anderson married (third), in Springfield, Margaret Fowkes, a connection of the Ridley family, early settlers in Sangamon County, Ill., where she was born, August 11, 1845, near the village of Sherman. Her grandfather served in the War of 1812 and her father was a soldier in the Civil War, enlisting at Winterset, Iowa, in Company F, Fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. The latter was wounded and discharged before the end of the war. Mrs. Anderson also had an uncle who served in the war. Her father was one of the old settlers of Sangamon County and a prominent citizen. Five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren have been born to Mr. Anderson.

ANDERSON, L. S.—It would be difficult to state just how much has been accomplished by photography in the last four or five decades, to say how much nearer it has brought the peoples of the world together, to give its real educational value or to say what an important position those who are engaged in this profession hold. In the family circle, however, the photographer is an important personage, and he is generally held in real affection by those who have first been carried to him in arms to be photographed in their baby clothes, later proudly stand before him in their bridal garments, and still later take to him, as they themselves had been taken, their offspring, to put down in print the record of the today that will never come again. L. S. Anderson, one of the best-known photographers of Springfield, who still occupies the same stand that he first took when locating in the city, was born April 30, 1847, in York Square, a son of Rev. Lewis and Susan (Pratt) Anderson.

Rev. Lewis Anderson was a minister of the Methodist Church, who came to Illinois in 1852, and for the last years of his life resided in Rockford, where he was pastor of the Methodist Church, and where his death occurred at the advanced age of eighty years.

L. S. Anderson secured his education in the schools of Rockford, where he resided until twenty years of age and then went to Chicago where he learned the trade of photographer, working in that city for two years. In 1871 he came to Springfield and began work for Charles Payne, but soon engaged in business on his own account, and with the exception of two years he has occupied his present location on the north side of the Square. He has been very successful since coming to Springfield, now has one of the largest photographic studios in Central Illinois, and commands patronage for miles around. He is a member of Navarre Lodge No. 142, Knights of Pythias, of which he is Past Chancellor, and he has also served in the Grand Lodge. His politics are those of the Republican party and his religious faith that of the Methodist Church.

On September 13, 1875, Mr. Anderson was married in Springfield, Ill., to Miss Sadie E. Bartram, who was born in Springfield February 6, 1858. Mrs. Anderson's father was a soldier during the Civil War, being First Lieutenant of his company, and his death occurred shortly after the close of hostilities. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, namely: George C. aged thirty-five years, in the employ of the Springfield Utility Company, married Harriet R., of Chicago, and they have one son Norbert; Mrs. Hermione M. Cun nell, aged twenty-three years; Harold L. Anderson, aged twenty-one years, second operator at the Anderson Studio, married Mabel M. Clouser, of Spalding, Ill.; Susie Mae Anderson aged eighteen years. The family is well and favorably known in Springfield social circles.

ANDERSON, Tavner.—The Anderson family is one of the best known in Sangamon County, its representatives ranking among the leading men of the central part of the State. One of the progressive farmers of Cartwright Township, who belongs to this family, is Tavner Anderson, residing on Section 1. He was born on Section 11 of this township, January 7, 1892, a son of Thomas F. and Martha L. (Childs) Anderson, fine old pioneers, whose names are associated with all that is best in the county's development. The father has passed away, but the mother survives, to be an object of veneration to her offspring. A more complete sketch of the Anderson family is given elsewhere in this work.

Tavner Anderson grew up on the homestead, and after completing his district school course, attended school in Springfield. Returning home, he resumed farming living with his parents until his marriage, November 28, 1888, to Anna I. Watts, daughter of Albert B. Watts, of Farmingdale, a sketch of whom appears in this volume. After marriage, the young couple bought land, living upon it one year, when in 1889, Mr. Anderson bought a portion of his present farm. In 1900, he erected his present residence, and on January 1, 1901, he entertained the neighbors with a housewarming. This beautiful home is thoroughly modern, with hot water and acetylene lights. In his farm work, Mr. Anderson shows the same progressive spirit he displayed in planning his house, and the results justify his methods. He specializes on short horn cattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson became parents of the following children: Charles, born August 20, 1889, at home; Albert Franklin, born December 8, 1891, attended the agricultural department of the University of Illinois at Champaign, and is now at home; Earl Tavner, born April 29, 1895, was accidentally killed August 29, 1909, by falling from a horse, and was buried at Farmington Cemetery; Lester Watts, born November 15, 1897; Martha Amelia, born April 17, 1900; Walter Dustin, born July 15, 1904; Lucretia, born September 7, 1906; Elizabeth Jane, born November 28, 1908; Ethel, born July 29, 1910. Mrs. Anderson agrees with her husband regarding the importance of a good education, and plans to give the children every possible advantage.

Mr. Anderson now owns 820 acres, the greater part of which is under a high state of cultivation. During the years he has lived in the community, Mr. Anderson has been privileged to witness many changes, all of which justify his grandfather's confidence in the future of Sangamon County. Not only has Mr. Anderson made his mark in the agricultural world, but he has found time to bear his part as a member of the Christian Church, of which his wife is also a member, and to be a good citizen. No measure of any importance which has as its aim the improvement of the township or county, ever comes up without Mr. Anderson investigating it thor oughly. A good judge of stock, his advice is often asked, and he gives it gladly, for he believes in scientific farming and is trying to bring his children to his way of thinking. As he, himself, grew to manhood, following in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, so does Mr. Anderson hope to have his sons follow him, and that they may carry on the good work, he has so ably inaugurated. Is his dearest wish.

ANDERSON, Thomas F. (deceased), was numbered among the honored pioneers of Sangamon County and contributed his full share towards its development and material advancement. He was born in Cartwright Township September 11, 1829, a son of Moses K. Anderson, born in Butler County, Ky., November 11, 1803. Moses K. Anderson lost his parents when he was twelve years old and was taken by relatives to that part of Davidson County which is now Cheatham County, Tenn. Here he married Cassandra Stroud, born November 12, 1812, in Dickson County, Tenn., the ceremony taking place September 13, 1827. Two years later they landed in Sangamon County, locating in what is now Cartwright Township, where they entered a large amount of land, becoming heavy land owners. Mr. Anderson was a man who foresaw a great future for Sangamon County, and did all he could to bring it about. In politics he was an aggressive Democrat, holding many local offices, and was prominent in the militia organizations, having been drill master in early days. Soon after coming here he was elected Captain of a company and in a short time was promoted to rank of Colonel, and then Brigadier-General. Finally he was appointed Adjutant-General by Gov. Carlin, continuing to hold that office by successive appointments until 1856. During this period he was called upon to exercise his prerogatives during the Mormon troubles at Nauvoo and during the Mexican War. Later in life he moved to Springfield and for six years was a Member of the City Council, and for twenty years was Justice of the Peace. A record of his hand and sufferings, especially during the winter of the great snow, in 1839, would fill a book. In all of them he bore himself as a brave man should and came out of them all strengthened for his life work. The children born to him and wife were: Thomas F., Millie Ann, Sarah J., Mary E., Malinda E., Cythila A., George W., Merlin A., Willard Wick- life, and Laura S. Anderson. Mr. Anderson died December 31, 1850. After her death General Anderson married Mrs. Marilan F. Hall, whose maiden name was Stroude. He was a lifelong member of the Christian Church and gave freely of his means to its support.

Thomas F. Anderson was reared among typically-pioneer surroundings, early learning how to work. Like many young men of his period, he married upon reaching his majority, the ceremony taking place December 25, 1851, when he was united with Martha Le Childs, born in Sangamon County, December 8, 1833, daughter of Stephen and Hannah (Lyman) Childs, natives of Vermont, who came to Illinois, settling in what was then old Sangamon County, sixteen farmers coming together. All of them prospered and lived to see their children grow up around them. There they died. Mr. and Mrs. Childs took a prominent part in the religious and educational development of the county, as is elsewhere related.

Following his marriage, Thomas F. Anderson began farming on the property now the home of Mrs. Anderson, and there he died September 24, 1898. Six children were born to them: Laura, who died in infancy; Charles, born April 26, 1855, married Katie Fogarty, of Farmingdale, issue, one daughter, Laura, born February 2, 1870, lives with her grandmother, her father having died August 22, 1879, and her mother October 29, 1900; Edward, proprietor of the Merchants Transfer Company, of Springfield, formerly Principal of the Trapp School, of that city, born June 14, 1857, married Lillian McCullough, issue—Mary, Edith and Harold; Henry B., born December 29, 1859, now has charge of the homestead, married Lena Armbruster, July 1, 1903, issue, James A. H., born November 27, 1906, and in the following month the young mother died; Tavner, born January 7, 1862; and Hattle, born November 10, 1875.

The second son, Edward Anderson, sent his two daughters to high school and gave them the musical training their talents entitled them to receive. Mary has been for several years pianist for Evangelist Torey. Edith married Charles E. Butler, one of the Rev. Billy Sunday's singers. Mrs. Butler has also often charmed the vast congregations with her beautiful voice. They have one child, Lillian, the great-grandchild of dear Grandmother Anderson. Mr. Anderson was a strong Democrat and was active in his party, holding many of the township offices. He was an excellent judge of stock and bred some that ranked with the best the country ever produced. A consistent member of the Christian Church, he was active in its work and that of the Sunday School.

Looking back over sixty years, Mrs. Anderson can scarcely realize all of the changes that have taken place in her community. Not only has she seen marvelous changes effected, but she has been called upon to mourn not only members of her own family and her devoted husband, but the neighbors with whom she was always on such friendly terms. But one of them survives, the rest having gone on as pioneers into the Heavenly Kingdom. Mrs. Anderson, lovingly called "Grandma" by half the township, is one of those noble women who bore upon their shoulders so many of the hardships of settling the new country. No complaints ever left her lips, as she labored by her husband's side, ever smoothing his way and that of her children. Prosperity came to them, but if it had not she would not have repined, but would have bound up the wounds gained in the battle of life, and sent her dear ones forth to labor anew. Church and home have ever known her tender ministrations and effective work, and no fair estimate can be made of the good she has accomplished, for so little of the aggregate has ever been allowed to become public. Her children, grandchildren and one great-grandchild all tenderly cherish this grand old pioneer wife and mother.

ANDREW, John.—While an Englishman never forgets the land of his birth, he readily adapts himself to the different conditions of a new land, and becomes one of its most desirable citizens, for the people of Great Britain are born colonizers. Sangamon County has been fortunate in that it has secured so many residents of English nationality, among whom one notable example is John Andrew, now living retired in Springfield. Mr. Andrew was born in Lancastershire, England, August 30, 1843, being a son of James and Sarah (Scholee) Andrew, natives of Oldham, England. The father was a weaver, rounding out a useful life in his native land, as did his wife. John Andrew had one brother, who also came to America. When last heard from this brother, William, was living at Bradford, Pa.

John Andrew came to America in 1868, after having received a good common school education and learned the trade of a machinist. He sailed from Liverpool in August, landing in New York September 8, and went from that city to Philadelphia, but after a short time went to Fall River, Mass. This not suitting him, he went to Lowell, Mass., and later returned to Philadelphia, where he worked at his trade. His next change was made when he moved to Chattanooga, Tenn., where he spent a year, then he went to St. Louis. This continued his home until 1874, when he came to Springfield, securing a position with the rolling mills, remaining with this concern until it closed. He was then in the employ of the city government as engineer at the pumping station for six years, and still later became first engineer at the old shoe factory, but since 1906, he has lived retired, feeling that he has earned his politics he is a Republican but has never desired public office.

The marriage of Mr. Andrew took place in Dewitt County, Ill., November 1, 1876, when he was united with Bridget Reynolds, born in Ireland, a daughter of James Reynolds, who brought his family to America in 1868, settling in Dewitt County, where he farmed until his death. Mr. Reynolds and wife had four sons and three daughters, those living being: John, of Clinton, Ill., a machinist; William, a park policeman of Chicago; Mrs. Celia Cunningham, of Springfield, and Mrs. Andrew. Fifteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew, seven of whom survive: Elizabeth, wife of Ralph Suymon, of the Franklin Art Company, of Springfield; Katherine, wife of John Muller, a carpenter in the employ of the C. A. Power Planing Mill of Springfield; Sarah, wife of William Kramer, a baker; Celia, James, John and Frank, all at home. Mr. Andrew owns his pleasant home, a store, and several other pieces of property in Springfield, having accumulated them by hard work and persistent saving. Being a keen shrewd man, he has been able to invest his money to advantage and now is enjoying the result of his foresight.

ANSELL, Oscar, proprietor of the Oscar Ansell Machine Shop, on South Third Street, Springfield, is a practical machinist and an enterprising business man. He established his present enterprise at the location it still occupies, in 1889, and has been steadily increasing his output since. He was born in Elmhira, N. Y., November 27, 1868, and came to Springfield with his parents in boyhood, receiving his education in the schools of the latter city. His father, William Ansell, was born in Peru, N. Y., March 21, 1832, and when four years of age accompanied his parents to Riga, Monroe County, N. Y., where he grew to manhood. He did not attend school after he was ten years old, but began at that age to work on a picker in a woolen mill. He worked successively at carding, spinning, weaving and finishing. He was married, at Elmira, May 18, 1866, to Miss Elizabeth Oliver, who was born in England, January 4, 1858, and came to the United States with her mother, brothers and sisters, when she was five years old. She is a daughter of John and Mary (Davis) Oliver. John Oliver located at Auburn, N. Y., and for a few years carried on farming in the vicinity, then moved to Elmira. He was a woolen worker by trade and before his death located in Springfield, Ill. His wife also died in Springfield, William Ansell located in Springfield in 1866, and for twenty-four years was employed at Thayer's woolen mill. Later he worked eleven years in the city electric light plant. He purchased his present home in Springfield in 1868. William Ansell enlisted, at Elmira, N. Y., as private in Company B, One Hundred Sixty-first Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged at the end of the war. His wife is a member of the Second Presbyterian Church and in politics he is a Republican. He belongs to the Masonic Order. He and his wife had children as follows: Oliver died at the age of six years; Corn A, Mrs. Chisholm; Oscar, Mary Elizabeth; Fred died at the age of twenty-three years; Jane Scott; Alice D. married W. S. Wooley, of Auburn, Ill. Stephen G., father of William Ansell, was born at Portsmouth, England, and was a carpenter by trade. He came to the United States about 1820 and settled in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., where he married Jane York, a native of Yorkshire, England. Later he moved to Monroe County, N. Y., where his death occurred. His children were: Thomas, of Elkhart, Ind., married Jane Story, of Larrange County, Ind.; George C. deceased; Annie married John Ransom, of Rochester, N. Y.; Mary Ann married John Hoffman of York, Pa.; Stephen, of Pennsylvania; Edmund deceased; William. John York, father of Mrs. Stephen G. Ansell, came to the United States from Yorkshire, England, and died in Monroe County, N. Y.

Oscar Ansell left school at the age of thirteen years and went to work in a rolling-mill machine-shop, which was about three miles from his home. As there was then no street car he walked both ways. After completing his apprenticeship he worked as journeymen machinist until embarking in his present enterprise. He has been obliged to increase his capacity because of increased business, and now employs fourteen men.

Mr. Ansell was married, in 1885, to Miss Annie Schwarburg, of Springfield, and they have two children, Edna Marie and Raymond H. Mr.
Ansell owns a handsome residence at 100 Allen Street, Springfield. He is a self-made man and is active in the councils of the Republican party. He served six years as a member of the City Council. He and his family are members of the Second Presbyterian Church and he is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

APGAR, LeRoy.—The varied interests of Springfield are of such magnitude that almost every branch of commercial activity is represented. Where so much building is being constantly done there is, of course, an ever-growing demand for hardware, and supplying it is engaging the attention of one of the live business men, LeRoy Apgar, who, through practical experience, knows just what is needed. He was born in Springfield, Ill., March 25, 1885, a son of Aaron Apgar. The father was born in Ohio and for fifty-four years made Springfield his home. He became well known as a skillful carpenter, working on some of the largest buildings in the city. In 1846 he made the trip across the country to California in a wagon, returning, settled down in Springfield, where he died fourteen years ago. The mother died when LeRoy was but three weeks old.

The motherless lad grew up in Springfield, where he went to school, and his records show that he was a bright pupil of good, industrious habits. After working for some time in a brick yard he learned the carpenter trade, at which he worked for six years, and, although he was successful, he then decided to embark in a hardware business, having recognized the possibilities of such an enterprise. His faith has been justified, for he has been very successful and now controls an excellent trade in all kinds of hardware and kindred goods.

On February 6, 1907, Mr. Apgar was united in marriage, in the city of Springfield, with Lillian Clayton, who was born in 1882, no issue. Mr. Apgar belongs to the Retail Clerks’ Union, and takes an interest in the organization. He is a Methodist and a Republican. Industrious, progressive, and public-spirited, Mr. Apgar is a valued citizen and one who can always be depended upon to do his full duty whatever the circumstances.

ARMSTRONG, William Henry.—Illinois would still be a prairie State in reality if it were not for the fact that years ago, there came into it a brave, hardy people who were fitted with a determination to conquer the wilderness and make for themselves comfortable homes on the government land. Every county in the State has its list of names of pioneers who settled there, brought up their children to assist in the work of developing the region, and left their mark upon the agricultural, industrial, educational, political and religious life of the community where they located. The Armstrong family is one which has many representatives in different parts of Illinois, and one of them now residing in Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County, is William Henry Armstrong. He was born at Atlanta, Ill., May 3, 1876, son of Leonard J. and Mary (Judy) Armstrong, and a grandson of John Armstrong, of Kentucky, and Jacob and Martha (Musick) Judy. Both the Armstrong and Judy families came to Illinois in pioneer days, making the trip in the usual fashion of the times, with a covered wagon, and all were farmers. Mr. and Mrs. Judy retired and located in Atlanta, where they died.

Leonard J. Armstrong and Mary Judy were married in Atlanta, December 24, 1872, following which event they rented land nearby and operated it for two years. They then moved to Pitt County, Ill., where they bought a farm, living upon it until their demise, the mother passing away April 28, 1897. They had children as follows: William Henry; Frank L., born January 24, 1878, of Kindersley, Canada; Junietta, born February 17, 1880; Mrs. T. J. Campbell, of Deland, Ill.; Albert M., born April 10, 1882, of Sangamon County; Nellie May, born April 10, 1885; Mrs. R. O. Copeland, of Arcola, Ill.; Roy L., born March 5, 1887, of Sangamon County; Bertha B., born October 3, 1888, of Deland; John J., born May 7, 1891, lives with his brother William H.; and Earl E., born October 16, 1892, died February 10, 1893.

William Henry Armstrong was educated in the public schools of Deland, remaining at home until he was twenty-six years old. At that time he bought 160 acres of land in Pitt County, hiring a man and his wife to keep house for him. Later he sold this farm, buying 300 acres in the same county. In the fall of 1904, he sold this property, buying 480 acres in Mechanicsburg Township, which he has since devoted to general farming and the raising of Shorthorn cattle, Duroc-Jersey hogs and Plymouth Rock chickens. In 1910, he bought 160 acres near Wagoner, Montgomery County, Ill., which is being operated for him by his brother Roy.

Mr. Armstrong was married March 15, 1905, to Elizabeth D. Holton, born April 3, 1875, in Lincoln, Ill., daughter of Rev. T. T. and Ellen Holton, the former a minister of the Christian Church. Mrs. Armstrong died September 3, 1906. On February 3, 1909, Mr. Armstrong married Mary Agnes Fullenwilder, born October 12, 1885, at Mechanicsburg, daughter of Homer and Jennie (Ragland) Fullenwilder, natives of Mechanicsburg, Ill., and Fisherville, Ky. Mrs. Armstrong was educated in Mechanicsburg schools, attending the high school there, and is a lady of charming personality, who shows a gracious hospitality to her guests. Mr. Armstrong is a member of the Christian Church, while his wife is a member of the Methodist denomination. In politics he is a Republican and is now serving his district as School Director. He is a live, progressive young man and is making a decided success of his life work, ably assisted by his wife. Understanding every detail of farming, he is inculcating new methods and is a recognized authority on agricultural matters. Socially he and his wife are important factors in the township.
and have many friends in Sangamon and adjoining counties, where they are well and favorably known.

ARNOLD, George W., dealer in Pilot acetylene generators, Pleasant Plains, is as well and favorably known as any business man in his part of Sangamon County. He is a native of Miami County, Ohio, born October 6, 1865, a son of John and Hannah Arnold. The latter was born in Virginia and early in life was taken by her parents to Miami County, where she grew to womanhood and where she met and was wooed and won by Mr. Arnold. They were married about 1848. Their son Jobu lives at Loveland, Colo.; their daughter Mary, widow of Charles Eklaw, lives at Paxton, Ill.; their son George W., is the immediate subject of this sketch.

The family came to Illinois in 1868 and settled on a farm in Carlinville, Sangamon County. Mr. Arnold died in the following year and Mrs. Arnold survived until 1894. They were reared in the faith of the Dunkards, but she became a member of the German Baptist Church. For some years after her husband's untimely death, Mrs. Arnold remained on the farm, but eventually moved to Pleasant Plains where she passed away.

When his father died George W. Arnold was only about four years old. He was brought up on the farm and educated in the public schools. In 1885 he came with his mother to Pleasant Plains, where, at the age of twenty-one years, he embarked in general merchandise trade. He was thus engaged in 1885-91, then sold out his business to become a carpenter and builder. After a time he became a member of the building firm of Harnett and Arnold, his partner being J. P. Harnett. They erected the Sangamon College building, the store building of John Lehman, and many other slight public structures, and some of the finest village and farm residences in that part of the county are monuments to their skill and enterprise.

In 1902 Mr. Arnold disposed of his partnership in this business to Mr. Harnett and engaged in his present venture as dealer in Pilot acetylene generators. He has installed lighting plants in many of the leading public buildings and private residences in his part of the State. The automatic acetylene generators that he handles have made their way in competition with gas and electric systems of illumination. It is probable that Mr. Arnold has found an advantage in his intimate practical knowledge of building. His skill in placing the lights adds much to their efficiency.

March 10, 1888, Mr. Arnold married Miss Arda Hamilton, daughter of R. F. and Tabitha (Purvins) Hamilton, pioneers in Sangamon County, who have gone to their reward. Mrs. Arnold was born in Cartwright Township. She has borne her husband seven children, two of whom died in infancy. Their son Hoyt A., born August 1, 1888, was educated in the public school at Pleasant Plains and entered the employ of a concern controlling a chain of five and ten-cent stores and made himself so proficient and so useful that he was given charge of an establishment at Iowa City, Iowa. Lee H. Arnold, born April 5, 1890, finished his course in the Pleasant Plains school. In 1906, he entered the United States Navy and was stationed on the flagship Connecticut and made the tour of the world with the Atlantic squadron, visiting many important foreign ports. When the squadron, consisting of sixteen vessels, sailed for Seattle in 1908, Mr. Arnold went to San Francisco to witness its departure. On the completion of the voyage in 1910, Lee, having served four years, was honorably discharged and has found a satisfactory business connection with a five- and ten-cent store at St. Paul, owned by a company that has about 400 such enterprises in different cities of the United States.

Rollie Arnold, born September 16, 1896, is in school; Phyllis, born February 27, 1902, and George II., born June 7, 1904, are the "babies" of the family.

Mr. Arnold has been satisfactorily successful in life and knows no dearer duty than properly educating his children and settling them in useful occupations. His home is one of the most modern in the vicinity with up-to-date heating and illuminating apparatus, and all else to correspond. In politics he is a Democrat and, as such, has been elected to several important offices. He has ably filled the office of Town Clerk and in the spring of 1909 was chosen Tax Assessor for the second term. He and his wife are active and helpful members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Pleasant Plains.

ARNOLD, John H.—Those who gave up their lives on the battlefields of the Civil War, did not suffer after all as have those who lived to carry in their bodies during forty-five years or more, the reminders of what it cost to save the Union. It is easy enough for one who has never faced the death-belching guns of war to rise to heights of oratory over the high call of patriotism; true heroism lies in living when each day is a long-drawn-out agony because of a response to that same spirit of loyalty to flag and country.

The man who enjoys the distinction of being Springfield's oldest living veteran of the Civil War is John H. Arnold, who was fearfully wounded at the Siege of Atlanta, after years of faithful service. Mr. Arnold was born in Clay County, Ky., and comes of good, honorable, brave, Kentucky stock. The date of his birth was January 1, 1833, so that he is now (1912) seventy-nine years old. His parents, Anderson and Nancy (Pierce) Arnold, were also born in Clay County, Ky., where the father died, but the mother moved to Springfield when John H. was six months old, and lived there until she passed away in 1898. The Arnold family is a fighting one, for Grandfather Arnold and his son, Anderson Arnold, both served in the Black Hawk War, distinguishing themselves as brave and loyal men.
John H. Arnold was educated in Springfield, but early learned to work on a farm, and was engaged in that peaceful occupation when he felt constrained by his love of his country, to enlist, in 1862, in Company E, Eighty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving under General Sherman. He participated in the battles of Perryville, Big Spring, Buzzard's Roost, Lookout Mountain, Gordon's Mill, Peach Tree Creek, Stone River, North Chickamanga, and others of less importance. At the Siege of Atlanta he was the color bearer and thus was the target for the enemy. When he fell, still clutching to the flag, which he bathed with his blood, he was riddled by nine bullets. He has never fully recovered from this, although he has earnestly endeavored to round out his life industriously and uncomplainingly. He is an honored member of Stephenson Post, G. A. R., and also belongs to the Volunteers of America. In politics he is a Republican, steadfastly upholding the principles he fought to have established, and for which Abraham Lincoln was martyred.

The marriages of Mr. Arnold occurred in Springfield, the first one being celebrated in 1856. There was no issue. On May 28, 1863, Mr. Arnold married Mildred Amie (Taylor) Large, born in Winchester, Scott County, Ill., October 29, 1870. Her father served through the Civil War, and spent his mature years in Springfield. One child has been adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, Richard Harvey Ellsworth Arnold, born August 16, 1907. The family reside at the corner of Perry and Ohio Streets, and a large lawn which covers a double frontage. During his life Mr. Arnold has had many experiences and at all times has obeyed the call of duty, regardless of what it might cost him.

Mrs. Mildred A. Arnold was born in Winchester, Scott County, Ill., October 29, 1870. She is a daughter of Alexander and Frances (Cothern) Taylor, her father born in Kentucky, in 1841, and her mother in Virginia, in 1842. The former died in 1883 and the latter in 1907. Mrs. Arnold's maternal grandfather, William Burnwell Cothern, emigrated from Virginia to Illinois by wagon, settling in Illinopis, where he farmed. Both the Cotherns and Taylors were old Southern families and extensive slave owners.

Mrs. Arnold belongs to a family of six children born to her parents: Alexander; William; Belle, wife of George Guthrie; Leonora, wife of James Stofer; Mary Ann, wife of James Woods, living near Springfield; and Mrs. Arnold.

In May, 1890, Mrs. Arnold was married in the English Lutheran Church, to James Large, later a member of the Illinois General Assembly. One child, John M., was born April 2, 1891. In 1903 she became the wife of John H. Arnold, as before noted. She is interested in current events and keeps herself posted with regard to them. She is devoted to her home and husband, but is also active in social matters, and possesses a pleasant, genial manner, attaches people to her, and has many friends wherever she may happen to be.

ASH, George W.—The pioneers who came to Sangamon County never imagined that land here would some day he held at the fancy prices now prevailing, and yet they themselves laid the foundations for this wonderful advancement, and to them should be given full meed of praise. One of the men who is fortunate enough to be the owner of some of this high-priced farm-land is George W. Ash, of Section 12 Williams Township. He was born in Ashville, Miss., March 13, 1848, a son of Ira and Amanda V. Ash, both of Mississippi, the father being born June 22, 1815. These parents married, July 28, 1838, in Louisiana. From there they came to Illinois in 1856, locating north of Springfield, in Sangamon County, on a farm of 360 acres, which the father bought and farmed until his death in 1853, his wife dying in the same year. They had two sons and two daughters, all of whom are deceased except George W. Ash and his sister, Mrs. Harvey F. Bruce, who resides on a farm north of Springfield.

George W. Ash was educated in the schools of Springfield, at the same time working on the homestead, thus learning how to farm profitably. Adopting farming as his occupation, Mr. Ash looked about him for a good location, and selecting Williams Township, moved there forty years ago. Ten years later he moved on his present farm of sixty acres, which is now worth $250 per acre.

On December 23, 1875, Mr. Ash was married in Williams Township by Rev. Worlds, of the Presbyterian Church, at Springfield, to Miss Laura Smith, born in the township, Aug. 8, 1856, daughter of Philip and Rebecca (Hendricks) Smith, he of South Carolina. Her mother was born in Kentucky, where the father moved, later coming to Sangamon County, where they became pioneers of Barclay. Later they removed to a farm north of Barclay, where the father lived until a few years prior to his death, which occurred in Williamsville, his last home, and there the mother also passed away. There were seven sons and five daughters in the Smith family, of whom three survive: Mrs. Ash; Henry, a resident of Kansas, married to Harriet Kenneman, five children; and John, a resident of the homestead in Williams Township, married Amanda Brown (second wife), three children; his first marriage having been to Martha Williams, two children. Mr. and Mrs. Ash became the parents of three sons and five daughters: Rebecca, wife of George Marsh, of Springfield; five children—Bessie, Willard, Harold, Albert and Helen Mary; Oscar married Adla Hanson, who died January 9, 1908, after bearing him two children, the surviving one being Lora, and he married (second) Lilian Hendelin, of Minnesota, where they reside; one child, Philip E.; Lula married James Perry and they live in Indiana and have four children—Eva, Hazel, Lloyd and Mary; Daisy married James Burge and they have one child, James; Leo married Ruth Hawker, of Ewing, Mo., and they reside in Springfield and have no issue; and Mary, living at home, as do Fay and Edith.

For a number of years Mr. Ash has been a Methodist and has given the church his hearty support, both in money and work. He believes in the good influence of churches and has brought up his children in the faith he supports. A hard-working man, he farms scientifically, rotating his crops, using improved machinery, and raising a good grade of cattle, having proven by experiments that nothing but the best pays on a farm. His children are a credit to him and his most excellent wife, and they greatly enjoy a family reunion, when the married ones return with their families to enjoy once more the hospitality of the homestead. There is no more beautiful sight than a man and his wife surrounded by their children and grandchildren, all of whom are making the most of their opportunities and developing fine characters. It is such people as the Ash family who form the great backbone of any nation, for they always prove to be reliable, substantial, and willing to advance, although conservative enough to consider first and see if proposed improvements are for the best interests of the majority.

ATHERTON, Dr. Albert, retired physician and banker, has done much to impress his personality on the community in which he has long lived and labored, always with a sense of his responsibility to the public. He was born in Morgan County, Ill., October 23, 1828, a son of Jonathan Atherton. The father was born in Duchess County, N. Y., in 1803, a son of the Rev. Theophilus Atherton, also of New York nativity. The family of Atherton is of English descent and is related to that of the Harpers represented by the proprietors of the great publishing house of Harper & Brothers and their successors. The Atherton family was established in New York before the beginning of the last century. Rev. Atherton settled in Pickaway County, Ohio, about 1820. Not only was he a pioneer there in the work of the Presbyterian Church, but was also an educator and farmer. Jonathan Atherton was reared on the farm and educated under his father's able supervision. He married Ann Johnson, a native of Dutchess County, N. Y., and a daughter of Richard Johnson, who became a pioneer settler in Pickaway County. In 1829, about two years after his marriage, he moved with his wife to Illinois and they located among early settlers in Morgan County, where he developed a good farm, on which he reared a family of children and died about 1862. His widow lived some years after his death and passed away at the residence of the immediate subject of this sketch. She had three children who reached maturity, the survivors being Dr. Albert Atherton and a daughter, Mrs. Alice B. Howard, of South Dakota.

Dr. Atherton grew to manhood in Morgan County, and attended public school until he was prepared to enter Illinois College at Jacksonville. As an aid to his medical studies and as a useful experience, he taught school several terms. He studied for his profession at Arcadia, Morgan County, and took lectures in St. Louis, Mo., in the winter of 1851-52. He graduated with the Class of 1853 and began practice at Cartwright, Sangamon County. In time his ride was widely extended. He was an active and successful member of his profession in the county until about 1870, when he began gradually to put aside professional cares. During the Civil War period he was a staunch defender of the Union. He has been an ardent Republican since the organization of the party in 1856, but has never been an aspirant for public office. Soon after coming to Sangamon County he bought land near Pleasant Plains, where he developed a farm which he still owns. It contains 160 acres and is under successful cultivation. He established a drug store and grocery at Pleasant Plains, which he conducted profitably for some years. He was one of the organizers, about 1880, of the bank of Tracy, Bukman and Company, later the bank of Atherton, Richardson and Company, which has long been known as one of Sangamon County's solid financial institutions. In 1906 it was reorganized, with increased stock, as the Pleasant Plains State Bank, with Dr. Atherton as President and A. Q. Irwin as Cashier.

Dr. Atherton married, in August, 1856, Miss Sarah Ann Hayes, a native of Lancaster County, Pa., daughter of August Hayes who, after she had been reared and educated in her native town, became an early settler in Illinois, to which State he brought his family. The writer is able to include the following items of interest concerning the children of Dr. Atherton. Elma C. married Robert Lane, the present Mayor of Pleasant Plains; Albert is a leading merchant at Jacksonville, Ill.; Mary Alice is Mrs. George Harnett, of Springfield, Ill.; August lives on a part of the old family homestead; Edward J. is Assistant Cashier of the Pleasant Plains State Bank and is represented by an Independent Sketch in this work; William, prominent in public and political matters, is Supervisor of Cartwright Township and is operating the Atherton homestead; Mabel is the youngest of the survivors; two have died—Franklin, aged four years, and LeRoy in infancy; Dr. and Mrs. Atherton are prominently helpful in the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

ATHERTON, Edward Jonathan.—The banking institutions of the country, controlling the financial affairs of the people, have to associate with themselves men whose names carry weight. Their officials must be of unblemished character and high standing, or the business suffers. The Pleasant Plains State Bank is fortunate in having among its officials a young man of the con-necious and ability of Edward Jonathan Atherton, who comes of one of the most honored of Sangamon County families.

Mr. Atherton was born March 24, 1830, at Pleasant Plains, and has grown up among the people whose interests he now represents. He is a son of Dr. Albert Atherton, and his wife Sarah Ann (Hayes) Atherton, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Atherton graduated from Whipple Academy, Jacksonville, Ill., Class of 1800, the first class to receive diplomas from the institution. He then taught school for eight years, later attending the Indiana University, at Bloomington, and at the close of his junior year entered the senior class of the Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio, graduating with the Class of 1861, with the degree of A. B. Immediately thereafter he entered the Pleasant Plains State Bank, where he is now Assistant Cashier. He ably discharges the duties of his important position.

The marriage of Mr. Atherton took place on June 30, 1862, at Sycamore, Ill., when he was united with Sadie Chenoweth Athenos. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson have two children— son and Dwight Willbur. Mr. Atherton is a Republican in politics and a Methodist in religion. He is one of the most reliable and conservative young men of Pleasant Plains, and he and his charming wife have gathered about them a congenial circle of friends.

ATKINS, Palmer.—The power of the press has always been recognized and the men who have assisted in establishing and maintaining that mighty influence have borne more than their part in molding public opinion. It is almost impossible to carry through any project without the support of the newspapers of a community, and many a man of measure has been defeated because of a lack of harmony between the promoters and the press. One of the veteran newspaper men of Springfield is Palmer Atkins, whose services are gratefully remembered by the many to whom he was, for a number of years, the mouthpiece of popular demand. He is now living retired at No. 1436 South Seventh Street. For nearly fourteen years he was connected with the "Illinois State Register." As is true of so many Americans, Mr. Atkins traces his ancestry back to one of three brothers on his fathers side who came to this country from England in 1730. They came of sea-faring stock of a family of whalers or merchantmen. These brothers located at an early period of the place, and engaged in farming. His grandson, Seth, went to Lewis County, N. Y., being an early settler of the place, and engaged in farming. His son, also Seth, and father of Palmer Atkins, was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1819, but was reared in Lewis County, N. Y. He became well-known as a manufacturer of stoves, making a specialty of manufacturing stove fronts. In 1856 he came west with his family from New York City, which had been his home for some years, and located in Chicago. Later he moved to Monmouth, Warren County, Ill., where he had charge of the Pattee Plow Works. His death occurred there in 1882. In political affiliations he was a Democrat. Palmer Atkins was his only child, born of his marriage in New York State to Jane Palmer, daughter of John Palmer, Superintendent of the Erie Canal. Mrs. Atkins died in Chicago, in 1857.

The Palmer family were originally from Nottinghamshire, England, and Walter Palmer, who was born in England in 1598, came to Scowcroft, Conn., in 1633. He married Rebekah Short. Mr. Atkins' great-grandfather, John Palmer, was a member of the Continental Army from Connecticut. His son, also named John Palmer, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was in the war of 1812, while his uncle, George Palmer, also a son of John Palmer Jr., served in the Mexican War, being fatally wounded at the battle of Chapultepec, near the city of Mexico. This, with the military career of the subject of this sketch, makes him a successive generations who established a war record from the Revolution to the Civil War period.

Palmer Atkins was born on the site of old Fort Stanwix (N. Y.), of Revolutionary fame, August 28, 1842, and lived in New York State until he was fourteen years of age, when he was brought by his parents to Chicago. After studying in the public schools of both New York and Illinois, he attended the seminary at Mt. Morris, Ill. When only seventeen he began learning the printer's trade in the office of the "Dixon Telegraph," remaining there until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he enlisted as a private, joining the first company organized in Dixon, May 24, 1861. This was Company A, Thirteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Although a mere lad, he endured hardships bravely. The company was mustered into the United States service May 24, 1861, by Capt. John Pope, afterwards Commander of the Army of the Potomac, for three years' service or during the war. Their first engagement was at Wilson Creek, Mo., when Gen. Lyon was killed. Later Mr. Atkins participated in the battle of Pea Ridge, in which the regiment lost 187 out of 400 men. In the unsuccessful campaign against Vicksburg was with Gen. Curtis in Arkansas, and later took part in the battles of Jackson, Champion's Hill, and the siege of Vicksburg. Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Ringgold Gap and Madison Station. From the latter the regiment was ordered home to be mustered out. During the greater part of this time Mr. Atkins acted as staff printer and special messenger at Gen. Grant's headquarters, taking many of the capital dispatches. On April 10, 1864, while at Huntsville, Mr. Atkins was detailed to take charge of all the mail of the Fifteenth Army Corps, commanded by Gen. John A. Logan, which heavy responsibility was faithfully discharged by him.
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

He was finally discharged June 18, 1864, and returning home, resumed his prying business. He has always been foremost in advocating all public measures he has believed would result in the betterment of his community, and is rightly considered one of the representative men of Springfield. He is a member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., also of Springfield Lodge No. 465, I. O. O. F., of which he is Past Grand Master, and he and his wife are members of the Second Presbyterian Church.

ATKINSON, George W., who has been a resident of Sangamon County for more than sixty years, and now lives retired from an active life in the village of Riverton, is a native of Piqua, Ohio, born January 7, 1837. He is a son of William and Rachel (Nevius) Atkinson, both natives of New Jersey and the father a blacksmith by trade. William Atkinson followed his trade several years in his native State, then removed, by wagon, to Ohio, where he lived until 1849, the date of his coming to Illinois. Besides working at his trade he bought and sold cattle and horses, driving them to market. The family made the trip from Ohio to Illinois by wagon, consuming several weeks on the journey, and on the way the son, George W., then a young man, counted fifty-four deer. They remained in Springfield a few months, having arrived there November 15, 1849, occupying a house near where the Chicago & Alton Railroad depot now stands. They spent four years on a farm on Fork Prairie, and in 1855 moved to the old Prather farm near Sherman, where they spent two years, then the father purchased 220 acres of land in Shelby County, where he lived about eight years and then returned to Fork Prairie and spent two years there, after which he removed to Missouri. He lived in the latter State but a short time, then returned to Fork Prairie and spent the remainder of his life with his son George, his wife having died in Missouri.

John Atkinson, father of William, served in the War of 1812, as also did Jacob Nevius, father of Mrs. Atkinson. To William Atkinson and his wife nine sons and three daughters were born, of whom seven survive: John, aged ninety years, living in Iowa; Mrs. Catherine Brooks, of Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Hannah Magell, deceased; Jacob, a retired farmer and stock buyer, living in Iowa; Elbert, having a blacksmith and wagon shop at Anamosa, Iowa; Zenith L., a blacksmith living in Iowa; Thomas B., who conducts a blacksmith shop in the West, and George W.

After the death of his father George W. Atkinson continued farming until 1900, when he retired from active life and purchased a comfortable home in Riverton, which has since been his home. He was a resourceful and intelligent farmer and became very successful, being now possessed of considerable property.

Mr. Atkinson was married, in Rochester Township, in 1890, to Cordelia Ann Bashaw, a native of the township, born in 1848, daughter of James Bashaw and his wife, of Kentucky, who were early settlers of Sangamon County, where they spent the remainder of their lives on a farm. Mr. and Mrs. Bashaw were parents of four sons and two daughters. Mrs. Atkinson died in 1877, having borne her husband five children, four of whom are living: Harriet married Tryleene H. Trotter, proprietor of a blacksmith shop at Riverton; Lecta, married George W. Cockrell, and they live on a farm near Rochester; Nicholas B., a resident of Pekin; Walter, living in Riverton. Mr. Atkinson has five living grandchildren. He is a Republican in politics and is a member of the Baptist Church. He is well regarded as a public spirited and useful citizen, and highly esteemed in his community. He always had a warm friendship for Abraham Lincoln, and in his younger days frequently ran foot races with that illustrious man and also had his company in many games of marbles. Mr. Atkinson takes an active interest in the public welfare and is willing to lend his active support to any worthy cause for the public good.

AUXIER, Daniel Jefferson (deceased), for several years a resident of Springfield, was born near Mason City, Musou County, Ill., in 1844. His father, John Auxier, was a Kentuckian who moved to Illinois at an early day, and became owner of a large tract of land in Mason County, including the present site of Mason City. He was an extensive dealer in land and stock, and became a stockholder in the first railroad built in that section of the State. He was a thorough and able business man and successful in his enterprises. He died suddenly at his home near Mason City. He married Eveline Lane, of a good Southern family, who went to live with her son William, at Bismarck, and died there. Children as follows were born to this union: Daniel J.; William; Benjamin, went to Missouri to live; Mary, Mrs. Alvin Dowell, of Saint Louis, Missouri.

Daniel J. Auxier was about ten or twelve years of age when his father died and he lived with his widowed mother until going West, after his marriage. He received an ordinary education and his father was preparing to send his children to college when his own death occurred. Daniel J. continued to carry on the family farm for many years. He was married, in Springfield, October 3, 1870, to Miss Caroline Lucinda Patterson, of Springfield, daughter of Isaac D. and Sarah (Hall) Patterson, the former of whom is deceased. Mr. Auxier lived on the farm two years after his marriage, then moved to Cass City, Iowa, where he bought a farm of 160 acres. At the end of three years he sold his Iowa farm and located in Springfield, becoming foreman in a rolling mill, and later worked fifteen years in a lumber yard, where he was employed until his death. He was a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and a strictly temperate, good man. He was honest and upright in all his dealings and had a large number of friends. In politics he was a Democrat. Mrs. Auxier is a member of the Christian Church.

Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Auxier: Ella Vern, was married October 10, 1900, to Sylvester Dillard, and they have one child, William J.; Sadie Evelyn married William White, of Springfield. Mr. Dillard was born at the old Dillard homestead, four and one-half miles northwest of Springfield, in January, 1874.

AVOLT, Christopher.—Riverton is the home of some of the most substantial men of Sangamon County, who having retired from various lines of industrial activity, seek a congenial home where they can enjoy urban advantages without the restrictions which attend residence in larger centers of civilization. One of these men is Christopher Avolt, of Riverton, formerly one of the most prosperous of carpenters. He was born August 26, 1859, in La Salle, Ill., a son of John and Catherine Avolt, natives of Germany, of whom transmitted to their son many of their sterling German characteristics. John Avolt came to America in young manhood, locating in La Salle, Ill., where he lived until his death. While he and his wife were the parents of three sons and one daughter, Christopher Avolt is the only survivor.

Mr. Avolt grew up in La Salle, attending the primitive school of his day and working on his father's farm. Later he learned the carpenter trade, working at it in La Salle for many years. When the war broke out he enlisted from La Salle in Company H, Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving three years, and being discharged at Vicksburg, Miss. He participated in many engagements, including those of Port Donelson, Vicksburg, Saltillo, Corinth and many others, and being wounded in the first named. He served as Corporal of his company, and was a gallant and brave soldier. At the close of his military experience, he returned to La Salle, remaining there until 1872, when he came to Springfield. Being a skilled workman, he there found ready employment, and worked at his trade until he settled in Riverton, which has continued to be his home. Mr. Avolt belongs to Stephenson Post, No. 30, G. A. R. In political convictions he is a Republican, being proud to belong to the party Abraham Lincoln helped found.

The marriage of Mr. Avolt occurred in La Salle, Ill., in 1886, when he was united with Anna Hughes, born in Wales. Her parents came to America, first settling in La Salle, where they lived for several years, later going to Riverton, where both died. Mrs. Avolt died in Riverton, in 1886, leaving a sorrowing husband and six children to mourn her loss. These children are: Maggie, wife of Ferd Volkmar, of St. Louis; Elizabeth wife of L. G. Duncan, a carpenter and builder of Riverton, with whom Mr. Avolt makes his home; John, of Pawnee, Ill.; Thomas, of Riverton, and David, of Girard, Ill., as well as one who is deceased. There are two grandchildren in the family. Mr. Avolt owns property in Riverton, and is in receipt of a pension from the government in grateful appreciation of his services. He has worked hard all his life and has done his full duty, both as a soldier and as a private citizen.

AYERS, Eugene Morgan.—This is the age of the young man. Many of Springfield's most successful business men are still under forty, yet have attained material prosperity. Of these the majority have worked their way up from comparative poverty to affluence, and among them one deserving of more than passing mention is Eugene Morgan Ayers, born in Perry, Pike County, III., December 2, 1874, a son of Lewis and Katherine Eleanor (Morgan) Ayers, natives of Pennsylvania and Upper Alton, Ill. The father is a painter by calling and is now residing in Chicago, but the mother died in 1899. Eugene M. was their only child. Lewis Ayers is a Republican and a member of the Christian Church, in which he takes an active part.

Eugene M. Ayers has fought his way up. Leaving school at New Salem, III., when only thirteen years old, he came to Springfield to work in the Wabash shops. After eight months in the planing department he was errand boy at Weems laundry for two years, then found employment on the Wabash railroad as errand boy. A year of this gave him the experience he felt he needed before embarking in his present business, which he has successfully prosecuted ever since.

Mr. Ayers was married on August 26, 1894, to Adeline Leeder, born in Springfield, daughter of William F. and Flora (Ripstein) Leeder, natives of Germany, who had six children, of whom Mrs. Ayers was the fifth in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. Ayers are the parents of four children: Katherine, Russell, Dorothy and Arthur, bright young people.

The Democratic party has in Mr. Ayers a staunch supporter, although as yet he has not represented it in any official position. Fraternally he has connected himself with the original Order of Owls. His religious home is in the Christian Church, towards which he liberally contributes. He is a live, energetic young man, and one deserving of all praise for his industry and earnest endeavor to better his condition and not to allow adverse circumstances to discourage him.

BACCOCK, Andrew J. (Vol. I, p. 39.)

BABENEL, Peter (deceased).—The older generation of Springfield well remembers Peter Babenel, the veteran piano builder, whose almost perfect work and genial manner endeared him to many. He was born in France, January 22, 1810, and his life was a varied one. A son of Eugene and Elizabeth Babenal, also natives of France, Peter Babenel was carefully reared, and taught the piano-making trade. Believing that there was more opportunity for him in America, the young Frenchman emigrated and found plenty of work of the kind he understood and was able to do so thoroughly. For fifty years he made Springfield his home, and gained the confidence and respect of all who came into contact with him. He was a member of the last regiment to leave Springfield for the Civil War, and was a brave and faithful soldier. The death of this good man occurred
July 22, 1872, and he was laid to rest in Oak Ridge Cemetery. When his wife passed away on September 11, 1902, she was placed by his side.

Peter Babencel married Mahalma Hoffer, born in Jacksonville, Ill., September 4, 1826. She was there educated and prior to her marriage was a dressmaker. They had children as follores: Emma, born December 31, 1854, is married and resides in Springfield; Walter, born February 12, 1856; Mrs. Carle Saylor, born January 26, 1857, is a widow and resides at
No. 618 Walnut Street, Springfield; Lilly, born in October, 1862, resides at Decatur, Ill.; George, born March 4, 1865, is married and resides in St. Louis; and Maud, born in 1869.

One building was a log cabin, belonging to Lodge No. 4, and was also an Odd Fellow. He early connected himself with the Presbyterian Church, to which his wife also belonged, and gave it his hearty support. In political convictions he was a strong Democrat, but never held office nor desired to do so. He was a man who never restrained himself with regard to making friends. Few doors in Springfield opened so easily and hospitably as his. There was ever a place at his board for friend or stranger, and none ever applied to him for help, who did not receive it. His memory survives because of his high personal attributes.

BACHMANN, Carl (deceased), who for many years carried on farming in Island Grove Township, Sangamon County, Ill., was a public-spirited and useful citizen and highly respected by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.
Mr. Bachmann was born in Ludolphhausen, Hanover, Germany, August 2, 1828, and in his native land learned the trade of weaver, which he followed until coming to America. After the death of his father he brought his mother and two sisters to America, making the trip in 1848. They remained a short time in Philadelphia, then removed to St. Louis, where he obtained work on the levee, carrying sacks of salt. His neck was often raw from the burdens he carried for loading ships, but he would not leave his work, as he had his family depending upon him for their support. His sister Minnie became the wife of Charles White and they removed to Kansas, where both died.

In 1851, with his mother and remaining sister, Mr. Bachmann removed to Island Grove Township, where he worked by the month many years, and in 1855, deciding to marry, rented a farm in the township. His marriage occurred in June of that year to Miss Agnes Strone, a native of Germany, who came to America alone.
Mr. Bachmann and his prospective bride walked to Springfield, obtained a license, were married, and spent the first night of their married life in a log hotel, where the only room that could be given them contained a single small bed, on which the bride slept, while her husband composed himself on a pile of sacks in a corner on the floor. It was a rude building, the stars being plainly visible through the roof. In the morning they started on their honeymoon trip back to Island Grove Township, where they began housekeeping in a small one-room log cabin.
He and his brother together had rented 320 acres of land and became very successful farmers. They afterwards divided the land, each taking 100 acres, having by that time purchased the tract. Mr. Bachmann was an industrious and thrifty man and prospered accordingly.
He became one of the honored citizens of his comdunity and remained on his farm until 1865, when failing health led him to retire from active life. He rented property in New Berlin, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away May 21, 1897, at the age of seventy-three years, having been born in America, had made many friends by his genuine goodness and honest, upright life, and his funeral was largely attended. He was a faithful member of the Evangelical Lutheran Church and an active worker in its interests.

Seven children were born to Mr. Bachmann and his wife: Louis, twenty-five years of age; Bertha, wife of Henry Utzwar, of Highland, Ill.; Henry, operating a farm in Cartwright Township; Minnie, wife of William Blumenstein; Mary married Charles Long; Lizzie, wife of R. Blumenstein at Lebanon, Ill.; and Charles Bachmann, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Long were parents of five children, namely: Carl, of Quincy, Ill.; William, a druggist of Des Moines;
Agnes M.; Adolph, of Des Moines, Ia.; Louise
M., with her mother. Mr Long died December 14, 1898, and after his death his widow continued in the hotel business, which he had foldowed during his life, purchasing a good building for this enterprise, and continued it with profit until her marriage to Dr. Lewis D. Wiike, a leading physician and surgeon of New Berlin,

a sketch of whom also appears in this work.
By this union there was one child, Cecil. Mrs.
Wiley is an estimable and capable woman and is descended from a long line of well-to-do German ancestors. Many of her family became leading citizens of Sangamon County.
She is a useful and active member of the Baptist Church of New Berlin, of which she is serving as Church Clerk. Like her brothers and sisters, she was reared in the Lutheran faith, but later in life united with the Baptist Church. Both her father and Mr. Long's father were largely instrumental in building and maintaining the first Lutheran Church at New Berlin.

The youngest son, Charles, still resides on the old home farm in Cartwright Township.
BAHR, Henry J.—A half-century is indeed a long period to spend in one line of business in one city, and still to be in active service at the end of this length of time denotes an enterprising, energetic spirit, as well as an appreciation of the congeniality of one’s profession. Most men, having built up a successful and remunerative business, are content to retire from active pursuits on reaching the age of three score years, but this is not the case with Henry J. Bahr, proprietor of the tonsorial parlors at No. 1327 East Washington street, Springfield, who, while he has not been in business here for quite fifty years, is rapidly approaching that distinction. Mr. Bahr is a native of Germany, having been born near Frankfort-on-the-Oder, December 29, 1843, and is a son of Christian and Wilhelmina (Graber) Bahr, the former born December 17, 1816, and the latter in February, 1810. The family came to the United States in 1835, landing at New York City after a thirty-two days’ voyage on the sailing vessel Hermon, soon removed to Haverstraw and later to Long Island, where Mr. Bahr carried on gardening. Christian Bahr died at Greenport, L. L., September 7, 1877, at the age of eighty-one years, his wife having passed away many years before, in 1852, when fifty-two years of age. They were parents of five children, as follows: Dora, born March 9, 1844; Henry J.; John, born March 4, 1848; William C., born March 29, 1850; and Minnie, born June 19, 1853.

Henry J. Bahr was but eight years of age when he was brought to the United States, by his parents. Being the eldest son, he had few chances for securing an education, as the family was in rather humble circumstances and the youth’s earnings were needed to help in the support of the family and the proper rearing of his younger brothers and sisters. Consequently, at an early age, he was sent out to work on the farm during the winter months, and in the summer to this he labored at whatever he could find to do, including cutting and hauling wood, and other expressage, and in making toy torpedoes.

In 1857 Mr. Bahr decided to learn a regular trade and in that year started under the tutelage of Bernard Bush to learn the occupation of barber, which he has since followed. He continued on Long Island until the year 1866, when he came to Springfield to assist in opening the barber shop in the Leland Hotel, and in this position he remained for twelve years, becoming intimately acquainted with the guests of that hostelry. Deciding to go into business on his own account, in 1875 he opened parlors at No. 510 East Monroe Street, but later for ten years was engaged at the St. Nicholas barber shop in Springfield. Again opening a business establishment of his own at Monroe Street, Mr. Bahr successfully continued there until 1889, at which time he purchased the building at No. 1327 East Washington Street, opened tonsorial parlors and has conducted a well-paying business to the present time. Mr. Bahr’s is an up-to-date establishment, including the latest and most highly improved fixtures and paraphernalia to be found in any barber shop in Springfield, and among his patrons are to be found some of the Capital City’s most distinguished guests. His long experience in this line of business has made Mr. Bahr well-known throughout the city, and he has countless friends and acquaintances.

On September 7, 1876, Mr. Bahr was united in marriage with Miss Anna M. Dexheimer, of Dearborn County, Ind., and to them there were born three children: Raymond V., manager of the Pure Ice & Cold Storage Company, of Springfield, who married Annie Brocklesby; Harry E., married Emma Margaret Meyer and is employed at the Illinois Watch Factory; and Elmer L., also employed at the watch factory.

In his political beliefs Mr. Bahr is a Democrat and for the past three years he has served as Judge of the First Precinct of the First Ward of Springfield.

BAKER, Edward.—In the list of Sangamon County pioneers occur many names that are familiar to the present residents. These hardy forerunners of a later civilization did not shrink from the hardships incident to frontier life, but fought bravely to conquer the wilderness and found substantial homes for those who came after them. The Baker family was prominent in early days, as it is now, and one of its best known representatives is Edward Baker, of Clear Lake Township, a successful farmer of the county. Mr. Baker was born in that township, November 28, 1853, a son of Alvin and Hester (Hornbaker) Baker, and grandson of the grand old pioneers, Job Baker. The latter was one of the very early settlers of the county, who during the Black Hawk War defended his home from the attacks of the hostile Indians, serving as a valiant soldier. He came from Kentucky, where he had become experienced in Indian warfare and in overcoming pioneer difficulties, so that the Illinois wilderness had no terrors for him. The good man lived to see many changes and died respected by a large circle of friends.

Alvin Baker located in Clear Lake Township when the land was in a wild state. He was a native of Illinois and was always loyal to it. His wife was a native of Pennsylvania and survives her husband who died many years ago, on his farm. She has attained the age of seventy-four years and is in good health. She and her husband had three children, all sons, and one, Alonso, is also a farmer of Clear Lake Township.

Edward Baker was educated in his native township, attending the country schools, and at the same time worked to assist his father. Until his marriage he was a farmer, but then embarked in a milk business that engaged his attention for five years. In 1892 he established himself in a grocery business in Springfield, where he had operated his milk and dairy enterprise, and remained in it until 1908, when he located on his present farm. His property comprises ninety-four acres of as rich farming land as can be found in all of Sangamon County, and he is raising a general crop, with a good grade of stock. Owing to his early training, he is a practical farmer, who understands thoroughly every detail of his work and is thus enabled to make it pay a good return on his investment.

The marriage of Mr. Baker took place in the township in which he now resides, May 28, 1876, to Delcena Bell Snodgrass, born in the township, where her mother still resides. The Snodgrass family also early located in the county. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Baker: Nera, wife of Frank Wallace, of Springfield; Bertha, Mrs. Bashaw, resides with her father; Claude resides at home, and two who are deceased. The one grandchild, Velma Bashaw, resides with her mother at the home of Mr. Baker and is her grandfather’s pet. The political affiliations of Mr. Baker are with the Republican party, and while he has been earnest in his support of its principles and candidates, he has not permitted the use of his name on the ticket, preferring to exert his influence as a private citizen.

The secret of Mr. Baker’s success in life has been that he has never shirked the duty that lay nearest his hand, but performed it as well as lay in his power. As his carefully accumulated savings permitted, he has made wise investments, that have turned out successfully, and is now in comfortable circumstances. His children have been carefully reared, given every advantage that lay within his power, and fitted to cope with the realities of life. Quiet and unassuming, he has made many friends, while he has never failed to gain the confidence and respect of all with whom he has been associated.

BAKER, Edward L. (Vol. I, p. 32.)

BAKER, George C., one of Sangamon County’s representative men and a leading agriculturist of his county, is carrying on operations on a 703-acre tract of land which is located on Section 17, Township 13, Range 4 West, Pawnee, Township, and is known as the Old Pawnee Indian Camp Grounds. Mr. Baker was born on the farm on which he now lives and where he has spent all his life, February 4, 1860, a son of Michael and Fannie (Hinkle) Baker. Mr. Baker’s grandfather on the paternal side was a native of Bavaria, Germany, whence he came to the United States, and died in Sangamon County, Ill. His grandfather on the maternal side was one of Sangamon County’s earliest settlers, a native of Virginia and a soldier during the Black Hawk War. Michael Baker was born in Germany and was six years old when he accompanied his parents to the United States. They first settled in St. Louis, Mo., but a few years later removed to Springfield, Ill., locating on what was known as the old Leland farm. Shortly afterwards, however, they came to the present home of George C. Baker, and there Michael Baker was engaged in farming until 1890, at which time he retired and went to Springfield, and he and his wife now reside at the corner of Fourth and Allen Streets in that city. Mr. Baker was married in February, 1859, to Fannie Hulke, and to them there were born two children: George C. and John W., the latter of whom died when one year old, in 1862.

George C. Baker started his education in the public schools of Pawnee, Ill., and during the years 1880 and 1881 attended business college at Jacksonville, Ill. He has lived at home all his life and worked for his father until his marriage, at which time he took charge of the farm, his father retiring. His land is in an excellent state of cultivation, yielding large crops and Mr. Baker operates it scientifically, having studied much along these lines, as he is a firm believer in new methods. This farm was once the camping grounds of the Pawnee Indian tribe, and even now arrow heads and other interesting relics are often found during the plowing season.

Mr. Baker is a member of the Anti-Horse-Thief Association, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Loyal Americans. With his family he attends the Methodist Church. In political matters he has always voted for the man rather than the party, but, other things being equal, favors the Prohibitionists. He has always been ready and willing to give of his means or time to help forward any movement which he believes will be of assistance in building up or advancing his community in any way, and has been willing to serve his township in the office of School Director.

On August 24, 1881, Mr. Baker was married, at Divernon, Ill., by the Rev. Knowles, to Alice Dodds who was born at Divernon, February 14, 1869, a daughter of Ewing F. and Paulina K. (Fletcher) Dodds. Mr. Dodds was born in Sangamon County, Ill., and after a long life spent in agricultural pursuits, died in October, 1890. His widow, who was born in 1837, is now residing with Mr. Baker. Mrs. Baker’s grandparents were natives of Kentucky and it is a matter of record that her grandmother rode horseback from Kentucky to Illinois when a girl. To Mr. and Mrs. Baker there have been born four children, of whom three died in infancy. The surviving child is Chester D., who was born on the home farm August 6, 1887, and who, since completing his educational training, has been working for his father. He is unmarried. The Baker and Dodds families are old and prominent in Sangamon County, and members of both are held in the highest esteem throughout that section.
Baker, Martin E., Jr.—The Baker family has every reason to be proud of its record among the pioneers of Sangamon County, for since 1828 it has been represented there, and ever since that date its representatives have labored to advance the material and intellectual development of this part of the State. One of the members of the family who is numbered among the substantial farmers and stockmen of Illiopolis Township, is Martin E. Baker, Jr., born in the township December 25, 1860. He is a son of Martin E. Baker, Sr., born January 27, 1824, near Carlisle, Ky. In 1828 he was brought by his parents to Sangamon County and in 1831 location was made in Rochester Township. Still later Christian County became the family home, but upon his marriage, in 1852, Mr. Baker returned to Sangamon County, to take up his residence in Illiopolis Township, where he lived until his death, April 22, 1911. His wife bore the maiden name of Mary Catherine Williams, was born in 1826 near Hagerstown, Md., and died February 16, 1880. Eight children were born of this marriage: James, Horace, Martin, Charles, Cornelia, Margaret, Nancy and Florence. Mr. Baker was a farmer all his life and sometimes was very successful. One of the last law cases of Abraham Lincoln was defending Mr. Baker in a contest for possession of some land. When Mr. Baker asked Mr. Lincoln what he thought the outcome would be, the great man gave one of his characteristic replies: "Mr. Baker, God Almighty can't tell what those twelve men will do."

Martin E. Baker Jr. was educated in the common schools of his township, and continued farming all his life, preferring that occupation to any other. He bought his present farm about 1907, and expects to make it one of the model properties of this locality. His modern house contains thirteen rooms, and is surrounded by a large lawn with a rock wall fence. The farm is called Maple Hill Stock Farm, and he prides himself on the quality of his stock. His land is very productive, in 1910 his corn crop averaging 125 bushels to the acre, while some of the land produced 150 bushels per acre. He has thirteen acres in fine apple trees. This farm is in what is known as the geographically center of the State, where Gov. Duncan drove the stake for a town site, intending building the capital there, and came within two votes of getting it there.

On March 22, 1905, Mr. Baker was married in Illiopolis, to Idna Bell Roberts, born November 16, 1888, in Illiopolis Township, daughter of William P., and Mary E. (Boyd) Roberts, the former born in Schuyler County, Ill., January 26, 1836, and the latter being a daughter of Milton Boyd. Mrs. Baker is the youngest of nine children born to her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Baker became parents of three children, two of whom died in infancy, the one living being Catherine Elizabeth, born October 22, 1908.

Mr. Baker has been School Director and Road Commissioner and served acceptably in both capacities. He and his wife belong to the Christian Church. For eight years he has been a Knight of Pythias and for twelve years a modern Woodman. In addition to his farming interests Mr. Baker served for three years as President of the Illiopolis Bank; is now its Vice-president and one of the Directors, and owns stock in two grain elevators. He is one of the live, progressive men of his township and one who is very ambitious to carry out the many plans he has made for a long and useful future.

Mr. Baker's grandfather was the first white child born in Nicholas County, Ky. His great-grandfather was a companion of Daniel Boone, and they fought Indians together. He was in the War of 1812.

Baker, Peter, a substantial and respected citizen of Springfield, was born in Baskingridge, N. J., September 23, 1844, a son of George and Sophia (Kunz) Baker, the former born at New Byern, Germany, January 2, 1824, and the latter in Alsace, Germany, April 12, 1817. The father was a blacksmith by trade and came to the United States in 1829, living ten years in New Jersey. In 1840 George Baker moved West and located in Springfield, making the trip to that city from Peoria overland. He worked two years in J. C. Lamb's foundry, two years for Mr. Henkel, and then lived for two years on a farm near the city, after which he bought a farm in the McKinney Settlement and lived there several years. He then moved to Riverton, where he lived fourteen years, spent a year in Springfield and then moved with his son Jacob to a farm west of the city, where he died.

The education of Peter Baker was received in Springfield subscription schools and he worked on his father's farm until he was seventeen years of age, when he learned the trade of carpenter. He has since followed. He was employed many years by the Illinois Watch Company and was later employed by Des Noyer Shoe Company. When first locating in Springfield the family lived on West Reynolds Street five years, then lived on a farm on the Jackson-ville Road two years, and then moved to the McKinney Settlement, after which Peter Baker moved to Springfield and has since made that city his home. In his youth he used to go swimming in Spring Creek near Hickox Mill, with Abraham Lincoln, and has played marbles with the latter's son, Robert Lincoln.

Mr. Baker married, at Springfield, February 1, 1868, Miss Christina Danner, who was born May 19, 1844, daughter of Andrew and Martha Dunner, the former born in 1808 and the latter in 1827. Mr. Danner and his wife came from Germany, and lived for a time in Pittsburg, Pa., where Mr. Danner worked at his trade of blacksmith. Later they moved to Illinois and he worked at his trade at Mt. Pulaski.

Children were born to Mr. Baker and his wife as follows: John F., born October 4, 1868;
Anna M., wife of Henry Ladager, a farmer living near Divernou, Ill.; Lena P., wife of James Vandervoort, living at 520 West Carpenter Street, Springfield; Peter A., a carpenter, living on West Reynolds Street; Mary C., wife of Ralph Lochen, living on West Carpenter Street; Elizabeth, living at home. Fourteen grandchildren were born to Mr. and Mrs. Baker, and all live in Sangamon County.

In politics Mr. Baker is a Democrat and he is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church. Fraternally he belongs to Camp No. 872, M. W. A., of Cantrall, Ill., and to Carpenters' Union No. 16. He is a skilled workman and has been successful at his chosen trade. He is a man of industrious and sober habits and has been able to accumulate some real estate, owning a beautiful residence at 321 West Carpenter Street, which has been the family home for the past forty-one years. He has many warm personal friends and is considered a useful, representative citizen.

BAKER, Richard, a veteran of the Civil war and for the past five years custodian in charge of the Chautauqua society grounds at Mechanics-burg, Ill., is a native of Lincoln County, Ky., born April 9, 1833, a son of Henry and Sallie (Martin) Baker, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Georgia. The former was a farmer by occupation and in an early day moved from Tennessee to Kentucky. There he carried on farming many years, then removed to Vermillion County, Ill., where he again took up farming, and later located in Sangamon County. He died on a farm near Auburn. His father, John Baker, was a soldier of the War of 1812. Seven sons and three daughters were born to Henry Baker and wife, of whom four sons and one daughter now survive: namely: Richard; Thomas, a retired farmer residing at Buffalo, Ill.; John, living in the West; Perry, living near Jacksonville, and Mrs. Susan Marion, living on a farm near Jacksonville.

Richard Baker was a small child when the family came to Illinois and he received most of his education in Sangamon County. He worked for his father until he enlisted, from Mechanicsburg, in Company A, Seventy-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Smith, later serving under Captain Cross, now of Mechanicsburg. He was mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., June 12, 1865, having served nearly three years and taken part in twenty-three battles. At the battle of Chickamauga where several thousand men were slain in seven hours. Mr. Baker was wounded. He borne himself with credit to himself and company, and at the close of his service returned to Mechanicsburg and engaged in farming, which occupation he has since followed successfully, in connection with his duties at the Chautauqua grounds.

Mr. Baker was married, at Arcola, Ill., January 28, 1856, to Lucina Sanders, a native of Vigo County, Ind., her parents being early settlers of Coles County, Ill., and farmers by occupation. Mr. Baker and his wife had two children, both of whom died in infancy, and Mrs. Baker died in 1857. In October, 1858, Mr. Baker married (second) Mrs. Jane Sargent, Rulliford, who was born in London, England, and to this union three children were born, all of whom are deceased, and the mother of these children died in 1870. In November, 1893, Mr. Baker mar-rried (third) Mary Bullock, born near Greencastle, Ind., whose parents are deceased, and no children were born of this union.

Mr. Baker is a substantial and much respected citizen of Mechanicsburg, where he owns some property. He is a member of the Christian Church and in politics is a Republican. He belongs to the G. A. R. Post at Buffalo. He is well known in his part of the county and has many friends. He well remembers the days when Lincoln lived in Springfield and often saw him before his election to the Presidency.

BAKER, William G., a successful business man of Springfield, Ill., successor to the firm of Power & Baker, belongs to a family that has been well known in the city since an early day. His grandfather, Hiram Baker, was a native of New York State and was an early settler of Springfield, where he became a successful contractor and builder. He furnished Government supplies during the war and died at Jacksonville, Ill., where he had lived but a short time. William G. Baker was born in Springfield, December 27, 1878, son of William D. and Rachel (Howard) Baker, the former also a native of Springfield, born in 1857.

William D. Baker worked many years at the Illinois watch factory, where he became fore-mann, and in later life worked twelve years as postal clerk on the Illinois Central road. He was killed in a railway accident in 1896, and his widow still resides in Springfield. Their children were: William G.; Fred, of Springfield; Ethel, Mrs. Arthur Koenigstein, of Fort Smith, Ark.; John and Roy of Springfield.

William G. Baker received his education in the public schools of Springfield and at the age of seventeen years took up the plumbing trade, serving as apprentice five years. He worked three years as journeyman and in 1901 formed a partnership with J. T. Power, buying his partner's interest five years later. He has secured many large jobs in his line and has won a reputation for expert work and high-class goods. He is a self-made man, having embarked in the enterprise with a small capital and built up his business by degrees, through good service and business enterprise. He is considered a man of reliability and honesty and his prospects for future business prosperity are very good.

Mr. Baker was married in Springfield May 21, 1902, to Miss Nellie Whittaker, daughter of Simon and Sarah (Pendergast) Whittaker, of Springfield, and they have three children: Ethel, born in 1903, died September 30, 1910; Fred, born 1905; and William, in 1907.
Baldwin, Wesley, a retired farmer residing at Mechanicsburg, Ill., was born in Greene County, Ind., November 17, 1832, and is a son of Elija and Rachel (Bland) Baldwin, the former born in Kentucky and the latter in Indiana. Elija Baldwin was a farmer by occupation and as a young man moved to Indiana, locating in Clark County, where he remained several years, then removed to Greene County, where he lived until 1835, then came to Illinois and settled on a farm in Christian County, where he remained until his death. His wife also died in Christian County. They were parents of four sons and three daughters, of whom Wesley is the only survivor. The latter received his education in Indiana and Illinois country schools and as a young man assisted his father in the work of carrying on the farm.

Until 1868 Wesley Baldwin carried on a farm in Christian County, then removed to Sangamon County and continued farming until 1898, when he retired from active life and came to his present home. He owns a good piece of property in Mechanicsburg and is one of that town's most respected citizens. He was successful as a farmer and is a useful, public-spirited citizen.

Mr. Baldwin moved to Mechanicsburg Township, in 1860, to Lucinda Baldwin, who was not a relative, although bearing the same surname. She was a native of Missouri and died in 1875, having borne her husband three sons, who survive, and one daughter, who is deceased. The former are: Fred R., a resident of Louisville, Ill.; Reuben, of South Dakota; and R. W. of South Dakota. Mr. Baldwin married (second) January 2, 1878, at St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Sarah A. (Kelly) Holmes, born in Missouri, January 15, 1830, daughter of William Kelly and his wife, the former born in Ireland and the latter in Germany. Mr. Kelly came to America as a young man and first located in Sangamon County, but a few years later removed to Missouri and spent two years there, after which he returned to Mechanicsburg Township, where he spent the remainder of his life on a farm. The mother died in Kansas, where she had gone for a visit. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly were parents of seven sons and eleven daughters, of whom eight daughters now survive. Mr. Kelly enlisted from Springfield for service in the Civil War, in Company A, Twenty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, served three years, then was taken sick, was brought home and soon afterward died. Two of his sons served in the same company and both were killed in service. Mr. Kelly was personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln, with whom he worked and split rails. Mrs. Baldwin was also personally acquainted with the Lincoln family and visited the home many times. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin became parents of two children and of these only one survives, Dovely, wife of Samuel Farmer, a blacksmith of Mechanicsburg.

Mrs. Baldwin's first husband was James H. Holmes, by whom she had nine children, of whom six are now living: Elizabeth, Tilda, William, Sarah, John, Joseph (now residing in California); Elizabeth married Reuben Benedict, custodian of the cemetery at Mechanicsburg; Tilda is wife of Samuel T. Metcalf, a farmer of Mechanicsburg Township; Reuben is a farmer near Blue Mound, Ill.; Sarah is the wife of Clement Murphy, also a farmer of Mechanicsburg Township; John is also a farmer of the same township. There are eleven grandchildren in the family and two great-grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin are members of the Christian Church, and in politics he is a Republican.

Bale, William Jacob.—The younger generation of farmers is setting an example in agricultural work to those of an older day. One of the progressive young men engaged in farming is William Jacob Bale, of Section 26, New Berlin Township, born near Allendale, Greene County, Ky., the oldest post-office in the State, August 16, 1874, a son of John Elliot and Susan (Close) Bale, both natives of Green County, although of New Jersey Dutch Revolutionary stock. The paternal great-grandfather came from northern New Jersey to Green County, Ky., where he erected a sawmill on Bald Creek, the structure standing for one hundred years, when, in the summer of 1910, a new mill was built on its site, by Barney Marcum. This ancestor was one of the pioneers of Kentucky and a most excellent man, whose efforts to rid the country of Indians made him well known. His son and grandson were also prosperous, becoming well known in Green County. John E. Bale was brought up in this county, where he still resides, and in which his eight children were born, seven of whom survive: William J.; Peter R., on the old home; Katie, wife of Charles Woodward, a farmer of Shelby County, Ill.; Alice Mary, wife of Frank Scott, a farmer of Green County; and, daughter; Gertrude E. Bale, married Frank Scott, a farmer of Green County, Ky.; John Lewis, on the home farm; Ernest Lee died at the age of six years; Carrie Ann, wife of Frank Howell, also on the old farm. All of these children have been carefully educated, and brought up to habits of thrift and industry, and all are members of the Baptist Church, although the family originally were connected with the Presbyterian denomination. Mr. Bale is a Democrat in his political faith.

William Jacob Bale attended district school and worked on the farm, and, being the eldest, much was required of him. He remained at home until his marriage, on August 23, 1893, to Maranda Jane Marcum, daughter of Greenbury Marcum and his wife, Rebecca (Trent) Marcum, the former also a native of Green County, Ky., while the mother was born in Brockenridge County, but is now deceased. The children by this marriage were: Nannie B., wife of James Bell, a farmer of Green County, Ky.; Mrs. Bale; John M. died in infancy; Mrs. Bale was born March 13, 1877, in Green County. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Bale rented land in Green County but, although successful, he felt that there was more opportunity in Illinois, so in November, 1897, they left their old home to move to Pike County, Ill., where he went to work on a farm by the month. In the fall of 1902 he came to Sangamon County, engaging for five years with William Kerr, but in 1907 he rented 160 acres on Section 26, New Berlin Township, where he has been producing bountiful crops. He takes pride in keeping up the property, and has so improved it that it is now one of the best-kept farms in the township.

Mr. Bale is raising the best breed of Duroc-Jersey registered hogs, averaging from forty to fifty head annually. He also has five fine horses and is a modern farmer and stock-raiser in every respect.

Mr. and Mrs. Bale are the parents of seven children: Arthur Green, born July 31, 1894; Rebeccas S., born August 17, 1896; George William, born August 24, 1898; Blanch Ann, born July 9, 1901; Charles G., born April 29, 1903; John E., born March 22, 1905; and May, born April 22, 1908. Mr. Bale is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, No. 331, New Berlin. While not a member of any church, both he and his wife attend the Baptist Church. Politically he is a Democrat and interested in the progress of his party. He and his wife have many friends here whom they are happy to entertain with true Southern hospitality.

BALL, Theodore Kellogg.—There are few men who, having made a success in one of the learned professions, turn to business fields and there achieve equal prominence, yet this is what Theodore Kellogg Ball has done. He is one of the representative contracting carpenters of Springfield, but at one time was a successful attorney. He was born near Perry, in Pike County, Ill., July 10, 1848, a son of Gideon O. and Delia A. (Kellogg) Ball. The father was born in Fredonia, N. Y., while the mother was born near Perry. By occupation the father was a carpenter and he came to Pike County, Ill., in 1847, continuing to make it his home until his death. For over five years he was a soldier in the regular army, participating in the Florida battles and other engagements against the Indians. Of the three children born to himself and wife Theodore K. is the eldest, the others being, Emma and Lydia A. Emma became the wife of John J. C. Ball and lives at Fredonia, N. Y., he being a conductor on the traction system, while Lydia A. was married and died July 25, 1906.

Theodore Kellogg Ball was educated in a country school near Perry, but left it at the age of eleven years to work on a farm owned by his step-father, his mother having married Uriah Elledge after the death of Mr. Ball. Here he remained until he was nineteen years old. At that time he went to Griggsville, Ill., to engage in a transfer business, continuing in it from 1867 to 1872, this being the first enterprise of its kind in the town. In the latter year he became traveling salesman for the Singer Manufacturing Company, remaining with this concern until the spring of 1876, when he entered the Sheriff's office at Pittsfield, the county seat of Pike County. After four years of faithful service he became salesman for a firm in Pittsfield, with Pike and surrounding counties as his territory, handling agricultural implements for two years. In 1883 he was made Chief of Police at Griggsville and held that office until 1888. During his incumbency of it he studied law and in 1888 was elected City Attorney, with offices at Griggsville. After two years in that office he began taking an active part in politics, receiving an appointment through Secretary of State Hendricks during the Altgeld administration, and was at the capital from 1893 to 1897, during which time he has been a contracting carpenter.

Mr. Ball was married on September 17, 1867, to Anna Cadwell, born in Griggsville, March 1, 1853, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Carroll) Cadwell. The latter was a direct descendant of Charles Carroll, whose name appears as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. and Mrs. Cadwell had four children: Elizabeth, who died when sixteen years old; John; William C., of Washington, and Mrs. Ball. Twelve children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ball, ten of whom survive: Albert; Harriet E., wife of J. R. Phillips; Mary D., of St. Louis, a clerk in the Traction System; Thomas E., deceased; Florence M., Daisy, Noble, Maude, Theodore E.; I. J., deceased; John W., and J. Frank. Mr. Ball is a Democrat. He belongs to the Christian Church. He is a member of the Carpenters' local union, in which he holds office. The pleasant family home on West Carpenter Street was built by him.

BANCROFT, George Robert, a lifelong resident of Springfield, Ill., was born in that city, April 23, 1843. Mr. Bancroft has lived retired many years, and though unable to take an active part in affairs on account of his invalidism, he is still keenly interested in what is taking place in the community and in the outside world, and through the medium of the newspapers keeps in touch with current events and issues. He is well known in Springfield and has many warm friends who greatly enjoy his companionship. He is best known as a veteran of the Civil War, in which he made a record of which he is justly proud. Mr. Bancroft is a son of Jonathan Coburn and Frances S. (Stone) Bancroft, natives respectively, of St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and Vermont. His great-grandfather, Colonel Philip Stone, commanded Vermont Militia in the Revolutionary War and the Stone family were prominent in early Vermont history. The Bancroft family were early settlers in New York and George R. Bancroft is a third cousin of George Bancroft, the historian.

Jonathan C. Bancroft at one time conducted a brick-making plant at Springfield, Ill. He had emigrated to Michigan and in 1827 to Illinois, where the remainder of his life was spent. His wife came to Springfield from Vermont in 1831, and there spent the remainder of her life. They were parents of three children.

George R. Bancroft spent his childhood just outside of Springfield and received his education in the public schools. After leaving school he engaged in newspaper work and afterwards in various other occupations. December 16, 1863, Mr. Bancroft enlisted at Springfield, in Company G, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, serving until July 7, 1865. During part of his service he was under the command of General Steele Reynolds in Sheridan's cavalry. Among the interesting experiences he relates is that of the time when his regiment was engaged with bushwhackers near Bayou Des Arc, in Arkansas, July 8, 1864, when, out of the two hundred fifteen men who took part in the skirmish on the Union side, but one hundred and fifteen escaped, and Mr. Bancroft was the only unmounted man who got away safely. He made a good record as a soldier and did his full duty in defence of the cause for which he had enlisted his services. He had many narrow escapes and slept many nights in the woods alone. He was highly esteemed by his comrades, who recognized his bravery and true worth.

At one time, in 1864, Mr. Bancroft was sent out with a scouting party, consisting of 350 men, under Captain Bates, and they were sent to Hickory Plains, Ark., to capture a party of bushwhackers, but the latter made their way into woods so dense that they made their escape. Upon returning to camp they fed their horses and prepared to spend the night. It was raining Mr. Bancroft took shelter in a corn crib, where he soon fell asleep. His companions left the vicinity and forgot to arouse him, so that when he awoke he found himself in the midst of a gang of bushwhackers, who supposed it was some trick of the Yankees. He started away from them and when he had proceeded about 200 yards he was followed, but coming to a sharp turn in the road took to the timber and walked about two miles in the woods, when he was safe from further pursuit. He was then about thirty-five miles from Little Rock, and after spending all night and the next day in the woods came out at Grand Prairie, where he found another gang of bushwhackers, but the grass was high enough so he was not discovered. He took a wrong road while trying to reach Little Rock and the trip was thus made longer for him. At sundown, having traveled nearly all day, he came to the railroad and, proceeding to walk along the tracks, was arrested by a Union picket as a spy. He was subjected to some two hours of questioning by the Colonel of the regiment (an Ohio one). In spite of his blue uniform, and finally was cleared of suspicion, given supper and a bed, and eventually returned to his own company, where he had been reported by his former comrades as captured by bushwhackers.

At one time Mr. Bancroft and three comrades were given a pass to hunt for hogs, but warned not to go more than two miles from camp. When they were some distance away Mr. Bancroft asked the others not to proceed farther away from the camp, but as they refused to keep within the prescribed limits, he remained with them and they were about nine miles away when they shot three hogs in a field. They were there surprised by a gang of about thirty-five bushwhackers, who fired upon them, but they all made their escape, though Mr. Bancroft became separated from the others in the confusion and haste of their departure from the scene. Two holes had been shot through his clothes and a hole cut in his saddle, but he was uninjured. His companions, who returned safely to their company, on account of their passes, reported Mr. Bancroft as killed in the encounter, and when he reached the Union lines he was again arrested by the picket on duty, but soon rejoined his command.

July 7, 1864, the day before the incident previously mentioned as taking place near Bayou Des Arc, after darkness had settled down on the camp, several men being on picket duty, one on vidette duty and six oil post, Mr. Bancroft warned the corporal of suspicions noises near them and asked that the five men who lay asleep on the ground should be awakened. However, though Mr. Bancroft believed it was the enemy, the corporal insisted it was nothing more than cattle or hogs, and refused to give the alarm. Just then fifty Confederate soldiers made a charge in the darkness and captured the corporal and all the men except the man on vidette and Mr. Bancroft, the two latter mingling with the enemy and making their escape through reason of the darkness. They then fired their carbines and help soon arrived, but not before the enemy had taken the prisoners away. They had also taken Mr. Bancroft's horse and he was afterwards given a mule to ride.

Bancroft, after his enlistment and before he had learned much of military life, Mr. Bancroft drew a new rifle and ammunition, and being advised by an old soldier to practice by firing at a tree, put up a target of paper and proceeded to try his skill. This was strictly against the rules and three hundred yards away was a picket post of infantry, and after several shots had been fired among them they lay down on the ground to be out of danger. They captured Mr. Bancroft and he was put in jail at Little Rock by the Provost Marshal. However, the veteran who had got him into the trouble explained matters, and Mr. Bancroft was released. At the time of the secession of the Southern States Mr. Bancroft was working at the office of the State Journal in Springfield, carrying dispatches from the telegraph office to the office of the paper, and while performing this duty carried the news of the secession of the various States as they came in. He took many dispatches to Governor Yates at the Revere House, and often delivered them as late as twelve o'clock at night. Mr. Bancroft also worked six weeks, in 1861, in the bullet department of the old armory on North Fifth Street, Springfield. Upon retuming to Springfield at the close of the war, he was unable to engage in any manual labor, being badly crippled in his lower limbs as a result of scurvy, and since then has been a semi-invalid. In 1862 he was employed by the Government as driver of an ammunition wagon, under General Herron.

Mr. Bancroft is liberal in his religious views and espouses the cause of the Prohibition party, having voted that ticket for twenty years.

BANSBACH, Joseph, whose successful career as a grocer demonstrates what can be accomplished by a man if he be industrious and possess a thorough knowledge of business methods. Mr. Bansbach was born in Baden, Germany, March 18, 1830, a son of Wilhelm and Frances (Golahn) Bansbach, natives of Germany, the former born February 29, 1836, and the latter in Baden. The father was a farmer, who spent his life in his native land, and died there in August, 1885, his widow surviving until January, 1888. They were devout members of the Roman Catholic Church and had the following children: Joseph; Theresa, wife of Killian Krim; Peter, of Germany; Mary, wife of Louis Hemberger, of Springfield; Helen, wife of August Rechner, living at the corner of Twelfth and Reynolds Streets, Springfield.

Joseph Bansbach was educated in the schools of Germany and worked for his father until he came to the United States in 1855, when he was twenty-five years old. He first worked as a teamster for the Reich Brewing Company, of Springfield, but in January, 1856, established his present store and has continued to handle a general line of groceries, controlling a large trade.

On July 15, 1855, Mr. Bansbach was married, in Springfield, to Anna Repp, born in Germany, June 10, 1862, daughter of Anton and Mary (Eck) Repp natives of Germany, who had six children. Mr. and Mrs. Bansbach have had five children: Mary, Valentine, Rose, Otto and Pauline. Mr. Bansbach belongs to the Western Catholic Union, St. Vincent's, and Loyal Americans, and carries United States accident insurance. His religious affiliations are with the Catholic Church. He owns his business property, as well as his home, and is in comfortable circumstances. Possessing traits of character, characteristic of the German, Mr. Bansbach has gone steadily forward, always industriously and thriftily making his money earn a good interest. He is genial and kind-hearted and makes friends, not only among his customers, but wherever he is known, and is one of the substantial men of Springfield.

BARBRE, William E., commercial salesman, formerly a resident of Sangamon County, but now of North Dakota, is one of the men who helped to develop the agricultural regions of this locality. He was born in the county January 5, 1839, being a son of James L. and Lucinda (Dixon) Barbare, natives of Indiana, where he was born March 4, 1834, and she September 6, 1833. The father came to Sangamon County at a very early day, entering land and farming. He married there, continuing his farming until his retirement, when he went to Taylorville, where he now resides, aged seventy-seven years. His wife is also living. There were nine children in the family, of whom four survive: William E.; Mrs. Minnie Marshall, of Colorado; Mrs. Hattie Wade, of Springfield, and Mrs. Georgia Search, also of Springfield.

Mr. Barbare was educated in the schools of the county and assisted his father on the farm, until he attained his majority, when he began farming for himself. He continued this line of work until 1880, when he engaged with the Racine Sattley Company, as traveling salesman, with headquarters in North Dakota. He belongs to the United Brethren Church. In politics he is a Democrat.

On September 3, 1879, Mr. Barbare was married in Mechanicsburg, to Flora A. Jacobs, born March 6, 1860, in this county, being a daughter of Adam and Lucy (Garrett) Jacobs, natives of Sangamon and Jefferson Counties, Ill. Mr. Jacobs was a farmer, dying in 1869, but his widow survived him until 1904. There were two sons and one daughter in the family, and both two survive. Mrs. Barbare died April 3, 1896, having been a devoted wife and mother. She had borne her husband seven daughters and one son, three of whom died in infancy, those living being: Mrs. Pearl Grubb, wife of Gordon Grubb, of Mechanicsburg; Jesse, of Delaware, Okla.; Grace, wife of Charles Bell, of Lanesville; Flora, a resident of Mechanicsburg, and Fern, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Garren. There are five living grandchildren in the family.

BARKLEY, James Henry.—The military record of Springfield equals that of any in the country, and the city and State have furnished as many noted soldiers in our last two wars, as can be boasted of in any territory of like size. One of the best known figures in military circles in the State, whose reputation is not, however, confined to Illinois alone, is Gen. James Henry Barkley, veteran of both the Civil and Spanish-American wars, and now Deputy United States Marshal. General Barkley was born February 17, 1844, on a farm near Lexington, Ky., a son of Robert Lee and Harriet (Boyd) Barkley, natives of North Carolina and Kentucky, respectively.

The Barkley family originally came from Ireland, and has been an unusually long-lived one, the General's great-great-grandfather reaching the age of one hundred and two years; his grandfather ninety-six years, and his father eighty-six years. Robert Lee Barkley owned plantations in Gibson County, Tennessee, raising cotton and tobacco, but later moved to Jackson, Miss., where he was engaged in railroad contracting, subsequently becoming a railroad official. In 1857 he came to Springfield, and engaged in farming until his retirement, his death occurring in that city. Mr. Barkley was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics was first a Whig and later a Republican, but never desired public office.

James Henry Barkley received his early education in the schools of Jackson, Miss., and later attended the Institution at Pleasant Hill, where Supt. John L. Wilson was his instructor. He left this school at the age of eighteen years, to enlist in Company G, one Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served on General Bucklin's staff, being in charge of his mounted orderlies. After being mustered out of the service in 1865, he returned to Springfield and engaged in the house-furnishing business with John McCready, whose son now conducts the St. Nicholas Hotel. Later, this partnership was dissolved, and Gen. Barkley engaged in the same business with Isaac Nuitt, whom he subsequently bought out, the firm name becoming J. H. Barkley & Company. Some years later, he took as partner his son-in-law, Mr. P. M. Lax, a sketch of whose life will be found in another part of this volume. This connection continued until 1888, when Pres. McKinley appointed Mr. Barkley Brigadier-General during the Spanish-American War. He reported to General Fitzhugh Lee, and remained until after Dewey's memorable victory, when he returned to Springfield and became connected with the Culver Construction Company as Superintendent, and while serving in this capacity tore down, and rebuilt the Lincoln monument. He was later, appointed Clerk of the United States Court by Judge J. O. Humphrey, and subsequently became United States Deputy Marshal, in which position he is now serving. In 1889, General Barkley was one of the organizers of the Governor's Guard, being made Lieutenant, later First Lieutenant, then Captain of Battery B, and finally Colonel of the Fifth Regiment, which rank he bore until he was appointed Brigadier-General by Gov. Fifer. He was senior officer, and mobilized the troops, naming the camp "Camp Tanner." He commanded a brigade and division, under Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, and after his service was completed, he resigned his commission.

Gen. Barkley is a member of the A. F. & A. M., the I. O. O. F. and the Knights of Pythias. He passed through the chairs of Capital Lodge No. 14, was elected Grand Outer Guard at Peoria, went through the chairs of the Grand Lodge, and was elected Grand Chancellor at Quincy, serving one term. At Rock Island, he put the movement for a Pythian Home on its feet, and a year later, was elected Supreme Representative without being a candidate. At Milwaukee, he was elected Brigadier-General of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, and has been reelected every four years since. He is now Senior General of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias of the World. In his political belief, Gen. Barkley is a Republican.

On Christmas Day, 1885, Gen. Barkley was united in marriage with Emily Helen DeCamp, a daughter of John and Malinda (Orr) DeCamp, natives of Virginia and Illinois, respectively, both of whom are deceased. To General and Mrs. Barkley, there have been born three children: Cora Belle, the widow of Prosser M. Lax; James Howard, who died aged four months; and Kenneth W., who married Jessie Green and resides in Chicago, being connected with Marshall Field & Company.

BARNES, Carey E.—There is no profession that carries with it more dignity, or calls for more reliability from its members than that of the law. From it, come the men who are called to guide the Ship of State; through it, the basis on which the country stands, is set, and its members are everywhere called upon to protect the weak, as well as dispense justice to the strong. Carey E. Barnes, of Springfield, is a type in the profession that has furnished some of our strongest men; the type that was born and bred on the farm, later becoming a country school teacher, and after a long and hard struggle, during which the strictest economy and frugality had to be practiced, finally was admitted to the Bar and subsequently achieved success in the business.

Carey E. Barnes was born at Litchfield, Ill., January 21, 1865, a son of Walter J. and Nancy (William) Barnes. Walter J. Barnes was a native of New York State, but as a young man, decided that he could find more opportunities in the West. He subsequently came to Illinois, where he was married to Nancy William, and they settled in Litchfield, For a number of years Mr. Barnes was engaged as a car dresser, in the shops of the Big Four Railroad Company, but later he purchased a farm and lived there until his death, in 1905, his property being located near Edinburg, Ill.

The boyhood of Carey E. Barnes was spent much as that of any other farmer's son, but he was a boy with ambition far above that of the average youth, and he embraced every opportunity that presented itself, to gain a good education. After a term of years in the district schools of his locality, he spent three years in the Northern Indiana Normal School, at Valparaiso, Ind., and in order to earn enough to get a law education, he taught in the country schools four years. He then took up the study of his profession with the law firm of Conkling & Crout, and was admitted to practice at the Bar in 1892, at which time he formed a partnership with John S. Schnepp, the present Mayor of Springfield, who wrote the "Municipal History of Springfield," appearing in the historical section of this work. The firm operated under the name of Schnepp & Barnes. In 1899, Mr. Barnes was elected to the office of City Attorney, and shortly thereafter formed a new connection, his partner being Hon. James A. Connolly, under the firm name, Connolly & Barnes, Mr. Connolly is the contributor of the history of the "Beach and Bar of Sangamon County," which appears in this work. Mr. Barnes served as Clerk of the House of Representatives, of the Thirty-ninth General Assembly, at Springfield.

In every connection, he has shown himself to be a man of the strictest integrity, and his record as a citizen and public official is one of which any man need not be ashamed.

In 1849, Mr. Barnes was united in marriage with Jennie E. Simpson, of Springfield, Ill., daughter of Mark Simpson, of Decatur Ill. To Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, there have been born, two children, Elsie and Jennie. Fraternally, Mr. Barnes is connected with the B. P. O. E., the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Improved Order of Red Men, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Court of Honor, in all of which organizations, he is extremely popular.

BARNES, John, who has been a resident of Springfield for more than a quarter of a century, has been connected with mining operations most of his active life. He is a native of Harrington, Cumberland County, England, born January 5, 1850, a son of William and Annie (Simpson) Barnes, natives of the same place, the father born in 1815 and the mother in 1820. The father was an ocean sailor and he and his wife died in England, he in 1890 and she in 1890. For several generations the Barnes family had followed the sea, the grandfather of John Barnes, also named John, and the great-grandfather, who bore the same Christian name, being sailors, and the last-mentioned later becoming a fisherman and living to the advanced age of one hundred years.

Six children were born to William and Annie Barnes, of whom John was the oldest, the other five being: Martha, wife of Richard Hall, of England; Isabel, wife of William Beel, a wealthy farmer of Wyoming; Elizabeth, wife of Joseph Norton, a wealthy farmer living near Des Moines, Iowa; Polly, wife of Robert Maudue, a farmer living in England; Henderson, of Athens, Ill.

John Barnes received his education in his native country and when a young man began to work on the water. In 1883 he came to America in search of an opportunity to better his condition, spent a short time in Brazil, Ind., then made a visit to his home and returned to the United States during the year 1884. He then settled in Springfield, where he has since resided. He became interested in mining and worked in the vicinity of Springfield in various capacities in connection with various mines, proving his ability for this kind of work. He won a reputation for stability and fidelity to his employers, and until recently was employed as mine superintendent by the Riverton Coal Company. He has formed many friendships and is genuinely esteemed by his associates. August 7, 1903, he embarked for England, where he visited relatives for a time, and returned much benefited by his trip.

On February 19, 1870, Mr. Barnes was married in the Church of England, at Sholton, England, by Rev. Frederick Worthick, to Annie Gray, a native of that place, born March 13, 1852, daughter of Thomas and Bessie (Shepler) Gray, both natives of Sholton, the father born in 1812 and the mother in 1814, and the latter died in England, December 13, 1880. Mrs. Barnes induced her father, Thomas Gray, to come to the United States in 1888, and he settled at Athens, Menard County, Ill., where he remained until his death in 1901. He and his wife were parents of four children: Jane, married (first) Robert Shipp, and after his death married as her second husband, John Brooks; George, of England; John came to America with his father and his death occurred at Athens, Ill., May 4, 1901; Mrs. Barnes.

Five daughters and ten sons were born to Mr. Barnes and wife of whom four daughters and three sons now survive: Thomas, born February 26, 1874, is a well-to-do farmer of Middletown, Ill.; Joseph, born May 3, 1876, also a farmer at that place; Henderson, born February 4, 1883, a miner, who lives at home; Lizzie, wife of Albert Herrick, of Springfield; Susannah A., born April 2, 1889, a clerk for Waterman-Warburton Company, lives at home; Isabel, born November 16, 1892, and Mary, born December 1, 1897, at home. There are seven grandchildren in the family. Mr. Barnes is a member of the Episcopal Church, and although taking an active interest in local affairs, has not held office and is independent in political views, leading his support to the man he considers best fitted to respect the confidence of the public. His daughter Susannah is a Sunday School teacher in the Episcopal Church.

BARNES, Robert A.—Springfield gave many of her native sons to the service of the country. The Capital City was too loyal and too enthusiastic, being the birthplace of Lincoln and the capital of the State of Grant and Logan, for there to be any lack of soldiers to round out the full measure of enlistments. One of the men born here, who demonstrated his patriotism in this way, was Robert A. Barnes, now a retired agriculturist residing at No. 306 East Cedar Street, born January 16, 1847. He is a son of George C. and Mary Jane (Meyers) Barnes, and grandson of Gilbert Barnes, of German birth, who located in Dauphin County, Pa., and whose death occurred in Springfield, about 1849. George C. Barnes was born in Dauphin County about 1817, early in life learned the carpenter trade, and when he came to Springfield in 1840, he found ready employment, being thus engaged until 1852, when he moved to the Preston Breckenridge settlement, and from there to a farm (1855) in the southeastern part of Sangamon County, which he improved. He paid seven dollars per acre, for 120 acres. It is now worth $175 per acre. In 1860 he sold this farm at a profit, but at nothing like the figure it commands today. His wife died in 1849, and in 1851, he married Susan Hutton, of Macoupin County. After selling his first farm, he bought eighty acres in Sand Prairie, selling it in 1866. He then moved to Ottawa, Ill., purchasing 200 acres in that vicinity, and died there in 1897. Of the three children born of the first marriage Robert A. is the only survivor. The following children, now living, were born of the second marriage: Jane, John, Edwin, Charles, Hosca, Anna, Lizzie and Arthur.

Until he was seventeen years of age, Robert A. Barnes attended the country and city schools. The first city school he attended, was in a frame house which stood near what is now the corner of Eleventh and Adams Streets. In May, 1863, he enlisted for six months as a teamster. In February, 1864, he reenlisted as a private for three years or during the war, in Company C, One Hundred Twenty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Howe. The regiment was attached to the Seventeenth Army Corps, under General Sherman, but later transferred to the Sixteenth Army Corps, under A. J. Smith. Mr. Barnes participated in the battles of Canton, Clinton, Jackson Crossroads, Champion Hill, Mobile, and others less important. At the close of the war, Mr. Barnes returned to Springfield and began farming on his place of thirty acres in Christian County. This he sold, moving to a forty-acre farm in Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County. Until 1903, he was engaged in farming, but in that year, sold his property, moving to Springfield, which has since been his place of residence.

On September 5, 1868, occurred his marriage with Susan J. Cary, daughter of Samuel II. and Anna (Fogle) Cary, deceased. Mr. Cary was an old and highly respected farmer of Sangamon County. He married Anna Fogle, of Noble County, O., where Mrs. Barnes was born March 3, 1851. When she was six years old, her parents moved to Sangamon County, and there she attended school until she was sixteen years of age. She was brought up in the Methodist Church, of which she is a member, while her husband belongs to the Christian Church. The children born to them are as follows: Annie, Mrs. H. H. Snodgrass, of Springfield; Fred, of Peoria, married Linnie Ferguson; Lilie, Mrs. Harmon Haggard, of Springfield; George, of Springfield, married Pearl Adams; Emma, Mrs. Luther Jacobs, of Springfield; Mary, Mrs. John Guther, of Edinburg, Ill.; Myrtle, Mrs. Oscar Drennan of Springfield; Mand, Mrs. Wesley Truax, of Springfield, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes have twenty-one grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, all living. Mr. Barnes belongs to Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., of Springfield, and to the Odd Fellows, No. 398, Rochester Lodge. In politics, he is a Republican. He is a man who has always done what he believed was his full duty, and has every reason to be proud of the record, he has made for himself in the city and county that gave him birth.

BARNES, William James.—Years of faithful endeavor entitle a man of means to retirement during the latter part of his life, and a number of the more responsible men of Springfield belong to this class. One of those especially worthy of mention in a record of this kind is William James Barnes, a retired electrician, whose residence is at No. 310 West Edwards Street. He was born March 1, 1842, at Kingston, Canada, being a son of John and Catherine Shaw Barnes, and grandson of John Barnes, the latter being a native of England. The grandfather had three children: John, Matthew, and one other, and his death occurred in Carlisle, England. During his younger days he had been a soldier.

John Barnes, father of William James Barnes, was born in Carlisle, Northumberland County, England, in 1812, but came to Canada in his youth. At first he devoted himself to the manufacture of soap, later making candles. His death occurred in the coal, Mich., but his body was buried in London, Canada. Their children were: Ann, who married James Fair and died in St. Paul, Minn., and William James.

William James Barnes was educated in London, Canada, where his youth was spent, and he learned the carpenter trade, but hearing of the need of soldiers, came to Chicago, where he enlisted in 1864, for service in the Commissionary Department. Following his honorable discharge at the close of the war, he went to Cedar Rapids, where on September 5, 1865, he married Jane Davis, a native of Kentucky. The following children were born of this marriage: Ethel May, a teacher in the Steward school; Lydia Ann, of Bloomington; Mary, widow of Sidney B. Taylor, of Springfield, one son, Sidney B.; William J. Jr., of Springfield, married Clarissa Tobin, one child, William Tobin; and Martha Jane, of San Francisco.

In 1871 Mr. Barnes moved to Dixon, Ill., where he lived for ten years, then came to Springfield to receive the appointment of librarian at the State Library. After twelve years of faithful service in this position in 1893 he was made electrician in the municipal electric light plant, continuing there for five years, when he entered the employ of the Utility Company, remaining with this concern until his retirement. Mr. Barnes was reared in the faith of the Methodist Church. His political convictions make him a Republican. Earnest, faithful, steadfast, he has always labored to do what he believed to be his full duty, and those with whom he has been brought into contact have trusted and admired him.

BARNETT, Alexander Miller (deceased), carried on farming in Sangamon County many years, settling here in 1829. In 1837, when the county was re-organized, his farm was then located in Menard County, by reason of the new division. He was born near Mobile, Ala., September 22, 1801, a son of James and Jane (Morrison) Barnett, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Scotland. James Barnett came to Mobile when he was ten years of age, but it is not known by his descendants in Sangamon County, where the family originated. James Barnett was a teamster, and carried freight across the Allegheny Mountains.

Alexander M. Barnett received his education in the country schools near Mobile, and from the time he was eleven until he was seventeen years of age, superintended negroes in their work on a tobacco plantation, then he and his mother moved to Adair County, Ky., where he engaged in farming. He remained there until 1820, when he emigrated to Sangamon County, Ill. He was married in Adair County to Miss Panthea B. Rayburn, who was a native of that county, born July 26, 1804, daughter of Robert and Mildred (Brown) Rayburn, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Pennsylvania. Mr. Barnett and his wife were married September 29, 1825, and had children as follows: Virginia B., widow of John Lasswell, resides at 327 South State Street, Springfield; Miss Mary J., lives at 323 West Cook Street, Springfield; Dulcinea M., Mrs. King, a widow, lives with an only daughter in Gallatin, Davies County, Mo.; Robert M., a banker, is married and resides at Gallatin, Mo. Alexander M. Barnett died in Springfield, June 3, 1883, and his wife died on the farm September 22, 1851. Mr. Barnett was a Republican all his life, and served as an Elder in the Presbyterian Church. During the Civil War, he served in the Missouri Home Guards. He is still well remembered by many of the older citizens of Springfield.

Miss Mary J. Barnett has lived in Springfield since 1854, and was for twenty-five years a teacher in the schools of Sangamon County. For almost ten years she held the position of Postmistress in the Centrall (III.) post-office. She now lives at 323 West Cook Street, and is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, having many friends in church and social circles. She is well known as a woman of culture and refinement, and has interested herself in many worthy and benevolent causes.

BARREGARVE, M. of Springfield, has lived in the Second Ward in that city for fifty years, and has held many public offices during that time. He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1840, son of Edward and Bridget (Ryan) Barregarvey, both natives of Ireland, where the mother died. The father emigrated to America and located in Illinois after his wife's death. He had been a farmer in his native country and carried on farming in Sangamon County for many years. He died at Buffalo, Ill., in 1885, and his wife died in 1842.

Barregarvey was educated in Ireland and spent his boyhood on a farm. He lived at home until fifteen years of age, then came to America and located at Springfield, where he first worked in the gas house, being employed there twenty-one years. He has held many positions under the city government and has given general satisfaction in the performance of his various duties. He held the position of police officer many years, served six years as a member of the Volunteer Fire Department, and in 1866 was the first man nominated for Supervisor-at-large in Springfield. He served three years and a half at Camp Butler, from 1861-64, having a commission from the United States Government. He is a staunch Democrat and has held many offices under the party, in whose interests he has been an active worker. He is well known and much esteemed in Springfield and is familiar with historic events in the city for the last half century, having been identified with it so many years and was associated with many of the oldest citizens. He is a member of the Catholic Church and is in Father Hickey's parish.

Mr. Barregarvey was married, in New Orleans, La., April 6, 1861, to Miss Mary Tierney, who was born in Ireland, in 1840, daughter of Maurice and Mary Tierney, also natives of Ireland, where they lived all their lives, being prominent in the Parish of Doane, County Limerick. Six sons were born to Mr. Barregarvey and his wife, of whom two survive; Maurice, born in Springfield, in May, 1867, and Edward, born in Springfield, in March, 1875. Maurice Barregarvey married Sarah Backberger, a native of Springfield, and they have five children: Edward, Henry, Maurice, Martha, and Mary, all of Springfield. Edward Barregarvey is unmarried and lives in Springfield.

BARTLETT, John W. a retired farmer living in Springfield, Ill., has been a resident of Sangamon County for more than forty years. He was born in Loudoun County, Va., October 20, 1837, and is a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Eberhardt) Bartlett, the former a native of West Virginia and the latter of Virginia. The father was of English and the mother of German descent, and they became parents of seven daughters and one son. The father was a cooper by trade and both he and his wife died in Virginia. John W. Bartlett was educated in the country and had to pay tuition to attend school held in the log school-house in the neighborhood of his father's farm. After leaving school he worked at farm work about one year at eight dollars a month and his board, and later learned the trade of carpenter, at which he worked but a short time and then resumed farming.

Mr. Bartlett came to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1870, and carried on farming in Rochester Township and Mt. Auburn until a few years ago. He now lives at 1624 East Brown Street, Springfield. He was an energetic and successful farmer and won the respect and confidence of his neighbors and associates. He is a Methodist in church affiliations and in politics is a Republican.

Mr. Bartlett was married in Taylorville, Ill., in 1855, to Miss Mary J. Wiley, who was born in Christian County, where her parents were early settlers. They were from Indiana and both died in Christian County, where the father carried on blacksmith business to the time of his death. Two children were born to Mr. Bartlett and his wife, of whom one survives: Lydia L., wife of Joseph Rudolph, who is employed in the Wabash Railroad Company shops at Springfield. Mr. Rudolph and his wife have one son, Arthur. Mr. Bartlett is well and favorably known in Springfield and has many friends.

BASFORD, Isaac. One of the substantial citizens of Sangamon County, is engaged in general farming, gardening and stock raising on a tract of excellent property in Section 5, Cotton Hill Township. He was born in Hagerstown, Md., June 18, 1832, a son of John and Mary Basford, natives of Maryland.

John Basford, who was a physician and surgeon, practiced his profession and and around Hagerstown all his life, and died at the remarkable age of ninety-eight years, although his wife died when Isaac was an infant. There were eight children in their family, of whom six are now living, the eldest being Thomas, of Dayton, Ohio, and the others: Alfred, living in Hagers-town, Md.; Henry, of Frederick City, Md., Jacob, of Urbana, Mo.; Abraham, of Williamsville, Ill.; and Isaac.

As a youth Isaac Basford learned the trade of blacksmith in Hagerstown, and with his brother Alfred conducted a shop in that city until coming to Springfield, Ill., in 1854, where he opened a blacksmith establishment and carried it on for nine years. At the end of this time he decided to enter the agricultural field and purchased his present farm, a tract of ten acres, on which he has resided ever since. In addition to this he rents fifty acres more, and has followed general farming and stock raising to the present, achieving considerable success in his undertakings. With his family he attends the Christian Church. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party.

Mr. Basford was married (first) to Mary Baker, who was born at Berry Station, Sangamon County, the daughter of Thomas and Lucy Baker, both of whom are now deceased. They were the parents of six children, among them being two pair of twins, and only one child is now living, Lulu, the wife of Henry Bell, living near Chestnut, Ill. Mrs. Basford died and Mr. Basford was married (second) September 15, 1875, to Susan Purnell, who was born in Delaware, April 1, 1856, daughter of Jonathan and Selfie A. Purnell, natives of Delaware, who came to Illinois in 1857. Mr. Purnell, who had formerly been a sailor, was engaged in farming in Cotton Hill Township until his death, in July, 1893, his wife having passed away January 16, 1892. They had the following children: Mrs. Emily Plumer, a widow of Cotton Hill Township; Margaret, the wife of Alonzo Pue, of Springfield; Samuel, of Edinburg, Ill.; Adeline, the wife of William Howlett, of Springfield, and Mrs. Basford.

Mr. and Mrs. Basford have had seven children, five of whom are living, as follows: Ethel, the wife of Thomas Patterson, of Cotton Hill Township; Bertha, who married Ernest Thompson, of Springfield; Daisy, the wife of Earl Reed, of Springfield; and Albert and Hazel M., residing at home. Mr. and Mrs. Basford have seven grandchildren.

BATES, Erastus Newton. (Vol. I, p. 39.)

BAUMANN, George (deceased).—The death of George Baumann, who was for twenty years engaged in the grocery business in Springfield, Ill., occurred about twenty-five years ago, but he is still well remembered by his many old friends. He was successful in business, a public-spirited citizen and a whole-souled, upright man. He was closely identified with the welfare and progress of the city in which so much of his life was spent, and was active in the interests of the church to which he belonged. Mr. Baumann was a native of Germany, born October 21, 1833. The mother died when he was an infant and the father came to America when he was advanced in years, living but a short time afterward.

The childhood of George Baumann was spent in his native country, where he attended the public schools. When he was sixteen years of age he came to the United States, in company with his brother Valentine. It is supposed they landed at New Orleans, as they spent some time in St. Louis before locating in Springfield, Ill. George attended Sunday school for a time after coming to America and applied himself with zeal to learning the language and customs of the people. He learned the trade of tinner in Springfield, working first for Dowun & Dickey, and afterward went into partnership with Robinson, the firm becoming Henson, Robinson & Baumann. Mr. Baumann bought out his partners and at the end of twelve years disposed of the business and embarked in a new line, locating at the corner of Cook and Spring Streets, where for twenty years he conducted a grocery store. He erected the brick building which the store occupied and was still in business at the time of his death, December 1, 1885. He was for many years a Deacon in St. John’s German Lutheran Church and in political views was Republican. He was a devoted husband and father, giving his children the best educational advantages possible and was always solicitous of the comfort of his family.

Mr. Baumann was married in Springfield, January 1, 1861, to Miss Catherine Dunkle, and they became parents of nine children, namely: George Edward, a leading druggist of Springfield; Henry Albert, living at home; Charles, of Springfield; Georgetta, Mrs. Joseph Snyder, of Springfield; Noble, of Springfield; Herman and Benjamin B., of Springfield; Belle and Katy Louise, at home. Mrs. Baumann was born in Germany, May 21, 1844, and was but one year old when her parents came to the United States. They landed at New Orleans, having been eighteen weeks on the water, belated by storms and nearly starved as a consequence of running out of food. The parents, Philip and Catherine (Spangler) Dunkel, had one child born on the voyage, whom the called Mary, after the ship on which she was born. They proceeded to St. Louis and came from there to Springfield with an ox team. He had a brother Adam living near Springfield and himself located on a farm four miles out from the city. He had learned the trade of blacksmith in Germany but after coming to the United States devoted the remainder of his life to farming.

Mrs. Baumann was a bright child and was educated in the district schools of Sangamon County. She had few early advantages, but by reason of her intelligence and natural ability, became of great assistance to her husband in managing his business and knew every detail of it. After the death of her husband she rented the two years, then the tenant moved west and she conducted the store herself two years. She is a most energetic woman, having been left with nine young children to rear, but her courage never failed and she has fulfilled her duties nobly, having guided them all to noble man and womanhood and prepared them well for the duties of life. Not only has she taken an interest in her own family, but by her kindness of heart and charitable disposition has been moved to extend most valuable assistance to the sick and poor. Like her husband, she is much interested in the good work accomplished by the church and is a conscientious Christian. She is greatly loved and honored by her children and is held in high esteem by all who know and appreciate her good works and her noble character.

BAUMGARTNER, John, a retired business man of Springfield, is an honest and reliable citizen and has many friends in the city. He was born in Baden, Germany, February 21, 1848, son of Bernhardt and Catherine (Kiser) Baumgartner, both of whom spent their entire lives in Germany. The mother died at the age of ninety-three years. John Baumgartner spent his boyhood on his fathers' farm and received his education in the common schools of his native country, which he afterwards supplemented by study after reaching Illinois. He left home when twenty-four years of age, and after working on a farm about three months, began working at the trade of butcher in Lincoln, Ill., where he remained four years, being employed by John Ackert, then worked five years at Mt. Pulaski, Ill., and July 5, 1881, embarked in the butcher business on his own account in Springfield. He conducted business for himself twenty-nine years and was always successful, having a shop first at the corner of Mason and Rutledge Streets, then at Mason and First Streets, and then on South Eleventh Street. He became well-known in the course of his business dealings and won the confidence of his patrons. He built up a good trade and was able to save enough money so he could retire. He owns his home at 410 Hay Street and other city property. In the thirty-seven years that he worked at his trade he established a good reputation for skill in his line and integrity in his dealings.

Mr. Baumgartner was married, at Springfield, May 8, 1883, to Elizabeth Koehl, a native of Baden, Germany whose parents died in Germany. She has two brothers in America and two sisters living in Springfield. Three daughters and two sons have been born of this union, namely: Emma, born in 1884, unmarried and living in St. Louis, Mo.; Martha and Mary, twins born February 22, 1886; Frank born March 10, 1888; Philip, born March 1, 1890. All except the eldest daughter reside with their parents. Mr. Baumgartner is a member of the German Catholic Church and fraternally is affiliated with the Odd Fellows and the United Workmen. He has always taken an active part in public affairs since living in Springfield, and in politics is a Democrat.

BAXTER, Albert Crum, A. B., M. D.—The science of medicine and surgery has advanced to such an extent, during the past several decades that the older members of the profession have given way in a large degree to the younger generation, whose youth and enthusiasm enable them better to keep abreast of the times. Among the young physicians and surgeons of Springfield, one who has already made his name well known in his chosen calling, is Dr. Albert Crum Baxter, born October 9, 1850, at Litterberry, Morgan County, Ill., a son of Hiram Bennett and Ellen (Crum) Baxter.

The progenitor of the Baxter family in America, James Baxter, came from County Tyrone, Ireland, about the time of the American Revolution, settling at Pittsburg, Pa. He there married Rebecca Riddle, a native of Berlin, Germany, thus forming a union of two races, which was bound to produce worthy and sturdy stock. The elder James Baxter, after a short stay in Pennsylvania, moved to Ohio, settling where the city of Dayton now stands, and there the grandfather of Dr. Baxter, William Baxter, was born, August 1, 1804. About the year 1815, the Baxter family, consisting of the parents, three sons and one daughter, came down the Ohio River on a flat-boat, and settled in the wilderness at or near Madison, Ind. Here, in 1828, William Baxter married Jane Kerr, a lady of Scotch parentage, daughter of Josiah Kerr, whose parents had migrated to Indiana, about the same time as the Baxter family. The young couple began housekeeping in the wilds of southern Indiana, in a one-room, one-story, round log house, with one door and one window, and a puncheon floor, a stick-and-nail chimney, the whole structure being erected without a nail, and the roof held in place by weights and poles, and the door with wooden pins. In this primitive dwelling, they lived many years and prospered, and eventually were able to erect a commodious stone house, the material for which, was selected from quarries on their land, and this abode is still in a good state of repair. William Baxter and his wife, were parents of ten sons and two daughters, seven of their sons serving in the Union Army and are living. The sixth son, Hiram Bentott Baxter, was born September 22, 1840, enlisted as a private in Company K, Twenty-second Indiana Volunteer Infantry. Before being mustered out of service, in 1865, he, by his gallantry in action, won the rank of Captain. He took part in all the battles fought by the Army of the Cumberland, and his company was in the front rank in the March to the Sea. He was twice wounded during his service. The Baxters had a remarkable record, being the only family in the county who sent seven sons for service, no two of whom were in the same regiment, and no two of whom participated in the same battle.

In December, 1890, Hiram B. Baxter came to Illinois and settled in Sangamon County, where he taught school, kept a general store in the town of Litteber, and filled contracts with a railroad company. In 1881, he began farming at Ashland, where he has since continued, and it is interesting to note that he is now the owner of 1,720 acres of fine farming land, in great contrast to his condition in early life. Although he is a member of no religious denomination, he is a liberal contributor to all worthy causes. While in business at Litteber, Mr. Baxter was married October 4, 1876, to Lydia Ellen Crum, daughter of Abram Alvin Crum, of that place. Her parents and paternal grandparents, came from Kentucky and southern Indiana to Illinois, at an early day, settling in Morgan County when land there could be bought of the Government for $1.25 per acre. Her maternal grandparents, the Buchanan and Litters, were of English and German origin, having first settled in Virginia, later moved to Kentucky, and came to Illinois about the same time as the Crums, in 1832. Mrs. Baxter died March 25, 1907, having been the mother of two sons; Dr. Albert Crum and William Abram, the latter now living with his son on a farm in Cass County.

Albert Crum Baxter first attended the district school, and in 1897, entered Whipple Academy at Jacksonville, being graduated therefrom, with the Class of 1900, when he entered the Literary Department of Illinois College. In 1906, he took up the study of literature and medicine in the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, being graduated from the Literary Department in June, 1904, with degree of Bachelor of Art, and in 1907, from the Department of Medicine and Surgery. While in college, he was a member of the Phi Beta Pi Fraternity, of the Gynecological Staff, and of the Phagocytes, an honorary medical society. During the summer and fall of 1906, Dr. Baxter was connected with the Morgan Hospital, of New York City, and in the winter of 1907, he came to Springfield and engaged in general practice, having a fully equipped and well appointed office at 511 1/4 East Monroe Street. Dr. Baxter is a member of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 500, A. F. & A. M.; Springfield Chapter No. 1; Springfield Council No. 2; Elmwood Commandery No. 6; Sangamon Lodge of Perfection; Princes of Jerusalem; and Chapter of Rose Croix, of the Masonic fraternity. He is also connected with the American Chemical Society; the Sangamon, Illinois and American Medical Societies, and McEIlhan Camp, Sons of Veterans. In political matters, he is a Republican.

On April 15, 1908, at Beacon, Mich., Dr. Baxter was united in marriage with Miss Ethel J. Mitchell, a native of Michigan, and daughter of Joseph and Jane (Wassley) Mitchell, natives of England.

BAYLISS, Alfred. (Vol. I, p. 39.)

BEAM, John Lewis (deceased)—In the death of John Lewis Beam, which occurred April 13, 1905, Cotton Hill Township lost one of its representative men, one who knew the business of farming thoroughly and carried it on in a scientific manner, and both the township and county were deprived of a good, public-spirited citizen. Mr. Beam was a native of Sangamon County, born August 13, 1854, a son of Wesley Beam, who was born in Ireland, and Amelia (Rafe) Beam, a native of Sangamon County. Mr. Beam's parents were farming people in Sangamon County and followed that occupation throughout their lives, both passing away there. Wesley Beam had been brought to America by his parents, natives of the Emerald Isle, who located in Sangamon County during the pioneer days and, after years of hardships and struggle with the soil, managed to locate a home in the new land for their loved ones.

The education of John Lewis Beam was secured in the country schools of his native locality, his work keeping him on the farm during the summer months, while during the winter terms he acquired such education as he could in the nearby schoolhouse. Even as a youth he evidenced a fondness for his home, and this characteristic was prominent throughout his life. A quiet man, of unostentations manner, he was never one to thrust himself forward, nor to seek places of public preferment, but went about the business of operating his farm, making a comfortable home and taking care of his family, which—after all is said—is really the highest type of citizenship. After his marriage he located a tract on Section 5, in Cotton Hill Township, and here the remainder of his days were spent.

On March 5, 1879, Mr. Beam was united in marriage at Springfield, Ill., with Malinda E. Kent, who was born in Sangamon County, Ill., June 4, 1851. Mrs. Beam's father, Pleasant Kent, was born in Ohio, January 11, 1822, but in early manhood decided that there were better opportunities for him to carry on his chosen oc-occupation of farming in Illinois, and subsequently came to this State, where the remainder of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, his death occurring in Sangamon County, June 28, 1898. He was married to Mary A. Brownell, who was a native of the county, born December 12, 1829, who also spent her life here, and died June 18, 1901. Grandfather Kent was a native of Ohio, who died in Sangamon County, Ill., while on the maternal side Mrs. Bean's grandfather was born in New York and died in Sangamon County.

To Mr. and Mrs. Beam there were born four children, three boys and one girl, as follows: Elmer, who was born November 5, 1881; died November 6, 1881; George A., who was born August 22, 1882; died October 18, 1883; Mary L., born August 5, 1884, married Wiley Nichols, a well known and substantial farmer of Sangamon County, and they have two children, John A. and Cora L.; and Clarence E., born March 18, 1887. Clarence E. married Grace Terry, who was born in Springfield, July 3, 1892, and they live with Mrs. Beam. They were married January 21, 1908, and are the parents of a daughter, Gladys Ruth, born January 26, 1910.

In political beliefs, Mr. Beam was always a Democrat and he supported the principles of that party loyally. Fraternally he was identified with the Modern Woodmen. Although not directly connected with any religious denomination, he was in sympathy with all, and gave liberally of his means towards movements of a religious nature. Mrs. Beam and her children are members of the Christian Church. The Beam farm, where Mr. Beam's widow now resides, and which is operated by his son, Clarence E., consists of forty-nine acres, and is in the finest of condition. The family is well known in Coton Hill Township, where all its members are very popular.

BEARD, Josiah.—The changes that have occurred in Springfield during the last forty or fifty years have been astounding, and are so many and varied that the average citizen of the capital city could hardly believe tales of the earlier days as related by one who has seen the various changes come. Of all the people in the city who have lived here a long time, the person most likely to notice innovations would be a carpenter for, as a city develops in other ways, the buildings grow larger in size and numbers, and the quality of the structures improve. Josiah Beard, an old-time carpenter and joiner, has lived in Springfield forty years or more of a half-century. He is a native of Adams County, Pa., born January 2, 1827, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Florh) Beard, farming people of Pennsylvania.

Samuel Beard was born October 21, 1796, in Maryland, and his death occurred April 24, 1872. He was married June 5, 1821, to Elizabeth Florh, who was born July 26, 1799, and died in 1882. Their children were as follows: Levi, born March 12, 1822; died August 2, 1862; Lewis, born December 18, 1823, died March 20, 1877; Rachel, born October 20, 1825, died November 19, 1869; Josiah, born January 2, 1827; Reuben A., born October 25, 1828, died November 27, 1900; Julia Ann, born January 12, 1832, died in 1905; George F., born November 2, 1833; Flora Jessie, born November 12, 1835, died October 14, 1901; David J., born December 15, 1837; and Lydia S., born June 28, 1840, died January 10, 1845.

Josiah Beard received his education in a log school-house on his grandfather's land, where old-fashioned rules were in vogue and a plentiful supply of "strap-oil" was on hand ready to be administered whenever necessary. His boyhood was spent in assisting his father with the work of the farm and he learned the carpenter's and joiner's trade at, or in the vicinity of, Gettysburg, twice a week crossing Little Round Top to go back and forth from farm work, and also attended camp meeting there. He remained at home until eighteen and one-half years of age, when he crossed the Alleghenies Montanius by stage coach in such bad weather that it took him and his parents to take the coach from Chambersburg to Pittsburg. He engaged passage on the old boat "Diadem," coming down the Ohio River and leaving the vessel at Cairo. He made many trips up and down the Ohio, meeting with some exciting experiences, including the piloting of a big boat down the river, something he had never done before, and only did then because the pilot had fallen asleep. He also saw the "Belle of the West" when it went over the falls at Louisville, Ky. He was in the State of Mississippi when the war broke out, and with others he began to work his way back to Springfield. There was a blockade to be run, however, and they decided to go to Hamboldt, Tenn., to the Tennessee River, below Pittsburg Landing at Fort Hume, where they joined the Federal forces, went thence to Paducah, Ky., with the Springfield Battery, and remained with them for a time, but eventually ran the blockade from Memphis to St. Louis and succeeded in getting to Springfield.

He was near Gettysburg at the time of the great battle there. At that time there were but 6000 people in Springfield, and but three houses worth $8000. Mr. Beard has always engaged in contracting for carpenter work and his labors have been well rewarded. Although well along in years he is still active and in full possession of his faculties and is a very interesting conversationalist, being able, as he is, to tell of the early days of his native city. He is a Jacksonian Democrat in politics, but is rather broad-minded in his views and votes for the man rather than the party.

On March 15, 1874, Mr. Beard was united in marriage with Mary E. Crites, daughter of Peter and Margaret (Rombaugh) Crites, natives of Ohio and Pennsylvania respectively. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Beard: Frederick C., born December 7, 1874; Edith F., born October 10, 1876, died March 17, 1901; and Clara L., born November 16, 1878, at home. The family residence is at No. 1225 Fourth Street.

BEASON, Joseph C. (deceased), who for many years carried on a farm near Illiopolis, Ill., was an industrious and useful citizen and enjoyed the confidence and regard of his friends and neighbors. He was born in Logan County, Ill., January 11, 1846, a son of Henry and Sarah (Collins) Beason, the former born in Xenia, Ohio, and the latter in Logan County. The father was an early settler of that county and spent the remainder of his life farming there, both he and his wife dying on the homestead. They were the parents of three sons and two daughters, of whom the only survivor is Jacob, of Chatham, who served as a soldier in the Civil War.

Mr. Beason worked on his father's farm until he reached his majority, acquiring his education in the country schools. He then engaged in farming on his own account, spending several years in Logan County and then locating near Illiopolis, where the remainder of his life was spent. His widow has lived in the village of Illiopolis for the past four years.

Mr. Beason was married in Shelby County, Ill., June 19, 1874, to Mrs. Emily (Rice) Wood, born February 4, 1844, in Shelby County, Ill., daughter of Nathan Rice and wife, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Alabama. Mr. Rice was a farmer and a minister of the Christian Church, and was an early settler of Shelby County, where he spent the remainder of his life, and died in 1875. The mother died in 1897. Of the six daughters and four sons in the family three children now survive: Mrs. Benson; Spencer, of Los Angeles, Calif.; and Nathan, of Kansas, where he lives on a ranch. The father of Nathan Rice, Sr., was a soldier in the Revolution and served under General Washington. Emily Rice was married (first) in Shelby County, November 12, 1862, to William Wood, born near Bloomington, Ill., whose parents were early settlers of Illinois. Mr. Wood served three years in the Civil War, enlisting from McLeau County. His death occurred in 1868. To the union two children were born: William T., of Illiopolis, where he conducts a barber shop, and Hattie A., wife of Charles McCorkle, a carpenter by trade and janitor of the Christian Church and the school-house in the village.

Seven children were born to Joseph C. Beason and wife, of whom the following survive: Overton, of Illiopolis; Carrie, wife of William Rice, of Missouri. Mr. Beason died on his farm April 2, 1890, widely mourned by his family and friends. Both he and his wife became useful members of the Christian Church, and he was a Democrat in politics. Mrs. Beason owns a comfortable home in Illinois, the family home for the past forty years.

BEATTY, Walter Rollins.—The business interests of Springfield are in the hands of men capable of handling any line, many of them being self-made men, who take pride in keeping up the standard of excellence attained. Walter Rollins Beatty, a successful merchant of the Capital City, probably owes his success as much to his personal popularity as to his shrewd business attainments. He was born eight miles from Platteburg, Clinton County, Mo., December 3, 1859, a son of William S. and America T. (Rollins) Beatty, natives of Kentucky, where they were married.

William S. Beatty was engaged in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of Lexington, Ky., and later carried on the same occupation in Missouri, whence he came to Illinois and settled in Pleasant Plains. He there engaged in the grocery business until his death in 1875, when his widow went to Roodhouse, Ill. She died February 28, 1888, at the home of her son John, at Litchfield, Ill. Mr. Beatty was a Democrat in politics and a Baptist by religion, while fraternally he was connected with the A. F. & A. M., and organized the lodge at Pleasant Plains.

Walter Rollins Beatty attended school until eighteen years of age, and during the eight years following was engaged in assisting his father in the work of the farm. Subsequently he became employed in the flouring mill where he worked until becoming connected with the Chicago & Alton Railroad in the capacity of conductor, working for this road for seventeen years and spending three years in the service of the C. P. & St. L. Railroad. He was known as one of the most popular conductors on either road, and his social and jovial disposition has always won for him many friends. In 1890 he went into business on his own account in Springfield, and has been remarkably successful, now owning the owner of considerable valuable real estate.

On October 24, 1889, Mr. Beatty was married to Maggie Sweeney, who was born in Jerseyville, Ill., daughter of Annie and Mitchell Sweeney, natives of Ireland, who are both deceased. Two children have been born to this union: Grace, who is employed as a milliner with the Furlong Dry Goods Company; and Ruth, who will graduate from the high school with the class of 1911.

BECK, Robert.—At the close of the Civil War many of the young men who had been serving their country during the mighty struggle felt unwilling to settle down in their old homes; the spirit of adventure being strong within their breasts. To this is due much of the emigration which took place during the latter part of the 'sixties, when Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa received so many sturdy settlers. They had been hardened by experience, so they were not afraid of working steadily. They were looking for homes and found them, giving to their new communities the best that was in them, and these localities profited from the strict discipline the soldiers had gone through.
with in the army. One of the men who literally turned the sword of his war experience into a plowshare with which to break Illinois sod, is Robert Beck, of Section 36, Woodside Township.
Mr. Beck was born in Maryland, August 10,
1837, being a son of Jesse and Polly (Lee) Beck, natives of Maryland. The parents died in their native State when still young, leaving behind them seven children, all of whom are now deceased with the exception of Robert.

Mr. Beck grew up in Maryland, working for his father until he was eighteen years old. At the outbreak of the Civil War he cast his fortunes with the Union, enlisting in its service in Company J, Second Maryland Volunteer Infantry. He was detailed as teamster, and was kept at that class of work during his entire term of service. He received his honorable discharge at Washington, after serving two years. Following the war he came to Springfield, finding employment with A. M. John Preast, with whom he continued for six years.
He then rented a farm, operating it for three years. In 1869 he bought his present property of 160 acres on Section 36, Woodside Township, which has been his home for thirty years.
Since buying this property he has made many improvements and now has a fine farm, which he devotes to general farming and raising high grade stock. Understanding his work in all its details, Mr. Beck has made it pay him good returns, and he is now in most comfortable circumstances, his property all having been accumulated through his unaided personal efforts.

In 1875 Mr. Beck was married, in Springfield, Ill., to Marian Smith, who came of Canadian parents. Further than this she knows nothing about them. Two children were born of this marriage: John, who is a farmer living near his father, and Dora, living at home. In political convictions Mr. Beck is a Republican, but has never sought office aside from those of School Director and Road Commissioner, holding the former twice. In both offices he has displayed so much public spirit, combined with practical good sense, that he might have almost any office in the gift of the people of his township if he cared to accept the nomination.

Personally Mr. Beck is a fine appearing man, and his natural ability makes him dominate his fellow townsmen. Public-spirited in a marked degree, he is always looking out for the best interests of the community and striving to get good government and raise the moral standard. Such men as he are almost invaluable in a locality, and the debt owed Mr. Beck by Woodside Township is not one it can easily discharge, a fact of which the neighbors show their appreciation by their warm, personal friendship, which is displayed upon every possible occasion.

BECKER, Charles D., who has been a resident of Springfield, since the fall of 1893, has been honorably and usefully connected with a number of the city's reputable business concerns, and since 1907 has been at the head of his own business, being proprietor of the shoe repair works, with his business location on the corner of Sixth and Monroe Streets. He was born at Yorkridge, Dearborn County, Ind., April 28,
1896, a son of John P. and Mary E. (Chidester) Becker. They were natives of Germany, who lived for a number of years in Indiana, but in 1883 removed to Nebraska, settling at David City, where they still reside.

Charles D. Becker obtained his education in Indiana. He was seventeen years of age when he accompanied his parents to Nebraska and continued to reside with them there for several years. When he finally left home he became an electrical engineer and for two years was employed as such at Clarinda, Page County, Iowa, then returned to David City for a short time.
Deciding that business prospects were better farther east, he came to Springfield and entered the employ of the Springfield Consolidated Bakery Company, working for them until he was removed for ten years. During this time he became well known to the people of Springfield, and when he retired from railroad work he was appointed night watchman for the mercantile district of the city and after that was secured by the Boston Store as its electrical engineer.
He remained with that mercantile house for two years, then had charge of the stove department of the Robinson-Henson Hardware Company for one year, after which he embarked in his present business, in which he has prospered, having very substantial patronage.

Mr. Becker was married at Fancy Prairie,
Menard County, Ill., on May 22, 1892, to Miss Clara F. Fulkerson, a native of that county, and they have three children, namely: Abraham E., Helen L. and Mary. Mr. Becker is a member of several fraternal organizations, including the Odd Fellows, the Court of Honor and the Modern Woodmen of America.

The most useful men in a community are not always, by any means, the professional men, the college-bred, or even the capitalists, for without the steady hand of the great body of the class of skilled workmen, to which Mr. Becker belongs and of which he is a worthy representative, little could be accomplished in the way of progress in any direction.

BECKER, Louis.—The German-American is one of the finest types of desirable mankind to be found anywhere. There is something in the rigid training of the Fatherland, that combines marvelously well with the freer spirit of this country, so that those who come here succeed in becoming well-to-do and take an important part in civic affairs in whatever locality they make their new home. A representative of this class is Louis Becker, a retired miner of Riverton, Sangamon County. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, January 6, 1842, being a son of Peter and Margaret (Young) Becker, both natives of Germany. These excellent people never left their native land, dying there some years ago. Both the paternal and maternal grandparents served in the war which was waged against Napoleon.

Mr. Becker was educated in Germany and there learned the trade of baker. He worked at it before serving in the army, entering in 1864 and continuing until 1870, when he was honorably discharged. Having given his native land the war service it demands, he resumed work at his trade, thus continuing in Prussia until 1882, when he left Hamburg for New York City, on a vessel that consumed twenty-three days on the voyage. After three days in New York he came to St. Louis and then his money having given out, after three weeks in that city, he walked all the way to Springfield, making the trip in fourteen days and arriving May 20, 1882. Being an expert in his line of work, he soon obtained employment in the city, eventually engaging with a nursery where he worked for three years. He then commenced mining, continuing that work until a few years ago, when he retired and is now residing at Riverton.

In 1872 Mr. Becker was married in Germany, to Barbara Mace, born in Prussia, August 7, 1852. Her parents remained in their native land, dying there. Her father was a prosperous farmer. Mrs. Becker died March 13, 1898, having borne her husband thirteen children, eight of whom are now living; Louis living in Peoria, is a florist and has three children, Louis and Mary and one other; Joseph lives in Clear Lake Township and is a farmer; Frank lives in Riverton and has three children.

—Louis, Isaac and Wilfred; Rose, wife of Jerry Davenport, owns the home where Mr. Becker now resides, and has one child, Margaret; Anna, wife of James Flannigan, a soldier in the regular army, died February 7, 1906, one child, Irene, who lives with her grandfather; Peter, William and Jacob live in Riverton, at home; John lives in Peoria and is a carpenter.

Mr. Becker belongs to St. James Roman Catholic Church of Riverton to which he is devoted, giving it a hearty and loyal support. Politically he votes for the men and measures he thinks are to the best interests of all the people. During the years he worked so steadily Mr. Becker saved with the thrift of his race, and now owns considerable city property that is very valuable. He is wholesouled, open-handed and genial, possessing many warm personal friends, who appreciate his many virtues.

Coming here penniless, with no knowledge of the country or language, within thirty years Mr. Becker has not only placed himself beyond want, but has reared a large family, providing well for them, and is numbered among the representative men of his locality. Unless he had possessed more than ordinary ability, great courage, and an understanding of the best way to get along, he never could have accomplished what he has, or won and retained the friendship of the men who are proud of their association with this staunch, loyal true-hearted German-American. Since his retirement Mr. Becker has traveled considerably and, as he is a keen observer, his account of his journeys is very entertaining, and shows that he appreciates his adopted land, just as he loves that of his birth.

BECKER, Oscar.—The insurance business shows remarkable advancement, within the past score of years. Various reliable companies cover all classes of risks, afford employment for the energies of some of the best business men of the country. One who has made his mark along this line in Springfield is Oscar Becker, who was born in Fosterburg, Madison County, Ill., July 19, 1875. He is a son of Charles H. and Malinda (Willis) Becker, the former born in Germany in 1847, and died in 1902, while his wife was born in Kansas in 1855. Charles H. Becker, came to Springfield in 1853, embarking in a hotel business. Until 1893 he conducted one of the well-patronized hostleries, then retiring. He was elected Supervisor-at-large, and served acceptably for four years, but since then has taken no active part in either business or political life.

Oscar Becker was educated in the Springfield schools and brought up on the farm. After leaving school he spent four years in Chicago, was there in the employ of Mandel Brothers. Returning home in 1892, he started a livery stable and conducted it for a year, when he turned his attention to his present work, and is now one of the most successful insurance men of his part of the State. He is a Republican in political faith.

Mr. Becker was married in 1897, in Springfield, to Margaret J. Nickey, who was born in 1878. They have one son, Clarence O. Becker, born June 4, 1899.

BECRAFT, George W., a retired blacksmith living at Mechanicsburg, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, was born near Owingsville, Bath County, Ky., May 24, 1840, a son of George and Sarah (Fowler) Becraft, both natives of Kentucky. The father carried on farming in Bath County until his death, being killed in Owingsville in 1860, during an election riot. His wife died in Kentucky, in 1902. They were parents of three sons, of whom two survive, George W., of this review, and Walter, a resident of Pleasant Plains, Ill. One son was a private in the Third Kentucky Regiment U. S. Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War, and was killed in service.

As a boy George W. Becraft attended the county schools of his native place, and he assisted his father with the farm work until he was seventeen years of age, then worked for others until he reached his majority, and in March, 1861, came to Springfield, Ill. He first found work on a nearby farm, where he remained until September 3, 1861, when he enlisted in Company L, Tenth U. S. Volunteer Cavalry, under the command of Captain Wilson first, and later Captain John G. Roberts, now of Springfield. Mr. Becraft served three years and was mustered out January 2, 1863, at Little Rock, Ark. December 12, 1865, he re-enlisted in Company L and served until November 22, 1865, when he received his final discharge at San Antonio, Tex. Among the many battles in which he participated were Perry Grove and Little Rock. At one time he was taken prisoner and sent to St. Louis, from which place he was exchanged some time later. He bore himself in a manner that was typical of his steadfast devotion to duty, and had the esteem and respect of his comrades and superiors.

At the close of the war Mr. Becraft returned to Mechanicsburg and engaged in farming. He removed to Kansas and engaged in farming there, remaining six years, then returned to Mechanicsburg and embarked in a teaming business. Later he took up the trade of blacksmith, which he had learned in boyhood, and continued this occupation until he retired a few years since. He is well known as an industrious and useful citizen and met with very fair success in his various enterprises.

February 1, 1866, Mr. Becraft was married, at Buffalo, to Matilda J. Waterman, born in Sangamon County November 14, 1845, daughter of Charles Waterman, a native of Kentucky, and a harness maker by trade, who located in Mechanicsburg at an early day and there conducted a harness-making shop for many years. His death occurred there July 1, 1881. The mother, a native of Kentucky, is also deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Waterman were parents of three sons, all of whom are deceased, and four daughters. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Becraft, of whom five now survive: Sarah E., wife of Newton McGaff, of Springfield; Calvin, of Mechanicsburg; John, also of Mechanicsburg; Rosetta, wife of Edward Beechler, living with her father. There are seven grandchildren in the family. In politics Mr. Becraft is a Republican and he is a member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., of Springfield. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church.

BEEEY, William, a useful and industrious citizen of Springfield, Ill., was born in Warwickshire, England, in March, 1858, son of Thomas and Mary (Moore) Beehey. The father, who was a miner by occupation, was born in Claycross, England, and the mother in Warwickshire. Both died in England, the father in 1879 and the mother in 1890. There were eleven children, of whom six are living, five of them in England. William Beehey was educated in England and after leaving school took up the occupation of his father in his native country. He followed mining until coming to America, in 1882. He sailed from Liverpool on the German-Lloyd steamer "Denah," landed in New York and came direct to Springfield.

After locating in Springfield Mr. Beehey resumed mining and in 1887 took a position as engineer for a mining company, which he still fills. He is an energetic and faithful worker and stands well with his employers and associates. He is a good manager financially and owns his home at 1043 East North Grand Avenue. In 1908 he made a trip to England, sailing on the "Mauritania," and made a visit of three months to his former home and returned on the same vessel.

Mr. Beehy was married in Springfield, in 1883, to Miss Harriett Neale, who was born in Warwickshire. Her father died in England and her mother, Mrs. Hannah (Betts) Neale, brought the family to America in 1851, and died in Springfield in 1904. Mr. Neale was a miner and died from the effects of injuries received in an English mine. Six children were born to Mr. Beehey and his wife, and five now survive: Elizabeth, wife of John Bowman, of Springfield; Joseph E., Anna, Thomas and Florence, all of Springfield. There is one grandchild in the family. Mr. Beehey is a member of St. John's Episcopal Church and in politics is a Republican. He is a man of social, genial nature and has many friends. Until recently he was a member of the Maccabees, to which he had belonged fourteen years.

BEECHLER, William Edward, engaged in the paperhanging business in Springfield, is one of that city's most progressive and industrious young business men. He was born February 6, 1851, in Richland, Sangamon County, a son of John A. and Anna Laura (Perkins) Beechler. The mother belongs to one of Sangamon County's old and honored families, which was founded there in 1819, by Edward Perkins, her grandfather. One of William E. Beechler's great-uncles was scalped by Indians on the Missouri River, another, Riley Perkins, was Treasurer of Sangamon County, and served for many years as Sheriff, from 1838, Edward Perkins, their father, was presented with a gold-headed cane for superiority in horsemanship at the Sangamon County Fair in 1875, being then over eighty years of age. John A. Beechler was born in Sweetwater, Ill., near Salem, Lincoln's old home, and is a paper hanger by occupation. He is still in business in Springfield and makes his home at No. 509 North Fifth Street. One of the twelve children born to himself and wife is dead. In politics Mr. Beechler is a Democrat, but he has never cared for public preferment. His religious belief is that of the Baptist Church.

William Edward Beechler attended the Edwards School until sixteen years of age, at which time he started to learn his trade at St. Louis. On coming to Springfield he worked for eight years for the Johnston Hatcher Company, and in 1906 began business on his own account, and has so continued to the present time. He is thorough master of his trade and his work is always artistic. He is faithful in living up to the letter of his contracts, the result being people can rely upon him and he gets at least his share of their patronage. Like his father, he is a Democrat in politics and a member of the Baptist Church, while fraternally he is connected with the original Order of Owls, the Tribe of Ben Hur, the Yeomen of America and the Paper Hangings' Union. Mrs. Beechler is a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

On October 22, 1906, at Springfield, Ill., Mr. Beechler was united in marriage with Philoepia Yost, who was born in New York, a daughter of Herman and Christina (Stout) Yost, natives of Germany, who came to America in 1880 and are now living at No. 300 South Eleventh Street, Springfield. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Beechler: Elmer Herman, born September 5, 1904.

BEERBOWER, James M. (deceased).—The name of James M. Beerbower was associated with some of the most artistic monumental work ever furnished the people of Sangamon County, and he is remembered as a man of high business principles and patriotic citizenship. He was born near Marion, Ohio, March 2, 1848. The father was an upholsterer by trade, who moved to Indianapolis, where he died. Five children were born to him and his wife, Matilda M. Beerbower; Samuel, who died in Missouri; Steven, who died in Indianapolis; James M.; Edward, of Indiana, and John, of New York City.

James M. Beerbower was brought up in poverty but was given a common school education. He learned the stone-cutting trade and worked at it for forty years. He traveled for the White Monument Company, of Indianapolis, for a quarter of a century, when he located in Springfield. Later he was with Rector and Dolan, but eventually began business for himself, building up a large trade through the excellence of his work and his thorough understanding of its requirements. His business was located at No. 214 South Seventh Street, and he made a specialty of fine cemetery work of artistic design.

On January 7, 1888, Mr. Beerbower was married in Springfield to Carrie De Frates, of that city, daughter of Antonio and Mary De Frates. One child, Zoe, was born of this union. While not a member of any religious organization, Mr. Beerbower conducted his life according to the Golden Rule. His wife belongs to the Second Presbyterian Church. In political faith he was a Republican. His widow now resides on South Seventh Street, in the home her husband's devotion provided for her. He was a man who made friends easily, and retained them through life. Always conscientious in his work, he combined this business integrity with rare artistic perceptions, and his skill was eagerly sought by those who wished to demonstrate publicly their love for those departed. He died February 23, 1911.

BEERUP, William.—To have lived for over sixty years in one section of the country; to have reached the remarkable age of ninety-one years; to have seen the changes that have come over the country, is not the lot that falls to everyone. In 1838 the first puff of a locomotive was heard in Illinois; the following year William Beerup, now a highly esteemed citizen of Springfield, was working for the Northern Cross Railroad Company. He was born September 6, 1820, in Sidney, Canada, a son of John and Mary Beerup. John Beerup was born in Albany, N. Y., and for many years conducted a blacksmith and horse-shoeing shop at Sidney, Canada. At an early date he came to Illinois, stopping in Chicago for a time to work at his trade, but later came to Springfield, where the rest of his life was spent.

William Beerup was educated in the country schools of Canada, leaving home at the age of ten years and two years later going to New York, learned the blacksmith trade in the shop of John Beechy, at Southport, N. Y. He worked for two years on the Welland Canal in Canada, and for three years on the Erie Canal, at which time the late President Garfield was working as tow-boy. For a time he was employed at his trade in St. Catherine's, Canada, but eventually came to Springfield. When the Wabash Railroad was in course of construction he was employed by that company, and saw the railroad business in Illinois grow from its earliest infancy to its present stupendous size. With the railroad has come every kind of change for the progress and development of the State, so that in taking part in the building up of the railroad, Mr. Beerup has in reality been helping build up his State.

Mr. Beerup was married in Springfield, in 1848, to Catherine E. Tolley, who was born in Jacksonville, Ill., August 27, 1829, a member of a family which came to Morgan County, Ill., from Kentucky at an early day. Her father was born in Virginia in 1754, and after settling in Illinois took up farming and continued agricultural operations for the rest of his life. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Beerup, of whom but one survives, Adaline, the widow of John Jerry, living at No. 616 South Douglas Avenue. Her daughter, Miss Maudie Jerry, is a teacher in the Stuart School. Mace Shinnake, the only grandson of Mr. Beerup, is living at No. 1608 South Pasfield Street, and is connected with the Springfield "Recort," as a linotype operator. He married Miss Jennie Kenyon, of Danville, Ill., a native of New York State. They have four children: Lester, Helen C., Gladys S., and Marion F.

Although he has attained the age of ninety-one years, Mr. Beerup is still strong and hardy, in full possession of his faculties, and in the enjoyment of perfect health, as is his wife, who has reached the age of eighty-two years. They reside in their home, at No. 619 Douglas Avenue, and in addition own a large farm near Springfield. Mr. Beerup has always been a Democrat. Mrs. Beerup attended Abraham Lincoln's wedding and she and her husband were personal friends and neighbors of Mr. Lincoln.

BELL, Benoni (deceased).—The past fifty years have worked many changes and nowhere else is this more evident than in Sangamon County. Half a century ago much of the land that now sells for prices that would have seemed impossible then was in a wild state, a large deal of it being covered with heavy timber. Roads were few and transportation difficult in many sections. Water was the motive power used by the mills, and those intending to operate them sought a location along a stream. One of the men who was "forehanded" enough to realize the possibilities of Sangamon County and to secure some of its land before the price became prohibitive, was the late Benoni Bell, who resided on Section 25, Woodside Township.

He was born in Berkeley County, W. Va., July 24, 1822, being a son of Zebulon and Rachel (Swingle) Bell, natives of Berkeley County, Va. Married September 20, 1821, and she was born December 20, 1801, and he born November 18, 1790. They were among the early pioneers of Woodside Township, coming to Sangamon County in May, 1834, making the trip overland in a wagon. The trip was a slow one and many stops were made along the way. When the new home was reached there was not much to gladden the eyes of state, and very few travelers, but being accustomed to hard work, and realizing that here land could be obtained at a low price, they did not complain, but commenced at once to make a home for their little family. Woodside Township remained their home until their deaths. Both were most excellent people, who were a credit to their community.

Benoni Bell went to school in both his native place and Sangamon County, in the latter attending the log school of the neighborhood, where comforts were lacking but earnestness was not. The children of that day thought nothing of walking miles through the snow to school, delighted at having the opportunity. While attending school he assisted his father and learned the wagonmaking trade, at which he worked until 1861. On June 14th, of that year he purchased the homestead of forty-five acres on Section 25, Woodside Township, and there for twenty years operated a grist-mill, farming to a certain extent during that period. He then gave up his milling to spend more time farming, but at the time of his death, he had been retired for ten years. He passed away June 18, 1910, and his remains were interred at Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield.

On October 12, 1859, Mr. Bell was married at Madison, Ind., to Mrs. Angelica (Taylor) Settle, born December 17, 1833. She lost her father at an early age, her mother lived until about 1900. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bell: Charles E., born October 8, 1862, died July 31, 1873, having been kicked by a horse; and Ada Hannah, born February 5, 1872. Mrs. Bell resides on the homestead which consists of forty-five acres of very valuable land. She is a lady of kindly disposition, devoted to her home, and has many warm personal friends in the neighborhood.

Mr. Bell was a Republican and served as School Director of his township for many years. Fraternally he was an Odd Fellow, and was interested in his lodge. Although he did not care to run for public office, Mr. Bell was very active in county affairs, always being willing to give of both time and money to advance its interests, and to inaugurate improvements. Some of the most desirable changes were effected through his Instrumentality, and when he was called away those associated with him felt his loss very deeply, for they knew the county had lost one of its most reliable, loyal, true-hearted citizens, as well as they a true and tried friend.

BELL, Lu Mildred.—Springfield is the home of some of the most cultivated and charming ladies of the State, who assist very materially in making the capital city one of the most pleasant places of residence in this part of the country. Among these ladies one deserving of special mention, by reason of her Christian character and kindly nature, is Mrs. Lu Mildred Bell. Mrs. Bell was born in Terre Haute, Ind., April 14, 1856, a daughter of S. M. and Mary M. Patterson, the former born in Vincennes, Ind., October 16, 1812, and the latter born in Hamilton County, Ohio, October 14, 1820. Mr. Patterson was a bookkeeper.

Mrs. Bell grew to womanhood in Mattoon, Coles County, Ill., where her parents moved in her childhood, and there she received a liberal education. She was always ambitious and found expression in training children, becoming one of the most popular educators of Coles County, where she taught school for a number of years. In 1877, she married Francis W. Boyd, and, after his death, was married, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, on July 4, 1903, to Matthew B. Bell. By her first marriage she became the mother of two children, Harry F. Boyd, born March 24, 1878, and Clarence La Vergne Boyd, born April 5, 1881.

For many years Mrs. Bell has been a member of the Congregational Church, and her work in its cause shows the quality of the woman. No worthy measure is taken up by the church that does not find an earnest supporter in her, and she lives out, in her every day life, the faith she professes.

BENDER, Victor E., Editor and Publisher of the Evening News, Springfield, Illinois, was born in Granville, Putnam County, Illinois, September 1, 1861, the son of Jacob and Helene (Natziger) Bender.

Jacob Bender and wife were natives of Germany, the former emigrating to this country in 1831, and the latter a few years later. From the time he embarked on the Weser River until he landed at Annapolis, Maryland, Jacob Bender was on shipboard eleven weeks, having made the voyage in a sailing vessel. From Annapolis, the party of colonists, of which Mr. Bender was one, proceeded down the Ohio River, landing at Cincinnati, and finally locating near Hamilton, Ohio. In 1855, shortly after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Bender settled in Granville.

Victor E. Bender received his primary education in the common schools of his native county. In 1881, he entered Knox College at Galesburg, graduating from that institution in 1885. Prior to entering college, Mr. Bender taught school several years, and with the money thus realized, and with additional funds earned in prizes while at college, he completed his four years' course. After graduation, he became principal of the schools at Abingdon, Illinois, remaining there for two years, when he received from President Newton R. Peirce, of Knox College, a call to the chair of elocution in that institution. Mr. Bender accepted the position, remaining for one year, when he went to Omaha, Nebraska, to engage in newspaper work. He did reportorial work on the Bee, the Republican and the Dispatch of that city, and in the fall of 1890, purchased the Omaha Missouri, a weekly newspaper devoted largely to the legal profession. He sold his paper in 1895, and with a number of citizens of Council Bluffs, Iowa, purchased the daily Nonpareil of that city, which he conducted for fifteen years as editor and publisher.

In 1900, Mr. Bender sold his paper and removed to Springfield, Illinois, where he purchased the Evening News, of which he is at the present time editor and publisher. Mr. Bender is a zealous Republican, and, while conducting his newspaper in Iowa, steadfastly espoused the cause of the conservative Republicans of that state. In Springfield, under his management, the Evening News has grown in circulation and influence, and Mr. Bender seems to be making good on his claim that the Evening News "is the fastest growing paper in central Illinois."

Mr. Bender was married June 11, 1880, to Miss Alma Colville of Galesburg, Illinois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Colville of that city. They have one son and one daughter, Robert J., aged twenty-one years, and Victoria E., aged fourteen years. Mr. Bender's religious associations have been with the Congregational church. He is an enterprising and public spirited citizen, and evinces a lively interest in every movement tending to the mental, moral and political advancement of his city and state.

BENNEDT, Charles W. (deceased), a retired florist living at 124 North Columbia Avenue, Springfield, Ill., was born in St. Louis, Mo., August 13, 1814, a son of Benonia and Sarah M. (Hunt) Bennett. The father was born in Virginia and the mother in Auburn, N. Y. They were married in Louisville, Ky., came to Sangamon County in 1832, locating near Springfield, later moved to St. Louis, where the father engaged in printing and book binding, and kept a book store. He died in St. Louis, August 30, 1868, and the mother died October 30, 1870. Both are buried at Oak Ridge Cemetery, in Springfield.

Charles W. Bennett attended the public schools of St. Louis and Washington University, and after leaving school engaged in dairy business at Oak Hill, a suburb of St. Louis, where he built up a lucrative trade. He made a specialty of providing pure bottled milk for babies, taking a course of instruction from a doctor in the best manner for caring for and putting up this product. He spent ten years in this business, then came to Sangamon County, arriving there in May, 1857. He purchased fourteen acres of land, and engaged in gardening there until 1880, when he built a green-house and for many years conducted a successful florist trade. He retired from active life in 1906 and was confined to the house on account of poor health. His business interests are cared for by his son Chesley, who learned the details of caring for the same from his father. Mr. Bennett was upright and reliable and was much esteemed by all who had dealings with him.

Mr. Bennett was married, in St. Louis, Mo., in 1873, to Miss Mary E. Beach, who was born August 9, 1848, daughter of Miles and Mary Graham Beach, the former born in Connecticut, in 1806, and the latter in Maine, in 1812. Two children were born to Mr. Beach and his wife, Louis M., of Springfield, and Mrs. Bennett. The parents came to Randolph County, Ill., in 1853, and secured a farm, where both of them died. Four children were born to Mr. Bennett and his wife: Mary, wife of Robert McCune, a house-mover of Springfield; Anna, married Julius Raandoek, a mill foreman in Austin, Tex.; Estrick, deceased; Chesley, at home, conducting the business established by his father. Mr. Bennett was a member of the Episcopal Church and in politics was a Republican. He was affiliated with the Court of Honor, of Springfield, and the A. O. U. W., of St. Louis. During the Civil War he enlisted at St. Louis, for thirty days' service, and at the end of his term was honorably discharged. Mr. Bennett died May 14, 1911.

BENNEDT, Harry.—No class of men have contributed so much to the upbuilding of large corporations as the commercial travelers who introduce their goods in every part of the country and keep their home houses informed as to conditions of trade. One of these progressive, genial, enterprising representatives of the great body of travelling men in Springfield, is Harry Bennett, traveling representative of the Deer- ing Harvester Works. Mr. Bennett was born at Casey, Ill., November 27, 1875, being a son of John and Susie (Frokes) Bennett. The father was born in 1856, early becoming a resident of Fairfield, Ill., where he carried on carpentering. The mother passed away in 1896.
Harry Bennett attended the school held in a brick school building at Farina, Ill., and upon leaving school learned the painter’s trade. However, he entered the employ of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company soon thereafter, and continued in it for several years, leaving to engage with the Springfield Street Railroad Company. He is now on the road for the Deering Harvester Company and is one of their most valued employees. His success in business has come from faithful, conscientious devotion to duty and from his knowledge of conditions and wants of those with whom he is dealing. For three years he has been a member of Effingham Lodge No. 463, Modern Woodmen, and is interested in its work. His political influence is always cast in favor of the Republican party. In religious matters he is connected with the Baptist Church and finds in it a congenial religious home. He was married in Effingham, Ill., February 20, 1896, to Edna M. Hunter, born in Effingham County, Ill., in 1884. Her father has always been a farmer and is one of the best-known men in that lieu in his part of the State. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett are among the popular young people of Springfield and have many warm friends socially and in their church.

BERGEN, Augustus W. (Vol. I, p. 45.)

BERGEN, Charles Henry (deceased), for many years a resident of Springfield, Ill., was well-known and highly respected. He was born in Menard County, Ill., December 19, 1851, son of George S. and Emily (Wyatt) Bergen. His father was born July 6, 1800, in Kentucky, and the mother was also a native of that State. George S. Bergen was a farmer in Kentucky and later secured a farm in Illinois. He spent his last years in Petersburg, Ill., having been a resident of the State since 1829.

Charles H. Bergen spent his early years on a farm near Petersburg and attended the country schools. After leaving school he took up farming with his father and devoted most of his life to agricultural pursuits. In 1891 he located in Springfield, where he became engaged in market gardening. He was an excellent manager and devoted himself closely to his work and his home, caring little for political or public affairs. As a young man he united with the Presbyterian Church and at the time of his death was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Petersburg. In political views he was a stanch Democrat. Mr. Bergen was industrious and thrifty and became fairly successful in business. His death occurred March 15, 1897, and he was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield. His widow now resides at 801 South Fifteenth Street, Springfield.

Mrs. Bergen was born in Springfield August 30, 1850, daughter of James Cook, and has lived there all her life. Children were born of this marriage as follows: Emily Louise, born in Pensacola, Fla., February 20, 1879, married O. C. BERGMANN, John, one of the oldest residents of Springfield, Ill., now living retired from active life, worked at his trade of shoemaker in that city about sixty years. Mr. Bergmann was born in Bavaria, Germany, April 26, 1823, son of George Adams and Kunagesunda (Winterstein) Bergmann, both natives of Bavaria. Both his parents lived to old age and died in Germany, where they owned a farm. They were parents of five children.

The boyhood of John Bergmann was spent in his native country and he was educated in the public schools there. He was reared to farm work but when he left school he learned the trade of shoemaker. He emigrated to the United States in 1853, locating in Philadelphia, where he lived five years. In 1858 he came to Springfield, and worked eighteen years at his trade for Henry H. Richardson. In 1876 Mr. Bergmann entered the employ of Mr. Easli, remaining with him five years, then worked six years in the same business for Walter Ortway and ten years for Klayholt & Fogarty, after which he engaged in business on his own account and continued until he retired a few years since. He is a skilled workman and has been successful in his operations. Mr. Bergmann has been a hard-working, industrious citizen and has been able to accumulate some valuable property, including the comfortable residence the family occupies.

Mr. Bergmann was married in Philadelphia, Pa., April 3, 1854, to Margaret Gotschalk, born March 24, 1829, daughter of Adam and Anne Margrett (Foester) Gotschalk, who spent their entire lives in Germany, where they attained old age. Six children blessed this union, namely: Caroline, married Gus R. Hansenberger, employed by the Illinois Watch Company; Tina, widow of George Mackley, a cigar maker in Springfield; John and Fred, in the employ of the Illinois Watch Company; Henry died in 1908, was married and left a wife and two daughters Mr. Bergmann has seventeen grandchildren and three great-grandchildren, the names of the latter being: Ethel, Mildred and Louis Edward Abbott, living in Springfield. Mr. Bergmann has been very fortunate in living to see three generations of his descendants and takes great pride in them, as he has every rea-BERGERNER, Herman F., was born in Saxony, Germany, March 15, 1843, son of John J. Bergner, who came to America the same year their son Herman was born. The family proceeded direct to Springfield, where the parents both died. The father was a cloth weaver, and so far back as anything is known lived in Germany. Herman F. Bergerner received his education in the public schools of Springfield and was always fond of outdoor sports and exercise. Upon leaving school, he found employment in a brick plant, and at the age of sixteen enlisted in the navy for service in the Civil War, the date of his enlistment being March 26, 1864, at Chicago. He was assigned to duty on the boat “Washtika,” under Admiral Porter, and served one year and five months, under Captain Zimmerman. He was discharged August 26, 1865, at New Orleans, La., off the Rebel ram “Missouri.” He was never captured, but was wounded at the engagements at Donaldsonville and Alexander. The regiment took part in battles at Vicksburg, Donelsonville, and New Orleans, went up the Red River to Alexandria, where they had a skirmish and chased a rebel ram, but those on the boat blew it up before it could be captured. At the close of the war he returned home and, in 1866, moved to Philadelphia, Pa., where he remained three years, after which he returned to Springfield, where he has since been his home. He worked many years at the trade of a printer, and has always been industrious and hardworking. Respected by all who know him he is considered a useful, upright citizen. He is now employed as Sexton for the St. Paul Pro-Cathedral in Springfield, and in the performance of his duties has given the utmost satisfaction. His home which he owns is at 559 West Canedy Street. He is an active member of St. John’s Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Democrat. A prominent member of Stephenson Post G. A. R., he also holds a membership in the American Home Circle.

Mr. Bergerner was married in Chicago, in 1866, to Miss Elizabeth Spurrier, born in Bavaria, Germany, and they had three children: Charles, born in Chicago, April 15, 1867; Lena, born in Philadelphia in 1868; Mary, born in Philadelphia in 1871. Mr. Bergerner’s wife died and he married (second) Mary E. (Curran) Molter, born in Wurtemburg, Germany, January 2, 1848, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Curran, who came to America and located in Springfield, where both died. Mrs. Bergerner was married to Mr. Molter in Springfield, and he died, leaving her with two children, Katie and Caroline. By her second marriage, she had no children. Mr. Bergerner carried the first German paper that was printed in Springfield, Ill., having carried papers to Abraham Lincoln many times. He tells many stories of Mr. Lincoln, remembering both him and Stephen Douglas, as personal friends.

BERRIMAN, George R.—There are many examples of the self-made man to be found in Springfield; men who, starting out entirely on their own resources, have worked their way steadily to the front in some chosen line and achieved success in spite of all obstacles. Few, however, have given their attention to many and varied occupations and proven successful in whatever they have undertaken, and it is in this way that Mr. George R. Berriman is an unusual example. He was born July 13, 1858, in Springfield, Ill., and is a son of Peter Berriman. He attended the Springfield public and high schools, after leaving which he found employment in the foundry of John G. Gillette, at Elkhart, Ill., for whom Mr. Berriman’s father had done much iron work. One year later, however, he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he became assistant agent for the Union News Company, having charge of their office at the Little Miami Depot for about four years. The following year he went to New York City to become general agent for the New York Newspaper Union, and this company sent him to Pittsburg, Pa., where he had charge of the business for some time. On account of the illness of his mother, however, Mr. Berriman returned to Springfield, remaining there until after her death, then going to Chicago, where he had charge of the State Grain Office for two years, a position which he resigned to become an employe of the United States Sub-Treasury. After four years he later returned to Springfield, which has since been his home. He worked many years at the trade of a printer, and has always been industrious and hardworking. Respected by all who know him he is considered a useful, upright citizen. He is now employed as Sexton for the St. Paul Pro-Cathedral in Springfield, and in the performance of his duties has given the utmost satisfaction. His home which he owns is at 559 West Canedy Street. He is an active member of St. John’s Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Democrat. A prominent member of Stephenson Post G. A. R., he also holds a membership in the American Home Circle.

Mr. Berriman was married in Chicago, in 1886, to Miss Elizabeth Spurrier, born in Bavaria, Germany, and they had three children; Charles, born in Chicago, April 15, 1867; Lena, born in Philadelphia in 1868; Mary, born in Philadelphia in 1871. Mr. Berriman’s wife died and he married (second) Mary E. (Curran) Molter, born in Wurtemburg, Germany, January 2, 1848, daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Curran, who came to America and located in Springfield, where both died. Mrs. Bergerner was married to Mr. Molter in Springfield, and he died, leaving her with two children, Katie and Caroline. By her second marriage, she had no children. Mr. Berriman carried the first German paper that was printed in Springfield, Ill., having carried papers to Abraham Lincoln many times. He tells many stories of Mr. Lincoln, remembering both him and Stephen Douglas, as personal friends.
BERRY, James, an old and well-known citizen of Springfield, Ill., who has retired from active life, was born in County Mayo, Ireland, about 1843. He is the third son of William and Mary (McLellan) Berry, farmers of Ireland, who died there. James Berry was reared on a farm and received a fair education in the local schools, after which he continued farming until twenty-five years of age, when he came to America, sailing from Liverpool and landing in New York. He came direct to Springfield, Ill., arriving there May 5, 1869, and has spent most of the time since in that city.

Mr. Berry was married in Springfield, Ill., April 22, 1872, to Miss Anna McGrey, also a native of County Mayo, Ireland, who came to America with her mother when about eleven years of age. Her father, Patrick McGrey, and her sisters, Mary and Bridget, had preceded them to the new home. They located in the City of Springfield, where Mr. McGrey died in May, 1910. After settling in Springfield Mr. Berry became employed in the mines and continued in this line of work up to the present time. He was an industrious and faithful worker and managed his financial affairs in a creditable manner, so that he was able to retire in 1910. He erected the present family home at 1031 East Enterprise Street in 1898. He is universally respected wherever he is known and has won many friends. He and his family are members of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church and in politics he is a Democrat. Children as follows were born to him and his wife: William and James, at home; Edward, of Springfield, married Jennie Cummings; John, of Springfield, married Emma Oger; Thomas, at home, married Sadie Tulley; Marie, Mrs. James Kelly, of Springfield; Anna, Mrs. Louis Hornish, of St. Louis; Catherine, at home, Mrs. James Berry died June 3, 1911, at Springfield, Ill.

BERRY, Riland Dillard, M. D., a well-established physician of Springfield, Ill., has a large and lucrative practice and has the esteem and confidence of all who know him. Dr. Berry was born in Carlinville, Ill., July 10, 1855, son of Benjamin L. and Sarah Jane (Rutherford) Berry, both natives of Kentucky, who came to Illinois in 1855 and located on a farm near Carlinville. They had twelve children.

The education of Riland D. Berry was acquired in the public schools of his native city, and he afterward studied medicine, graduating from the Medical College of Ohio, in 1878. He began practice in partnership with Dr. J. P. Matthews, of Carlinville, and in the fall of 1888 located in Springfield, where he has since been engaged in successful practice alone. He is known as a skilled practitioner and stands high in his profession. He is a member of the county and state medical societies and of the American Medical Association, and is thoroughly devoted to the interests of all three. In politics he is a Republican and he and his wife are members of the Baptist Church. He is considered a representative and public-spirited citizen and is highly esteemed by his many warm friends.

Dr. Berry was married at Rohrer, Ill., December 17, 1890, to Lenora Florence, daughter of Milton and Mary E. Rohrer, of Rohrer. Both of her parents were born in Waverly, Ill., the father May 31, 1832, and the mother July 17, 1840. Dr. and Mrs. Berry have no children.

BEST, Ernest, one of the best-known and most highly respected German-American citizens of Springfield, was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, January 8, 1857, a son of Henry and Christine (Bruek) Best. In 1850 Henry Best brought his family to America, the travelers landing at New Orleans. They took passage on a Mississippi River steamboat and started for St. Louis, but the father was taken sick and died of cholera before landing in that city, his burial being on Burt's Point, in the lower part of Illinois. This family disaster occurred in the latter part of the month of May. The widow, with her children, settled near Prairietown, Madison County, Ill., and there she died in 1859. There were nine children in the family, seven sons and two daughters, and of these the living are: Ernest; Christian, a farmer living in Christian County, Ill.; and Caroline, wife of William Jackson, an Illinois farmer.

Ernest Best had attended school in his native land and afterward learned the English language in Madison County. He learned the blacksmith trade and worked at that for a few years and also continued to operate the farm in Madison County until 1892, when he moved to Springfield, where he now lives in comfortable retirement. During the Civil War, when the Government found it necessary to make a draft for soldiers, Mr. Best was unfortunate enough to be drafted. It was almost impossible for him at that time to leave his affairs and enter the army, and through the assistance of neighbors and friends he found a substitute, but it cost him $800. Perhaps he did not feel the loss of the money quite so much after he learned that his substitute was killed in the first battle in which the company took part.

Mr. Best was married at Prairietown, Ill., in the Lutheran Church, by Rev. Rameleow, on July 29, 1873, to Miss Minnie Eden, a daughter of Hilbert and Gretchen (Puhl) Eden. She was born in Hanover, Germany, May 27, 1857. Her father was born there August 27, 1825, and died in 1897, but her mother still lives, having been born in Hanover, December 27, 1827. They had six children, namely: Mrs. Best; Bernard, a farmer in Madison County; Otto, living in Germany; and Hilbert and Gretchen, both living in Germany.

Mrs. Best came alone to America in 1871 and two years later was married to Mr. Best. Three sons and five daughters have been born to them and the family record is as follows: Otto I.
born June 1, 1858, is employed by the Springfield Gas Company as an inspector; Bernard H., born January 6, 1890, lives at home and is a clerk employed by the John W. Cobb's Drug Company; William was born March 12, 1896, and lives at home; Helena was born October 6, 1873 and is the wife of Peter A. Baker, proprietor of a grocery store in Springfield; Christine was born July 26, 1877, and is the wife of George Coberry, of Springfield; Anna K. was born September 5, 1884, and is cashier for the firm of Graser & Relsch; Margaret J. was born December 29, 1888, lives at home and is employed in a large millinery house; Minnie R. was born September 15, 1890, lives at home and is employed in the mercantile house of R. F. Herron & Company. In politics Mr. Best is a Republican. With his family he belongs to the Lutheran Church, and is very active in all its charitable and benevolent work.

BEST, Robert, an enterprising farmer and blacksmith living in Capital Township, Sangamon County, III., has been successful in various enterprises. He is a typical English-American citizen of the better class, and is a man of unusual intelligence and industry. Mr. Best was born in Yorkshire, May 30, 1859, son of Robert and Anna (Cooper) Best, the former a native of Scotland and the latter of England. Robert Best, Sr., was a veterinary surgeon, and his wife died in England. They were parents of nine children, of whom two sons and two daughters now live in England.

The education of Robert Best, Jr., was acquired in England, and after leaving school he worked on a farm. His father was an excellent judge of horses and the son has always taken an interest in these animals. He learned the blacksmith's trade and worked at it in England until 1888, when he sailed from Liverpool for New York, bringing with him eighteen head of fine horses. After remaining three months in the United States he returned to England with eighteen head of fine coach horses, representing the finest of Shriver's Brothers, dealers in high-grade horses. Mr. Best carried on this business with gratifying success and profit for seventeen years, and (in 1901) returned to England and lived there eight years, then came again to Sangamon County, which has since been his home. He carries on his farm and also conducts a blacksmith shop. He is a good workman and has established a good trade. He has an excellent business reputation and has won many friends in the community.

Mr. Best was married in Springfield, in 1891, to Ida Williams, born at Masbro, near Sheffield, Yorkshire, England, in July, 1875. She was one of eleven children and both her parents spent their entire lives in England. Eight sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Best, all of whom survive: John, George, Walter, Joseph, Samuel, Rolla, Arthur, and an infant. Mr. Best is a member of the Episcopal Church and in politics is a Republican. He is a man of pleasant, genial manner, has an excellent education, is a good conversationalist, and has a striking personality. He is well known as a public-spirited citizen and a man of reliability and integrity.

BETTINGHAUS, Henry.—As long as Springfield's residences and schoolhouses stand as a monument to his industry and skill, Henry Bettinghaus will be gratefully remembered by its people. He was for many years engaged in a general contracting and building business here, and his work is the best testimonial he can ever have. He was born in the Kingdom of Hanover, Germany, May 3, 1835, and there received a fair education. Leaving his native land when only seventeen, he came to America, and locating in Toledo, Ohio, there learned the carpenter trade. After working at it in Toledo for seven years, in 1859 he came to Springfield, and this has been his home ever since. Until 1863 he merely worked at his trade, but in that year he began contracting, and eventually became one of the most extensive builders here. Many of the most substantial schoolhouses and homesomest residences were put up by him. In 1906, feeling that he had done his full duty, Mr. Bettinghaus retired, and since then has been resting from his many years of arduous labors.

On September 7, 1859, Mr. Bettinghaus was united in marriage, in Springfield, with Louisa Schmidt, born in Prussian Church of Spring- field, with which he has been connected for half a century. He is an excellent example of the German-American. Industrious, thrifty and sociable, he has been a good business man and at the same time gathered about him a wide circle of warm, personal friends, whom he delights to entertain at his pleasant home. He and his wife are deservedly popular with their friends and neighbors, and are justly regarded as among the best people of the Capital City.

BEYER, Conrad, an enterprising German-American citizen of Springfield, who has built up a good business on his own account, was born in Bavaria, November 26, 1868. He is a son of Michael and Katherine (Strackfuss) Beyer, the former of whom died when the son was a baby and the latter when he was ten years of age. Both were natives of Baden, where they died. Conrad Beyer was the youngest of seven children, three sons and four daughters. He has a brother and sister now living in Germany and one sister in America. He attended school in BIESENTHAL, Charles A.—In the second generation the German characteristics blend well with those of American origin, so that the offspring of the Fatherland are among the most prosperous in the land. Proud indeed may a man be who can trace his ancestry back to a sturdy son of Germany who, coming here, developed into one of the thrifty German-American citizens of which the country has such need in times gone by. If it had not been for them during the Civil War, the outcome might have been entirely different. Charles A. Biesenthal, of Capital Township, is of German parentage. He was born in New Berlin Township, January 5, 1872, being a son of Frederick and Sophia (Kuhn) Biesenthal, the former born April 14, 1846, and the latter born October 14, 1812, both being natives of Germany. In 1863 Frederick Biesenthal came to America, landing in New York, whence he came west to Wisconsin, but remaining there only a short time, he moved to Springfield. From there he enlisted in the service of the North and fought during the remainder of the war, participating in many hard-fought battles.

The parents of Charles A. Biesenthal were married in Springfield and had eight children, six of whom survive. While the father died October 14, 1896, the mother survives, making her home in Springfield.

Charles A. Biesenthal attended school in Curran Township and worked on his father’s farm. Later he worked on a farm owned by his father, in New Berlin Township, and conducted it until the latter died. At this time he began farming for himself in Curran Township, but in 1901 moved to Capital Township, where he now owns eighty-five acres of rich farm land. This he devotes to general farming and has succeeded in amassing a comfortable property.

The marriage of Mr. Biesenthal occurred in Gardner Township, February 2, 1894, to Julia Kohl, born in Springfield, April 9, 1873. Her father was born in Germany but her mother was a native of Springfield. Mr. Kohl came to America in 1863, settled on a farm in Sangamon county, and worked at the city water works for six years, after which he devoted himself exclusively to his farming, and is now thus engaged. He and his wife had two daughters and three sons, all of whom survive. The grandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. John Kohl, also live at North Seventh Street, Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Biesenthal have had six children: Frieda, Carl, Sophia, Godfrey, William and Earl, all at home.

Mr. Biesenthal is a Democrat and has served very acceptably as School Director of the Sand Hill School. He is a consistent member of the Lutheran Church, being highly regarded in that organization, as he is throughout the country where he is so well and favorably known.

BIESENTHAL, Fred (deceased).—The profession of farming, as now practiced by the intelligent and industrious agriculturist, is as different from the farming of several decades ago, as could be imagined. The day of the work-hardened, horn-handed farmer has past. In these days we see the agriculturist who uses scientific methods retire in time to spend the remaining years of his life in enjoyment of a well-earned competence. The late Fred Biesenthal, for many years a resident of Sangamon County, belonged to the new order of farmers, and in addition had the distinction of being a self-made man. Born in 1844, in Germany, he was a son of Frederick and Sophia Biesenthal, natives of the Fatherland.

Mr. Biesenthal’s mother passed away in Germany when he was still a small lad, and he was but eighteen years old when he came to America to try to win his fortune. He had secured a public school education in his native country and on coming to Springfield, he secured a position with the Bunn Bank, with which he was associated until 1870. At this time, deciding that there was a better future for him in farming, he took up a tract of land in Sangamon County, and subsequently he purchased a farm near Curran, which he continued to operate successfully. He died September 13, 1893. In 1895, the family came to Springfield, and Mrs. Biesenthal is now residing in a comfortable home at No. 100 West Edwards street. Mr. Biesenthal was a staunch Democrat all of his life, and he took a great interest in public matters, especially those pertaining to education, serving as Director of the Sangamon County School Board for many years. He showed his public spirit in many ways and was always a leader in movements for the public welfare. His religious faith was that of the German Lutheran Church.

On February 15, 1867, Mr. Biesenthal was united in marriage with Sophie Kuhn, and to this union there were born eleven children, five of whom are now living, namely: William, born September 22, 1870, who is married and conducting a farm adjoining his mother’s farm. near Curran; Charles, born November 11, 1868, who is married and engaged in farming north of Springfield; Sophia, born January 11, 1889, married to Gus Siebert and residing in Springfield; Louise, born February 2, 1875, died January 8, 1912; Katherine, born December 29, 1882; and Wilhelmena, born February 25, 1885, the last two named living with their mother.

BIGLER, Cyrus Wineman.—Sangamon County has its full quota of manufacturers, financiers, professional and business men and statesmen, but particularly is it noted for the high standard set by its agriculturists, who have done so much in the past few years towards making this county one of the garden spots of Illinois. The manufacturing, financial and industrial interests of any community are a source of great pride to its citizens, but it is to the farms that the country must eventually turn, and in the hands of the agriculturists lies the possibility of the country’s prosperity or depression. Cyrus Wineman Bigler, who is engaged in farming and stockraising on Section 21, Auburn Township, is one of Sangamon County’s progressive and intelligent agriculturists. He was born in that township January 25, 1868, a son of George and Virginia E. (Wine man) Bigler.

George Bigler was born in Botetourt County, Va., in November, 1833, and came to Illinois in 1857, in poor circumstances. For a short time he rented and finally bought land east of Auburn, where Cyrus W. Bigler was born. For some time he continued to improve this property, but subsequently bought 250 acres on sections 21 and 22, on which a fairly good dwelling had been erected. Cyrus W. Bigler can still remember coming to this new farm, and can also remember his first day in school in the Fletcher school district. On February 9, 1909, Mr. George Bigler’s wife was called to her reward, and shortly thereafter he retired from active affairs and moved to Springfield, where he is now residing, enjoying the fruits of his years of labor. Mr. Bigler has always been a public-spirited citizen, giving freely of his time and means in any public cause, being a friend of education and for a number of years serving on the School Board. His politics have always been those of the Democratic party. Mr. Bigler was married in 1858 to Virginia E. Wineman and to them the following children were born: Edward A., a real estate agent of Amarillo, Tex.; Cyrus W., twins, February 9, 1870, in infan­cy; George R., who conducts the Bigler Poultry and Stock Food Company, of Springfield. Mrs. Virginia E. Bigler was a daughter of Philip Wineman, a large landholder in Sangamon County in an early day, who became owner of about 2,000 acres.

Cyrus Wineman Bigler was given a good educational training in the district schools and at the age of seventeen years went to Illinois Wesleyan College, where he took a two years’ course in the preparatory department and a full four years’ course in the regular departments, graduating with the class of 1882. Returning home, he taught school for one year, then took up the duties of the farm, to which he has devoted himself ever since. In 1897 he removed to one of his father-in-law’s farms in Talkington Township, but in 1902 took possession of his father’s home farm on Section 21, and he is now operating 275 acres, owned by him, his father and his brother Edward. He has been very successful in his farming operations, having one of the finest properties in the county, and in stockraising he has been no less successful, breeding Poland-China hogs, Shropshire sheep, Percheron horses, and mules, and devoting 120 acres of his land for feeding purposes.

On February 5, 1886, Mr. Bigler was married to Miss Minnie A. Workman, daughter of B. F. Workman, a prominent banker of Auburn, and to them have been born children as follows: Mary Elvira, born August 21, 1896; Paul Workman, born February 9, 1899; Mildred, born August 31, 1901; Alice and Virginia, twins, born June 23, 1906. Mr. Bigler and his brother Edward married sisters, Minnie and Evelyn Workman, and on a doubling of for a number of years resided near each other. Edward has two children, Hayward Landon and Adella.

Mr. Bigler is socially connected with the Court of Honor and the Loyal Americans, and both he and his wife are affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church and active in its work. He is a Democrat in politics, but during the past few years he has been liberal, voting for the man rather than the party. Enterprising and energetic, he is one of his township’s most useful citizens, while he is public-spirited to a large degree and always ready to do his full share in promoting and assisting movements for the betterment of his community.

BILYEU, Edward.—The farmer of today occupies a high position in his community, for upon him and his industry depend the prosperity of the nation. The time has gone by when only incompetent men went into farming, when everything else had failed, or kept at it because they did not know how to do anything else. The farmer of today has to know his business thoroughly; he must understand the cultivation of the soil, be a good judge of cattle, and be able to buy and sell intelligently. Such a man succeeds and becomes rich from the products of his farm. One of the best examples of the farmer of 1910 in Sangamon County is Edward Bilyeu, who was a candidate for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket, a man of wide interests and rich holdings. He was born in Prairie­ton Township, Christian County, Ill., and is essentially an Illinois man. His birth occurred December 20, 1859, he being a son of Peter and Elizabeth P. (Workman) Bilyeu, the former born in Sangamon County, near Loami, and the latter in Overton County, Tenn. She died February 8, 1900. The family lived on a farm in Christian County, where the children were reared to manhood and womanhood. Edward Bilyeu is the second in order of birth of the fourteen children born to his parents, five of whom survive, three sons and two daughters. Edward Bilyeu attended the country schools of Christian County, which were held in log houses. He sat on log benches, and when there were any doors they were made of puncheons. However, these children learned fast and thoroughly, and retained the knowledge imparted in those primitive schools. Mr. Bilyeu was brought up to hard work. Before he hurried off to school he fed the cattle, and on his return the same chores awaited him. However, he learned farm work, and continued with his parents until November 10, 1851, when he engaged with Calvin Cloyd near Curran. It did not take him long to accumulate some property, to which he has added from time to time until he now owns 600 acres of the richest kind of farming land in Curran Township. This land has been devoted to general farming, and some raising and he is recognized as one of the best judges of stock in Sangamon County. All of his operations have turned out well and he is one of the wealthy farmers of this part of the State. Having always been strong in the ranks of the Democratic party, he was the logical candidate for Sheriff and his personal following was so large that there was every prospect of his election. For fifteen years he has been a consistent member of the Christian Church. Fraternally he belongs to the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen and Red Men. Ever since joining the Modern Woodmen, eighteen years ago, he has been an officer in his lodge and now is serving as secretary.

On April 20, 1854, Mr. Bilyeu was married near Chatham, Ill., to Polly Workman, born March 31, 1870, daughter of John and Caroline Workman. Their children are as follows: Alfred Ross, Richard, Joseph, Jay, Leah, Benjamin, Willie and Rosy. The last named was accidentally shot when eight years old. Mr. Bilyeu is a wholesome, generous man whose liberality to those less fortunate than himself has won him many warm supporters.

BILYEY, Peter.—Springfield, as the Capital City, attracts many of the men who have ceased their active labors, for there they find many advantages not offered elsewhere. Not only is this true of those already residents of Sangamon County, but many come from other localities and, locating in the city, add to its prosperity and well-being. Among the honored retired farmers of that city is Peter Bilyeu, who for many years was an important factor in the agricultural life of Christian County. He was born in Sangamon County, May 15, 1832, a son of John H. and Elizabeth (Workman) Bilyeu, both natives of Kentucky, he born November 10, 1803, and she in November, 1810. The father was a farmer and blacksmith, who settled in Loami Township, Sangamon County, early in its history, but when Peter Bilyeu was only a mouth old, in June, 1832, he moved to Missouri. However, he came back to Illinois, in 1838, and, in 1841, to Sangamon County. This remained his home until May 15, 1867, when he went to Christian County. During one term, he served as County Commissioner.

Peter Bilyeu looks back on the days spent in the primitive log cabin school-house in Christian County, as being among the happiest of his life. The furnishings were plain, there were puncheon floors, slat seats, and none of the books of today, but the pupils worked hard and learned much. His childhood was passed on his father's farm, and he grew to manhood there, eventually branching out for himself and securing a farm, which he developed. He still owns 400 acres of rich farming land in Christian County. On February 8, 1900, Mr. Bilyeu retired, coming to Springfield, which is now his home. While residing in Christian County he served as School Director, being elected on the Democratic ticket. His religious connections are with the Christian Church, which he joined in 1890.

On October 2, 1856, Mr. Bilyeu was married to Elizabeth Workman, whose parents had moved to Christian County in 1840 and made that county their home until their deaths in advanced years. Mrs. Bilyeu died, having had fourteen children, nine of whom are now deceased. During his long and useful life Mr. Bilyeu has made many warm personal friends. He has always endeavored to do what he believed his duty and is now enjoying the results of the exercise of his many virtues.

BIRD, Lewis Elmer.—The Methodist preachers bore an important part in the development of Illinois, as they did in other States. These pioneer clergymen rode on horseback to visit their various charges, never complaining at the rough life or scanty pay, glad to labor for the Master. The name of Bird is associated with work of this class in Sangamon County, many tenderly remembering the preacher of that name who worked among them for their good. A grandson of his, Lewis Elmer Bird, is now one of the progressive and successful young farmers of Mechanicsburg Township. He was born in this township, January 19, 1876, being a son of Jacob Fullenwider and Anna Elizabeth (Hughes) Bird. Richard Bird, was born November 19, 1804, and began preaching as a clergymen of the Methodist Church in 1827, remaining in Kentucky until 1855, when he came to Sangamon County. He joined the Illinois Conference, and was assigned to various charges. Near the village of Mechanicsburg, he entered government land, the greater part of which was covered with timber. His death occurred in 1882. In 1832, he married Lucinda N. Fullenwider. The grandfather on the other side of the house, Daniel Hughes, lived in Ohio for some years, then came to Illinois about 1850, settling in Adams County, near Quincy, where he farmed until his death in 1891. His widow survived him until 1903.

Jacob Fulenwider Bird was born in Mechanicsburg, while his wife was born in Butler County, Ohio, and they were married in Pekson, Adams County, Ill. Returning to Sangamon County, the young couple settled on the land his father had entered from the government. This land Mr. Bird devoted to general farming and stock raising. Adding to his property, Mr. Bird finally owned about 800 acres, a portion of which lay in Cooper Township. A staunch Republican, he become active in politics, serving his township as Assessor and Supervisor. His death occurred November 18, 1904, his widow surviving and making her home with her son, Lewis. There were two children, Mr. Bird and Mary Frances, now Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy of Chicago.

With the exception of a year, from 1893 to 1894, which was spent in Mechanicsburg, Mr. Bird has lived on the home place all his life. Since the death of his father, he has had control of the large property left to his estate, but rents all of it except 250 acres, which he is now operating. This farm he devotes to corn and small grain. Mr. Bird was married September 12, 1866, to Nenida Shumway, born in Taylorville, Ill., daughter of John N. C. and Lillie (Rothchild) Shumway, natives of Illinois and Ohio, respectively. The paternal grandparents of Mrs. Bird, Dwight and Emily R. A. (Roundtree) Shumway, were of Hillsboro, Ill. Dwight Shumway was a son of Perez and Sarah Rogers (Dwight) Shumway, he born in Massachusetts, July 29, 1723, died September, 1805, being a son of Asa, married in 1764 Eunice Bardwell, born in 1744, died in 1811. On the maternal side Mrs. Bird is the granddaughter of Lewis and Emma (Anthony) Rothchild, natives of Germany and Ohio, respectively. Mr. and Mrs. Bird have one son,—Shumway Jacob, born November 30, 1867.

Mr. Bird is a Republican, and has served as Township Assessor with satisfaction to his constituents, and credit to himself. Fraternally, he belongs to the order of Elks, No. 158 of Springfield, and the Modern Woodmen of America of Mechanicsburg. In religious belief, he is a Methodist and belongs to that church in Mechanicsburg. He employs the latest methods and machinery in his farming, and his success goes to prove that scientific farming is the kind that pays the best in the long run. Belonging to a very prominent family, Mr. Bird is maintaining its prestige and sustaining the reputation of his people for honorable dealing.

BIRNBAUM, John.—Every branch of industrial activity finds expression in the business life of Springfield, and the men who are engaged in maintaining the present high standard of excellence for which the city is noted, are well fitted for their work. One of the men who have been engaged in their present lines of business all their lives, having grown up in it, and one deserving of special mention, is the veteran cigar manufacturer, John Birnbaum. He was born in La Porte, Ind., September 25, 1857, being a son of John and Elizabeth (Miet) Birnbauin, who came to Indiana by way of Germany and Gratz, Austria, at the time of their emigration from Gratz, Austria, their native place. The father had been a shoemaker before coming to America.

The family moved to Springfield when John Birnbaum was a lad, and he attended the schools there, at the same time learning the cigar-making trade. He was but seventeen years of age when he began working at it, and he has continued makling cigars ever since, now having a factory of his own. However, although he has employees, he works in the factory himself and personally superindents everything, which insures the excellence of his product. Among his specialties are Leonce and Lone Jack, both of which are deservedly popular with smokers. His shop is clean and sanitary, and he takes great pride in turning out only the best of goods.

A strong Republican, Mr. Birnbaum has been called upon to represent his party in the City Council from the Third Ward, He belongs to Teuton Lodge No. 158, I. O. O. F., Springfield; Capital Camp No. 333, Modern Woodmen of America, and the Cigarmakers' Union.

On October 10, 1882, Mr. Birnbaum was married to Anna Hockenjos. Her father, who was a farmer, is dead, but her mother survives. Mr. and Mrs. Birnbaum have two children: Blanche Elizabeth, born March 3, 1887; and Raymond J., July 19, 1888. Mr. Birnbaum owns his factor as well as his home at 700 North First Street, where he and his wife welcome their many friends with cordial hospitality. He is a good business man, always giving a square deal to his customers, and never taking advantage of anyone. He inherits from his parents the sturdy virtues of the Austrian race, which have been grafted upon those of his own land, and in consequence he enjoys the universal respect and confidence of all with whom he is brought into contact.

BISCH, Charles T.—Probably there is no man better known in the Masonic Fraternity the State over, than Charles T. Bisch, of Springfield, whose devotion to the order, his zeal in furthering its work and his knowledge of its ceremonies and benefits make his services especially valuable in connection with his order. He is recognized as a man of high purpose, thoroughly imbued with the majesty and significance of the ritual, and earnest in his endeavor to extend the influence of the order in all its degrees. There is scarcely any honor that can be accorded a Mason that has not been, or could not be, his, yet he is just as much interested in the work of the Blue Lodge as that of the Commandery. He enjoys in a high degree the respect of his brother Masons, who know and appreciate what he has been and is to Masonry. He is well known, however, outside of fraternal circles, for he has spent his life in Springfield, and from boyhood has employed his time in advancing his interests, broadening his mind, and assisting in the development of the city. Merchant and capitalist, his various business interests have led gradually to his present work and he is now perhaps the most efficient and capable funeral director in his part of Illinois. Born in Springfield, July 28, 1800, he comes of good German stock on the paternal side, his father, Philip Bisch, having been born in Lorlarne, Germany, September 24, 1825. In 1852 Philip Bisch came to America, locating in what was then the village of Chicago, in 1853. There he met and married, February 20, 1855, Isabelle French, born near Buffalo, N. Y., March 14, 1839. For a year succeeding their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Bisch resided in Chicago, then went to Kansas City, but believing it was too far west, then came back to Illinois, and settled in Springfield in 1856, that city continuing to be their home. The father established himself in a furniture business, becoming a prosperous merchant, a much-esteemed citizen. His death occurred January 10, 1880, but his widow survives, still making her home in Springfield. Seven children were born to this couple, six of whom are living, and of them all Charles T. is the eldest. Philip Bisch was one of those sturdy, upright men, whose desire was to do his full duty and live according to the teachings of the Lutheran Church, of which he was a consistent member.

Charles T. Bisch grew up in Springfield as a happy, healthy, normal lad, attending school and forming and enjoying friendships with his mates. Like a sensible man, his father had him learn cabinet-making, and this has influenced his business life, for all his operations have been along lines connected with this trade. After a three years' apprenticeship, in 1875, he accepted a clerkship with a furniture firm, and within two years became so efficient that he was made its manager. In 1880 he, with his father and brother, formed a partnership for the purpose of handling furniture, but at the death of the father Mr. Bisch purchased all the interests and continued the business alone, until 1903, when he sold to engage almost immediately in a carpet business. Until 1901 he remained in the latter line, but selling out, turned his attention to undertaking and has found employment in this work for his abilities and sympathetic capabilities. Not only must a man have training and experience, to be a good funeral director, but he must be born with that comprehension and appreciation of the sufferings of others that allow him to sympathize and express his sorrow so as not to intrude upon the grief of the afflicted.

Mr. Bisch belongs to Springfield Lodge No. 4, A. F. & A. M.; Peoria Consistory S. P. R. S.; Thirty-second degree; Mohammed Temple of Mystic Shrine; Lalla Rookh Chapter, No. 218, Eastern Star; Princess of Jerusalem White Shrine Sangamou Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F.; Prairie State Encampment, No. 16; Lilla Lodge No. 63, S. of R.; Pawtee Tribe No. 66, I. O. R. M.; Illini Council No. 6, D. of P.; Loft No. 66½ Haymakers; Capitol Lodge No. 14, K. of P.; Tekoa Temple No. 99, Pythian Sisters; Medina Temple, No. 99, D. O. K. K.; Springfield Lodge No. 158, B. P. O. E.; Laurel Council No. 299, R. A.; Prosperity Camp No. 1418, M. W. A.; Capitol District Court No. 20, C. of H. He has served officially in several lodges, and in 1898 was elected Great Sachem of Illinois by the Great Council of Illinois Improved Order of Red Men, and has served the order as Great Representative to the Great Council of the United States for ten years. In addition to these various fraternal connections, Mr. Bisch has found time to be active in the Y. M. C. A., of which he has been a member for thirty years, serving at one time as its Treasurer, and is now Vice-President and Director. He is an independent Republican. Since 1875 he has been a member of Grace Lutheran Church.

On October 28, 1884, Mr. Bisch was married in Springfield to Miss Augusta McCaula, born in Springfield, May 22, 1865, whose parents were natives of Pennsylvania. Mr. McCaula served during the Civil War, but died at its close in 1865. His widow survived him until 1907, when she too passed away. One son, Harold P. Bisch, was born August 14, 1885, in the city of Springfield. In 1906, when the son attained his majority, his father celebrated the event by taking him into full partnership, and now has the assistance of this promising young man in all his operations.

All his life Mr. Bisch has been interested in traveling and he and Mrs. Bisch have been in every State and Territory of the Union. In addition he has traveled extensively in Cuba and Canada, and he and his wife are contemplating a tour of the world in the near future. It is only justice to add that there is not a transaction in his life of which he feels ashamed, nor any that he would wish to live over because of neglect of duty or failure to give just due to others. His record is clean, his honor unsullied, and among his fellow citizens, his name stands for what is best and true.

BISELLE, William H. (Vol. I, p. 48.)

BLACK, Frank P., for several years past a resident of Springfield, was born in Decatur, Ill., August 30, 1854, and is a son of John Henry and Elizabeth (McDonald) Black, the former now deceased and the latter a resident of Decatur. Both were born in Ireland, and were brought to the United States by their parents, in early life. For over thirty-five years John H. Black was engaged in mercantile business in Decatur, being a shoe dealer. He and his wife became the parents of five sons and one daughter, namely: Frank P., whose name stands at the head of this sketch; E. J., who is in the employ of The S. J. Clarke Publishing Company; John G., an engineer employed on the Terminal Railroad, who lives in St. Louis, Mo.; Louis W., manager of the Imperial Laundry Company, at Albuquerque, New Mexico; Haubert, a mechanical draughtsman and civil engineer, living at Saginaw, Mich.; Miss Marie, living with her mother in the old home at Decatur.

Mr. Black received his early education in Catholic parochial schools and in the public and high schools of Decatur. He attended Decatur Business College for a time and during the years 1882-83 was a student at Notre Dame University, where he won honors in elocution, artistic penmanship, drawing and athletics. The first work in which he was engaged was carrying morning and evening papers, and selling Chicago and St. Louis papers on Saturdays, and later he became clerk in a furniture store. In 1884 he entered the employ of W. P. Busher & Company, shoe dealers, of firm whose father was a member. The partnership was dissolved in 1885 and Frank P. Black entered into partnership with his father in the same business, in Decatur. Although a liberal patronage was extended to the company, a chain of unfavorable circumstances caused their dissolution in 1887. Mr. Black was employed for a time as reporter and city editor of various local papers, and then he established in his home town, a Catholic newspaper, entitled "The Catholic Eye." He was compelled to discontinue this publication in 1888, however, on account of lack of capital. He next established a produce and vegetable business using the name Black & Green Grocery, but disposed of his interest in 1889 and accepted a position as traveling salesman for a Boston shoe house, a line for which he was well fitted by training and experience.

In 1891 Mr. Black took up the business of advertising, soliciting contracts to furnish various kinds of special advertising for Ringling Brothers, Barnum & Bailey, and Forepaugh, in the show business, and later contracted to furnish special programs for race meets. In the latter line he established an enviable reputation, his programs being novel and attractive, showing the colors worn by the various drivers or jockeys, the numbers, the names of the horses, and giving other interesting and valuable information. He furnished them for race meets in nearly every large city in the United States, Canada, and Mexico. He was also employed at times as Clerk of the race course and Starting Judge. His services were in great demand, not only in America, but he received offers of positions in England, Australia and France, to furnish programs similar to the ones which had gained him such a wide reputation at home. While thus engaged he spent the winter months in Decatur and Springfield, devoting his time to newspaper and advertising work. In 1894 he gave up traveling to assume the management of the O. & M. Shoe Company's store in Decatur, and while thus employed a special representative of Paine's Pyrotechnical Display Company, of New York City, called upon him with an offer of a salary of three hundred dollars per month and expenses, to travel as their advertising representative, through Europe, but for the second time he refused an opportunity to go abroad, on account of home ties. While living in Decatur he was for some time manager of the Riverside Park Theater, and the Crown Roller Skating Pavilion. He was also interested in establishing trading stamp stores in various Illinois cities.

In 1896 Mr. Black removed with his family to Shelbyville, Ill., where he managed a shoe and gents' furnishing business for B. P. Dearing, holding this position until the death of his wife, after which he accepted a position of traveling salesman for the Hendricks Vance Shoe Company, of Indianapolis. Soon afterward, however, he turned his attention to advertising and special newspaper work, in which he had had considerable experience, and for which he had natural ability. He published several newspaper editions of the industrial and business interests of various cities, and in 1880 formed a partnership in the business of Mr. H. C. Hyer, which lasted one year, then both entered the employ of the Chicago Publishing Company, publishers of State and county historical works. Mr. Black remained with the firm until 1905, then entered the employ of the Munsell Publishing Company, of Chicago.

On October 27, 1886, at Shelbyville, Ill., was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Black and Mary Louise, daughter of Mathias and Mary Ann (Kinley) Dilley, who was born in Trenton, N. J., September 5, 1863. Her father was a native of New Jersey and her mother of Dublin, Ireland, and both are now deceased. Five children were born of this union: Francis, born June 26, 1887, married in 1912, was married in 1888, both deceased; Ethel M., born February 12, 1889, a stenographer and book-keeper in the employ of the Mitchell Drug Company, Springfield; Grace E., born January 1, 1891, wife of William McKinney, of Chicago; Ruth F., born September 18, 1892, a trimmer in the millinery department of the firm of Westenberger & Wetterer, of Springfield. The three last named were educated in the Ursuline and Sacred Heart academies in Springfield. The mother of these children died November 28, 1898.

Mr. Black was married (second) at St. Malachi's Catholic Church in Geneseo, Ill., to Miss Minnie Schaefer, born in Hampton, Ill., August 12, 1877, daughter of Adolph and Catherine (Dodd) Schaefer, both natives of Germany, who were married at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., when Mr. Schaefer was leader of the Fifth United States Infantry Band. This band accompanied President Grant when he made a tour of the country. Mr. Schaefer gave lessons on the flute to Gen. Nelson A. Miles, and is an accomplished musician. He is now in the employ of B. F. Bowen & Company, publishers of historical works. By his second marriage Mr.
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

Black has had four children: Catherine Leonora, born December 21, 1902; Mary Louise, August 9, 1904; Frances Pauline, December 9, 1906; Henrietta Margarettte, November 25, 1908.

Mr. Black served eight years as a member of Company H, Fifth Regiment Illinois National Guard, and saw active service in several strikes and riots. He and the other members of the family are identified with St. Agnes Catholic Church of Springfield, and in politics he is a Democrat in National and State politics, but in local elections favors the men and measures he thinks will best represent the interests of the people. He has never sought public office. He is possessed of more than ordinary ability as a salesman and solicitor and has been very successful along several lines of work in this capacity.

BLACK, George N.—Probably there is no one man in the history of Springfield and Sangamon County whose labor, influence and cooperation have been a stronger moving element in the business, political, intellectual and moral development, than the subject of this sketch. Mr. Black rose to prominence through the inherent force of his character, the exercise of his native talent and utilization of opportunities, and the high regard in which he was uniformly held comes through the fact that he was largely an ideal of American manhood. While he had controlled extensive and important business enterprises they were largely of the character that promote public progress as well as individual prosperity, and his efforts were directed along many lines in which the community has been the sole recipient of benefit. His connection with the public interests of the city were of a most practical and helpful character, for he aided in shaping the municipal policy and in promoting the educational, aesthetic and moral development of Springfield. His patriotic citizenship and interest in community affairs found manifestation in his zealous labors for improvements instituted through aldermanic measures, through his efforts in the upbuilding of the public library, and through the institutions of many trade interests affecting the material growth of this portion of the State.

Mr. Black was born in Berkshire County, Mass., March 15, 1833, a son of William M. and Persis (Fuller) Black. In the paternal line he was descended from good old Revolutionary stock. His grandfather, who came from Scotland to America in 1775, served for two years as a captain in the American Army and then as Clothier General of the State of New York, throughout the remaining period of the war. In the maternal line Mr. Black was a direct descendant of John Alden and Dr. Samuel Fuller, both of whom came to America in the Mayflower in 1620. Mr. Black's death occurred April 22, 1905, and the city lost one whom it had come to hold in the highest regard and esteem.

After attending the public schools Mr. Black acquired an academic education and at the age of fifteen years came West, locating in Vandalia, Ill., where he engaged in clerking for his brother in a general store for two years. In 1850 he came to Springfield and began his business career as a clerk in the dry goods house of Colonel John Williams, whom he served in that capacity for six years and then became a partner in the business, this relation being maintained for twenty-five years, during which time the enterprise proved a highly profitable one. In later years Mr. Black had been engaged in the promotion of various interests, and success in a marked degree always attended his ventures. He was President of the Aetna Foundry and Machine Company and a former Director and Treasurer of the Springfield Furniture Company. He was also the sole owner of the business conducted under the name of the Barclay Coal and Mining Company, of Springfield, and a Director of the Sangamon Loan & Trust Company, of the Springfield Iron Company and of the Springfield Electric Light and Power Company, all of which are prosperous concerns and are important factors in the business and commercial life of the city.

No citizen took a more active interest in the development of Springfield or worked harder to secure its growth than did Mr. Black, who gave freely of his time and means for the establishment of manufactories and the building of railroads, upon which two enterprises the building and prosperity of a city always depend. He was instrumental in the building of the Pana, Springfield & Northwestern Railroad and was a Director and Secretary of the company for many years; this line is now part of the Illinois & Ohio Southwestern. He was one of the ten influential men who built the Gillman, Clinton & Springfield Railroad, now a branch of the Illinois Central, and served as a Director and Treasurer of the company. He was one of the prime movers toward securing contributions for the Springfield & Northwestern Railroad, contributing most generously himself, and continued to operate the road as Receiver and General Manager until 1880, when it passed into the hands of the Wabash Railroad Company. He was one of the promoters and a Director of the St. Louis, Peoria and Northern Railroad Company, and through the advancement of shipping facilities he contributed in no small measure to the material upbuilding of Springfield and to the development of natural resources of this portion of the State.

Mr. Black also took an active interest in city and State politics. He served as a member of the Municipal Council and for sixteen years was Receiver for the United States Land Office at Springfield, to which position he was appointed by President Lincoln in 1861. He was an active and an influential Republican and for eighteen years was Chairman of the Republican Central Committee, showing in his control of the political forces strong powers of management and thorough understanding of the conditions, and so controlling all factional elements as to produce harmonious results.

Mr. Black, being a lover of books, had one of the finest private libraries in Springfield, embracing many choice and rare volumes. He was Director of the City Public Library from its establishment and was later President of the same. He traveled extensively throughout America and the Old World and was a man of wide information, possessing that liberal culture which comes from travel and study. He was noted for his social qualities, as well as for his eminent business ability, and in religious faith he was a Presbyterian, having been a regular attendant at the First Presbyterian Church since he first came to this city.

On the 24th of October, 1859, Mr. Black was married to Miss Louisa I. Williams of Springfield, III., and they became the parents of four children, of whom two are living: John W. and Anna Louisa, the latter the wife of Dr. Sterlecker, of Springfield. The family has long maintained a foremost position in the leading social circles of the city. Mr. Black, however, numbered his friends in all walks of life, for he was ever quick to note true character worth, and upright manhood could always win his respect and friendship. On the other hand, there is no man in Springfield who did not honor and esteem George N. Black, for throughout his entire career he manifested those sterling traits—honor in business, patriotism in citizenship and fidelity in social and home relations—which in every land and clime command confidence and good will.

BLACK, Henry Clay (deceased).—Faithful performance of duty, earnest endeavor, kindness of heart and honesty of purpose were a few of the striking traits of character of the late Henry Clay Black, formerly a resident of No. 1117 South Third Street, Springfield. He was born in Bond County, Ill., January 22, 1848, a son of James R. and Sarah (White) Black. The education of Henry Clay Black was obtained in the country schools of Macon County, and he continued to reside with his parents for several years after leaving school, learning the blacksmith trade. In 1883 he came to Springfield, where he obtained employment with the Wabash Railroad Company, and continued with that concern until his death. His faithfulness and conscientiousness made him a valued employee and his loss was felt by the company and his fellow workers. He was an Odd Fellow, belonging to Dove Lodge No. 600, of Warrensburg. In political faith he was a Republican, but never cared for public honors. Early in life he joined the Presbyterian Church. The death of Mr. Black occurred May 22, 1886, and his remains were interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery, where his last resting place is marked by a beautiful monument, put up by his sorrowing family.

The marriage of Mr. Black occurred in Macon County, Ill., September 16, 1877, when he was united with Ellen Cline, born September 21, 1841, in Montgomery County, Ill., daughter of Reuben and Sarah Cline. By a former marriage Mrs. Black had one child, Cora, born in Litchfield, Ill., May 18, 1865, who married Frank Underwood, an engineer in the employ of the Wabash Railroad Company. Mr. Underwood came from Van Wert County, Ohio. Mrs. Underwood died, leaving two children: Frank, who died in 1893, and Kern who lives with his grandmother. Mrs. Black is a charming lady, beloved by her family. She has known much trouble but bears it with Christian fortitude and tries to forget her own sorrow in ministering to others.

BLACK, John Williams.—The Black family has been prominently identified with the business interests of Springfield and Sangamon County, Ill., for more than fifty years, and has contributed its share to the welfare and development of the community during that time. John Williams Black, who is a native of Springfield, born May 19, 1862, has organized several successful business enterprises and has also been active in public affairs in the city. He is a son of George Nelson and Louisa Ies (Williams) Black, the former born in Lee, Mass., March 15, 1833, and the latter born in Springfield, Ill., December 22, 1840. The Black family is of Scotch and the Williams family of Welsh descent, and Mr. Black, subject of this sketch, inherits to a marked degree the chief characteristics of the two races, whose sons have possessed the sterling qualities of mind and morals that have been of such benefit to the communities in which they have lived.

George Nelson Black came West at the age of fourteen years and resided in Vandalia one year (in 1847-48), then moved to Springfield, Ill., where he resided until his death, April 22, 1908. He not only possessed the perseverance and fortitude of his Scotch ancestors, but had also inherited the energy and ambition of his New England forebears, and was always loyal both to the city of his birth and the city of his adoption, having the welfare and interests of both always at heart. He became a merchant, banker and capitalist. In 1850 he formed a partnership with his father-in-law, Colonel John Williams, the latter of whom had bought out his brother-in-law, Elijah Iles, who was one of the first purchasers of land in Springfield, to which city he came in 1821, being the first merchant to locate there. The mother of George Nelson Black, whose maiden name was Persis Fuller, was a descendant of John Alden, and his grandfather, Captain James Black, served in the Revolution and was afterward clothier or Quarter Master General of the State of New.
York. John Black an uncle of George N. Black, served for years as Consul-General to Mexico.

The childhood of John Williams Black was passed in the old family homestead on South Second Street, Springfield, where he lived until 1877, then went West with Frank Stuart, son of Maj. John T. Stuart, and spent one year as cowboy on a ranch, twenty miles south of Denver, Colo., where he went through one round-up before he was fifteen years of age. The outdoor life was of great benefit to him, developing not only his physical but his mental qualities. He received his early education in the schools of Springfield, spent one year at Denver Collegiate Institute, of Denver, Col., and three years at Shattuck School at Faribault, Minn., where he graduated from the English course in 1881, receiving second honors. He received three years' military training at this school and graduated as a First Lieutenant. He spent eight years of service in the Illinois National Guard, rising to rank of Captain and Adjutant of the Fifth Infantry and serving ten months in the Third United States Volunteer Engineers, on detached service as aide to Major General James H. Wilson in Porto Rico and Cuba. General Wilson was in command of the middle division, the only one to get into action, first at Coamo later at Albuñol Pass, along the famous military road that was built by the Spaniards from Ponce on the south to San Juan on the north, about fifty miles in length. Mr. Black was in Porto Rico during the months of July, August and September, 1888, and served with credit to himself and his division.

Upon leaving school Mr. Black began his business career as Collector in the Ridgely National Bank, of Springfield, where he remained five years and was promoted to the position of Teller. In 1886 he left this position to join his father and sister, who were traveling abroad, and he spent five months with them, in France, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Belgium Holland, England, Scotland and Ireland. After his return to Springfield Mr. Black engaged in coal mining at Chatham, Ill., and later organized the Sangamon Paper Company, which engaged in the manufacture of straw paper at Riverton, Ill. Later the company sold its interests to the Columbia Straw Paper Company. In 1893 Mr. Black with James L. Cook and Irving Barker, organized the Barker Mine Car & Foundry Company, which in 1898 consolidated with the Actna Foundry & Machine Company, of which he was manager until he closed out the business in 1908 on the death of his father, since which time he has devoted his time to his real estate interests. Mr. Black has been most successful in a financial way and has forwarded the interests of every enterprise with which he was connected, with energy and ability.

Mr. Black is a Republican in politics and has been active in the party's interests. He was elected a member of the City Council of Springfield under Mayor Lawrence's administration, serving one term. He was twice a candidate before the primaries for the office of Mayor, being once defeated and the second time withdrew his name in the interest of party harmony. He is a member of the Governor's Guard Veteran Corps, the Sons of the American Revolution, Modern Woodmen of America and the Illini Country Club. He belongs to the Episcopal Church, having joined that body at Shattuck School, in 1879, under Bishop Whipple, of Minnesota. He is unmarried. Mr. Black is very fond of all outdoor sports but is especially partial to hunting and horse-back riding and motoring. He takes great interest in historical reading, as well as books dealing with adventure and military history. He takes a pardonable pride in the deeds and character of his ancestors, both in the State of Illinois and in the early history of the country. He is a man of liberal views on all subjects, having had his outlook upon life broadened through travel and experience.

Mr. Black still resides at the old homestead where he resided with his mother until her death in December 25, 1890, and he and his sister, Mrs. George F. Schiller (Louise Black), are the only surviving members of the family.

BLAIR, Francis Grant, State Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of Illinois, and residing in the city of Springfield, was born in Nashville, Ill., October 30, 1864, the son of William and Mary Jane (Tray), Mr. Blair spent most of his early life in Jefferson County. Here he received his preparatory education in the country schools and the Mt. Vernon High School, from 1884 to 1886 was a teacher in the country schools of that county, and for three years (1886-89) Principal of schools at Malden, Bureau County. He entered the Illinois State Normal University, graduating therein in 1892, after which he resumed teaching, serving as Superintendent of Schools at Leroy, McLean County, from 1892-95, also filling out an unexpired term at Decatur, Ill. In 1897 he took the degree of B. S. at Swarthmore College, Pa., when he became Principal of the Franklin School at Buffalo, N. Y., remaining until 1899. About this time he was complimented by the offer of a fellowship in Columbia University, but the Eastern Illinois State Normal School of Charleston being about to open, he accepted the position of Superintendent of the Training Department of this institution, remaining there for the next seven years.

The position occupied by Mr. Blair from 1890, in connection with the Eastern State Normal School, extended his acquaintance and gave him a wide reputation as a practical educator throughout the State, thus leading to his nomination for State Superintendent of Public Instruction on the Republican ticket, in 1906, as successor to the late Alfred Bayless, his election in November of that year by a plurality of 147,584 over the Democratic candidate, and a majority over all his opponents of more than 60,000, is evidence of his personal popularity. In 1910, he was a candidate for reelection and was again successful by a plurality of nearly 60,000.

Mr. Blair occupies an ex-officio position in connection with various State Boards, including that of Ex-officio Secretary of the State Board of Education, Ex-officio Trustee of the University of Illinois and of the several State Normal Schools, of the Lincoln Monument and Lincoln Homestead, and as Commissioner of the State Library. He has also been prominently identified with various other educational and scientific organizations in this and other States, is a member of the National Society for Scientific Study and the State Teachers' Association, has been frequently called upon to deliver addresses before State Teachers' Associations and is author of a monograph of interest on "Pedagogy." He was married at Leroy, Ill., in 1858, to Miss Lillian Cayton, and his home is at 629 South Second Street, Springfield.

Mr. Blair has sustained a high rank in his profession as a practical educator and as an executive officer since his promotion to the position which he has occupied for the past six years. Thoroughly devoted to his official duties, he is doing much to maintain the reputation established for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction by Dr. Newton Bateman in the fourteen years of his public service in the early part of the last half-century.

BLESER, Jacob. — Through the inventive genius of a few, millions are benefitted. While the majority are content to plod along, there are those who are constantly working to better existing conditions, whose names go down through the ages as the benefactors of mankind. Jacob Bleser, of Springfield, has already revolutionized methods in certain lines of manufacture and has placed upon the market more than one invention which will preserve his name for posterity. He was born September 7, 1868, in Germany, a son of Jacob and Johanna (Augenstein) Bleser, the former a mechanical engineer, from whom Jacob Jr. inherited his love of mechanics. In 1884 the father brought the family to New York City, and from there they came to Springfield. A few years later, however, he died there, but his widow survives. Their children were as follows: Jacob, Katie; Mary, deceased, was a Franciscan Sister; Joseph Peter, an ordained priest, who died in Memphis, Tenn., possessed great musical genius; John, a Franciscan Father, now stationed in China; and Margaret, deceased.

Jacob Bleser Jr. was in his seventeenth year when he came to Springfield with his parents, and had attended school in Germany until the time of the family migration. Upon coming to Springfield, he obtained employment in the molders' shop of the Wabash Railroad. His father dying, Jacob was forced to take the support of his mother and the younger children upon his shoulders, and in order to do this began working for the Illinois Watch Company. So frugal and industrious was he that before long he had bought a home, in which he established his mother. In 1888, believing he could do better, he went to Chicago, engaging with the Western Electric Company. During the following four years he remained with this and other concerns of the Illinois metropolis, then returned to Springfield and opened a little book store, at the same time manufacturing artificial flowers. At first he was located at No. 911 Capitol Avenue, but later removed to No. 84 Monroe Street, and still later selected his present location at No. 823 East Adams Street. There he carries on a general machinist business, making models and dies. Being a born inventor, he is constantly working to improve devices on the market, and among other things has patented the J. Bleser's Miner's Calcium Carbide Cap Lamp, and the Precision Bench Lathes, Nos. 4 and 5.

In June, 1897, Mr. Bleser was married to Lena Kraimp, of Springfield, daughter of the late Nicholas Kraimp. They have five children: Joseph, Rosa, Christine, Franciscus and John.

Mr. Bleser is a member of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church. In politics he is a staunch Democrat and supports the candidates of his party with loyal devotion. Coming to a new country when but seventeen years old, and being early saddled with the care of his father's family, Mr. Bleser has made wonderful progress and deserves great credit for what he has accomplished. He assisted in educating two brothers for the priesthood and helped the others to fit themselves for useful vocations. His family life is a happy one, and in business and church affairs he proves himself true to the faith in which he was reared.

BODE, Franz, a retired merchant of Springfield, was born November 18, 1845, in the Province of Hanover, Germany, and has all the sturdy good qualities of his countrymen. His grandfather, Frederick Bode, was a native of Gelliehausen, Kingdom of Hanover, being the village schoolmaster. His grandmother bore the maiden name of Schomer. They both died in Germany, the grandfather when his son, Frederick was but six years old, in 1808.

Frederick Bode, father of Franz, was born in Gelliehausen, February 11, 1802. He was educated at the University of Gottingen for the Lutheran ministry, his first pastorate being at Eboldshausen, where on December 11, 1839, he was ordained. He held the following charges from 1830 to 1850 at Eboldshausen and from 1850 to the time of his death, March 14th, 1864, at Diidorde at which latter place he was buried on the 17th of March, 1864.

Franz Bode's mother's maiden name was Niemann. He was educated by his father until he was ten years old, when he entered the high school at Osterode, near the Harz Mountains, and there finished his education in 1850. Following this he obtained employment as a clerk in a hardware store at Einbeck, remaining there for four years. He then became traveling salesman for a hardware and lamp manufacturing company, at Magdeburg. At the end of two years he went to Berlin and for a year made that his headquarters, traveling over northern Germany. He then went to Stettin, where he clerked in a hardware house for one year. His next and last place of residence in Germany was the city of Hanover. In June, 1872, he went from Hanover to London, England, where he remained with a cousin, Bernard Ehlers, now deceased, for a short time. Finding it difficult to secure employment, as he did not speak English, he left London via Liverpool, on the steamship "City of Antwerp," for the United States, arriving in New York City, July 3, 1872. Having some means, he spent a few weeks with another cousin, Albert Ehlers of Newark, N. Y., but not being favorably impressed with Newark he came to Springfield, arriving here on the 22d of July, 1872. After some difficulty he found employment with Dr. Lord. At the end of three months he was able to speak English well enough so that he was offered a clerkship at the Western Hotel, which he accepted. Following this he went to Milwaukee and clerked in the Republicau Hotel for a time, resigning to go to Denver. However, when he reached Chicago, he decided to see his Springfield friends before going west. Discovering that the Western Hotel was for rent, he and Henry Speckman rented it and operated the same for five years. He next embarked as head salesman in a furniture business and later opened an undertaking business under the firm name of Bode & Homberger, continuing until 1893 when he sold his interest in the business to his partner and retired.

Mr. Bode is a member of the Royal Arcanum and Loyal Americans. The St. John's German Lutheran Church is his religious home. A democrat, he served as a member of the County Supervisors' Board from 1800 to 1893. On September 15, 1875, he married Caroline Pierik, of this city. She died, 1890, leaving one son, Frank H. Bode, now president of the wholesale grocery firm, Bode, Taylor & Company, of Springfield. In 1801, Mr. Bode married Annie M. Volk, of Springfield. Two children have been born of this marriage.

Bolte, Henry L., Chief of the Fire Department of Springfield, Ill., is one of the most efficient officials of all made by hand in these days and according to his belief were better made than those turned out by machinery. Bolte survives, living at No. 115 East Jefferson street, Springfield, in the house where her son was born.

After attending the German Lutheran School, Mr. Bolte went to the Trapp public school, and when his father died he began working. He had learned the trade of fresco painter under his father and was employed by the new firm of Zimmerman & Armstrong. Mr. Zimmerman died and Mr. Schaumbucker succeeded him. After nine years of work at this trade Mr. Bolte went to Germany for a year, then, returning home, spent six years in the employ of M. Benjamin, a clothier. For the following two years he traveled for the Springfield Supply Company, and then for three years was in Chicago. Returning to Springfield, he was in business here for six years, and on May 1, 1900, was appointed to his present office. Some of the striking improvements and innovations in the city fire department have been inaugurated by Chief Bolte.

Mr. Bolte is a Democrat and prior to his appointment served as Alderman for the Third Ward for one term. He was also chief usher at the Chatterton Opera House for sixteen years, and is one of the best known men of the city. His fraternal relations are many and pleasant, he belonging to the Fraternal Order of Eagles and Knights of Pythias, and he is also a member of the Theatrical Mechanical Association and the Stage Hands' Union. In religious belief he is a German Lutheran and belongs to the church in which he was baptized and confirmed.

Mr. Bolte was married in Chicago, April 13, 1902, to Estella Manler, of Davenport, Iowa, born near Unionville, Mo., November 6, 1878, daughter of Perry and Anna (Brown) Manler. No issue. It is such men as Mr. Bolte who are making Springfield what it is today—a city of whom every loyal son of Illinois feels proud. Progressive, conscientious and capable, Mr. Bolte is giving Springfield a service that cannot be over-estimated and putting his department into magnificent shape to handle any emergency that may arise, quickly and successfully.

BOOKER, John B., a retired farmer living in his comfortable home at 1724 South First Street, Springfield, Ill., is a highly respected citizen of that city, which has been his home about thirteen years. He was born in Orange County, N. C., December 5, 1830, son of John Brinkman and Phebe (Henshaw) Booker, the former a native of England and the latter of Ireland. The parents emigrated to America and located first in Virginia, but later moved to North Carolina. John Brinkman Booker was a soldier in the Revolution. Neither his parents nor his wife's came to America, but spent their lives in England and Ireland.

The childhood of John B. Booker, subject of this sketch, was spent on his father's farm in North Carolina, where he learned habits of industry. He cared very little about sports but was greatly interested in farming and was of great assistance to his father. In April, 1852, he enlisted in the Confederate Army, in Company F, Forty-fifth North Carolina Regiment, serving three years and three months. He enlisted at Hillsboro, Orange County, under Captain Scales. Mr. Booker participated in the Battles of Gettysburg, Bristol Road, Deep Gully (X. C.), Falling Water, Wilderness, Seven Days' Fight below Richmond, and many skirmishes. After the surrender of Lee at Appomattox Court House he went to Greensboro, N. C., to join Johnson's Army, remained with them until the surrender of Johnson and then returned home. During his service he was never taken prisoner but was wounded twice at Spottsylvania Court House, in the arm and shoulder. In the light of later events and his present convictions, he does not feel particularly proud of his record as a soldier, but though he fought in a cause that did not win and one that he no longer feels to have been a just one, he served as a brave soldier, fighting for what he believed to be the rights of his fellows, and he was in every way true to the flag for which he fought. However, he has since proved to be as true a citizen of the United States as is to be found today.

Soon after his marriage Mr. Booker emigrated to the State of Illinois, arriving at his destination September 15, 1871, and since that time he has been a resident of Sangamon County. He began farming, and carried on agricultural operations until 1898, then retired from active life and purchased his present comfortable home, where he has every convenience. He is highly esteemed by all who know him and is a man with malice toward no one, aiming to live at peace with others and in a manner which will leave no cloud on his character in reputation. He is reasonably proud in the fact that he never sued anyone or was sued, and that he was never intoxicated and never arrested. Whatever difficulties may have arisen between him and anyone else have always been settled amicably, and in this way Mr. Booker has been able to win and retain a large number of warm personal friends, who have accorded him their utmost trust and confidence. In political convictions he is a Prohibitionist and he is a member of the First Christian Church.

Mr. Booker was married in Orange County, N. C., in August, 1871, to Mrs. Carolina (Roberts) Stone member of a well known family of Rockingham County, N. C., daughter of Michael and Elizabeth (Wyn) Roberts, both natives of that State. Mrs. Booker was born in Rockingham County, N. C., November 26, 1838. Four children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Booker, namely: Eugene E., born December 15, 1872, farming near Barry, Ill.; Effie S., born January 14, 1875 is single and resides at home; Noah Oliver, born November 27, 1880 farming near Springfield; Charles Lewis, born February 15, 1883 is engaged in the cement manufacturing business. All were born in Sangamon County.
BOOTH, Amasa S.—In naming the representative citizens of any community, the biographer comes across many cases where the subject has risen from humble surroundings in his youth and achieved success in some chosen line, but he also finds that there are cases in many instances where the father has followed a certain business interest with success and the son has taken up the same line and brought himself to the front rank of business men. Amasa S. Booth, a retired capitalist of Springfield, Ill., is an example of the latter class of successful men. Born June 9, 1835, in Exeter, Me., he is a son of Albert and Hannah (Stevens) Booth, who were also natives of the Pine Tree State. Albert Booth was a wagon-maker by occupation and to enlarge the scope of his operations moved with his family to Illinois in 1840, settling on a farm north of Springfield in Sangamon County. Mr. Booth soon found success in his new field, and was there engaged in business until his retirement, which occurred a short time before his death, the latter event happening in Springfield in his sixtieth year. His wife also died in the Capital City, having reached the age of fifty-six years.

Amasa S. Booth was the fourth of his parents' eight children. He was reared a lad of five years when he accompanied the family on their journey to Illinois, and his youth was spent on the farm in Sangamon County, while he secured his education in the common schools. Early in life he began learning the trade of wagon-maker from his father, and the traits of industry, enterprise and activity from his mother, and all stood him in good stead in the battle of life. He established a wagon manufacturing plant of his own and this business he continued to carry on until his retirement in 1890. Mr. Booth's business operations were very successful and he proved himself a shrewd, capable business man by making wise investments in valuable city property, of which he owns considerable, and in purchasing farming land, he and his wife being owners at the present time of 2,300 acres of some of the best agricultural land in Sangamon County. He is known as a public-spirited citizen, one who is always foremost in joining any movements that have for their object the welfare of the city or county, and as a consequence he fills a high place in the esteem of his fellow citizens.

In 1862 Amasa S. Booth was united in marriage in Springfield to Miss Harriet Richardson, a native of England, and to this union there were born six children, namely: Mary E., John R., William D., Alexander, Amasa Jr., and Jacob. The family is well-known in Springfield's social circles.

BORLAND, Royal Sheldon, of Pleasant Plains, Sangamon county, Ill., now retired from active life, comes of old Pennsylvania stock and has done his full share towards the development and advancement of the community in which he has lived. He was born in Hardin County, Ohio, February 15, 1851, son of William H. and Sarah A. (Alfred) Borland, who were born and married in Indiana County, Pa., and became pioneers in Hardin County, Ohio. His father had to travel a blazed road to his new home and from that post he guided his six children to mill at Columbus. He built a puncheon-door log cabin on a 100-acre claim and cleared 110 acres. It was in this log house that the subject of this notice was born, one of eleven born in that home and one of the total of his parents' twelve children, eight of whom are living. All of them grew up and married and their parents lived to see them well settled in life. In 1867 Mr. Borland sold his farm and moved to Johnson County, Neb., where he bought a section of land, out of which he eventually gave each of his children a farm. Born in 1810, he was seventy-six in 1886, when he died and at that time was owner of about 800 acres of land in Johnson County, Neb. He and his good wife were devoted members of the Presbyterian Church in Ohio. In Nebraska, there having been no Presbyterian Church established at the time of their settlement, they joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which they were liberal supporters and most devout and faithful members. Their three sons and five daughters benefited by the best available educational advantages. Mrs. Borland passed away in 1872. Of their living children Hiram A. lives near the old Borland home in Hardin County, Ohio; Sarah Minerva, widow of Langfield Cook, lives at Bishop, Calif.; Daniel M., a farmer in Van Wert County, Ohio; John M., lives in Morrill, Neb.; Christopher, is farming near Portland, Ore.; Royal S., was next in order of birth; Melissa J., is married and lives in Nebraska; Amanda M., married Elmore Osburn and lives near Larue, Ohio. Those deceased: Maryanne became the wife of James Baker, and she and her husband have died, leaving four children; Alfred (of the Christian-Union Church), Hiram (a farmer), William and George Baker, all of whom live in Ohio, and the last named, George, a music dealer and musician, is leader of the Baker Band, of Marion, which has won in many contests with prominent bands in different parts of the country; James Borland was twice married—first to Liddia Kiser, of Hardin County, Ohio, then to Martha Bendict, and died in Kansas; Lawson G., married Maria Young and they both died in Marion County, Ohio, leaving four children; William W. Borland died in Johnson County, Neb., his first wife having been Deborah Sexton, of Ohio, and died after having borne him eight children, and his second wife, Anna Sexton, also bore him eight children.

Royal Sheldon Borland gained an education and began life as a farmer in Ohio. In 1867, when he was seventeen, he went with his parents to Johnson County, Neb. There he continued his studies with such good results that in 1870 he began to teach school, doing farm work in season. Thus he was employed until 1874, one year in Johnson County and four years in Gage County.

March 8, 1874, Mr. Borland married Miss Amy Phinney, born in Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, Ill., May 24, 1850, daughter of Warren and Caroline M. (Arnold) Phinney, natives respectively of Montpelier, Vt., and of Rhode Island, who came to Sangamon County in 1849. Mr. Phinney was a farmer and blacksmith at Yankeetown, near Pleasant Plains. He went overland to California in 1860 and met with success as a gold miner. He came back around the Horn three years later and located at Pleasant Plains, where his wife died, May 31, 1872, and he died at Carlinville, Ill., November 2, 1900. They are buried in the Baptist cemetery at Old Berlin. Of their nine children seven were born in Sangamon County. Their son Charles H. is a farmer living in retirement at McLeouth, Kan.; Ellen F., widow of William H. Armstrong, lives at Lawrence, Kan., and these and Mrs. Borland are the only survivors of the family. By a second marriage Mr. Phinney had a daughter, Minnie Maud, who is the wife of Shobeil Boatman of Carlinville, Ill., and a son, Truman W. Phinney, of Tacoma, Wash. The second Mrs. Phinney was Mrs. Elizabeth Gear. After the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Borland in March, 1874, they came back to Springfield and lived there till 1876, then moved to a farm near Pleasant Plains. They lived till February, 1877, when they located on the farm of Mrs. Borland’s father, in Cartwright township. There they remained till 1893, then bought a beautiful home at Pleasant Plains. In 1894 they occupied it, remaining till 1904, when they returned to Springfield, where they lived till 1907, when they returned to Pleasant Plains. Three children have been born to them two of whom have died. The other, Ethel Ellen, born December 18, 1889, married Herbert H. Moor in December, 1907, and lives in Springfield. Mr. Moor is a machinist.

Mr. and Mrs. Borland have long been active as members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and their names are identified with the Court of Honor. For fifteen years he has voted the Prohibition ticket, believing that by so doing he could best do his duty as a citizen. He is one of the successful men of his part of the county and his public spirit has made him useful to his fellow citizens in many ways.

BOTTORFF, Charles, who owns a small farm near Springfield, has been a resident of Sangamon County nearly fifty years and during that time has carried on farming in various localities within the county. Mr. Bottorff was born near Jeffersonville, Clark County, Ind., December 28, 1836, son of Morrison F. and Mary (Kincald) Bottorff, the former born in Kentucky. In 1815, and the latter in Clark County, in 1815. The Bottorff family originally came from Germany and the Kincald family came from Indiana. Morrison Bottorff moved from Indiana to Keokuk County, Iowa, in 1849, and remained there until his death, at the age of ninety-two years. He and his wife had five sons and three daughters, and five of these children survive.

The early education of Charles Bottorff was acquired in a log school-house in Clark County, and after accompanying his parents to Iowa he continued to attend school for a time. During his boyhood he worked on a farm in Indiana and later in Iowa, and in 1863 came to Sangamon County, where he has since resided. He has carried on farming at several different places, first locating near Salisbury. He now owns fifteen acres of valuable land, which he has cultivated for the past five years. He has been fairly successful in his operations and has worked hard all his life. He is an intelligent and enterprising business man and much interested in the public welfare and advancement.

Mr. Bottorff was married, in Keokuk County, Iowa, March 26, 1857, to Sarah Antle, who was born near Salisbury, Ill., August 9, 1840. Mr. Antle carried on farming some years in Sangamon County, moved to Keokuk County, Iowa, where he lived but a few years, and then returned to Sangamon County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He and his wife had twelve children, four of whom died in infancy and seven now survive. The Antle family came to Kentucky from Pennsylvania.

Eight children were born to Mr. Bottorff and his wife, seven sons and one daughter, and four children now survive, namely: Elliott A., a farmer living near Williamsville, Ill.; Sidney F., a farmer, lives with his father; John A., of Colorado, and Harry E., of Springfield. There are six grandchildren in the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Bottorff were both personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and have many pleasant memories of this great man. Mr. Bottorff is a Baptist in religious belief and politically is a Democrat. He is well-known in Sangamon County, which has been his home so long, and is accounted a representative citizen. He has many friends, who appreciate his sterling worth and genuine kindness, and take pleasure in his society. He has a pleasant home and is surrounded by comforts and conveniences.

BOWE, William Henry.—Among the younger men who hold office in Sangamon County, Ill., is William Henry Bowe, City Treasurer of Springfield. He was born in that city July 31, 1878, son of Patrick and Mary Agnes (Morris) Bowe, natives of Ireland. Patrick Bowe was born in Kells, County Kilkenny, Ireland, January 20, 1854. Mary Agnes Morris was born in County Roscommon, February 15, 1859. They were married in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Springfield, Ill., August 12, 1877.

William H. Bowe received his education at St. Joseph's Parochial School, Springfield High School and Springfield Business College. After leaving school he spent nine and one-half years in the employ of A. L. Hereford, Supreme Chancellor of the Court of Honor, and resigned this position to accept the Chief Clerkship of the County Treasurer's office, which post he assumed in November, 1906. Having been appointed Treasurer of the City of Springfield, he entered upon the duties of his present official position May 1, 1911.

BOWERS, Clark, a retired farmer residing in Riverton, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and a substantial, representative citizen. He was born in Clinton County, Ohio, February 16, 1830, son of Reuben and Loretta (Luddington) Bowers, the former born in Germany and the latter in Pennsylvania. The father came to America as a young man and settled in Clinton County, where he was engaged in farming many years. He moved to Logan County, Ill., where he carried on farming from 1857 until a year prior to his death, when he located in Tazewell County and engaged in farming there. He was a soldier in the Mexican War and was the father of six sons and five daughters, all of whom are deceased except Clark.

The education of Mr. Bowers was received in an old log schoolhouse in Logan County, and in boyhood he helped his father with the farm work, remaining at home until he was a young man, then learning the trade of shoemaker. However, most of his active life was spent in farming in Tazewell County. He removed to Sangamon County in 1880, but since about 1900 has lived retired from active life.

He is interested in the welfare of his community and is ready to espouse any worthy cause. He is a member of the Methodist Church and in politics is a Republican. He takes pride and pleasure in his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and has well earned the rest he enjoys. He has met with success in his operations and owns a pleasant home in Riverton.

Soon after the beginning of the Civil War Mr. Bowers enlisted in Company C, Sixteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, served one year, and was discharged at Memphis, Tenn., being sent back to Peoria (from where he had enlisted) on account of an injury he had sustained in service. He is affiliated with the local G. A. R. Post, and stands well with his comrades.

Mr. Baker married, in September, 1863, in Tazewell County, Ill., Miss Nancy Ellard, who was born in Clark County, Ill., where her father was an early settler and carried on farming until his death. Mrs. Bowers died in 1876, having borne three sons and two daughters, and four children are now living: Sarah, the oldest, married Jeff Green and lives in Newnan, where her husband is engaged in the livery business; Joseph, of Sherman, Ill.; Henry, of Riverton, in the employ of the Illinois Tracton System; Martin, also a resident of Riverton. There are twelve living grandchildren and three great-grandchildren in the family.

BOYLE, William (deceased).—No section of Illinois has rewarded its farmers more generously for their efforts than Sangamon County, for many men who have there labored to bring forth the fruits of the soil, have become wealthy, finally retiring from hard work. Land there has greatly increased in value since the days when an acre of it sold for a few dollars, but while the soil has enriched the farmers, to them are due the present values and the general prosperity of the agricultural class. Among those who for many years have been progressive farmers of this locality, must be numbered the late William Boyle. He was born in Ireland, July 12, 1843, a son of John and Mary (Gibbon) Boyle, natives of Ireland and farming people.

William Boyle attended school in Ireland, and learned to farm with his parents, whom he finally left to go to Scotland. From that country he came to America, locating in Springfield, which remained his home until he purchased land in Sangamon County. This he developed until he had one of the best farms in his part of the State. He eventually retired, moving to Springfield, where his death occurred October 11, 1908, at St. John's hospital. While a Democrat by preference, he did not desire public office. He belonged to Lodge No. 113, Modern Woodmen, of Springfield. A Catholic, he identified himself with the Church there, and was one of its most interested members.

On May 4, 1886, Mr. Boyle married, in Springfield, Hattie Swords, a native of Ireland. Mr. and Mrs. Boyle had children as follows: Mary, born June 13, 1857; Sarah married Charles Miner, of Springfield; Isabella, born January 20, 1858, and Ellen, born February 8, 1860. Mrs. Boyle resides at No. 3700 North Eighth Street, with her three unmarried daughters, and the four are charming ladies, who gather about them a delightful circle of friends. They are active in church work, and are highly regarded in the city.

BOYNTON, Ervin D., general farmer and stockman, whose business ability is universally recognized the county over, is one of the most representative men of Sangamon. He was born December 15, 1858, on Section 30, Cartwright Township, near his present home on Section 18 of the same township. His parents were Charles and Paulina (De Mary) Boynton. The father was born in Westfield, Vt., June 3, 1822, and when only eight years old lost his parents; so he made his home with an uncle, receiving only a district school education. When he reached his majority, Mr. Boynton left Vermont, coming direct to Springfield, where he spent but a short time, locating in Cartwright Township in 1843. Working by the month until he had saved some money, he bought a sawmill at Eieland, Ind., and when he purchased the work and bought three others, the last one being disposed of after he had hauled it to Mt. Pleasant, Ia. He then invested in 100 acres of land in Cartwright Township, paying $3 per acre for it, and embarked in the business of buying and selling cattle. When the cattle were ready for market, he drove them to St. Louis or to Eieland, N. Y. On September 8, 1850, he married, he and his wife commencing their housekeeping in a very primitive manner, but because of economy and good management, they soon became very prosperous. Mr. Boynton lived on this farm until his death, which occurred April 2, 1897. At this time he owned 1,000 acres of land. In addition to the 200 acres he had given each of his children. He was an active member and Deacon of the Baptist Church of Berlin. In politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican. Always bearing his full part in public matters, he was one of the representative older farmers of Sangamon County. His widow survives, making her home with Ervin D. Boynton and her daughter, Mrs. Warren, of Berlin. She is a most lovable lady, who has attained the age of eighty-three years, and is still very active in the Baptist Church. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Boynton, of whom two survive. Mr. Boynton, and Ella, wife of C. B. Warren, a banker of New Berlin. He is connected with the Warren-Boynton Bank of New Berlin, one of the strongest banking institutions of the county.

Ervin D. Boynton attended district school and Brown's Business College of Jacksonville, and then returned to the farm, where he assisted his father. On November 18, 1880, he married Kate L. Carrington, of Riverton, Iowa, born in New Berlin, November 27, 1850, daughter of Wesley and Cassie (Grant) Carrington, natives of Kentucky, whose families were early settlers of Illinois. Mrs. Boynton's grandfather was a cousin of General Grant. Mr. Carriage moved to Riverton, but later went to Missouri, where he died, but his widow survives, living with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Oder, of Oklahoma. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Boynton settled on their farm on Section 18, Cartwright Township, on which they have made many excellent improvements, developing it into one of the finest properties in the county. They have a beautiful home with all modern improvements, including hot and cold water, hot water heat and electric lights. The barns and other out-buildings are in like modern condition, and here they enjoy life surrounded by city conveniences. Eight children have been born to them: Lora, born October 3, 1881, married R. Garden, a contractor and builder of Arapahoe, Okla.; Delia, born December 30, 1884, married H. Clyde Irvin on December 8, 1909, he being a farmer near Scran-ton, Ia.; Charles S., born October 3, 1886, married Lela Zune of Pleasant Plains, daughter of Robert H. Zane, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Ben R., born October 1, 1888, taking a six years' course in the law department of Ann Arbor, Mich., a most brilliant student, possessing every requisite for a prosperous future; Edgar D., born December 14, 1890 at home; J. Farnam, born November 21, 1893; Ruben R., born October 30, 1896, and Rheena L., born May 16, 1899. The older children have been carefully educated and Mr. Boynton plans to pursue the same course with regard to the younger ones.

For many years Mr. Boynton has been actively engaged in feeding and shipping stock, his annual shipment being about 500 head of cattle, but recently he has been leaving much of the details to his sons. In his home was put the first telephone in this part of the county, he having helped to organize the Boynton Telephone Co., in 1901. The company started with only forty patrons, but now have about 1,000, and the service is as nearly perfect as it is possible for any to be. He was also one of the organizers of the Building and Loan Co. of Pleasant Plains, of which he was President for several years. The Warren and Boynton State Bank, of New Berlin, was another enterprise in which he has been largely interested, helping to organize it in 1897 and serving as its President. This bank does a general banking business and is a very reliable institution. C. B. Warren is Cashier. Mr. Boynton owns 1,000 acres of land, all in Cartwright Township, which is highly developed. He has always advocated improvements and cheerfully paid the large increase in his taxes resulting from their inauguration. For fifty-two years he has made his home in Cartwright Township and is very much attached to it. Fraternally he belongs to the Knights of Pythias, the Court of Honor, D. O. K.'s and the Modern Woodmen of America. Politically he is a staunch Republican, and was the first of his party to be elected Supervisor from his township. He held this office for four years but since then has declined public office. In 1881, he was elected School Director, made Clerk of the Board, and for twenty-nine years has continued to give his services to his district, advocating the payment of good wages, and the erection of substantial school houses. Mr. and Mrs. Boynton are members of the Pleasant Plains Baptist Church, and have many friends in it as they have all over the county.

BRADFORD, William Austin, Attorney-at-Law.

—A man versed in the laws of the country, as differentiated from the business man or politician, has always been a recognized power. He can always be depended upon to conserve the best and most permanent interests of the whole people, and without the practical judgment of such men, the efforts of the statesman and the industry of the business man and mechanic, would prove futile. The reason for this is not far to seek. The professional lawyer is never the creature of circumstances. The profession is open to talent and no definite prestige or success can be attained save by indomitable energy, perseverance, patience and strong mentality. All of these attributes are possessed by the successful attorneys of Sangamon County, and of them one who has attained an enviable preeminence is William Austin Bradford, of Springfield.

Mr. Bradford was born in Sangamon County, nine miles west of Springfield, August 16, 1875, a son of William Talbot and Grizella Ann (Parkinson) Bradford. The father was born in Sangamon County, near Bradford Station, on the farm he now owns, while his wife was born on the Parkinson farm in Curran Township, Sangamon County. For years William T. Bradford was a farmer, but he now resides at No. 131 Walnut Street, Springfield. Both the Bradford and Parkinson families were among the very earliest pioneers of the county and are associated with its early history, as reference to that part of this work devoted to the general records of the county will show. Bradford Station was named for James Bradford, grandfather of William Austin Bradford.

After a course at the district schools, William A. Bradford attended the Springfield High School, from which he was graduated, in the Class of 1894. Following this, he spent two years in the literary department of the Illinois Wesleyan University, at Bloomington. For the next three years he was engaged in taking a law course in the Northern Illinois College of Law, at Dixon, Ill., and when he was graduated from it in 1900, it was with the degree of LL.D. In August of the same year Mr. Bradford came to Springfield, where he opened a law office, continuing alone until December, when he formed a partnership with Henry A. Converse, now assistant District Attorney, and this association lasted until Mr. Bradford was appointed Master-in-Chancery in September, 1905. He was reappointed two years later, in 1907, and held that office until May 1, 1910, at which time he formed a partnership with Albert D. Stevens, under the firm name of Stevens & Bradford. This firm was dissolved in November, 1910, and Mr. Bradford is now practicing his profession alone. He is a strong Democrat in his political views, and is a power in his party.

On June 22, 1905, occurred the marriage, in Chicago, of Mr. Bradford and Clemence Crews, born at Mt. Vernon, Ill., a daughter of Hon. Seth F. Crews, an attorney of Chicago, and his wife, Helen Ridgway (Slocum) Crews, both of whom are now residing at Oak Park, Ill. Mrs. Bradford was one of five children born to her parents. Mr. Crews served in the General Assembly and has been very active in politics as a Republican. Mr. and Mrs. Bradford have two children, Helena Crews and Virginia Crews. Mr. Bradford belongs to the K. of P. No. 292, having passed all the chairs and served as Representative to the Grand Lodge. He also belongs to the D. O. K. K., of which he was Supreme Representative, to the Imperial Palace from Medinah Temple No. 99, at San Francisco, in 1902. In religious faith he is a Methodist and not only active in the church to which he belongs but has served two years as Superintendent of the Sunday School. The law has in Mr. Bradford a stern, inflexible exponent, although personally he is a man of deep sympathies and wide interests. Although in the very prime of life, Mr. Bradford can look back upon much that he has successfully accomplished, and his progress is the result of his painstaking efforts, coupled with native ability.

BRADSHAW, Elijah, a prominent and successful farmer of Ball Township, Sangamon County, was born in Pike County, Ill., July 18, 1830, and is a son of Jonas and Betsy (Sawyer) Bradshaw, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of Illinois. Jonas Bradshaw moved from Pike County to Logan County, in 1847, and his wife died in Pike County, about 1857. His father was a native of North Carolina and died in Richmond, Va., while Mrs. Bradshaw's father was a native of Illinois and died there.

After receiving his education in the subscription schools of Illinois, Elijah Bradshaw worked on the home farm until the death of his father and afterwards worked in a mill and in a cooper's shop, but later again turned his attention to farming. He moved from Pike County to Logan County and in 1847 located in Sangamon County, soon afterwards came to his present farm, where he owns 163 acres of excellent land. He has always worked hard and has brought his farm to a high state of cultivation. In 1871 he spent several months visiting in Texas, but otherwise has spent his entire life in his native State. He has a good standing in his community as a man of reliability and integrity and has many warm friends. He is a Republican in political principles, but generally votes for the man rather than the party. He is not connected with any church, but in his daily life endeavors to follow the Golden Rule and is a kind friend and neighbor. He has served for the past twelve years as School Director and is also serving as Road Commissioner. He is not affiliated with any fraternal organizations.

Mr. Bradshaw has been twice married, first, March 4, 1852, to Lila Shoup, who died in Sangamon County, in April, 1870, her children all having died in infancy. Mrs. Bradshaw was a daughter of Jacob and Sarah (Downing) Shoup, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Ohio, and both died in Sangamon County. Mr. Bradshaw married (second) Emily Shoup, a cousin of his first wife, December 3, 1874, and she died May 12, 1888. She was a daughter of James and Ellen Shoup, both natives of Ohio, the former of whom died in Logan County, III. Two children were born of this union: John, born in 1875, and George T., September 19, 1879. John was married, March 17, 1904, to Myra Newcomer, and they now live with his father. They have two children, Helen E., born March 29, 1906, and Marjorie, born May 17, 1910. George T. Bradshaw was married, in 1901, to Lillie Mayberry, and they live near Pawnee and have one child, Bernard W.

BRANSON, Edward R., formerly connected with various newspapers in Springfield, Ill., and now practicing law in that city, is respected by all who have the pleasure of knowing him, and stands high in social and professional circles. He was born in Petersburg, Ill., June 27, 1875, and is a son of Judge Nathaniel W. and Fannie D. (Regnier) Branson, the former born in Jacksonville, Ill., May 29, 1837, and the latter in Petersburg, October 29, 1837.

Nathaniel W. Branson graduated from Illinois College in 1857, studied law in his native city, with David A. Smith, and in January, 1860, was admitted to the Bar, entering upon the practice of his profession at Petersburg. In 1867 he was appointed Referee in Bankruptcy for the Springfield District, a position he held thirteen years. He was elected to the General Assembly in 1872 and re-elected in 1874; served as a Delegate from Illinois to the National Republican Convention in 1876, and for several years was a member of the Board of Trustees for the State Institution for the Blind at Jacksonville, part of the time as President of the Board. He became prominent in his profession and his ability and fitness for the positions of public trust to which he was elected were generally recognized. He was one of the most highly respected citizens of Petersburg and spent a large part of his life in that city. Mr. Branson died at Ottawa, Ill., February 27, 1907, and his demise was widely mourned. He had served ten years as a member of the Illinois State Board of Law Examiners, being for some time its Secretary and Treasurer.

Edward R. Branson was educated at Illinois College and the University of Chicago. He was one of six children, four of whom died in infancy. He early showed a taste and fitness for newspaper work, and was at different times connected with the "Illinois State Journal," "Illinois State Register," and "Springfield News" of Springfield, and for one year owned the "Lincoln News." He began practicing law in 1908 and now has an office in the Ferguson Building in Springfield. He was editor-in-chief of "Lawyers' Brief-Notes and Selected Cases," a publication designed for the use of lawyers exclusively, and has had other experience in textbook writing and legal editorial work.

He was married November 24, 1909, to Alma I. Schneider, of Athens, Ill., who died eighteen months later. Mr. Branson is a member of Clifton Lodge No. 19, A. F. & A. M., of Petersburg. He is identified also with the Authors' Club and the Commercial Association of Springfield.

BRAYMAN, Mason. (Vol. I, p. 59.)

BREESE, Sidney Smythe.—The successful lawyer of today has to meet and overcome legal difficulties not presented to Lincoln or Douglas. Corporation law, international complications, insurance rulings and changes in procedure, have given rise to many conditions which require deepest thought and constant reading to handle. One of those who are bringing to the work of their profession the enthusiasm of youth and the careful training of latterday jurisprudence is Sidney Smythe Breeze, of Springfield. He was born near Carlyle, Clinton County, Ill., January 14, 1878, being a son of Sidney Samuel and Caroline Stewart (Moore) Breeze, the former born at Kaskaskia, the first Illinois State Capital, August 13, 1835, and the latter at Belleville, St. Clair County, Ill., September 16, 1836.

The Breeze family history is interesting, as the following proves; In Trinity Church Yard, New York City, stands a unique monument, not far from the graves of Alexander Hamilton and Charlotte Temple, on which appears this epitaph:

"Sidney Breeze, June 9, 1767.
Made by himself.
Ha, Sidney, Sidney,
Lyest thou here?
I there lie
Till time has flown
To its extremity."

This is the in memoriam, prepared by Sidney Breeze, one of the merchant princes of his day, to mark his own grave. He was a Welsh gentleman who, after some years of service in the Royal Army, came to America and settled in New York, in 1756, and died, leaving one son,
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

Samuel. This son Samuel lived in New Jersey, was a colonel in the Continental Army, and by profession a lawyer. His son, Arthur Breese, was born in that State, graduated from Princeton, adopted the law as a profession, and moved to Whitestown, near Utica, N. Y. Here he married Catherine, daughter of Judge Henry Livingston, of Poughkeepsie, who had served as Major in the Revolutionary Army.

Henry Livingston was a member of that famous family of New York, all descendants of the Earl of Linclethgow; Robert Livingston came to America from Scotland, and among his descendants are found Chancellor Livingston, of Declaration of Independence fame, Brockholst Livingston, of the United States Supreme Court, and Edward Livingston, President Jackson's Secretary of State.

The sister of Arthur Breese married Dr. Jedadiah Morse, and from this union sprung Professor Samuel Finley Breese Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

To the marriage of Arthur Breese and Catherine Livingston were born nine children, among the most famous of whom were Samuel Livingston Breese, Rear Admiral of the United States Navy, who served in the War of 1812, in the war with Mexico, and in the Civil War; and Sidney Breese, United States Senator from Illinois and Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Illinois, grandfather of Sidney Smythe Breese.

Sidney Breese was born in New York State, July 15, 1800, graduated from Union College in 1818, and on December 24, 1818, responding to an invitation from Elias Kent Kane, arrived in Kaskaskia. Here he was appointed Assistant Secretary of State and commenced the study of law, being admitted to the bar in 1820. He was successively Postmaster, Assistant Secretary of State, State's Attorney, United States District Attorney for Illinois, first official reporter of the Supreme Court, Judge of the Circuit Court and later of the Supreme Court, and United States Senator. In 1831 he published Breese's reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of Illinois, which was not only the first law book published in Illinois but the only one of any kind. In 1823 he married Eliza Morrison, daughter of William Morrison, of Kaskaskia, cousin of Colonel Don Morrison, and aunt of William R. Morrison (Horzontal Bill). In 1832 Sidney Breese served with distinction as Lieutenant-Colonel in the Black Hawk War. He was elected Judge of the Circuit Court in 1835 and moved from Kaskaskia to Carlyle, Ill. In 1841 he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court, and in 1842 United States Senator. Sidney Breese was one of the originators and active promoters of the Illinois Central Railroad, and on his report as Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, was based the grant of alternate sections of land to the State of Illinois, for the building of that road. He was also one of the originators of the Pacific road, and as early as 1845 he pointed out the acquisition of the Philippines by the United States. In 1849 he retired from the United States Senate, and in 1855 was again elected to the Circuit Bench. Two years later, in 1857, he was once more elected to the Supreme bench, where he remained until his death, in June, 1875. He was twice Chief Justice of that Court.

Judge Breese was the father of fourteen children, six of whom, two daughters and four sons, survived him. Of these four sons, one was a Captain in the United States Navy, and one a Lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps, both serving through the Civil War; another was a lawyer and served in the Civil War as Lieutenant in the regular army; the fourth son, Sidney Samuel Breese, was a farmer, and became the father of the Mr. Breese of whom we write.

Sidney Samuel Breese married Caroline Stewart Moore, daughter of Smyth Moore and granddaughter of Rison Moore, a Senator from the St. Clair district of the Illinois Senate, who had been a delegate to the convention of 1824. She is also a sister of Charles C. Moore, a member of the House of Representatives in 1855, during the Morrison-Logan senatorial fight. The marriage of Mr. Breese and Miss Moore occurred in June, 1856, near Carlyle, Ill., and they had four sons and four daughters, three of the latter dying in infancy. The father died February 18, 1891, his widow still surviving him and being (1910) in excellent health.

Sidney Smythe Breese was educated in the Carlyle High School and Marmaduke Military Institute, of Sweet Springs, Mo. His boyhood was a lawyer, healthy one, for he enjoyed all athletic sports. Having decided to become a lawyer, Mr. Breese commenced studying in the office of State's Attorney Thomas E. Ford, at Carlyle, taking his bar examination at Ottawa, Ill., in March, 1899, and receiving his license to practice at the April term (1899) of the Supreme Court. On December 11 of that same year he moved to Springfield, where he commenced the practice of law, in which he is still actively engaged, having become one of the prominent exponents of his profession in Sangamon County.

Politically Mr. Breese is a Democrat and he takes an active interest in party matters, especially in municipal affairs. He is a strong believer in the Commission form of Municipal Government and was one of the active members of the Committee of lawyers which drew the Bill for that purpose which passed the Legislature at the Special Session in 1910. He has been a member of the Board of Supervisors of Sangamon County and is President of the Civil Service Commission of Springfield, having been appointed to that position by Mayor John S. Schnepf June 7, 1909. Mr. Breese is a prominent Mason, being Past Master of St. Paul's Lodge No. 500, A. F. & A. M., and is Right Worshipful District Deputy Grand Master of Masons of the Thirtieth Masonic District of Illinois. He was made a Mason in Scott Lodge
No. 79, Carlyle, Ill., December 2, 1890 and after moving to Springfield affiliated with St. Paul's Lodge. He is Past Chancellor of Perceval Lodge, No. 182, Knights of Pythias, having joined the order at Carlyle, but transferred to the Springfield lodge. Although he holds membership in no church Mr. Breese was baptized and reared in the Episcopal Church.

On June 13, 1908, Mr. Breese was married at Milwaukee, Wis., to Miss Grace May Moran. She died at Springfield April 2, 1908, after a married life of a little over nine months. No issue. Mr. Breese is a young man of delightful personality, and is social by nature. Being fond of good reading, he has read extensively, not only along the line of his profession, but on general topics as well, and takes pride in being well posted on public matters. Energetic, the will and determined in action, Mr. Breese is a factor to be reckoned with in Springfield affairs.

BRENNAN, James (deceased).—Some of the representative men of Sangamon County have gone to their last reward after having spent a life of earnest endeavor in behalf of their loved community. Certain names are associated with the pioneer history of the county, whose representatives came from other parts of the country, or from foreign shores, there to build better than they imagined. To them is due the credit for the magnificent condition of Sangamon County today. Their children, born and reared in the atmosphere of pioneer conditions, developed into stalwart men and women, able to deal successfully with the more complicated problems of advanced civilization.

One of these representative pioneer families bore the name of Brennan, and one who for many years was a leading factor in the life of Buffalo was James Brennan. He was born in Ireland March 12, 1825, a son of Irish parents, who died in their native land. The young man was educated in Ireland, being reared on a farm, but was not satisfied with the opportunities offered him there. He eagerly listened to all he heard of the land and its shores, and, in the leaving home and kinsdr, set forth, filled with hopes and ambitions. Landing in New York, he came direct to Sangamon County to engage in farming, continuing that occupation until the day of his death. In 1858 he bought ten acres of land near Buffalo, in Buffalo Hart Township, upon which he erected a comfortable home. This continued to be his home and in it he died, September 2, 1908, after having lost his wife on May 24th of that year. For fifty-one years this house had been their home, and the two were greatly attached to it. In it their children were born, and they had suffered the loss of some of them while under its roof.

Mr. Brennan was married in London, in January, 1858, to Mary McGarry, born in Ireland, in May, 1834. Her parents died in Ireland. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brennan, four sons and three daughters, and of them five survive: William resides in Springfield, being a clerk in Squire Connelly's office; James lives on a farm near Buffalo; Minnie, wife of Timothy Duggan, lives on a farm in Buffalo Heart Township; John and Emma live on the farm that is the homestead. There are nine living grandchildren in this family.

The Democratic party always held Mr. Brennan's support, he supporting its principles and candidates with unfaltering loyalty. From boyhood he was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, giving it a warm and generous support and dying firm in its faith. The life of such a man as Mr. Brennan points its own moral. Coming to a new country, poor and friendless, he worked hard and made a home for himself and his family. While caring for his wife and the children sent them, he never forgot his duty as a citizen, nor neglected his religious duties. Whenever a neighbor was in trouble he turned instinctively to the genial, warm-hearted Irishman, while his wife depended upon Mrs. Brennan for assistance in various family troubles. James Brennan and his wife rejoiced in the happiness of their associates, but their friendship was best felt when sorrow entered a household. Then it was that they proved themselves and built up in the hearts of all who knew them a monument more enduring than any fashioned of marble, and infinitely more priceless. The children of this most excellent pair bave every reason to be proud of their descent from such parents. They were proud of their children and interested in their welfare, and, while they sorrowed over those who were taken away, they bowed to the decree, realizing that they had only been lent for a short period. To such as these Sangamon County owes much, and their children an infinite debt they can discharge only by living as their parents would desire.

BRENNAN, Owen J. (deceased), was a representative, useful citizen of Springfield, Ill., where he lived from 1894 until his death, which occurred May 15, 1908. He had been for twenty-eight years an employee of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, and had reached a position of responsibility and trust through close application to his duties and careful attention to every detail of the work he had in hand. He was a man of sober, industrious habits, devoted to his home and family, and enjoyed the society and companionship of his many friends. Mr. Brennan was born near Belfast, Ireland, December 23, 1860, a son of John and Margaret (Dodd) Brennan, both born near Belfast. The father was a land inspector and a prominent man in his community.

The childhood of Owen J. Brennan was spent in Ireland and Scotland, where he received his education, and after leaving school he found employment as foreman in a mine in Scotland. He emigrated to America in 1870 and subsequently entered the employ of the Chicago &

Alton Railroad, locating in Alton. After he had been in the employ of the company nine years he moved to Springfield and was promoted to the position of foreman of electricians for the road. His death was the result of an accident. He was trying to prevent a wreck on the road at Granite City, Ill., and was killed by a passenger train. He was buried in Bloomington, Ill.

Mr. Brennan left a widow and one son. He was married, at Joliet, Ill., October 6, 1890, to Miss Nora Roland, born in Joliet February 15, 1880, daughter of Edward and Mary (Mahar) Roland, both natives of Ireland. He was raised near the city of Limerick and she was born in Tipperary but reared at Waltham near Boston. Three children born to Mr. Brennan and wife in Alton died and were buried in the cemetery there, and one son died in Springfield, being buried in Calvary Cemetery. The only surviving child, Thomas Emmett, was born in Springfield, October 14, 1897, and is attending school there. Mr. Brennan was a member of the Catholic Church and in politics was a Democrat. He took no prominent part in public affairs and never cared to hold public office, being engrossed in his private affairs and his work. However, he was interested in the improvement and welfare of his community and gave his support to many good causes.

BRENNAN, Patrick (deceased).—Supply and demand create trade, and in a city like Springfield, where the population is changing and the influx at times is so great, the business of handling foodstuffs is always a profitable one. Ever since the seat of the State government was moved to Springfield in 1839, the grocers of the city have flourished, and one who once held his own with the leading ones in his line was the late Patrick Brennan. He was born in County Meath, Ireland, in 1825, a son of Thomas and Catherine Brennan, natives of Ireland, and had all of the quickness and keenness of his people, combined with a genial manner and engaging way that made him friends everywhere.

After a boyhood spent in his native place, where he secured a parish school education, Patrick Brennan came to the United States in 1845, finally locating in Springfield. At first he found employment as a brick molder, but gradually worked his way upward until he became one of the leading grocers of the city, and was interested to a considerable extent in the pork packing industry. In all of his undertakings he showed a keen perception of values, and his success was due to his own business sagacity and untired efforts. He was a Catholic, belonging to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and, when his death occurred in July, 1880, his remains were interred in Cavalry Cemetery. His political affiliations with the Democratic party were pleasant, but he did not aspire to public office.

In 1860, Mr. Brennan was united in marriage in Springfield, with Ellen Smith, born in the same county as himself. Her parents came from Ireland to New Orleans, and thence to Sangamon County, where their deaths finally occurred. Mr. Brennan's parents never left their native land. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brennan; four of whom are living: John P., of Springfield, has three children; Mary Jane, of Streator, Ill., is married and has four children; Peter F. and Ella G., both live with their mother at No. 720 East Carpenter street. Mrs. Brennan owns this pleasant residence, in which she has lived ever since her marriage. She is active in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and is a lady of genial character.

BRETZ, John (deceased).—The visitor to any great center of population is naturally attracted or repelled by the character of its buildings and, as well as this knowledge, the stranger out over the country to the stranger from any village, town or city will particularly call attention to its fine structures and particularly to its church edifices. When this is done at Springfield, Ill., the name of John Bretz is brought forward, for his was the skill and workmanship that produced one of the capital city's most noted edifices during a period covering some twenty-six years.

John Bretz was born in Hesse-Cassel, Germany, August 26, 1812. His father, who was also named John Bretz, followed the business of tile-making. Before coming to America the son attended school in his native land, and learned the brick making and building trade, and also served for a time in the German army. In 1833 he came to America, first locating at Frankfort, Ky., where he lived until 1857, and there did a large amount of building, including the only Catholic Church in that city—the Church of the Good Shepherd—also the State Arsenal and the Central Hotel, and it is because of his reputation for superior work that he was called to Springfield, which he reached in 1857. Here he also built the first Catholic church—that of the Immaculate Conception—on the corner of Seventh and Monroe Streets, of which Rev. Father Timothy Hickey is pastor. He also built the old arsenal that stood on North Fifth Street. He not only was one of the early manufacturers of building brick made in Illinois but was one of the first to make use of it in public buildings at Springfield. He was associated in business for a number of years with Mr. Frank Reisch, a brick manufacturer, but after the latter went into the brewery business, Mr. Bretz continued in the building and contracting business alone until 1883. He was interested all over the city in his own line of business and for years was also actively concerned in public enterprises that helped to develop Springfield. In company with Messrs. Ide and Shuck, he was active in the construction of the first street-car line in Springfield and donated the right of way on North Fifth Street as far as his property extended. He and Mr. Will Converse, also now deceased, helped organize and were the first stockholders of the Sangamon County Fair Grounds, but later donated his stock to the establishment of what is now the State Fair Grounds.

On January 19, 1841, Mr. Bretz was married to Jane Pilcher, of Fayette County, Ky. Her parents were Wesley and Laura (Taylor) Pilcher, natives of Virginia. The Taylors were Mayflower stock, and lived in Virginia until their removal to Kentucky. Mrs. Bretz died June 14, 1900, and was survived by her husband until May 22, 1905. They rest side by side in Mt. Calvary Cemetery, a plot of ground which Mr. Bretz and Mr. John Perlick, Sr., laid out in burial lots. Mr. and Mrs. Bretz had twelve children, those surviving being: Mrs. Louise Westenberger, born in 1842; John E., born in 1844; James, born in 1851; Mary E., born in 1854; Catherine, born in 1859; and Charles, born in 1862, and who is owner of a ranch near San Antonio, Texas. The unmarried daughters live in the elegant home situated on North Fifth Street, and amongst the treasured and carefully preserved are mementoes of the parents who were so universally beloved.

In his early political life, John Bretz was a Whig but later he became identified with the Democratic party. He was a worthy and devoted member of the S.S. Peter and Paul's Catholic Church and was liberal in his benevolence. With his friend, Governor Bissell, he assisted in locating the Ursaline Sisters in their first home on Mason and Sixth Streets, and later, with his friend, Martin Rafter, now also deceased, located the present Sisters' Home on Fifth and Eastman Avenue. He was one of the founders of S.S. Peter and Paul's Church Society; was also one of the first members in Springfield of the society known as St. Vincent de Paul, which was organized under Father Bush, now deceased, in the German Catholic Church located on Reynolds and Fifth Streets. The closing of the life of this venerable and beloved citizen brought expressions of regret from all over the city. He was well known and in some parts was affectionately called "Grandpa" Bretz by the children, to whom he was always a friend.

BREWER, James.—Only reliable men, whose probity and loyalty have been fully tested, can be placed in position of responsibility, so the A. L. Ide & Sons establishment is to be congratulated upon having a man of the character of James Brewer as watchman. He was born in Springfield, November 9, 1844, a son of John Brewer, of Kentucky, who married a Sangamon County girl. The father was a farmer, who came to the county at a very early day, settling in Springfield, where he was married. He had two sons and one daughter, those now living being, Mrs. Elizabeth Markley, of Pekin, Ill., and Mr. Brewer. The parents died in Springfield and are buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Going to school in Springfield, James Brewer grew up, and when old enough began working, being engaged in various lines until he learned book-binding. He found employment for a number of years in this line, becoming foreman for the Payne Bindery. He was also employed in the construction of the State Capitol and over twenty years ago accepted his present position with the Ide Company. Mr. Brewer has a war record, for when hostilities were declared he enlisted in Company E, One Hundred Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, participating in several important battles, and his discharge was signed by President Lincoln. At the close of his service he returned to Springfield and resumed his private occupations. Naturally, considering his military service, he is a member of the G. A. R., being connected with Stepheusen Post, No. 30.

On August 17, 1886, Mr. Brewer was married in Springfield, to Amelia Pond, born in Morgan County, Ill., daughter of Cyrus J. and Martha C. (Williams) Pond, natives of Pennsylvania and Ohio, who came to Morgan County. Their family consisted of eight children, five of whom survive: Mrs. Brewer; Cynthia, wife of James Alsbury, of Latham, Ill.; Carl, in the coal business in Chicago; Frank O., of Peoria; A. is living in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewer became the parents of eight children, two of whom are now living, James H., at home, and Martha O., in the employ of the John Bressmer Company, of Springfield. Mr. Brewer owns his pleasant home at No. 401 Smith Street, as well as other property. It is his pride that he was one of President Lincoln's personal friends. He and Mrs. Brewer are members of the Baptist Church and in politics he is a Republican.

The history of the Brewer and Pond families is very interesting. For a short time the great-grandfather of Mrs. Brewer was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, fighting under General Washington. Her grandfather on her mother's side was a soldier in the Mexican War, the Black Hawk War and the war against the Mormons. He was a resident of Springfield for a number of years. Mrs. Brewer's father was a farmer and followed that calling in Morgan County, Ill., for many years, finally retiring and moving to Concord, where he died. His widow came to live with Mrs. Brewer and there died. Mr. Pond was a member of Company B, One Hundred and First Illinois Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War, participating in many battles, and was wounded at Lookout Mountain. He had the misfortune to be seriously wounded and was also taken prisoner. The bullet which was extracted from his wound, together with his picture and the flag of his regiment, can be seen among the mementoes of war at the State House. The members of both families have been representative men and women, in whose hands could be trusted the affairs of their communities, for through good and evil times they have proven their worth.

BRIMBURGER, John.—The history of the old soldiers of the country is very interesting. In spite of their hardships and the ill health from which they have suffered, the survivors of the mighty struggle have quietly gone on their way, faithfully discharging the duties laid upon them in civil life with the same fidelity they showed when in the field. One of Sangamon County's honored veterans is John Brimbarger, a farmer and gardener of Springfield. He was born in Gallatin County, Ill., November 20, 1840, a son of James and Matilda (Carroll) Brimbarger, the former born in Kentucky, in 1815, and the latter born in Illinois, in 1824. The father was a farmer and located in Gallatin County, making it his home for some years, or until his death, which occurred near Shawneetown. His widow went to Missouri in 1867, dying there in 1870. A brother of John Brimbarger died in Gallatin County a number of years ago.

When he was only five years old John Brimbarger came to Sangamon County, which has since continued to be his home, with the exception of his war service. He was there educated and grew to manhood's estate. On August 12, 1862, he enlisted in the service of his country, in Company C, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Mallory. The regiment went into camp at Camp Butler, but two months later were ordered to Memphis, where Mr. Brimbarger was taken sick, and he was placed in Jefferson Hospital. After three weeks there he rejoined his regiment at Vicksburg in time for the first engagement, in which he participated, as well as in the three months' siege. After this he was returned to Memphis, where he was placed on the Veteran Reserve Corps and assigned to guard duty at the prisons. This continued to be his work during the remainder of his service, when he was honorably discharged.

On December 15, 1883, Mr. Brimbarger was married to Fannie P. James, daughter of George B. James. She was born March 13, 1852, and brought from Indiana to Springfield by her parents, who later moved to Barclay, Ill. The father died in 1905 and the mother in 1908. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Brimbarger: Tillie, wife of Alva Lanam of Riverton, employed by the Illinois Central Railroad; Lessie, wife of Philip Spain, living at home; Ora, wife of Tanler Baxter, a butcher by trade, residing at Rochester; Frank lives near Riverton and is a farmer. Mr. Brimbarger has two grandchildren, of whom one, Dorothy Spain, lives with him, and Ceel Lanam, of Riverton.

In politics Mr. Brimbarger is a consistent member of the Republican party, giving it his hearty support upon all occasions. The Christian Church holds his membership and he contributes to it both time and money. His comfortable modern home is surrounded by two and one-half acres of land, tastefully laid out, on which he produces magnificent vegetables and flowers.

Although he has almost reached the age of three score years and ten, he is active and enjoys his simple pleasures in a way many men much his junior might envy. All his life he has worked hard, and the material comforts he now enjoys have been honestly earned by personal effort. His children have been carefully reared, given good educations, and fitted for the battle of life. For sixty-three years he has been an honored resident of Sangamon County, during which time he has witnessed many remarkable changes, and he is proud of this fact and of the part he has borne in the general upbuilding of his community. Such as he can be relied upon as being the supporters of good government and advocates of all measures that have for their object the advancement of the common people.

BRINKERHOFF, George Madoc, who has been for many years one of the prosperous and prominent business men of Springfield, Ill., has been identified with the progress and welfare of the city and has held public positions of honor and trust for both the city and State. He was one of the organizers and stockholders of many of the most important public enterprises of the city and has always been prominent in social circles as well. He is one of the best-known men in Springfield, honored not only for his public service but for his promotion of business interests. He was in early life a prominent educator in Illinois, and was especially successful in that profession. Mr. Brinkerhoff is a man of ability and talent in many lines of endeavor, and has been successful in a large degree in both public and private enterprises. At present he operates an extensive green-house and is also a large dealer in bonds.

Mr. Brinkerhoff was born in Hunterstown, (near Gettysburg) Adams County, Pa., August 20, 1839, a son of John and Sarah Ann (Walker) Brinkerhoff, the former born December 13, 1811, and the latter November 16, 1814, both natives of Adams County. The parents spent their early married lives in Adams County, Pa., and during the Gettysburg Campaign in civil war time, their homestead was for a time occupied by the rebel General Wade Hampton as the headquarters of the cavalry division of General Lee's army. The emigrant ancestor of the Brinkerhoff family moved from Holland with Governor Peter Stuyvesant, about 1638, and settled first in New Amsterdam, on the Island of Manhattan and now a part of New York City afterward moving to New Jersey. Before the Revolution many of the family had acquired a large amount of land from proprietors in Pennsylvania and moved there. Many of them distinguished themselves by their services in the war of the Revolution.
George Madoc Brinkerhoff spent his boyhood on the farm of his parents and, as a young man, attended Pennsylvania College, from which he graduated in the class of 1850. After leaving school he came to Illinois and taught one year in the Illinois State University, now Cordelia College, Springfield. At the time of the Civil War and afterward he was employed in the office of the State Auditor; and during hostilities had charge of the War Department of that office. In politics he has been a Republican since boyhood and has never swerved in his allegiance to the principles of his party. He is justly proud of the fact that he is one of the "Grand Old Guard" of 306 who attended the Republican National Convention in Chicago in 1880, and cast his vote for the nomination of Gen. Grant for President.

Mr. Brinkerhoff's father was a Whig and the boy first learned political issues through the principles of that party. From 1865-70 he served as City Comptroller of the City of Springfield. Mr. Brinkerhoff was married in Springfield, Ill., August 4, 1862, to Miss Isabella Gibson Hawley, who was born in that city, July 21, 1843, and died there June 12, 1894, leaving six children. She was a daughter of Eliphalet Bennett and Mary D. (Sayre) Hawley. Eliphalet B. Hawley was born in Albany, N. Y., May 30, 1816, the son of Eliphalet and Elizabeth (McMurdy) Hawley, who came from New York to Sangamon County in 1822, and a year later, Eliphalet Sr. having lost his life by drowning, his widow removed to Springfield with her children, and there, after reaching manhood, Eliphalet B. engaged in mercantile pursuits and was prominent in both business and political circles up to the date of his death in 1884. The children born to Mr. Brinkerhoff and his wife were as follows: John Hawley, born April 28, 1866; Marlan Bell, November 11, 1868; George Madoc Jr., November 10, 1870; Cornelia Maria, November 27, 1872; Walter Bennett, June 27, 1876; Bessie Winnifred, August 20, 1878.

Mr. Brinkerhoff was one of the organizers of the Springfield City Railway Company, also of the Springfield Iron Company. For many years he served as Secretary and Treasurer of the latter, and was also connected with the State National Bank. He has been for many years a member of the various Masonic bodies, being affiliated with St. Paul Lodge No. 500, Springfield Chapter, Springfield Council, Elwood Commandery, Sangamo Lodge of Perfection and the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. He also belongs to the Illini Country Club and the Sangamo Club. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, and readily gives his countenance and support to every cause and movement of a charitable or benevolent character which he considers will be of public benefit. He has many friends in various circles and is honored and esteemed for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart. The family residence is 515 Keys Avenue, Springfield. Mrs. Brinkerhoff was a most estimable woman, of culture and high character, a devoted wife and mother, and at her taking away was sadly mourned by her many warm personal friends. Her memory is revered and tenderly cherished by her family, as well as by many intimate friends and all appreciated the depth of her devotion to every duty.

BRITT, Henry (deceased), who was for several years engaged in business in Springfield, Ill., as a member of the firm of Britt & Butler, plasterers and contractors, was born in Sussex, England, April 2, 1826. He was a son of William Britt, a native of England, and engaged in dairy business in Sussex. The parents died in their native country and there Henry Britt received his education. He came to America as a young man, landing in New York City, where he lived fourteen years and learned the trade of plasterer, which he followed the remainder of his life, except for two years there spent permanently in Springfield. He became associated in business with Mr. Butler and the firm secured contracts for plastering many fine buildings in Springfield and vicinity. Among them were the post-office, the Leland Hotel, the Governor's mansion, the residence of Governor Matteson (afterwards burned) and many public and private buildings, which were well known thirty or forty years ago. He retired about 1875, and his death occurring January 9, 1881, he was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He had many warm personal friends and his loss was widely felt. He had a splendid business reputation and was reliable and honest in all his dealings. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and his widow and children attend the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield. He was always a Republican after the organization of that party.

The marriage of Mr. Britt occurred in Springfield, July 1, 1857, when he was united with Miss Martha H. Lanterman, who was born in Springfield, April 27, 1837, one of the six daughters of Abraham and Martha (White) Lanterman. Mr. Lanterman came from Lexington, Ky., in 1818 and soon after settled on farm land where Washington Park now stands, and Mrs. Britt still retains some of this land which was entered by her father in that early day, being the only one in Springfield to hold land under original patent from the Government. He was born January 20, 1792, and his wife, who came from Greensburg, Ky., was born September 30, 1795. Both died in Springfield. They were well acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and Mrs. Britt was a close friend of him, his wife and family. But two of Mr. Lanterman's family survive: Mrs. Britt and her sister Mrs. R. W. Crowder, of Springfield. Two sons and seven daughters were born to Mr. Henry Britt and wife, of whom two daughters survive, namely: Miss Fanule M., a schoolteacher at Curran, Ill., where she has taught eleven years, and Mrs. Mattie L. Janssens, living at home, Mrs. Britt has four grandchildren. She owns the family home at 908 South-west Grand Avenue, and has many friends in the neighborhood, as well as in other parts of the city. She has lived in this house fifty years and can well remember when the part of the city which is her home was practically a wilderness, the land being then mostly covered with trees.

BRITTIN, Ernest H., M. D., a worthy representative of his profession in Auburn, Ill., belongs to a family that has been prominent in Illinois for several generations. He was born in Fancy Creek Township, Sangamon County, November 21, 1874, a son of Henry and Nancy D. (Mallory) Brittin, the former of Welsh descent and the latter probably of French ancestry. Henry Brittin grew to manhood on the farm in Fancy Creek Township where his birth occurred, there married and lived his entire life near his birthplace. His farm of 220 acres comprised a part of the farm which belonged to his father, Evans Brittin, secured in an early day. Evans Brittin was a native of Ohio and located in Sangamon County in 1818. The parents of Nancy Mallory moved from Kentucky to Sangamon County and she was born in Clear Lake Township, where she lived until her marriage.

Henry Brittin settled in Fancy Creek Township after his marriage and there all his children were born. He died on his farm in 1900 at the age of sixty-two years, and his widow died in 1901. They were devout and active members of the Christian Church most of their lives, and in politics he was a staunch Republican at every election, as he believed this was the duty of every citizen, and though often solicited to accept office, refused to do so. He gave his full support to every measure calculated to advance the interests of the community, morally or materially, and was a patriotic, public-spirited citizen. He was a great lover of his home and was always solicitous of the comfort of his wife and children. He and his wife were parents of eight children: John E., on the old home farm; Henry E., a traveling salesman living at Springfield; Albert L., a physician and surgeon living at Athens, Ill.; William A., also a physician and surgeon practicing at Virden, Ill.; Emma X., widow of William Waidson; living in Athens; Roger E., a farmer living near Blackwell, Okla.; Walter M., died in Sangamon County in 1901, at the age of twenty-two years.

The boyhood days of Dr. Ernest H. Brittin were spent on the farm in Fancy Creek Township, and he attended the district school in the neighborhood. He took a scientific course in the college at Valparaiso, Ind., and in 1888 entered the Barnes Medical College at St. Louis, Mo., graduating in the class of 1902. In June of that year he entered upon practice at Pawnee, Ill., where he remained until 1907, then locating in Auburn, where he has built up an excellent practice. He is most careful in his diagnoses, keeps abreast of the times by studying modern literature and lectures along the line of his work and has won a deservedly high reputation in his profession.

June 18, 1902, Dr. Brittin married Miss Lulu Cook, a native of Auburn, and daughter of the late George Cook. Two children have been born of this union, Marjorie and Walter. Dr. Brittin is a member of the Masonic Lodge at Pawnee, and also belongs to the County Medical Society. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian Church, and in politics he is a Republican. Like his father, he is interested in the progress and welfare of the community in which he resides, and is always ready to advance the interests of his fellows. He inspires the respect and confidence of those who have been associated with him and his future prospects are bright.

BROADWELL, Norman M. (Vol. I, pp. 60-61.)

BROCKEL, John W.—All the leading European countries have contributed reliable citizens to the United States, and the majority of them have left their old homes in search of better conditions, being willing to work to secure what they desired. For this reason many of these immigrants make up the best of citizens who are, therefore, welcomed in any community to which they migrate. One of the best examples of what a foreign-born man can accomplish is shown in the life of John W. Brockel, of Springfield. He was born in Wurtzburg, Germany, February 22, 1828. The father was a working man, honest and thrifty, but unable to provide for his large family in such a way as to make his son John satisfied with existing conditions. The parents both died in their native land. The father served in the Napoleonic wars, and always took pride in that fact, feeling that in his humble way he had helped to make history.

John W. Brockel secured what educational advantages the schools of his native place afforded, and as a boy was fond of out-door sports. His first work on leaving school was with a brick mason, and he learned the trade so thoroughly that he has followed it ever since. Sixty years ago he left Germany to come to the United States, Springfield being his objective point. He found immediate employment upon reaching that city, and has never since been without it, saving thriftily until he now owns his home and has a fair competence laid up for old age.

Mr. Brockel was married in Springfield, in 1854, to Anna Moulz, born in Wurtzburg, in 1833. Eight children were born to them: Anna, born in 1556; John, 1858; Katherine, 1861; Louis, 1863, now deceased; George, 1865; Mary, 1806; Will, 1808; and Frank, 1873. Mr. Broekel is a member of the German Lutheran Church, which he supports liberally. He is a Democrat in politics, but has never been active in party work, being too much occupied with business affairs. He is a sturdy, industrious man, who has always done his full duty, and is held in high esteem by his fellow citizens. His children have been reared to useful womanhood and manhood, and any father might well be proud of them.

BROIDA, David, for the past six years proprietor of a general store at the northwest corner of Fourteenth and Mason Streets, Springfield, is interested in the welfare and progress of the city and always ready to give his influence to the promotion of the public interest. Mr. Broida has been a resident of Springfield for a number of years and owns large property interests there. As a business man he has a reputation for honesty and integrity and is known as a man who always keeps his promises and has a proper respect for the rights and feelings of his fellows. He has never held public office but was a candidate for nomination for the office of City Commissioner in the primaries of February, 1911, and during the month of January gave a written statement to the daily issue of the Illinois State Register, setting forth his ideas and opinions. He therein promised, if elected, to put in his whole time and attention in fulfilling his duties; to see to it that the city was given a clean government, receiving full value for any money expended, that the city employees should receive their salaries promptly, and that the city should pay its debts when due. Mr. Broida gave as references several large wholesale houses of Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Springfield, and also referred to the large number of people who constantly did business with him and could vouch for his honesty of purpose and dealing. He voiced the opinion that the affairs of the city could best be conducted on a business basis by men of extensive business experience. With this strong appeal to the good sense and judgment of the voters of Springfield, he left the decision with them.

Mr. Broida was born in 1876. He was married in 1897 and seven children have been born of this union, five of whom attend the public school in the city. Mr. Broida has been active in his interest in the affairs of his locality. He would be glad to see all the streets of the city well paved, and is a strong advocate of the movement for adding to its cleanliness and beauty, so that the capital city may be a model in this respect.

BRONSON, Augustus I.—Exponents of the legal profession are proud of that fact so generally recognized, that the most brilliant public men of the country have been recruited from their ranks. The careful training, the exactness of perception, the ability to differentiate between right and wrong, and the eloquence, which are so distinctive of members of this profession, have always fitted them for public life. Sangamon County has furnished the State with a number of its distinguished men, and also with attorneys who have been associated with much of the important jurisprudence of the State. One of the distinguished lawyers of that part of the State is the venerable Augustus I. Bronson, of Williamsville, who for many years was a shining legal light of the county.

Mr. Bronson was born in Dutchess County, N. Y., May 20, 1852, a son of Josiah W. and Sarah (Voorhees) Bronson. The father was born in Connecticut in 1797, while the mother was a native of Long Island, N. Y. After losing his wife in Dutchess County, N. Y., Josiah W. Bronson moved to Chicago and there spent the few remaining years of his useful life, passing away when sixty-five years of age. He was a farmer earlier in life and an earnest, purposeful man.

Augustus I. Bronson was educated in New York State and was brought up modestly and strictly. As a lad he was noted for his bashful disposition, which he struggled hard to overcome. When fifteen years old he began working to secure sufficient money to educate himself, for he had decided to become a lawyer. Working early and late and carefully saving every cent he could spare, he finally secured sufficient instruction to enable him to pass an examination for the calling of a teacher. For some years thereafter he taught in the public schools and during the summer months, and at the same time studied law. Later in life he resumed the farming of his youth, and now owns valuable property in the village of Williamsville. About three years ago he had the misfortune to lose his eyesight, but is very cheerful and takes pleasure in his home, the devotion of his wife and adopted children, and the visits of his neighbors.

On August 12, 1862, Mr. Bronson enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Mallory. Being detailed to hospital service, he served as nurse, and proved so efficient that later he was made steward, receiving an honorable discharge in August, 1865. The Christian Church holds his membership. He is a Republican, and has been active in the councils of his party, although never seeking public preferment.

On February 4, 1871, Mr. Bronson was married in Springfield to Mary M. Lake, born June 28, 1850, in Sangamon County, a daughter of Thomas and Harriet Lake, born in Virginia, the former December 20, 1800, and the latter November 27, 1808. Mr. and Mrs. Lake came from Virginia to Central Illinois in 1833, making the long trip across country by wagons. Mr. Bronson has reared a boy and a girl and given them all the care he would if they had been his own. In spite of his affliction he is very cheerful and his estimable wife is a charming lady, who presides with dignity over her house.

hold and is numbered among the notable housewives of her neighborhood. Her recollection of pioneer days is remarkable, for she recalls not only her own experiences, but those told her by her parents and childhood neighbors. If space could be given to the accounts she so graphically relates, they would not only make pleasant reading, but prove valuable to those interested in preserving a true picture of early days in Illinois. Both Mr. and Mrs. Bronson stand high in the estimation of their neighbors, among whom they have dwelt for so many years, and to whom they have always tried and true friends.

BROOKS, Andrew Mears, educator and former Superintendent of Schools of both the city of Springfield and Sangamon County, is a native of Oxford, Ohio, born October 9, 1831, a son of Kennedy and Elizabeth Hill (Butler) Brooks. Kennedy Brooks, the father, was of Scotch-Irish ancestry, a farmer by occupation and proprietor of an excellent farm in the vicinity of Oxford, Ohio, where he was deeply interested in the cause of education. He and his wife were the parents of five sons and five daughters, all of whom received a liberal classical education, three of the sons also serving as soldiers during the Civil War. Mrs. Elizabeth Hill (Butler) Brooks, the mother, was of sturdy Puritan stock, the first of her branch of the family coming to America in 1630. Andrew M. Brooks is a lineal descendant (as great-grandson) of Ebenezer Larned, who led the Massachusetts Brigade at the Battle of Saratoga, and was also connected by maternal descent with Generals Hill and Butler, who were soldiers of the Revolution.

The subject of this sketch grew up on his father's farm, and imbibing studious habits from his surroundings, became a student in Miami University, from which he graduated as salutatorian of his class in 1850, still later receiving the Ph. D. degree from Wooster University. After retiring from college he engaged for a time in teaching in Ohio, but on September 4, 1855, was married in Oxford, Ohio, to Eliza Johnson Welch, after which he and his wife went to Mississippi, where they conducted a private academy until 1858, when they came to Springfield, which has been the family home to the present time, and where Mr. and Mrs. Brooks celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary in 1905. (A fuller sketch of Mrs. Brooks, now deceased, will be found in the succeeding section.)

Soon after coming to Springfield Mr. Brooks engaged in teaching as Principal of the First Ward School, but almost immediately was placed in charge of the newly established High School, which he retained one year. His later connection with the High School as Principal at two different periods covered some ten years. For about fifteen years was Superintendent of the City Schools and for eight years (1880-90 and 1894-98) County Superintendent. The number and importance of the positions he has held in connection with the city and county schools, covering a period of over fifty years, have entitled him to rank as the Nestor in the field of local education. He is credited with having been the first to bring the crayon pencil into use in the Springfield city schools as a substitute for chalk upon the blackboard, and also with having introduced drawing and music as branches of instruction in the same. At the present time (1912), as a member of the faculty of Bettie Stuart Institute, in conjunction with his daughters and others, he is still on duty devoting his attention to instruction in Latin, Greek and Mathematics.

In politics Mr. Brooks is a long-time Republican, is a member and ruling elder of the First Presbyterian Church, Springfield, and fraternal Past Master of Central Lodge, No. 71, A. F. & A. M.; is also a member of Illinois Chapter Sons of the American Revolution. He is owner of 190 acres of valuable farming land in the zinc mining district in the vicinity of Joplin, Mo., but in partial retirement, in connection with his daughters, is devoting his most active labors to the interests of the Bettie Stuart Institute.

BROOKS, (Mrs.) Eliza Johnson (Welch), deceased wife of Andrew M. Brooks, was born in Cudiz, Ohio, May 14, 1827, a daughter of Rev. Johnson and Eliza (Daugherty) Welch—her father being a Presbyterian minister and President of Franklin College, Ohio, and some time before his death the youngest College President in the United States. His widow later married Rev. John S. McCracken, a son of the latter, Dr. H. M. McCracken, being the present Chancellor of New York University. Her mother was one of the founders of what is now the Western Female Academy at Oxford, Ohio, from which the daughter graduated at the age of sixteen years. Her marriage to Mr. Brooks took place at Oxford, Ohio, September 4, 1855, and, after spending three years in the State of Mississippi, as explained in the sketch of Mr. Brooks, they came to Springfield, III., where later both were prominently identified with educational interests. On the death, in 1888, of Mrs. Mary Mc Kee Holmes, the first Principal of Bettie Stuart Institute, Mrs. Brooks was invited by the Board of Trustees to accept that position which she did, retaining it until her own death on March 27, 1900. In a brief memorial tribute to her memory prepared by Rev. T. D. Logan, Secretary of the Board, and adopted by that body, in recognition of the value of her services as Principal of the Institute, it is said: "For this she was well qualified by her early education in literature, science and art, and by her administrative abilities, which were of the highest order. The present prosperous condition of the Institute is due very largely to her careful oversight of its affairs. Her motherly counsel has been of invaluable benefit to large numbers of young ladies who have been under her care in the last twenty years. Her influence was not confined to the school, but in the First Presbyterian Church, with which she was connected for more than fifty years, she was actively engaged in every good work, and the fragrance of her memory pervades the entire community. She rests from her labors, and her works do follow her.”

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks were the parents of nine children: four sons—Kennedy, James, Robert, and Andrew M., Jr.; and five daughters—Mary E., Margaret E., Anne H., Frances and Alice J., all of whom reached their maturity and all still survive except Robert, who died in 1885. The daughters are all at present connected with various departments of Bettert Stuart Institute, their labors being attended by gratifying results. (For further details of the labors of both Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, see Chapters XXVI and XXVII of this volume on “Educational—Public Schools” and “Higher Institutions.”)

BROOKS, James F., better known as Fred Brooks, has been a resident on his farm in Springfield Township, since 1870. He was born in Woodside Township, Sangamon County, October 12, 1859, a son of James W. and Martha (Ricker) Brooks, the former born in Cambridge, Mass., January 26, 1822, died October 14, 1900, and the latter born in Shapleigh, Me., December 2, 1825, died January 28, 1880. The parents moved from Massachusetts to Sangamon County, in 1856, but four years later returned to Worcester County, Mass., still later on coming back to Sangamon County locating on Section 11, Springfield Township, where both died. Their children were: Emma C., Mrs. Charles Colglazier, living in Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Ella M. Jones, living in Arkansas City, Kan.; Belinda, wife of John Jones, also of Arkansas City; Aletta, Mrs. Davis, of San Antonio, Tex.; Miss Ida F., of San Antonio; Charles, Frank, Mattie and Elizabeth, deceased; and James F.

James F. Brooks received his early education in the district schools of Sangamon County, taking a supplementary course at a business college. He took up farming after leaving school, and has forty acres of land in his present farm, which he has occupied for forty years. At the age of five years, he visited the car in which Abraham Lincoln’s body was brought from Washington to Springfield, and can remember that occasion. He has been an active and prosperous farmer and gardener, making his work yield him good profits. Possessing good business judgment he has brought his land to a high state of cultivation.

Mr. Brooks was married in Sangamon County October 24, 1886, to Kate W. Sanner, born October 9, 1859, at St. Marys, Mo., a daughter of John and Ann (Watkins) Sanner, the former born October 1, 1824, and the latter April 25, 1839. Mr. Sanner came from Maryland to Springfield in 1861, and in 1873 moved to Mis-who have spent years in honest labor preparing themselves for their chosen profession, and are learned not only in various branches, but also in the science of pedagogy. One of those who have done much in this line for the growing generation, is Benjamin S. Brown, of Mechanicsburg. He was born in Ohio, October 14, 1844, the son of Uriah Brown. The father was a Methodist minister who came to Shelby County, Ill., in 1831, but later went to Decatur, where he died in 1892. The mother died when Mr. Brown was nine years old. Mr. Brown has three half-brothers, one of whom lives in Decatur, and a half-sister who lives in Lafayette, Ind., and an own sister, Mrs. Nancy A. Bundy, who resides in Moultrie County.

The position attained by Mr. Brown is remarkable for he educated himself, and passing regular examinations, secured a position in a school at Shelbyville, Ill. He also taught at Dawson, Sangamon County, for one term, and then went to Buffalo for one term. Later he was at Buckhart for seven terms, for one term at the Longdale, Logan County, and for one term taught at Williamsville. He then moved to Springfield, where he taught two terms, when he was called to Mechanicsburg, and there taught several terms. His next school was at Salisbury, whence, after one term, he went to Auburn, where he taught a term, returning to Mechanicsburg.

Mr. Brown was a veteran of the Civil War, having enlisted, August 5, 1861, in the Thirty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was transferred to Company G, Fifty-third, and served in that regiment until he was mustered out July 22, 1863. Among other important engagements which he participated were the battle of Shiloh, and Sherman's campaign before Atlanta and on his March to the Sea. Through it all, Mr. Brown was a loyal and brave soldier, and deserved the pension which was paid him by a grateful Government. Naturally he was interested in G. A. R. matters, was a member of the Post of Honor, and belongs to the Modern Woodmen and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He was very prominent in the Methodist Church, being a local preacher, and it is difficult to estimate the full amount of good his life and example effected. In politics, he was a Republican.

On November 24, 1851, Mr. Brown was married in Sangamon County to Anna V. Heiss, daughter of M. L. D. M. and Susan (Smelling) Heiss, both of whom died in 1900, only two months apart, the mother at Pleasant Plains, and the father at Mechanicsburg. Mr. Heiss was a nurse during the Civil War, and because of his efforts in ministering to others, took sick and was discharged on account of disability. He and his wife had children as follows: Mrs. Chester Mowray of Pleasant Plains; J. A. of Springfield; Mrs. Helen Edison of North Carolina; Mrs. Charles Wilson of Mechanicsburg; William of Mechanicsburg, and Mrs. Brown.

There were several others who died young. Mr. and Mrs. Brown had five children: James, at home; Bruce, Hattie R., Bernice and Charles F., also at home. Mr. Brown died November 2, 1910, after a life devoted to the service of others, filled with Christian deeds and works of charity.

BROWN, George H.—Springfield has long been the Mecca for ambitious men from other States, for here they realized was a promising future for the man willing to work, and many have swarmed to our capital resolved to win a fortune in some line of endeavor. One of the men who accomplished much and has always stood high in the esteem of us fellow-townsmen, both as a business man and public official, is George H. Brown, one time merchant and postmaster. He was born at Georgetown, Ky., May 14, 1835, a son of George D. and Mary (Adams) Brown, both of Kentucky. The father was a merchant, who spent his life in Kentucky, dying there as also did his wife, the latter passing away when George H. Brown was only three years old. There were six sons and three daughters in the family, and of these two of the sons served in the Mexican War. Of this family of nine children, George H. is the only survivor.

Mr. Brown received a good education in the Georgetown schools, and during his boyhood worked on a farm. Leaving home he went to Louisville, Ky., where he worked in a large commission house, but after remaining there two years, then came to Sangamon County, locating in Williamsville, where he operated a general store for several years. During this time, he was appointed Postmaster by President Buchanan, this appointment being renewed by President Lincoln. Later, Mr. Brown erected in farming near Williamsville but in 1890, came to Springfield, serving as Deputy Sheriff under Sheriff Murray. He was then clerk in the State House for a short time, but later he was elected Constable on the Democratic ticket, serving for four years.

During the taxing years Mr. Brown was general clerk for H. C. Myers at Camp Butler, and has always been ready to give his assistance whenever it was needed for the furtherance of public affairs. Although being a Democrat, he differed from Mr. Lincoln in political sentiment. Mr. Brown was a great admirer of the illustrious President and heard him speak upon many occasions. No one in Springfield has a clearer recollection of the great man, and no one recognizes his worth more clearly. Mr. Brown has long been connected with the Presbyterian Church in Springfield, and gives church affairs especial attention since his retirement in 1908.

On January 24, 1860, occurred the marriage at Williamsville, of George H. Brown and Sarah Flag. The latter was born in Ohio, October 1, 1837, the daughter of Abraham and Sarah Flag, and was brought by her parents from that State to Williamsville at an early day, the family settling on a farm which the father operated in conjunction with his blacksmith shop, and there the parents lived until their demise. Mr. and Mrs. Brown became the parents of two children: Frank and Neilie, both of whom are deceased. Mr. Brown owned his residence at No. 541 Elliott Avenue, and is a man of means. He has earned fairly and honorably the respect which his neighbors and associates accord him, and is correctly considered one of the best representatives of the older generation now residing in Springfield.

BROWN, Harmon, an able and well-known business man of Springfield, Ill., belongs to a family that has long been highly respected in that city. He was born at Cairo, Ill., December 21, 1861, a son of John H. and Clara (Staf ford) Brown, the father a native of Kentucky and the mother of Macon County, III. His paternal grandparents were of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and on the mother's side, the grandparents were of English descent. John H. Brown was a druggist by occupation and became an early settler at Cairo, Ill., where he engaged in the drug business. In 1862 he established a drug store at Springfield, and for two years occupied building on the corner of the Herndon Dry Goods Store. In 1864 he removed to Grass Valley, Cal., where he spent the remainder of his life, his death occurring there in the latter part of that year. His widow is now living in Springfield and has become the wife of Dr. Townsend. They were parents of three sons and one daughter. The two brothers of Harmon Brown are now deceased and his sister, Mrs. Augustus Ayers, lives in Memphis, Tenn.

Mr. Brown received his education in the public schools of Springfield and, in 1879, on account of poor health, spent sometime traveling through the West. After returning from this trial period he engaged in retail business in Springfield, which he continued several years, then accepted his present position as Superintendent of the Woodside Coal & Mining Company, which he has since ably filled. He is also a member of the Springfield Chamber of Commerce, and actively interested in public affairs. In his present position he has charge of extensive business interests and is filling a post of considerable responsibility.

Mr. Brown was married in Springfield, in June, 1886, to Mary W. Stebbins, who was born in that city June 16, 1854, daughter of Oscar F. and Sarah E. (Warner) Stebbins, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of New York State. The father was a hardware merchant and for many years carried on a business in Springfield, where he located in 1862. He remained in business until his death in 1906, and the mother now resides in Springfield. There was but one son and one daughter in the family, and the former, M. W. Stebbins, of Springfield, is a clerk for the Hudson Hardware Company. One child has blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Elizabeth, born October 23, 1897. Mr. Brown lives at 712 South Fourth Street and he and his wife are well known in Springfield as people of refinement and culture, and have many personal friends.

BROWN, Jacob, retired barber and farmer, residence near Pleasant Plains, Sangamon County, is a veteran of the Civil War whose military career is of more than common interest. Born in Knox County, Ohio, March 16, 1835, he is a son of Nathan and Elizabeth (Long) Brown. His parents were natives of York County, Pa., where they grew up and married. Nathan Brown's mother, grandmother of the subject of this sketch, had two sons, who were orphaned by her early death. One of them was apprenticed to a wagonmaker, and the other, Nathan, was apprenticed to a blacksmith. Their father soon joined the Mormons and went West as a minister of that faith, and is supposed to have been killed at Carthage, Mo. After having completed his trade, Nathan married Elizabeth Long in their native county. Susan and Abraham, two of their eight children, were born there. She died aged twenty-three years, and he is a well-to-do farmer at Wapello, Iowa. The two moved to Knox County, Ohio, about 1834, and from there to Circleville, Pickaway County, where the father was a teacher of languages. A self-educated man, of many attainments, he was especially proficient in English and German, and became a leader among educators in that part of the State, as well as an infantil Democrat, the old school. He passed away about 1848, and his widow in 1852. Their daughter Barbara married J. W. Frost and settled in Worth County, Mo., where she died in 1873; Jacob was next in order of birth; John, now retired, is living at Wabash, Ind.; Nancy J. married John Bird, who enlisted in an Ohio regiment and was killed at Chiehaven and he served with his brother Abraham; William, a member of the Thirty-third Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, died in service in the Civil War and is buried in a soldiers' cemetery at Memphis, Tenn.; Elizabeth became the wife of Jonathan Sommings, a farmer, of Worth County, Mo., and is dead; Isaac, third in order of nativity, served in the Civil War under General Logan, as a member of the Thirtieth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and is now living in retirement in Pickaway County, Ohio, after a successful career as a farmer. Another son died in infancy.

Jacob Brown accompanied his parents from Knox County to Pickaway County, Ohio. He began his education at Circleville, and after his mother's death went to work on a farm. In 1854, when he was nineteen years old, he was impelled by the Western fever, as it was manifested in that part of Ohio at that time, to seek his fortune in Illinois, and joined his brother-in-law, J. W. Frost, who was then living on a farm four miles southwest of Pleasant Plains,
In the spring of 1855 he went to work for Edwin Tomlin. Later he was for a time in the employ of Marilla Macy. Meanwhile his home was with Mr. and Mrs. Frost, and in 1857 he found opportunity to attend school for a time. December 15th of that year, he married Miss Frances Elder, born in Cartwright Township, March 19, 1839, a daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth (Tomlin) Elder, who came from Cape May, N. J., and were among the pioneers in the township named. After marriage Mr. Brown rented a farm in Cartwright Township. The spring of 1858 being wet and unpromising, he sold, Mr. Brown and J. R. Black, part. On he continued, at farm labor, until the outbreak of the Civil War. He then began farming for himself on rented land in Pleasant Plains Township. He was so employed until August 8, 1862, when he enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three years or during the war. The regiment was organized at Camp Butler, near Springfield and sent to Memphis, Tenn. Soon it was involved in the historic sixty-three battles from Jackson, Miss., to the siege of Vicksburg. Ordered back to Jackson, it was included in the Eleventh Brigade under command of Wilkins, consisted of this regiment, the Seventy-second Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, the Ninety-third Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry, the Ninth Regiment Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and the Ninety-fifth Regiment Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and was engaged in scouting and similar work. In all this service to and including the battle of Chattanooga, where Mr. Brown was present, he was with his regiment, the Seventy-second, at the battle of Chickamauga, in the fight of the sixtieth Pennsylvania. After the battle of Chickamauga, Mr. Brown was taken prisoner and was held in Andersonville, Georgia, until September 21 following, when he was removed to Savannah. Later he was taken to Milien Prison, to Blackhearn, and to Thomasville, Ga. On December 24, 1864, he was returned to the prison hell at Andersonville. There he remained till April 15, 1865, when he was transferred to Lake City, Fla. There he was put on board a schooner, Uncle Blackhawk, and twenty-two miles of Jacksonville, that State, where he and many companion prisoners were turned loose. Making their way to Jacksonville, they found the town occupied by Union soldiers and were sent by boat to New York City. Mr. Brown was honorably discharged July 17, 1865, and returned to Illinois.

Until August, 1868, Mr. Brown was employed in the weighing department at a coal shaft. He then opened a barber shop at Pleasant Plains, which he managed successfully until 1907, when he sold it in order to retire from active life. He bought a home in 1868, His present residence, on Pleasant Plains, he bought in 1903. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have long been active in the affairs of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Pleasant Plains. He is an influential Grand Army man and is a well known member of the Pleasant Plains Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons. He cast his first vote for Lincoln in 1860, and has acted with the Republican party since. In 1862, when he was in a Confederate prison, he and his companions in misery were told that if they would vote for McClellan for President as against Lincoln they would receive double rations; but, although food was very scarce and always gladly welcomed, the result of the vote was two to one in favor of Lincoln. Mr. Brown has ably filled the office of Mayor of Pleasant Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had twelve children, seven of whom are living: Molly E. is the wife of John Dobbert, a farmer in Cartwright Township; George, Jacob and Charles died in infancy; Frances married J. R. Black, Carpenter; William F. lives at Jacksonville, Ill.; James E. is a resident of Chicago; David F. died, aged thirty-four years, and John L., aged thirty-six; Abraham L. lives at Jacksonville, Ill.; Albert lives at Arrowsmith, Ill., and Ray R. is a member of his parents' household.

BROWN, James N. (Vol. I, pp. 61-62.)

BROWN, William.—The mining interests of Sangamon County are of such magnitude that they afford employment for many of the most reliable men of the locality, as well as gifted investment for local and outside capital. A number of progressive men combine mining with farming operations, securing very satisfactory results. One who has been successful as miner and farmer is William Brown, of Clear Lake Township. He was born at Eugene, Vermillion County, Ind., a son of Israel Brown, a farmer who was born in Connecticut, although his wife was born in Pennsylvania. In an early day Israel Brown moved to Indiana and located on a farm, which he continued to operate until his death. During the Civil War he proved a loyal American, serving three years and participating in many of the notable engagements that stained the country's map with blood.

The education of William Brown was obtained in the country schools of his native State, and although the advantages were not such as are enjoyed by the children of today, he there laid a good foundation upon which, by reading and observation, he built a substantial structure. While attending school he worked on the farm, assisting his father and gaining from him a practical knowledge of agricultural life. In 1853 he came to Illinois, attracted by the mines, and located at Dawson, where he worked for two years. Following this he moved to Barchey and for seven years was engaged in mining at that point. Pittsburg, Kan., was his next place of residence, but after a year there he returned to Indiana. For seven years his native State claimed him, during which time he was successfully engaged in farming, then again located in Illinois, buying four acres in Clear Lake Township, which has since remained his home. He is now engaged in mining and farming and is satisfied with the results from both lines of endeavor.

Mr. Brown was married in Springfield (first) to Mary De Costa, born in Springfield who died in 1890. The second marriage of Mr. Brown occurred January 26, 1891, to Lucy Welsh, daughter of A. R. Welsh. Mr. Welsh was one of the pioneers of Sangamon County and has been connected with its development and growth in commercial, political and agricultural importance. Although advanced in years, Mr. Welsh survives, and is an important factor in his community. There is no issue of either marriage.

There are a number of men like Mr. Brown who make their home in Sangamon County. They have not pushed themselves forward in political matters, preferring to exert a quiet influence for good government and moral uplift. Huge corporations do not number them among their officials or heavy stockholders, their work being done in an unostentatious way as individuals. They have not made their mark as professional men, nor sought fame as writers, artists or musicians, yet they have become potent factors in the solid, substantial strata of the county. In private life, as in warfare, it is not the brilliant accomplishments or successes of the few that make for victory, but the achievements of the rank and file. It is the work of the everyday man that counts in the aggregate. Thus it is that in a history of this kind it is important to outline, although too briefly, the life record of those to whom so much is justly due. Mr. Brown owes his success to no chance of fortune; he has not inherited great wealth nor made it through the work of others, but what he has is but the just result of a life of toil, directed by intelligent effort.

BROWNBACK, Charles E., M. D. C., one of the prominent members of his profession in Sangamon County today, and at present serving as City Veterinarian of Springfield, was born on a farm at Tower Hill, Shelby County, Ill., April 15, 1871. He is a son of Edward and Eliza Ann Brownback, and grandson of Henry Brownback, the latter a native of Pennsylvania, who brought his family west in an early day and settled in Shelby County. Edward Brownback was a farmer, grain-dealer and druggist, and now resides at Ashland, Ill., which has been his home for many years. Charles E. Brownback attended the public schools of Pleasant Plains and Ashland, Ill., and in 1896, graduated from the Chicago Veterinary College. He practiced one year at Pleasant Plains, two years at Peru, Ind., two years at Ashland, and three years at Virginia, Ill., and in 1906, located in Springfield, where he has built up a large practice in his line. He is a thorough master of his profession, and his advice is widely sought among his fellow practitioners, with whom he has a high standing.

Mr. Brownback was married to Miss Kate Merele, of Indianapolis, Ind., daughters of Nicholas and Annie Merele. No children have been born of this union. Dr. Brownback has made many warm friends in Springfield during his residence here, and fraternally is connected with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Modern Woodmen of America. In politics, he is a stanch Republican and active in expounding his interest in public affairs. He resides at 514½ East Capitol Avenue, and his hospital is located at 320 South Fourth Street. He has for the past two years held the office of City Veterinarian with credit to himself and the position.

BROWNING, Alfred M.—The farmer of today feels justified in retiring from active pursuits at an earlier date than those of his fellows who are engaged in other lines, for not only are the requirements of agricultural life severe, but the profits are of sufficient magnitude to warrant such leisure. One of the substantial residents of Divernon, Ill., now resting after a long and busy life, is Alfred M. Browning. He was born in Greene County, Ill., April 7, 1857, a son of M. and Mary J. (Wood) Browning, natives of Kentucky. The Brownings and Woods were old residents of that State, and prominent in its history during the early days. Michael Browning was a Baptist minister, and an early settler of Greene County, where he died in 1842, when only thirty-eight years old. His widow survived him until 1890, when she too passed away. Of the children born to himself and wife four sons survive: the eldest of Springfield, aged seventy-nine years; Perry, of Chicago, aged seventy-seven years; George, of Montgomery County, Ill., aged seventy-five years; Alfred M., aged seventy-three years (1910).

The boyhood of Alfred M. Browning was spent in Greene County, where he was educated, and when he was twenty years of age, he commenced farming for himself, having previously gained a knowledge of the work. Until 1855 he remained in Greene County, then moved to Montgomery County, purchasing a farm of 170 acres near Litchfield. This he developed into a fine property, operating it until his retirement in 1908, when he settled in Divernon, Ill., his present home. All his life he has been fond of outdoor sports, and owes his good health to this fact.

Mr. Browning was married in Greene County, December 21, 1861, to Lucetta Marshall, born there, June 6, 1844, daughter of Sanford and Mary (Mulberry) Marshall, natives of Kentucky, the former a farmer who came to Greene County at an early date, dying there. His widow died in Madison County, Ill. The grandparents of Mrs. Browning on both sides lived and died in Kentucky. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Browning: Marie, born in Greene County (as were all but the youngest), in September, 1862, married John Studebaker, of Indiana, who died in Bond County, Ill., in 1900, issue—Claude, Paul, Mary, John, Earl, Junietta, Pearl, living, and Mildred C. and Lucetta, deceased; Charles K., born March 5, 1864, married Belle Christopher, lives at Divernon, issue—two living and one deceased; Frank E., born in July, 1868, married a Miss Coe, lives in Toledo, Ohio, issue—Justice, Lillian, Coe, and one deceased; Herbert A., born July 12, 1874, married Grace Barnett, lives in Missouri, is a minister of the Christian Church in Queen City, issue—Richard A., Hildegard and Eliza; and Wade, born in Montgomery County, June 6, 1880, married Ethel Kane, lives in his native county, engaged in farming, no issue; and Sanford and Marshall, deceased.

Fraternally Mr. Browning is a Mason. While a Democrat in his political faith, he is broad-gauged enough to realize that at times it is better, in local affairs, to vote for the man rather than for the party. He served as County Treasurer of Greene County, also Justice of the Peace and Highway Commissioner. His religious training and belief make him a Baptist, and he is a liberal supporter of the church. Both he and his wife stand high in their community. Possessing generous dispositions and kindly inclinations, they enjoy doing good and are never happier than when entertaining their friends in their cozy home. The example of their upright, useful lives is one that cannot be overestimated, and to them could he truly said: “Well done, good and faithful servants.”

BRUCE, Francis H., a retired farmer living near Springfield, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, has been a resident of Sangamon County since 1867. Mr. Bruce was born near Murrayville, Morgan County, Ill., November 27, 1841, a son of William and Mary W. (Gunn) Bruce, being mustered into the United States Army in Dixon County, that State, May 11, 1808. The parents came to Illinois in 1830, locating on Governor Duncan’s place at Jacksonville. The mother came to Springfield in 1851, and lived with her son Francis until her death, in 1885. William Bruce died when Francis was a small boy, and the mother, who the married, six sons were born to William Bruce and his wife, all of whom are deceased except the subject of this sketch. A half-brother of Francis H. Bruce (Robert C. McAlister) now lives near Camp Lincoln. One brother, Benjamin P., served in the Civil War three years. The mother of Francis H. Bruce was one of ten children, who died at the age of seventy years.

Mr. Bruce received his education in the subscription schools of Illinois, where log buildings were furnished with slab seats. He worked on a farm for his uncle until he was eighteen years of age, and in 1861 enlisted in Company I, Pettengill’s Indiana Infantry, being mustered into Camp Duncan, Jacksonville. They were sent to Quincy, Ill., had a little skirmish at Canton, Mo., and captured Senator Green, then went down through Missouri. The first battle in which they participated was at Shiloh, Tenn., a two days’ engagement. They were at Hatchie River one day, participated in the battle of Vicksburg, where he surrendered July 3d, 1863. While in the service Mr. Bruce became a Corporal. After leaving Vicksburg his regiment went to Tennessee and was on duty as guard to supply trains on the Chattanooga & Atlanta Railroad. Mr. Bruce was captured at Moou Station, near Big Shanty, taken to Andersonville prison and held there until the war’s close. When released he returned to Vicksburg, arriving there March 28, 1865, and was in that city when President Lincoln was assassinated. He proceeded to St. Louis, obtained a furlough and spent one month at home, then returned, but was finally mustered out at Camp Butler, June 21, 1865.

After the close of the war Mr. Bruce returned to Murrayville, Ill., and in 1867 came to Springfield. In politics he is a Republican and in 1909 was elected Justice of the Peace, also served as School Director of the Ridgely School in 1897. He is a member of Stephenson Post No. 30 G.A.R., and in 1910 made a trip to the scene of the Battle of Shiloh, which occurred forty-eight years before. He says the place bears little resemblance to the scene as he remembers it at the time of the famous battle. In religious views Mr. Bruce is a member of the United Brethren Church. He has spent his life in hard work and at one time owned some land, but has now sold most of it. He was a successful farmer and a good business manager. As the result of an industrious life, he has a most comfortable home at 2402 Poorla Road, adjacent to Springfield, where he has lived for the last three years in retirement from active business life.

Mr. Bruce was married, October 7, 1850, to Sarah L. Ash, born November 23, 1846, a daughter of Ira and Amanda Victoria Ash. The parents came from Mississippi at an early date, locating in Sangamon County, Ill., where they operated a farm. They had six children of whom three are now living. Mr. Bruce and his wife have had the following children: Ida Bell, born March 7, 1882, married Thomas Davis, a janitor at the State House in Springfield; Emma F., born December 20, 1885, is the widow of Roy Stanton, and is employed at the postoffice in Springfield; Jennie, born April 2, 1886, married Jesse Easton, who owns a sawmill in Sangamon County; Harry W., born October 31, 1888, has for three years been an employee in the meter department of the Illinois Watch Company, but is now employed in the same capacity in Paterson, N. J. Mr. Bruce is much respected as a public-spirited, useful citizen and honored for his service in the Civil War. He stands well in the community and is identified with its progress and welfare.

BRUESTLE, John J.—In the condition of more or less friendliness which characterizes international relations in these early years of the twentieth century, it makes little general difference what country one claims as his birthright. What matters is that in every American city, the German looks back fondly to his fatherland, no matter how highly he is esteemed or how prominent he may have become. Among those citizens who have become representative of life in Springfield, is John J. Bruestle, whose comfortable, attractive and hospitable home is situated at No. 908 North Ninth Street, that city. Mr. Bruestle was born in the Province of Wurttemberg, Germany, May 13, 1854, the son Jacob and Mary (Keck) Bruestle. Their home always remained in the city of Rottenberg, where the father was a man of prominence and served as mayor for thirty-five consecutive years. This record is especially honorable as the law provides that such an official is continued in office during good behavior and a long period of incumbency proves the honesty and efficiency of the occupant of the office.

John J. Bruestle remained in his father's home in Germany, where he was well brought up, until he came to America and gained an excellent public school education. He then learned the butchering business, and that continued to be his occupation until he retired from business life. Mr. Bruestle has been very active in Republican politics and has served as State Meat Inspector under two State executives, being twice appointed under Governor Yates and again under Governor Deneen. He has held other important offices, having served as Inspector of Weights and Measures, as Deputy Collector and as Assessor. In all these offices his public duties have been performed with efficiency and with an honesty that invites the fullest confidence.

Mr. Bruestle was married at Springfield, Ill., to Miss Elizabeth Mann, who also came from good old German stock. Her parents were Henry and Theresa Mann and both came to America when young, the father from a Prussian province and the mother from Bavaria. They settled at Cumberland, Md., where the father followed the butchering business. In 1880, Miss Mann came to Springfield and on October 20, 1881, she was married to Mr. Bruestle. They have had two children: Mary, who was born December 21, 1885, died December 16, 1906, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery; and Jacob J., who was born November 20, 1888, resides with his parents. Mr. Bruestle and his family are members of the Lutheran Church. He belongs to the Odd Fellows and to the Blue Lodge Chapter and Council in Masonry, all at Springfield.

BRUNK, Charles Allen, an enterprising and progressive farmer of Ball Township, Sangamon County, Ill., was born near his present home, in that township, August 26, 1870, spending his boyhood on his father's farm and attending the country schools. He is a son of Jacob and Emily J. (Mason) Brunk, the former of whom was born in Ball Township and there spent his entire life, and the latter a native of Chatham Township. Jacob Brunk was born in Nicholas County, Va., in 1834, and died May 10, 1891, being buried in Brunk Cemetery. He was a farmer all his life and was a son of David Brunk, a native of Ohio, who came to Sangamon County in an early day and spent the remainder of his life there. David Brunk served in the Black Hawk War and was one of the prominent pioneers of Ball Township. Emily J. Mason was born July 25, 1847, and now lives in Ball Township. Her father was a farmer and a native of Massachusetts, who became an early settler in Sangamon County and there spent his last days.

After leaving school Charles A. Brunk worked on his father's farm, living at home until he reached the age of twenty-six years of age. He was fond of hunting and all outdoor sports, and has spent all his life on a farm. His parents had six children, of whom he is the second. Upon leaving home Mr. Brunk located on the farm where he now lives, and owns 150 acres in Section 11. He is well known in the township as a man of good principles, honest and reliable in his dealings with all, and interested in public improvements. He is in favor of modern methods of conducting agricultural operations, and carries on general farming, being much interested in dairying. He has always been a Democrat in politics and is now serving as School Trustee. He is fond of his home naturally and belongs to no fraternal organizations.

December 30, 1896, Mr. Brunk was married, in Auburn, Ill., to Mary Ellen Duncan, born in Sangamon County April 21, 1870, daughter of Alexander and Catherine Duncan, the former born in Scotland and the latter in Ireland. The parents were married in Springfield, having come to Sangamon County in youth, their parents spending their entire lives in their native countries. Two sons and three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Brunk, all of whom are living, namely: Catherine E., born January 6, 1860; Helene M., October 25, 1900; Elizabeth, May 13, 1863; Samuel J., July 31, 1894; Alexander, September 23, 1906. Mr. Brunk is not a member of any religious organization, but his wife belongs to the Catholic Church. Both are well known in social circles in their community and have many friends.

BRUNK, Jacob Orange (deceased).—The factories, the mills, the large industries of all kinds, the commercial and financial institutions, the bringing about the flattering condition of things now existing in Sangamon County. Without them the present state of prosperity could not have been attained; advancement would have come but slowly; but when all is said, it is to the agriculturists that the credit is most largely due, for without the farms that came first and the product thereof, other branches of success would not have been secured. The men who really form the bulwark are those who go to a new and strange country and there spend their lives in cultivating the soil and getting it from the wilderness, and through their efforts the advance of civilization has been promoted. Jacob Orange Brunk, now deceased, was one of Sangamon County's well known agriculturists, and spent his whole life in tilling the soil in Section 11, Ball Township, where he was born November 6, 1834.

David Brunk, his father was born in Ohio, and as a young man came to Illinois, where the remainder of his life was spent in farming. He enlisted at the outbreak of the Black Hawk War and served faithfully throughout that struggle, and after the close of the war served his county as well in time of peace. He married Maria Shoup, also a native of Ohio, and they became the parents of four children, Sarah, Ellen, Ann and Jacob O.

Jacob Orange Brunk secured his education in the common schools of his native locality, and as a youth was sent out to work on the farm during the summer months, his time for attending school coming during the winter months. On reaching manhood he secured a farm on Section 11, Ball Township, Sangamon County, and there spent a long and useful life, passing to his reward May 6, 1891. During the many years Mr. Brunk spent in farming in Sangamon County he witnessed wonderful changes. The crude implements of a half century ago were replaced with more modern and time-saving machinery, crop rotation, tillage and ditching were introduced, and numerous other improvements and scientific discoveries were made. The country flourished, and in the promotion of its progress Mr. Brunk did his full share, contributing cheerfully to each and every movement which he believed would be of benefit to his township, which he served for several terms as Supervisor. He carefully tilled his excellent farm of 370 acres, raised large crops and bred blooded live-stock, and before his death had accumulated a comfortable competency. Mr. Brunk was a faithful member of the Christian Church and his political beliefs were those of the Democratic party.

On January 13, 1887, Mr. Brunk was married, in Auburn, Ill., to Emma Jane Mason, who was born in that place, a daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Mason, natives respectively, of Boston, Mass., and Louisville, Ky. Thomas Mason came as a mere child from Boston, and spent the remainder of his life in Sangamon County engaged in farming. There were four children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Mason, Noah, Elizabeth, William and Emma Jane. To Mr. and Mrs. Brunk the following children were born: Thomas Madison, born April 10, 1865; Charles Allen, born April 29, 1870; Maria Elizabeth, born June 9, 1873; Samuel Walter, born April 9, 1876; Shellie M., born April 26, 1881; and William Mason, born December 13, 1884. Of these children, Thomas Madison married Rebecca J. Boyd, and they have three sons, Charles J., A. E. and Bruce C.; Charles A. married Mary E. Duncan and they have five children, Samuel J., Alexander, Catherine E., Helen May and Elizabeth; Elizabeth, the only daughter, married Dr. J. M. Duncan (now deceased), of Pawnee, and they had one son, William Thomas; Samuel W. married Edna Thornton, but they have no children; and William Mason married Lydia M. Lawley and they have one daughter, Edith May. The sons all live in Sangamon County and are engaged in farming.

BRUNNER, Fred.—Now that farming is an occupation making large returns for money and work invested, many of those who have been brought up to agricultural employment are leaving other avenues of industrial endeavor to return to the cultivation of the soil. Experience shows that Sangamon County land is the best of investments, and those who want to farm on either a large or small scale are buying some of this high-priced property. One who is returning to the occupation of youthful days, Fred Brunner, of Springfield, is a substantial farmer. He was born in Menard County, Ill., June 27, 1868, a son of Fred and Josephine (Aughaser) Brunner, both natives of Germany.

At a very early date the parents came to Menard County, Ill., where they bought 140 acres of land. This farm, which they developed and improved, was their home for forty-three years, and on it the father died, April 10, 1905, but his widow survives. They had eight children, five sons and three daughters, all of whom live in Sangamon County with the exception of one, who resides on the old homestead in Menard County.

The early training of Mr. Brunner was secured on his father's farm, where he remained until he was twenty-two years old. He then began farming for himself near Ashland, Ill., and for four years made a success of the work. Being needed at home, he returned, and for two years assisted his father. His next change was made when he moved to Perry County, but a year later he came to Springfield, and in 1866 began working at the boiler factory. There for twelve years he was a faithful employee, giving efficient and satisfactory service, but although he was numbered among the most valued assistants in the foundry department, he felt the call of the soil too strong to resist, and in 1908 bought ten acres of land, to which he moved. This has since been his home and he has made it one of the most valuable properties of its size in the township. In addition he owns city realty, consisting of houses and lots, which yield him a good income.

Mr. Brunner was married, December 26, 1855, in Perry County, Ill., to Katie Masbecker, born January 28, 1863. Her parents came to Red Bud, Ill., at an early day, but both are now deceased. They had ten children, eight daughters and two sons, seven of whom are still living. Mr. and Mrs. Brunner became the parents of one daughter, Katie, born July 11, 1903. On April 16, 1905, Mr. Brunner suffered the loss of his wife. She was a lovely lady, devoted to her home and family, and he has never recovered from the blow. Her remains are interred at Salisbury, where a tasteful monument marks her last resting place.

A hard worker all his life, Mr. Brunner has had the satisfaction of seeing his possessions multiply and his investments turn out successfully. Stanch in his support of the principles of Democracy, he has long been considered an important factor in the councils of his party, but has refused to allow his name to be used on the ticket. Nothing he has undertaken has proven too much for him, but he feels he is wise in returning to farming operations, for it is in them that he has made his money. Some men are born farmers, understanding crops and soils and knowing how to make them produce best results. Combined with his ability in this regard, is a careful training secured in youth, supplemented with years of experience as a farmer and business man, so it is no wonder he has been successful and he is ranked among the well-to-do men of Sangamon County.

BRUNNS, Frederick.—A number of Sangamon County residents, after years spent in other lines of endeavor, buy small tracts of land, on which they engage in truck farming, reaping large profit from their labor, owing to the richness of the soil, and the immense demand for vegetables and fruits. One of the men thus engaged is Frederick Bruns, now residing in Capital Township. He was born in his native land, April 29, 1845, a son of Frederick and Mary (Rollvelt) Bruns. The elder Frederick, who was a farmer, died in his native land. His wife, who was born on a sailing vessel during a voyage her mother took with her husband, who was a sailor, came to America with a sister, in 1853, bringing the sketch of this vessel with her. They made the trip on a sailing vessel, landing in New York, and came direct to Springfield. Prior to this Frederick Bruns had worked on a sailing vessel plying between Bremen, German, and New York, and had picked up a knowledge of English, Dutch and French, in addition to that he had put his native language.

After coming to Springfield he began as a brick manufacturer and later worked in the Reisch brewery. He was a very intelligent young man, having earned his own living from the time he was fourteen years old. He had been a news agent in Hamburg and knew men better before he had attained his majority than many double his age. When the old North Shaft was sunk he was one of those who assisted in the work, but after that he went to farming, thus continuing for four years. Returning to Springfield, he once more worked at the old North Shaft, and for eighteen years was lumber boss. The following four years he conducted a dry goods store, then operated a teaming business for several years, but fourteen years ago he located on his present farm, although he still does a little teaming. While making brick he furnished some of the brick used in the construction of the old Leland Hotel, in the capitol building, in the present State House, and the public buildings, as well as private residences.

Mr. Bruns was married in Petersburgh, May 6, 1888, to Mary Fishman, born in Germany May 8, 1845. Like Mr. Bruns, her father, died in Germany and her mother ventured to America going to Sterling, Ill., in 1871, and there she died in 1895, aged eighty-five years, having spent her declining years with a daughter. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bruns, four of whom survive: John lives on a farm in Capital Township; Fred lives in Bradford Station, where he carries on farming; George lives in Capital Township; and Minnie, wife of Daniel Burns, lives in Springfield, where her husband is engaged in mining. There are nine grandchildren in the family, of whom the grandparents are very proud.

The religious connections of Mr. Bruns are with the Lutheran Church, of which he is a consistent member. He belongs to Lodge No. 65, I. O. O. F., and has been a member of it for forty years. All his life he has been a Democrat and is stanch in his support of the principles and candidates of his party. Mr. Bruns is, like many another countryman of his who has come to this land in his youth, a man of considerable importance in the community in which he makes his home. He possesses many of the sterling traits of character which make Germans so useful as citizens the world over, and has never hesitated to give liberally of time and money to advance the general welfare of his township. In his work he has always been faithful and trustworthy, and takes pride in the fact that the bricks he made so many years ago testify to his skill as a workman and his honesty as a manufacturer. He takes deep pride in his family, is very fond of his children, and enjoys gathering them about him at the old home.

BRYANT, William Marion (deceased).—While some of Springfield's representative, solid business men have passed to their last reward, their memories are cherished by family and friends alike, and the good they did lives after them and will continue to do so, for noble deeds never die, sending their influence ever abroad, like the succeeding ripples from a stone cast into the water. The late William Marion Bryant, a thrifty, reliable man and a hard worker all his life, was during his last years a resident of Springfield. He was born in October, 1847, in Whitley County, Ky., a son of Abel and Eliza (Duncan) Bryant. At a very early day the family located in Kentucky, near the Tennessee line. There Abel Bryant grew to manhood, learning the blacksmith trade and following it. Later he removed to Jackson County, Ky., where he became a minister of the Baptist Church. Both he and his wife passed away in this county, having been the parents of twelve children, of whom William Marion Bryant was the eldest.

William Marion Bryant was reared as any normal farmer's boy, and learned the blacksmith trade from his father. Owing to the fact that the schools were poor, his educational advantages were limited, but he made good use of what he had. When still a lad, he enlisted in the Union army as a teamster, serving until the close of the war, when he returned home. In October, 1860, the young hero was married, at Irvine, Ky., to Miss Mary F. Johnson, daughter of William and Polly (Warner) Johnson. She was born near Irvine, Estill County, August 29, 1848. Her father was born in Madison County, Ky., in 1805, and became a farmer and distiller. He volunteered for service in the Mexican War, but before his regiment reached the front peace was declared. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Fourteenth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry, and gave brave service in defense of the Union. His death occurred in Kentucky when he was eighty-four years old. His wife, also a native of Madison County, passed away when sixty-three years old. They had twelve children, of whom Mrs. Bryant was the tenth. The Johnson family was of English origin, the grandfather, John Johnson, having come to America and located along Muddy Creek in Madison County, Ky. There he built a strong stone fort, for protection against the Indians, who were then hostile, and this still stands. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Bryant, William Warner, was also numbered among the pioneers of Kentucky.

Following his marriage Mr. Bryant located in Richmond, Madison County, Ky., where he was a teamster, hauling from Richmond to Irvine and Lexington. After five children were born to him he moved his family to Springfield Junction, continuing his teaming business. There he passed away, on October 1, 1890. During his earlier days he united with the Baptist Church and in politics he was a Democrat. His children were: George W., of Springfield, married Rose Shanley, issue—Marie and May Rose; Delaney, of Chicago, married Ida Manning; William W., of Springfield, married Mrs. Bell Rishel, issue—Clau, Dora, Mary and John William; Charles M., of Springfield, married Anna Judd, issue—Maud A., Mary E., Mabel, William, Susannah, George, Evelyn and Charles; Mary E. married Edward P. Taylor, of Pawnee, Ill., issue—Vantie, Roy Earl, Nellie and Lester. After moving to Springfield Junction three children were born: Emma B., married David H. Wittmer, issue—William Russell, of Springfield; Eugene married Elizabeth LeGrand, issue—Robert W. (deceased), Nellie, Eva Eugenia, Dolly Pearl; Claude died in infancy. After Mr. Bryant's death (1890) the family moved to the southwest part of Springfield and have since resided there.

Sturdy, honest, hard-working, never shirking a duty, but giving fair treatment to everyone, Mr. Bryant readily commanded the confidence and respect of his fellow citizens, and left behind him a family of whom any man might well be proud.

BUCHANAN, Nathaniel James (deceased).—Scotland is the country that has produced some of the most trustworthy men the world has ever known. No Scotchmen ask for admission to benevolent institutions, few of them are ever convicted of crimes, and the majority of them are studied and well informed. To come of Scotch parentage is an honor none can afford to overlook, and the family bearing the name of Buchanan in Springfield can lay just claim to such distinction. Nathaniel James Buchanan, now deceased, but formerly one of the best known contracting painters of Springfield, was born in New York City, January 12, 1840, the son of Nathaniel and Jennetta (Brown) Buchan, both natives of Scotland. The father was a painter and designer, and from him the son learned his trade.

The boyhood days of N. J. Buchanan were spent in New York City where he secured a good education in its most excellent schools. In 1877, Mr. Buchanan came to Springfield where he established himself in the painting and decorating business, and through his excellent work and methods of fair dealing built up a large and profitable trade. Although but a lad during the great struggle between the North and South, he rendered valuable service to his country, and later on was equally active in his endeavors to secure good government and purity in politics, casting his vote with the Democratic party. The Presbyterian Church held his membership, and when he died December 4, 1906, it was with a firm belief in its teachings. For a number of years he held membership in Springfield Lodge No. 114, Modern Woodmen of America.

On January 17, 1877, Mr. Buchanan married Melissa E. Gonterman, daughter of Green and Elizabeth (Grant) Gonterman. Her parents came to Sangamon County in 1835, there dying, her father on February 14, 1874, and her mother July 5, 1905. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan: Florence N., with her mother; Robert Edward, married and residing in Springfield; Alice L., married; Nathaniel James Jr., with his mother; Helen May, Dorothy Elizabeth and Thomas, all at home. Mrs. Buchanan owns her pleasant home at (new No.) 142 West Edwards street, where she welcomes her many friends. She attends the same church her husband helped so liberally to support, and is one of its most highly esteemed members.

Buck, Prof. Thomas J. (deceased).—The death of Thomas J. Buck, which occurred in Springfield, January 8, 1908, removed from the city one of its well-known and highly esteemed citizens, and one who was regarded as an educator of ability. Mr. Buck was born August 20, 1846, in Coshocton County, Ohio, son of Thomas Stan Jones and Eva (Fishers) Buck, natives of Pennsylvania. The father removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio at an early day and in the latter State was engaged in farming until coming to Xenia, Ill., where he purchased land and carried on farming operations until his death. There were eight children born to him and his wife, and of these three are now living: Mrs. Belle Johnson, of the State of Washington; Mrs. Mary Ann Partness, widow of Dr. Partness, of Vincennes, Ind., and Elizabeth, who married Frank Hough, a well-known resident of Springfield.

Thomas J. Buck attended the district schools of the vicinity of his home in Coshocton, Ohio, and assisted in the work on the home farm. He graduated from school in Illinois, where he had accompanied his parents, and, having fitted himself for the profession of teaching, at once took up that work. For a number of years he was located in Laclede County, Mo., and for a shorter period near Flora, Ill., but later removed to Springfield, where he was compelled to give up teaching on account of poor health. His death occurred in the family home at No. 1064 South Pasfield Avenue, which residence is now owned by his widow. He was a Republican in political affiliations, but never aspired to public office. His religious belief was that of the Methodist Church.

On February 3, 1881, Mr. Buck was married, at Flora, Ill., to Mary B. Thomas, who was born in Rockbridge County, Va., November 4, 1854, daughter of Fendel and Elizabeth (Kidd) Thomas, the latter of whom was a cousin of the great adventurer, Captain Kidd. Mr. Thomas was a Virginia farmer who came to Ohio in 1862. There he was made a prisoner by the Confederates during the Civil War, and was never heard of afterwards. For about a year after this event the family lived in Ohio, after which they went to West Virginia and five years later settled near Flora, in Clay County, Ill., where a short time later Mrs. Buck was married. Mrs. Thomas continued to live near Flora until her death, which occurred February 22, 1908, and five of her six children are now living: John, a farmer of Clay County; George, proprietor of a clothing store in Flora, Ill.; William, who resides in Springfield; Mrs. O. W. Bradbury, living in Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Oleta McFarthing, living in Odin, Ill., and Mrs. Buck.

Six children were born to the union of Mr. and Mrs. Buck, and all except one are now living: Lola Alice, the wife of Joseph Leneger, is now living in New Berlin; Marion R., Laura L., Russell R., and Forest L., all living at home. Mrs. Buck is a member of the Christian Church.

Buckles, Joseph L.—Most Illinois men are taking a deep interest in the welfare of their communities, feeling individual responsibility for proper local government. One of the men who have always borne their part in all movements calculated to advance Pawnee, is Joseph L. Buckles, a representative citizen of Sangamon County. He is of Kentucky stock, which originated in both Virginia and Maryland, and inherits many of the excellent characteristics of the people of all three states. Mr. Buckles was born in Hardin County, Ky., May 27, 1848, a son of Alfred and Sarah (Boarman) Buckles. The paternal grandfather came from his native State, Virginia, at the age of six years, in 1860, to Hardin County, Ky., where the remainder of his life was passed, dying there at the advanced age of ninety-two years. The maternal grandfather, born in Maryland, also emigrated to Hardin County, Ky., which continued his home until his demise.

Alfred Buckles and his wife were born in Hardin County, he in 1825, and she, May 7, 1829. His death occurred there in 1875, but his widow survived him and in 1882 came to Sangamon County to live with her son John. There she passed away in 1891. Both she and her husband were excellent people and enjoyed universal respect and confidence.

Joseph L. Buckles received his education in a log schoolhouse in his native county, remaining at home until he was twenty-four years old. At that time he left to locate in Warren County, a year later went to Hart County. Following this he was engaged in railroad work at Paducah, Summersville and Princeton, Ky., finally coming to Illinois in 1885, where for a year he alternated between Springfield and the family farm on Brush Creek. In 1884 he came to Pawnee, but two years later moved to Springfield, spending two years there. His next business venture was the conducting of a butcher business at Springfield for fourteen months, but in 1890 he located permanently at Pawnee. In the pleasant home he now owns, For many years he was a contracting painter, but is now prac-
The childhood of Henry Peck Buckley, was spent in his native State, and after taking a course in the public schools, he entered Oberlin (Ohio) College, from which he was graduated. After leaving school, he joined his father in a mercantile business in Dubuque, Ia.; later going with the latter to Kansas City, Mo., where they engaged in a hardware business for four years. In 1872 they sold out their interests, and came to Springfield, there establishing themselves in the feed and livery business, which they continued until 1881, at which time the father retired and the son turned his attention to the florist business, in which line, he built up a large and profitable trade. Henry Peck Buckley was a keen business man and paid close attention to his financial interests. He cared little for public office or political affairs, but confined his whole attention to his business. He was a Republican in political belief, and was interested in the general welfare of the community, but was a man of quiet tastes, devoted to his home and family, and an active member of the First Congregational Church of Springfield.

Mr. Buckley was married, in Springfield, March 9, 1876, to Miss Ella Conkling, born in Springfield, August 8, 1856, daughter of William Johnson and Olivia Jennette (Holton) Conkling, the former born in New York in 1826, and the latter in Thetford, Vt., in 1828, Conkling was an eminent lawyer well known in Sangamon County, and both he and his wife were early settlers of Springfield. Seven children were born to Mr. Buckley and his wife, namely: William Thompson, has charge of his father's greenhouse and another greenhouse at Pasfield and Scarlett Avenue, was married October 11, 1905, to Margarett Dwyer; Alice M., wife of Edward B. Britton, who has a farm of 400 acres near Cantrall, Ill., was married April 22, 1905, and they have two children (twins)—Ella and Kathryn, aged six years; Harry M., connected with the Sangamon Coal Company, of Springfield, married Miss Marie Scholzler, May 11, 1910; Edgar H., Secretary and Treasurer of the Sangamon Coal Company, married Miss Clara Hollee, August 17, 1905, and they have two children, Ruth, born May 21st, 1906, and Edgar H., Jr., born Nov. 18th, 1911; Ralph Conkling, connected with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, of Springfield, married Miss Zella Sheffer, June 26, 1905, and they have two children—Harry, aged four, and Dorothy, three years; Jeanette, was married January 27, 1906, to Volney V. Vandercook, who is engaged in fruit and dairy business in Springfield; Helen Grace, unmarried, living at home with her mother, at 516 East Scarlett Avenue. Mr. Buckley died June 24, 1901, at his home on East Scarlett Avenue, and his remains were interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He was highly respected, as an upright, reliable citizen, and his loss was deeply mourned by his many friends and associates. His honesty and probity were

Mr. Bullough was born in Bolton, Lancashire, England, July 26, 1843, a son of Peter and Betsy (Portington) Bullough, both of England, where the father was a silk weaver.

Mr. Bullough received his education in his native country, attending a high school, and for years taught school in Bolton, but eventually came to the United States, landing in New York and locating at Monongahela City, Pa. In 1867 he came west to Braceville, Ill., and from there, in 1888, moved to Springfield, which continued his home until his demise, April 16, 1908. Upon coming to Springfield, Mr. Bullough connected himself with the Woodside Coal Company as foreman and bookkeeper, and was thus employed for twenty-three years. After coming to this country he espoused the tenets of the Republican party and for a time served as Alderman in Dawson, but aside from that held no public offices. He was a member of the Maccabees and the American Home Circle, both of Springfield. Holding communion with the Church of England, when he came to America, he transferred his membership to St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral and died in the faith of the Episcopal Church.

Mr. Bullough was married at Braceville, April 17, 1869, to Elizabeth Williams, born in Monmouthshire, South Wales, daughter of John and Margaret Williams, who came to America from Wales when she was only four years of age. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bullough: Elizabeth, born March 9, 1870, married James Burns, special agent for the Illinois Coal Company of Springfield; Mary, born November 25, 1871, married Richard Walker, and they live at Dawson; Elieu, born July 14, 1876, married Thomas Lowery, an employe of the post-office at Springfield; Margaret, born May 11, 1880, is married, her husband being a blacksmith by trade; Clara Ruth, unmarried and living at home, chief local operator with the Central Union Telephone Company, was born December 11, 1882; Laura May, born February 8, 1888, also an employe of the telephone company; Harriet Louise, born March 22, 1890, employed in the Ridgley Bank; and William, born June 7, 1893, an employe of the Central Union Telephone Company. Those of the children who are unmarried reside with their mother on South Fifth Street. They have all been carefully reared and have done well in life. Mr. Bullough was a most estimable man, fond and proud of his children, and, although a quiet man, exerted a strong influence among his associates, by whom he is remembered with respect and affection.

BUNCH, David S.—Representative men in any community gain a distinction of their own and control strong influences. Some of Sangamon County’s most reliable and substantial men are those who have gained comfortable means through agricultural pursuits, and one of these is David S. Bunch. He was born in Fluvanna
He served at one time as Superintendent of Schools in St. Clair County. He was a Lutheran in religion and in politics was a Democrat. His wife was Sophia LeCoque, a native of France. Their third son and fifth child was Charles O. S.

The father of Albert C. Bunsen was reared on his father's farm in St. Clair County and educated in the country school. In early life he followed farming, but, possessing a natural ability for mechanical work and having a strong predilection for such work, learned the various trades of a blacksmith, machinist, and wagon-maker, and was able to repair almost any kind of machinery or tools. He was married in St. Clair County, Ill., in 1858, to Charlotte Johanna Ernestine Muenstenberger, who was born in Luebeck, Germany, January 23, 1838, daughter of Herman Muenstenberger, a Lutheran minister. Four children were born of this union, namely: Adolph Douglas, a post-office inspector, living in St. Louis; Paul Herman, of El Paso, Tex.; Albert Charles; Alma, Mrs. Ernst Reeener, of St. Louis. Mr. Bunsen spent 1885-86 in Mexico, working at his various trades, and later spent eleven years in the Pacific Northwest. He returned to Illinois in 1898 and spent 1905 and 1906 in Chicago, and later returned to St. Clair County where he resides.

Albert C. Bunsen was born in Springfield, Illinois, January 23, 1838, and educated in that county schools and at the University of Illinois.

BUNN, Jacob. (Vol. I, p. 66.)

BUNSEN, Albert Charles, assistant stationary engineer at the State House in Springfield, and a highly respected citizen of the city, was born six miles east of Belleville, St. Clair County, Ill., January 1, 1868, and spent the first twenty-two years of his life on a farm. He attended the public school until he was seventeen years of age and acquired a good education. His father, Charles O. S. Bunsen, was born in Germany, June 6, 1834, and was three years old at the time his parents brought him to the United States. The father of Charles O. S., George Bunsen, a native of Germany, lived at Frankfurt-on-the-Main, and emigrated with his family to the United States in 1834, proceeding to St. Louis, where he lived for a time. He subsequently purchased 300 acres of land in St. Clair County, Ill., and his death occurred in Belleville, in 1873. He was a professor of languages in Germany and a highly educated man.
Herman F. Burkhardt, the direct subject of this sketch, was born in Springfield, April 10, 1857. During his early childhood and boyhood his father was in business, conducting a hotel and grocery, but when Herman was seventeen years of age he met with reverses and the lad was forced to earn his own living. During his period of prosperity Gottlieb Burkhardt was prominent in civic affairs, serving as Coroner for eight years, but after his failure lost heart and did not aspire to public office. Although forced to leave school early, Herman F. Burkhardt secured a good common-school education and has added to his knowledge by application and experience. He commenced working for the Illinois Watch factory, on April 17, 1872, and continued in their employ for thirty-eight years, his service being continuous, with the exception of ten years when he was Superintendent of carriers, to which position he was appointed by President Cleveland. Both in the factory and post-office he gave universal satisfaction by reason of his faithful, conscientious work, and no man has more reason to be proud of his record in this respect than Mr. Burkhardt.

On September 28, 1880, Mr. Burkhardt married Rose A. Hoffman, of Springfield, daughter of Charles Hoffman, and they had two children, Rose, born August 7, 1881, and Fred, born December 8, 1882. After the death of his first wife Mr. Burkhardt married, June 28, 1893, Kate Speas, born October 7, 1870, in Springfield, daughter of John and Kate Speas, her father an old settler and an engineer. Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt have had children as follows: Hazel, born May 25, 1894; Edna, born March 30, 1896; Lester, born June 27, 1897; Evelyn, born September 2, 1898; Ray, born August 12, 1902; Catherine, born December 14, 1904, and Heiena and Lorena, twins, born August 14, 1907. The family residence is at No. 933 Tenth Street, Springfield, and there their many friends are made cordially welcome with true German hospitality.

Mr. Burkhardt is a Woodman and is Clerk of Capital Camp, No. 333, of Springfield. He is a Democrat in political faith and has served as Clerk of Election of the First Precinct of the Second Ward for the past three years. In the Lutheran Church, of which he is a member, he is an important factor, and is ever ready to bear his share in its good work. During all his connections, both business and social, Mr. Burkhardt has always tried to do what he believed was his full duty, giving good measure of work and much kindly attention to those less fortunate than he. As a result, he is not only respected and honored, but has friends all over the county, where his true worth is appreciated.

BURKHARDT, John M. (deceased).—The good deeds of many are hidden as long as they survive, but after death has claimed them, these same acts of generosity arise to bear witness to the kindness of heart which was so leading a characteristic of the man. This is certainly the case with John M. Burkhardt, who for many years conducted a general store on the east side of the square at Springfield. As Senator Cullom, a warm, personal friend of his, often said of him, he was one of the best citizens and possessed. A German by birth, he always lent a helping hand to those of his own nationality, and assisted them in becoming useful citizens of the land both had adopted. Mr. Burkhardt was born in the kingdom of Wurttemburg, Germany, January 5, 1807, a son of a well known tavern, or hotel keeper.

Attending school in his neighborhood, Mr. Burkhardt gained a good knowledge of his native tongue, and worked on the farm his father owned, in addition to his tavern. Coming to America, in 1832, Mr. Burkhardt first obtained employment on Pennsylvania farms, but later worked on flat boats, plying along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers clear to New Orleans. Finally, he began working in a store in St. Louis, from whence he came to Springfield. In 1851, he started a general store in the square, operating it until 1859. His beautiful home, one mile east of town, was built by him, and in it he died, August 1, 1868. Although he educated himself in English, Mr. Burkhardt was a master of considerable attainments, and his penmanship was beautifully clear and even. A natural bookkeeper, his books were kept as models of neatness, each figure being perfectly formed. Reared a Lutheran, in later life, he joined the Grace Lutheran Church of this city. From the time he became a citizen of the country, he voted the Democratic ticket.

On August 15, 1843, he married Mary Elizabeth Nagel, who was born in Rhine Preis, Bavaria, Germany, June 24, 1827, a daughter of John and Christina (Goetz) Nagel. Her father was born in Germany, but his wife was a native of France. The latter died in Europe, and her husband then came to America, landing in St. Louis in 1829, remaining there until his death. Mrs. Burkhardt had an uncle Joseph Goetz, who was one of the great Napoleon’s picked body guard. She distinctly remembers the bringing back of Napoleon’s body from St. Helena. She also recalls many interesting incidents of pioneer days in Springfield, which are valuable as giving a distinct picture of those early times. Her memory is remarkable, and she is exceedingly pleasant in manner, hospitable and genial, a most delightful lady to meet.

Mr. and Mrs. Burkhardt had children as follows: John; Bertha; Charles; Emma; Annie; Jennie; Ida; Lillie; Mary Ellen, who died August 15, 1846, aged ten months and eleven days; Elizabeth, who died February 22, 1853, aged two years and four months, and Clara, who died August 10, 1866, age seven years. John enlisted when only eighteen years old as a private in the One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was killed at Gun Town, Miss. Bertha married William Swift, but died, leaving two sons, Charles and William. Charles is unmarried and resides at Galesburg, Miss. Emma is her mother’s dutiful and devoted companion. Annie married Alfred Booth of Springfield, and they have one daughter, Mary Elizabeth. Jennie married Arthur Goetz of Manitowoc, and they have one son, William. Ida married John Davenport of Nashville, Ill., and they have two sons, Adrian and Walter D. Lillie married Frank Miller of Ottawa, Kas. Mr. Burkhardt was a friend of both Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, but he cast his vote for the former, in spite of being a Democrat, because of his admiration for the man and his principles.

BURNHART, William, who has established a good contracting business in the line of painting and decorating, has been a resident of Springfield for about five years. He was born in Milwaukee, Wls., March 17, 1828, a son of George and Louise (LeMasters) Burnhart, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Louisville, Ky., and an early settler of Dayton, Ohio. The father was a contractor in the same line as his son William and for many years worked at his trade in Dayton, where he had moved as a young man. The family later removed to Milwaukee, Wls., where the father built up a good business and conducted it until his death. Both parents are deceased but their three sons and two daughters are all living.

After receiving his education in the schools of Milwaukee, William Burnhart became associated with his father and learned his trade, following it several years in his native city. He removed as a young man to Hannibal, Mo., and carried on a business four years, spent a few years at Danville, Ill., moved thence to Dayton, Ohio, and later to Indianapolis, where he conducted his business. He eventually located at Decatur, Ill., where he lived until coming to Springfield in 1906. He built up a good trade through his ability and enterprise and has the confidence of his patrons and associates.

Mr. Burnhart was married in Milwaukee, April 7, 1859, to Miss Mary Scott, a native of Quincy, Ill., born in June, 1871, whose parents and brothers and sisters are all deceased. One child was born to Mr. Burnhart and wife, a son, George. Mr. Burnhart is a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church and in politics is a Democrat. He owns some property in Springfield and also in Milwaukee. He and his wife have won many friends in the city.

BURNS, Barney (deceased), a patriotic Irish-American citizen of Sangamon County, Ill., was a veteran of the Civil War and was much esteemed for his many good qualities. He was born May 27, 1828, son of Owen and Mary (Barnett) Burns, both natives of Ireland, who spent their entire lives there. The father was a farmer and the early years of Barney Burns were spent on the home farm. He was educated in Ireland and remained with his parents some years after leaving school.

In 1830 Mr. Burns emigrated to the United States and came direct to Sangamon County, Ill., where the remainder of his life was spent. He engaged in farming near Springfield and during the last years of his life became operator of a coal mine. Being energetic and industrious, and having considerable ambition, he made his own way rapidly in his new home and formed many warm friendships among his neighbors and associates. He served three years in an Illinois Regiment during the Civil War and acquitted himself creditably as a soldier. At the close of the war he returned to Sangamon County and there soon afterwards married. He was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church and active in church work. In politics he was a Democrat and, although taking little interest in political matters and caring for no public office, served for a time as School Director. He was a great lover of his home and family and a devoted husband, and also enjoyed the society of his friends.

Mr. Burns was married in Springfield, in 1857, to Miss Mary Irene James, born in Sangamon County, Ill., June 15, 1843, daughter of George W. and Carrie E. James, both natives of Sangamon County and members of prominent families there. Of the children born of this union four are living, namely: William, John, George and James, all married and living in Springfield. Mrs. Burns has a comfortable home at 2021 Peoria Road, Springfield.

BURNS, John E.—The profits from farming activities are such that those who have spent many years thus engaged, feel justified in retiring to spend the remainder of their lives in the enjoyment of the plenty their industry has accumulated. Sangamon County has a number of these representative men, who, now that they are no longer engaged in arduous toil, are at leisure to give more attention to local affairs and to deliberate carefully upon reforms and improvements. Among these men is numbered John E. Burns, of Illiopolis. He was born in Bath County, Ky., October 16, 1824, a son of Dennis and Catherine (Farmer) Burns, natives of Virginia. His parents moved to Kentucky at a very early day in its history, locating on a farm in Bath County, where they died, having brought up a family of ten children, six of whom were stalwart sons. Of them all, John E., who was the youngest, is the only survivor. Dennis Burns served the Government as a teamster during the Black Hawk War.

After receiving a common school education, John E. Burns worked on the farm, but later bought and sold fine stock. When the war broke out, he enlisted in Bath County in the far-famed Company M, Seventh Kentucky Cavalry, but in less than a year he was discharged on account of disability caused by sickness. During that period, however, he was made Captain of his company by unanimous vote, and participated in several famous engagements. At the close of the war, Mr. Burns came to Illinois, locating first in Logan County, near Mt. Pulaski, where he farmed for a year; but not being satisfied, moved to Lake Fork, near Corland, and continued farming for three years. Following this, he moved to Sangamon County, from south of Lanesville, where he farmed for four years, making thereafter several changes until 1891, when he settled on his present place, which he owns. Although eighty-five years of age, Mr. Burns enjoys excellent health and is a well-preserved man. A grateful Government pays him a pension which his military services merit.

Mr. Burns was married in Bath County, Ky., to Martha J. Self, born in Virginia, but brought to Kentucky by her parents, Joseph and Sarah (Gauldin) Self, both natives of Virginia, and members of first families in that State. Mr. Self was a blacksmith by trade, and coming to Illinois with his son-in-law, Mr. Burns, he found work at his calling. Several years later, he went to Saline County, Mo., where he and his wife died. Mrs. Burns died on Christmas Day, 1906, having borne her husband five children three of whom survive. Lillian lives at home with her father; Chessella is the wife of Add S. Blair of Mechanicsburg, a farmer; Clay lives in Springfield, where he conducts a feed yard. There are six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren in the family.

The political affiliations of Mr. Burns are with the Republican party. For many years he has been a valued member of Morgan Post, No. 208, G. A. R., in which he takes a deep interest, enjoying meetings with his comrades and living over with them the stirring events of the great struggle. "Mr. Burns is liberal in his religious views, while his wife was a consistent member of the Christian Church. Loyal, steadfast of purpose, a man who has worked hard and saved wisely of his earnings. Mr. Burns sets an excellent example to the younger generation, and by his earnest life has proven what can be accomplished provided one is willing to exert himself and never shirk a duty which lies before him."

Mr. Burns has seen many changes in Sangamon County, since locating here. Some of these he is proud of, while he believes others do not afford evidence of improvement; but he retains his faith in its future greatness and has never lost his interest in the mighty Commonwealth with which he cast his fortunes after fighting to maintain the supremacy of the General Government.

BURNS, Paul George, engaged in a printing business in Springfield, and serving as Clerk of the Probate Court, is one of the progressive young men of the city. He was born in Springfield, June 20, 1851, son of M. H. and Elizabeth (Schmitt) Burns, M. H. Burns was reared in Columbus, Ohio, but when a young man moved to Springfield, Ill. In 1877 he married Elizabeth Schmitt, daughter of Matthias Schmitt, of West Carpenter Street, Springfield. Six children were born of this marriage: Matthias M., Thomas N., John (deceased), Paul G., Mary C. and Henry (deceased). During the Civil War M. H. Burns worked as a teamster.

Paul George Burns was educated in the public schools of Springfield, until fourteen years old, when he entered the employ of T. W. Kidd, proprietor of the Morning Monitor, later working for Phillips Brothers. For five years he was foreman of the State Printing Company, and then bought the Capital City Printing Company, in conjunction with Charles Gaa. The partners are still conducting the business at No. 323 1/2 South Fifth Street.

Mr. Burns has had but two places of residence during his life. He was born at the corner of First and Mason Streets, Springfield, and when three years old was taken to the present family residence, on West Jefferson Street, just outside the city limits, in Springfield Township. In 1904 he was elected Assistant Supervisor of Springfield Township, and re-elected in 1906, being the only Democrat elected to that office in Springfield Township in over forty years. In 1910 he was elected Probate Clerk of Sangamon County, which important office he still holds. In all the connections he has formed, Mr. Burns has proven himself a man of ability, and his conscientious performance of the duty which lies nearest at hand, has made the people repose trust in him, and indicates that he will be called to higher honors in the future. It is such men as he who prove the contention that this is the age of the young man.

BURNS, Thomas J., one of the well known and highly respected citizens of Sangamon County, and an honored veteran of the Civil War, in which he received wounds the scars from which he will carry to his grave, now engaged in farm-lug and gardening on a snug little tract of land in Section 6, Cooper Township, was born August 23, 1842, in Buffalo Hart Grove, Sangamon County, Ill., a son of Benjamin F. and Ellis (Ridgeway) Burns, both of whom were born in Kentucky in 1816. The parents of Mr. Burns came to Sangamon County some time before the "Deep Snow," and Mr. Burns purchased a tract of land in Buffalo Hart Township, where he engaged in farming until his death in April, 1879, the mother having passed away in 1865 while her son, Thomas J., was in the army. Of their seven children but two are surviving, Thomas J. and a sister, Mrs. Parthenia Sensabaugh of California.

During his boyhood days Mr. Burns worked on his father's farm, and on November 22, 1862, when twenty years of age, enlisted for service in the United States Army, becoming a member of Company K, Eleventh Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under the command of Col. Nevins, who was later killed in the battle of Vicksburg. Mr. Burns served three years, during that time taking part in the battles of Grand Bluff, Miss., Champion Hills, Black River, the Siege of Vicksburg for forty-eight days and nights, during which time three charges were made; also in skirmishes or on post duty at Natchez, Canton, Jackson, Yazoo City (for seven days) Fort Hudson, back again to Vicksburg for forty days and nights with a skirmish nearly every day; also took part in operations at New Orleans, Spanish Fort, Port Blakeley and Mobile, Ala., where he was stationed at the time of the close of the war. The Eleventh was mustered out at Baton Rouge, La., July 14, 1865. It had a record of which no member need be ashamed, and Mr. Burns always proved himself a brave, gallant and faithful soldier, and that he was a hard-fighting man and always to the front is borne witness by his scars received in battle. He served as Corporal of his company and during its long, wearisome marches was one of the most cheerful of the boys in blue.

After his services to his country were ended, Mr. Burns returned to the old homestead in Buffalo Hart Grove, and for the next ten or twelve years alternated between there and a farm in Jewel County, Kan., two years at a time, and he still owns property in the latter State, in addition to his tract of land in Cooper Township, where he has resided since 1900. He is a Republican in political belief, and both he and Mrs. Burns are members of the Methodist Church.

On January 17, 1866, Mr. Burns was married to Martha A. Sensabaugh, who was born May 16, 1845, in Columbus, Ohio, the daughter of Joseph A. Sensabaugh, a native of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Burns' mother was a native of New York, and married Mr. Sensabaugh in Ohio, whence they came to Illinois and engaged in farming until their removal to Jewel, Kan. There Mr. Sensabaugh was following agricultural pursuits at the time of his death, while his widow survived him until February, 1909. They were the parents of five daughters and four sons, all of whom are now living.

Mr. and Mrs. Burns have been born nine children, the oldest and youngest of whom are dead, the others being: Laura, the wife of Charles Leydig of Formosa, Kan.; Ida, the wife of George W. Burke, living in Springfield; Effie B., the wife of C. M. Smith, of South Dakota; Minnie, the wife of Charles Ayers, also of South Dakota; Mattie, the wife of Paul Walker, of the same State; Mabel, who married Louis Richards, of Kansas City, Mo.; Thomas H., living in South Dakota; and Robert W., who lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Burns have nine grandchildren.

BURR, Thomas, one of Sangamon County's oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, who is in good health and still looks after his truck garden on the edge of Springfield, Ill., has been engaged in his present business for about thirty-five years, and is now eighty-three years of age. Mr. Burr was born in England, May 2, 1828, a son of William Burr, also a native of England, where he spent his entire life and lived on one farm over fifty years. William Burr died at the age of ninety-six years. He had a sister who lived to be one hundred two years old and had seven brothers who served in the British Army during the Revolutionary War, also in the war with France, taking part in the Battle of Waterloo, and died in England. His wife, Elizabeth Kemsley, spent her entire life in England, and both her parents and those of her husband were natives of England.

Thomas Burr received a meager education in his native country, leaving school to go to work at the age of twelve years, and when he was but nine years old he worked for a time on a farm at twelve cents per day. As a young man he emigrated to the United States, sailing in the ship "Southampton," from London Docks, on Thursday, March 24, 1853, and arriving in New York City May 2nd. His only sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, lives in Springfield, and he has one brother, James, living at Ranelagh, England. He has a distinct memory of Queen Victoria as she looked upon the day of her marriage, and also remembers the death of the Duke of Wellington. After locating in Springfield he saw several illustrious men, including Lincoln and Buren, while in residence.

After coming to America Mr. Burr spent three years in Ohio, then worked for a time on a cattle ranch, and after spending three years in Springfield, Ill., returned to Ohio. In 1863 he located permanently in Springfield, and has since carried on farming and gardening. He has been successful in truck gardening and has been in business for many years.

Mr. Burr was married in Ohio, in 1857, to Miss Martha Young, a native of Ohio, who lived but four years after her marriage, dying at Woodside, Ill., in 1860. She bore her husband one daughter, Amy, who married Amos Young, of Springfield, and had six children, three of whom are living. Mr. and Mrs. Young have three children. Mr. Burr married as his second wife his first wife's sister, Nancy Young, in Columbus, Ohio, August 1, 1860. They at once located in Sangamon County and became parents of one daughter, Belle, born in Woodside Township, Sangamon County, who married John Dexheimer, of Springfield, and had eleven children, of whom two daughters and seven sons survive: Theodore, Mabel, Harry, Roy, Grace, Johnnie, Orlin, Maynard and one other. The second Mrs. Burr died May 29, 1899, and Mr. Burr lives with his daughter, Mrs. Dexheimer, at the old home, 1710 South Fifth Street, Springfield. Mr. Burr has seven great-grandchildren: Charles and Thelma King; Merle Dexheimer; Norman, Esther, Amy and Bertha Gagnon.

Mr. Burr was stopping at the old American House in Springfield when Buchanan was elected President. He met Abraham Lincoln many times and holds pleasant memories of that great man. He is well known among the old settlers of Sangamon County and remembers many events of the earlier history of the region. He is public-spirited and enterprising and ready to support any worthy object which comes to his notice. He has a comfortable home at Laurel Avenue and Fifth Street and is in good financial circumstances as a result of hard work and careful management. He is a faithful member of the First Methodist Church and is a warm supporter of the principles of the Republican party.

BURT, Alfred Hall, who, for the past forty years, has served as Constable of Rochester Township, Sangamon County, was born in California, Branch County, Mich., born December 29, 1847. A son of John V. and Orvilia (Teyrell) Burt, both natives of New York, the former born at Mt. Morris, that State. The father was a blacksmith by trade and in 1835 moved to Branch County, Mich., where he continued his trade until his death, his wife also dying there. They were parents of four sons and four daughters, of whom three sons and two daughters survive. Three of his sons served in the Civil War.

At the age of four years Alfred H. Burt accompanied his mother's sister to Swanton Falls, Vt., and the three travelled by boat to Rochester, Ill., where he received his education. Later he was adopted by a man named Levi St. Clair, on whose farm he worked until twenty-three years old, when he engaged in teaming on his own account. Three years later he found employment as sitter in the brick yards at Rochester, and two years later left this occupation to accept the office of Constable, to which he was elected in 1870 and which he has since held. He has served seventeen terms as Constable of the village, and served as Special Deputy Sheriff under Sheriffs Samuel Shoup, Campbell and Charles Werner. He has rendered efficient and faithful service in his various offices and has won an excellent reputation in the community. He is active in public affairs and in politics a Democrat. He is a member of the Christian Church and ready to advance the cause of that organization.

May 3, 1871, Mr. Burt was married in Rochester, to Margaret Money, born in Fairfax County, Va., June 6, 1854, a daughter of P. A. Money. Both parents were natives of Virginia and came to Rochester with their family in 1855, spending the remainder of their lives there, where the father worked at his trade of carpenter. The Money family included two sons and six daughters, and of these the following survive: Louis A., of Denver, Colo.; Henry, of Indiana; Elizabeth, wife of William Campbell, of Rochester; Susan, wife of Frank Miller, of Decatur, and Mrs. Burt. Ten children were born to Mr. Burt and wife, namely: Alfred S. (the oldest), Ida B., Alice H., Lillian M., Margaret M., John H., Daisy M., Charles E., and two who died in infancy. Mr. Burt had a warm regard for Abraham Lincoln, with whom he was personally acquainted. He owns a pleasant home at Rochester and some farm land.

BURTON, John David.—Sangamon County is noted for its men who know the business of farming in all its details, and of the townships Loami has its full share, prominent among them being John David Burton, who carries on agricultural and stock-raising operations, on Section 14. Mr. Burton was born in this township, August 14, 1855, and has been a resident here all of his life with the exception of eight years. He is a son of David S. and Elizabeth (Tharpe) Burton, he a native of Ohio and she of Lawrence County, Va., just over the Ohio State line.

After their marriage these parents came to Illinois, settling in the southern part of the State, in what is known as the American Bottoms, but the overflow of the river caused them to leave that section. Mr. Burton made a sort of trough or canoe out of a large log and moved his family and his household goods to a higher spot until he could find a place to locate permanently. Subsequently, he came to Sangamon County on foot, and purchased a fifteen-acre tract at the Half Way Place, between Loami and Springfield, on which he built a log house. Purchasing a team of oxen, he returned to the southern part of the State and brought his wife and child, Jincy Ann, who had been born at that place, to the new home in Sangamon County. He began at once to clear away the timber on his place, hauling it to Curran, where he sold it to the Wabash Railroad. A very handy man with an axe, he was able at times to chop five cords of wood in a day, and he also made rails, hauling them at night, thus being able to rapidly clear his farm of the timber as well as indebtedness. Having secured enough money to clear off all of his obligation, he started to Springfield in the snow with his hand shocking through his shoes. It happened that Mr. Burton's currency was old State Bank money, and gold at that time was at a twenty-five per cent premium; consequently the man refused to accept the money in payment for the land, and being an uneducated man, Mr. Burton did not know what to do. Governor Yates, the great War Governor happened to hear the conversation, and, stepping into the office said: "Young man, let me see your money." Looking it over, he said to the man: "Sir, this is legal tender and good money. You take it." The latter wished to know what the old governor had to do with the matter, but Governor Yates only replied: "This young man wants to pay for his land. You take that money, for you can't beat him while I'm here." After receiving the deed, young Burton wished to give five dollars to the governor for helping him out, but the latter said: "No sir, you take that money and get yourself a pair of shoes. My bill is paid." From that day to this, the memory of Governor Yates has always been kept green in the hearts of the members of the Burton family.

Mr. Burton after returning to his home, settled down on his farm, but subsequently sold it and purchased a tract of eighty acres on Section 2, Loami Township. To this, he added from time to time, until at one time he had 200 acres under good cultivation. When the Civil War broke out, he entered Company I, Seventy-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, becoming Regimental wagon master, serving three years and nine months. He was known throughout the regiment as "Lucky," but this was evidently a misnomer, as his horse fell with him and he was a cripple during the remainder of his life, in addition to having his hearing considerably impaired by the heavy cannoning during his service.

In 1870, he sold his farm on Section 2 and purchased 320 acres on Section 4, Loami Township, in 1873, selling 120 acres, buying 200 acres on Section 16. In 1882, he traded this 320 acres of fine land to L. W. Massie for 640 acres in Cass County, Mo., taking the difference in cash. That year, the family moved to Cass Co., Mo., and Mr. Burton gave to each of his sons a tract of eighty acres. His daughter, Jincy Ann, is the wife of Frank McCarthy and has a fine home in Kansas City, Mo. In 1898, Mr. Burton sold and traded land in Missouri, for land and city property at Eureka Springs, Ark., and 200 acres of land near the city. There his wife passed to her final rest, December 16, 1899, aged seventy-eight years, he following her to the grave May 5, 1900, aged eighty-seven years. Both were devout members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. To them there were born: Jincy A.; James W., a resident of Kansas City, Mo., who married Lou McCleod; John David; Louis B., who went West and has not been heard from in some time; and Reuben E., a resident of Kansas City, Mo.

Like the other members of his family, John David Burton was given excellent educational advantages, his schooling starting at the old Dutcher school district, two miles from his home. While still attending school, at the age of six years, he engaged in herding sheep, and as soon as he was able and strong enough, he took his place and did his share of work on the farm. He next attended the Maple Grove school, later the High Water Mark school, the Huffaker school, and two terms at Loami, and part of a course at the Masonic Institute at Grapevine, Tex., whence he had gone on account of ill health. In the fall of 1872, he returned to his home in Illinois, again attending the High Water Mark school, but in 1875, he went to Kansas where he was for a time engaged in checking tobacco and cigars.

In the fall of the same year, he again came back and on February 7, 1878, he was married to Sarah Carson, of Maxwell Township, daughter of William P. Carson. During 1881 and 1882, Mr. Burton taught the Hong Kong school located on Section 14. During 1881, he had moved to his present home in Loami Township, but in the spring of 1883, he moved to Cass County, Mo., settling on the eighty acres his father had given him there. In 1888, he came back to his farm in Loami, where he remained until 1893, at which time he went to Macoupin County, but two years later, he again returned to Loami Township. On June 5, 1897, Mr. Burton met with an injury In a runaway accident, and on August 5, his leg was amputated ten inches below the knee. This misfortune, Mr. Burton has not allowed to interfere with his operations in any way, as he exchanges work with his neighbors, is looked upon as one of the best hands for any farm work, and is much sought for when threashing is to be done.

Mr. Burton resides in a Republican township, both has been elected to public positions on a Democratic ticket four times out of six. In the spring election of 1897, he was elected Collector by a majority of twelve votes, and collected the taxes that winter in spite of his accident. He was elected Assessor, in the spring election of 1910, defeating his opponent by about seventy votes, and he has also served as Judge of Election and as delegate to County conventions, in addition to being School Director. Fraternally, he is connected with Camp No. 848, Modern Woodsmen of America, and Loami Lodge No. 901, I. O. O. F., which he joined as a charter member May 30, 1903. He has passed through the chairs of the latter lodge, and is now a Past Grand, in addition to having been representative to the Grand Lodge and Deputy Grand Master.

With Mrs. Burton, he is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and both are much interested in church and charitable work.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton have had the following children: Norval E., born January 24, 1879, a teacher in the Loami High school, married Myrtle Gustine, one child. John D.; William D., born July 29, 1881, at home; Lee R., born September 24, 1884, married Elizabeth Simms and resides in Loami; Mabel A., born August 30, 1887, married Leslie Butler; Rollin, born August 24, 1889, married Lena Lyon; and Laurice born June 21, 1893, at home; Minerva, who died in infancy; and Nancy, born June 13, 1897, died September 10, 1906.

Butler, Isaac E.—A number of men appreciate the changes which have been effected in Sangamon County since the days when Lincoln and Douglas were the shining light of Springfield and slavery was the burning issue of the day. Those who lived through those exciting times scarcely recognize the Sangamon County of today, as contrasted with what it was in the latter 'fifties and early 'sixties. Some of them feel that in the spring of 1883, he moved to Cass has been lost—appreciation of benefits enjoyed. One who for years has been numbered among the successful farmers of Sangamon County is Isaac E. Butler, born in Old Berlin, January 27, 1846, a son of Stephen H. and Nancy (Coates) Butler, natives of Kentucky, and Sangamon County, Ill. The father, who was a farmer, came to Sangamon County in 1824, being among the very early settlers there, and located on a farm at Old Berlin, where he remained for a good many years. He then moved near Fairfield, Jefferson County, still being engaged in farming operations. After eleven years in that locality, however, he returned to Sangamon County, locating on the farm now owned by Isaac E., and there his death occurred in 1880. His wife passed away in 1874, having borne her husband twelve children, evenly divided as to sex, but of whom only four survive: William; Julia, wife of James Simpson, a blacksmith of Pleasant Plains; Mary, wife of Joseph Donner, and Isaac.

Isaac E. Butler was educated at Old Berlin, and later in Jefferson County, but returned with his father to Sangamon County, which has since continued his home. In 1855 he located on his farm of fifty-five acres of fine farming land in Clear Lake Township, which he has developed into a very valuable property, devoting it to general farming and the raising of high-grade stock.

His marriage occurred in Clear Lake Township, in February, 1875, to Emma J. Clerk, born near Rochester, Ill., May 5, 1848. Her father was a native of England, who came to the United States in 1831, settling on a farm in Sangamon County, where he lived for some years. During the war he served as a soldier, and at its close moved to Missouri, where he farmed for several years, eventually returning to Rochester, which is still his home, he being now ninety-one years of age. His wife was a native of Sangamon County, who died in 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Butler became the parents of seven children, five of whom now survive: Jennie, wife of John King, a transfer and expressman, of Springfield; Fannie, wife of Henry Jabusch, bookkeeper for the Racine-Sattlery Company, of Springfield; Stephen, of Springfield; and William and Emma, at home. There are seven grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Butler is a consistent member of the Christian Church. In politics he is a Republican and has served as Highway Commissioner of Clear Lake Township several terms. It is a source of great satisfaction to him that he can recall the great Abraham Lincoln and remember many interesting incidents of his life in Sangamon County. Being a good conversationalist, Mr. Butler is very entertaining as he talks of former days and draws a vivid contrast between conditions then and now. He has borne his own part in effecting some of the changes he is proud of, and can take credit to himself that he has never failed when duty called him. Sangamon County owes much to those sturdy men who built it up to its present proportions, and who, while carving their own fortunes, did not

BUTLER, William. (Vol. I, p. 70.)

BUTLER, Colonel William Joseph, of Springfield, Ill., whose able article on the "Military History of Sangamon County" in this work, will be read with deep interest, was born in Springfield, May 13, 1808, a son of Henry Wirt and Helen McClelland Butler, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Butler is a grandson on his father's side, of William Butler, State Treasurer during the Civil War, and a grandson, on the maternal side, of the distinguished General John A. McClelland. The education of Mr. Butler, was secured in the city schools, after which he attended High School two years, and then took a course at a business college, finishing which, he studied law under Connolly & Mather, and was admitted to the Bar. He then attended Harvard Law School, at Cambridge, Mass., following which, he entered the office, and became a partner of his grandfather, Gen. Jno. A. McClelland, there remaining until 1894, when he was elected a member of the Thirty-ninth General Assembly, on the Republican ticket, and represented the Thirty-ninth District, which at that time was mostly Sangamon County alone. During his term in this responsible office, Mr. Butler was instrumental in securing appropriation for $225,000.00 for the State Fair, the expenditure of which at Springfield, permanently fixed the Fair at that place. Although a member of the Thirty-ninth General Assembly, which came in for much adverse criticism, Mr. Butler was without stain or criticism of any kind, and his record is one of which his constituents, as well as himself, can be proud.

He is very active in politics, and has been called upon more than once, to represent his party in positions of trust, serving as a member and chairman of the City and County Committees, and also as a member of the State Central Committee. Mr. Butler has had a very great experience in business affairs, and has developed a high degree of executive and organization ability. He served as a Receiver of national banks in Macon, Ga., Jacksonville, Fla., Butler, Mo., and Dresden, O., from 1904 to 1908, during which time, he also handled as receiver, a large insurance society in Illinois, and an extensive saw mill plant in southern Georgia. In 1908 and 1909, he was appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency, an Examiner of national banks, but resigned on account of his health.

In 1890, Mr. Butler was married to Rossie Gross, daughter of Eugene L. Gross. They have four children: Henry Wirt, Susan Louise, Salome Elizabeth and McClelland Butler. Mr. Butler belongs to the Odd Fellows, Elks and is a member and was commander of Camp No. 4, Sons of Veterans. He is a young man of more than average ability, and has demonstrated his fitness to occupy high positions. His political influence, and his knowledge of public matters, are of such a character that without doubt, he will be called upon to give more of his time and attention to them in the future, for it is just such men as he, that are needed to intelligently conduct the affairs of the government.

BUTTERLEY, Stephen, now living retired from active life, at 3928 South Sixth Street, Springfield, was born in County Louth, Ireland, in 1849, son of Stephen and Katherine (Murphy) Butterley, both of whom were natives of Ireland and spent their entire lives in that country, dying in comparatively early life. Stephen Butterley, subject of this sketch, has a brother and sister living in Springfield, who came to the United States about ten years after he did. He was educated in the public schools in County Louth and remained on his father's farm until he was seventeen years old, then began working at farming for others. In 1870 he came to America, locating in Sangamon County, where he became interested in coal mining, and spent thirty-eight years in this occupation. He has worked in several different shafts and has been employed in various capacities, as he has learned many branches of the work and has always been a reliable and conscientious worker.

In 1872 Mr. Butterley moved to Ills Junction and lived there thirteen years, then located in his present home, where he has resided twenty-six years. He has a fine house and owns 100 feet front, with a depth of 160 feet. He has been a member of the Mine Workers of America for the past seven years and is connected with Local No. 990, of Springfield. He is an enterprise, public-spirited citizen and in politics is a Democrat. He is a member of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Mr. Butterley was married, in Springfield, in November, 1872, to Miss Julia, daughter of James and Mary Matthews, born in Ireland, in 1853. Both Mr. Matthews and his wife died in Ireland, in 1875. Two brothers of Mrs. Butterley came to America in 1869 and one of them is now living in California. Mr. Butterley and his wife have children as follows: Peter J., employed by the Marquette Cement Company, at Oglesby, Ill.; Katherine, a clerk with the Capital Coal Company; James, a coal miner; Mary, living at home. Mr. Butterley has two grandchildren; Stephen Butterley, born in 1907, and Robert Butterley, born in 1908. Mr. Butterley is a man of honest and upright character and generally respected. His wife died October 9, 1908, and is buried in Calvary Cemetery, Springfield. She had been a faithful and devoted wife and mother and was mourned by many friends.

BUTZMAN, Charles F., an intelligent and enterprising citizen of the city of Springfield, Ill., is a good example of the high position and success which reward the work of a young man of ambition and ability, when his efforts are wisely directed. Mr. Butzman has served his fellows in various offices and it is expected he will render further valuable service to the municipality. He was born in Germany, July 5, 1834, but was brought to America at the age of one year. His father, Charles Butzman, was born in Germany and there married Miss Gertrude Alwell. They came to the United States in 1852, landing at New York, whence they came direct to Illinois and spent two years at Troy, then State. They continued in Springfield; they established the family home at 700 North Fourteenth Street, but the father now lives at 1411 East Washington Street. Upon coming to Springfield Mr. Butzman followed the occupation of mining, which had been his occupation for some time before leaving his native country, but a few years ago became employed as a janitor at the City Hall. Mrs. Butzman died November 25, 1910. She and her husband had children as follows: Mrs. Gertrude W. Singer of Springfield; Charles F. and John, Mary, Annie and Margaret, at home. The family are members of S.S. Peter and Paul's Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Butzman was fourteen years of age Charles F. Butzman attended the parochial school connected with the parish to which the family belonged, then for a short time worked in the mines as his father's helper. Not being satisfied with this position he soon afterward found employment at a carriage factory, where he remained two years, and then in Springfield, he served the Holcomb & Green Electric Company, remaining there nine years, but since then has been in the employ of the Springfield Light, Heat and Power Company. He worked first in the meter department, but since 1907 has been holding the position of electrician. He is progressive in his ideas, energetic and industrious and has the entire confidence of his employers and associates.

Mr. Butzman is a member of S.S. Peter and Paul's Church and a consistent Republican. He served two years as member of the City Council from the First Ward, one year under Mayor Reece and one year under Mayor Schnepp, and was a candidate for nomination for Commissioner under the new form of government. He is well known in the city and has many warm personal friends. Mr. Butzman was married in Springfield June 21, 1905, to Miss Lydia Reilly, daughter of W. F. and Lydia (Eddy) Reilly, and they reside at 1405 East Washington Street, where Mr. Butzman owns a very comfortable home.

BYERS, Jacob C. (deceased).—One of the representative citizens and practical agriculturists of Sangamon County, III., was the late Jacob C. Byers, who for a number of years carried on operations on Section 30, in Cooper Township. Mr. Byers was born at Shepherdstown, W. Va., November 7, 1830, a son of Jacob and Catherine (Snyder) Byers. Jacob Byers, who was a native of Germany, came to America as a child, and in West Virginia became a farmer, continuing in that occupation throughout the remainder of his life. Both he and his wife died in West Virginia. Of their nine children two are still living, Mrs. Sarah Hensel and John M. Byers, both residents of Pawnee, Ill.

Jacob C. Byers attended the public schools of West Virginia and the College of Mt. Morris, Ill., to which place he had come as a lad to live with a sister, and after completing his schooling he engaged in farming. Seven children were born to this union: Anna E., the wife of Brayden Carvel of Springfield; Charles B., a farmer, living in the Southwest; George E., a farmer of Macoupin County; Elmina C., the wife of Walter Whitecraft of Springfield; Lillie B., connected with the New Dry Goods Company, in Springfield; and one who died in infancy. Mrs. Byers died September 2, 1858, in Christian County, Ill., whose death the family has not recovered from. He then moved on a farm near Edinburg. On September 15, 1891, Mr. Byers was married (second) to Nancy M. Burchell, who was born in Burlington, Iowa, March 20, 1847, a daughter of Robert C. and Jane (Morris) Burchell, the former of Alexandria, W. Va., and the latter of New York, their marriage being in Springfield, Sangamon County, Ill. Mr. Burchell, who was one of the distinguished men of his day, and with whom it is related President Abraham Lincoln visited, was a well known lawyer of Burlington, Iowa, where he practiced with Judge Springer, and later at Mt. Morris, Ill., but later went to Oregon, Ill., where he established and conducted the "Olive County Reformer," which was published under same name. Here he continued to live and practice law until his death, having served as State's Attorney and County Judge and as Mayor of Oregon. As a candidate for State's Attorney, his name was on the same ticket running for State's Attorney as Richard Yates. Mrs. Byers has a brother, Robert, living in Erie, Whiteside County, and a sister, Catherine Jones, the wife of Adolphus Jones, a prominent banker of Iowa. Another sister, Mrs. Virginia Wales, died at Los Angeles, Cal. Mrs. Byers is the owner of a home in Berry, Sangamon County, and has an interest in valuable property in Oregon, Ill. She is a consistent member of the Methodist Church, to which her late husband also belonged. The latter was a Republican in his political views.

BYRON, W. D.—The number of self-made men in Springfield is great, and their presence contributes largely towards the thrifty management of municipal affairs, for through example and practice these self-reliant citizens endeavor to inculcate the principles of economy and hardworking industry which have proven of such value to them individually. Among the men who have risen from poverty to influence through their own efforts, W. D. Byron is a notable example. He was born in Auburn, Sangamon County, May 10, 1850, a son of Jesse and Eliza (Adams) Byron, the former born in Little Rock, Ark., January 1, 1808. Jesse Byron is a railroad man, who came to Illinois in 1872, and has made the State his home ever since.

W. D. Byron attended the schools of Auburn and Springfield and began working on the Illinois Central Railroad as a brakeman, continuing in that capacity for eighteen months. For the following three years he was engaged in street car work in St. Louis, but returned to Springfield to accept a good position with the Illinois Traction System. During this period he has worked hard, saved his money and invested it in city realty that has steadily advanced in value, until now he is ranked among the prosperous residents of the city, although barely thirty. He belongs to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and to the Brotherhood of Interurban Trainmen. His religious affiliations are with the Christian Church, of which he is a member. Politically he is a Republican and is interested in party work.

On July 14, 1901, Mr. Byron was married in Springfield, Ill., to Pearl Clements, no issue. He is one of the live, progressive young men of Springfield, and takes a deep interest in the city's welfare and advancement.

Caldwell, Hon. Ben F., ex-Congressman, has been associated with business and banking circles in Springfield for many years, and has been prominently identified with political interests in his city, county and district, since attaining his majority, having long been recognized as one of the leaders of the Democratic party in his part of Illinois. Mr. Caldwell has always enjoyed the highest confidence and approval of the public and has a reputation for business and political honesty and integrity. He is held in high honor and esteem by his fellow citizens, with whom most of his life has been spent, as he has been a resident of Curran Township since 1853—fifty-eight years. He is popular with a large circle of warm friends and is also prominent in fraternal circles, and is in all respects a representative of the highest type of American citizenship. Mr. Caldwell was born in Greene County, Ill., August 2, 1848, son of John and Mary J. (Davis) Caldwell, both natives of Kentucky and the latter born near Danville.

The Caldwell family is of Scotch-Irish descent and the emigrant ancestors, great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch, Thomas Caldwell, was born in Ireland and there married Betsy Harris, a native of Wales, soon after which they emigrated to the New World and located in Virginia, which they reached before the Revolutionary War. They subsequently removed to Jessamine County, Ky., spending their last days with their son William. William Caldwell was born in Virginia, December 15, 1779, and as a young man moved to Kentucky, becoming prominent in public affairs in that state, and being several times elected to the State Legislature, where he made his presence felt and took an active part in the body. He also served as Sheriff of Jessamine County. He was married, in Kentucky, to Nancy Robards, a native of Virginia, and their children were: George L., Jane R., Elizabeth, Charles H., William and John, the last-named being the father of Hon. Ben. F. Caldwell. In 1831 William Caldwell left Kentucky and came to Greene County, Ill., where he remained five years, then located in Sangamon County. He lived first in Auburn Township, but later removed to Curran Township, where he became prominent in public affairs. He served one term as the representative of his party in the Illinois General Assembly. While a resident of Kentucky he had served in the War of 1812, with rank of Captain. He was prominent in organizing the church now known as "Bethel" in Woodside Township, which for several years met for divine worship in his house, which he had erected (with this end in view) with a large central room suitable for such meeting, and with three other rooms opening on it. When plans were made for erecting a new building for the church he requested that it be called Bethel, and this request was granted, although he did not live to see the plans realized. William Caldwell died August 1, 1844, and his widow survived until 1878, also dying in Curran Township.

John Caldwell was a native of Kentucky, born January 21, 1807, the second son of his parents, and came to Illinois in 1832. He was married in Greene County, January 23, 1834, his wife being a native of Kentucky, who was born January 16, 1815. Their five children were: William C., born March 15, 1835, came with the family to Sangamon County in 1853, and died in Loomis, June 18, 1911; Jane, Betsy and Henry C., deceased; Ben F. John Caldwell located with his family on Section 36, Curran Township, in April, 1853, this land having been purchased by his father several years prior. He devoted himself to the improvement and development of his farm until his death, August 1, 1863, after which his widow resided on the farm with her son Ben F. for some years. Her death occurred January 4, 1895. In 1876 she and her son had erected one of the finest country homes then to be found in central Illinois, supplied with all available conveniences and luxuries.

Ben F. Caldwell received his education in the country schools and the public school of Chatham, and was not more than ten years of age when deprived of a father's care and counsel. Thus being early forced to think for himself in business matters, he began his career with remarkable judgment and foresight, and soon became active in the business life of his community. He cared for his mother's interest in an able manner and managed the farm himself until 1871, then re-ented it in order to give the needed attention to various other enterprises in which he was interested, principally in loaning money and dealing in western lands. He operated largely in Kansas and Missouri, but helped organize and promote many enterprises in Sangamon County and the surrounding country. He embarked in mercantile business in Chatham in 1878 and in 1879 organized a bank there, being chosen its President. He served thirteen years as President of the Farmers’ National Bank of Springfield, and in 1898 resigned this position, on being elected to Congress. He subsequently accepted the Presidency of the Caldwell State Bank, of Chatham. He has very materially advanced the interests of every institution of which he has been the head, and has conducted every private enterprise with energy and zeal such as insured success.

Mr. Caldwell’s political career began in early life. He served two terms as a member of the County Board of Supervisors, being Chairman his second term; was first elected to the State House of Representatives in 1852; was elected to the Senate in 1893, and was elected to Congress in 1898, 1900, 1902 and 1906. He has for several years paid close attention to the political situation and given less time to his personal interests, thus serving faithfully in the interests of his constituents.

Mr. Caldwell was married, May 27, 1873, to Miss Julia F. Cloyd, born in Curran Township, March 7, 1856, daughter of Matthew Cloyd, and they left for a wedding journey of about 14,000 miles, sailing from New York to Belfast, visiting Scotland, England, Holland, Belgium, many parts of Germany, and spending a short time in Berlin, after which they attended the Vienna Exposition and then crossed the Alps and visited Genoa. They then went back to London, and to Liverpool, where they took a steamer to Boston. During this trip they were accorded the pleasure of an audience with Pius the IX. Two children blessed this union, namely: Mary Jane and John Harvey, Mary Jane, born March 20, 1874, was married, May 6, 1901, to ex-Congressman Oscar Turner, of Louisville, Ky., who died July 17, 1902, leaving one child, Oscar Jr., born May 3, 1902. She remained a widow until August 17, 1909, when she was married (second) to Judge William Cottrell, of Chilgo. To her latter marriage, one daughter, Julia, was born February 9, 1911. John Harvey Caldwell, born September 9, 1877, was married, November 21, 1900, to Miss Laura Blossom Hickox, of Springfield, and they have six children: John Franklin, Katherine Josephine, Julia Frances, Charles Hickox, Eunice and Thomas Harvey. Mr. Caldwell is a member of the Masonic Order, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Improved Order of Red Men and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. At the present time (1911) Mr. Caldwell’s name is being freely discussed in connection with the nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor. His record and wide acquaintance as a Member of Congress, and his prominence as a local business man of Central Illinois, have won him a cordial support from different factions of the party, and there is reason to believe, when the final vote is taken, he will occupy a favorable position for securing the nomination.

Caldwell, David (deceased).—The work of the carpenter and builder is of such a nature that in the natural order of things it lives after him, standing as a monument to his fidelity to contract, skillfulness as a workman, and energy as a man. The men of this class in Springfield have had a wide scope for the exercise of their ability, owing to the location in that city not only of the State buildings, but others of substance and architectural beauty. One of the well-known men in this line was the late David Caldwell, who in life resided at No. 412 South Eleventh Street, this city. He was born near Indianapolis, Ind., October 18, 1840, a son of John and Sarah (Mangee) Caldwell, natives of New York and Germany, respectively. His father was a sailor early in life but later became a farmer, dying November, 1842. He was buried in a private burying ground in Indiana. His widow brought her son to Clinton, Ill., where she joined a brother, and there she lived until her death in 1858, when she was buried in a private burying ground near Belleville, Ill.

The boyhood of David Caldwell was spent in Clinton County, where he assisted his mother and uncle, and at the same time diligently pursued his studies at the country school. After leaving school he farmed for some time, then, learning the carpenter trade, followed it the remainder of his life, gradually branching out into contracting. His work was reliable and he took a pride in carrying out contracts exactly as they were made. In 1865 he moved to Springfield, which continued to be his home until his death, April 15, 1897. Mr. Caldwell never cared to belong to any secret societies, but gave his time and attention to his church, belonging to the Baptist congregation and to the Republican party. He has known and loved Abraham Lincoln, and was proud to follow in the footsteps of that great and good man.

Mr. Caldwell was married in Springfield August 23, 1866, to Margaret Jane McCormick, born in Springfield, a daughter of Andrew and Annie (Short) McCormick, natives of Tennessee. Her father was born January 27, 1837, and died in 1897, his widow surviving him until June 30, 1897, when she too passed away, and was laid to rest by the side of her husband in Oak Ridge cemetery. Andrew McCormick represented Sangamon County three times in the State Legislature and was one of the “Long Nine” (Abraham Lincoln being another), and was Mayor of Springfield in 1843-44. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell had children as follows: John A., born October 28, 1867, connected with the theatrical profession; Ida May, born May 19.
1899, died at the age of four months; Ransom, born October 17, 1873, died at the age of four months; George D., born March 21, 1875, is connected with News Publishing Company. Both sons live with their mother at No. 412 South Eleventh Street.

Mr. Caldwell was not only a good workman and business man, but a true patriot, for when his country had need of his services, although he had barely attained his majority, he enlisted July 25, 1861, in Company D, Twenty-sixth Indiana Infantry Volunteers, was taken prisoner at Point Cacpee, La., about the 20th of August, 1863, and was held prisoner at Fort Tyler, Texas, until exchanged July 29, 1864, at Mouth of Red River, La. He was a member of The Illinois Association of Prisoners of War. He was in a number of hard fought battles, and smaller engagements and was shot once, but not seriously wounded, though he suffered in prison and weighed only ninety-eight pounds when exchanged. He was a member of Stephen, son Post G. A. R., and was a member of the Carpenter’s Union. He served bravely until the end, when he was honorably mustered out September 25, 1864. His life was a quiet, unassuming one, yet it taught many an excellent lesson, and left an honorable name to live after him.

Caldwell, James E., of the law firm of Caldwell & Caldwell, of Springfield, Ill., has won a reputation in his profession for ability and integrity, and is well known in Sangamon County, where his entire life has been spent. Mr. Caldwell is a self-made man, having acquired his legal education through his own efforts, and has acquired professional success through natural ability and fitness for his chosen field of work. He was born on a farm near Williamsville, Sangamon County, August 14, 1871, and is a son of George M. and Kitty (Robards) Caldwell, the former born near Lexington, Ky., in 1833, and the latter born in Lexington in 1857, daughter of Otho L. and Catherine Robards. George M. Caldwell was married to Catherine Robards and soon after came to Illinois, where he purchased a small farm near Williamsville, and became one of the successful and prominent men of that vicinity. He carried on general farming there and added to his possessions from time to time until he owned 320 acres of land, which he developed to a high state of cultivation. He became well known for his fine shorthorn cattle and Berkshire hogs and found their breeding very profitable. He is a strong Democrat and has held several township offices.

Children as follows were born to George M. Caldwell and his wife: George R., of Sangamon County; Otho L., a successful attorney, who has held the office of Assistant Superintendent of Schools in Sangamon County; John Young, a farmer of Logan County; James E.; Elizabeth, died young; C. Mae.

In boyhood James E. Caldwell attended the district schools of Sangamon County, where he applied himself with good results, being fond of study. He afterwards followed teaching in the district schools for four years, then entered the law office of Patton, Hamilton & Patton, where he continued several years, being admitted to the Bar before the Supreme Court at Springfield, June 7, 1896. The following September Mr. Caldwell opened an office in Springfield, where he soon established himself in the confidence and good-will of the people and built up a good practice. He has bright prospects for his future career and is recognized as a man of sterling qualities and high character.

Mr. Caldwell married Bessie, daughter of Wesley and Martha (Wigginton) Caldwell, of Williamsville, and this union has been blessed by children as follows: George Ernest and James E. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell have many friends in Springfield, where they have established themselves in the respect and esteem of all with whom they are associated.

Caldwell, Otho Louis, a successful and prominent attorney of Springfield, was born at Williamsville, I11., January 14, 1867, son of George McDowell and Kittle (Robards) Caldwell, both natives of Nicholasville, Ky., the father born July 16, 1835, and the mother October 15, 1835. The parents were married in Kentucky, January 6, 1864, and soon afterward moved to Illinois. The father was engaged extensively in stock raising. The ancestors of Mr. Caldwell on his paternal side, lived in America before the Revolution and some of them participated in that struggle.

The early education of Otho L. Caldwell, was acquired in the schools of Sangamon County, and he afterward attended the Northern Illinois State Normal School, beginning to teach at the age of seventeen years. He read law with the well-known legal firm of Patton, Hamilton & Patton, of Springfield, and was admitted to the Bar in October, 1898, since which time he has been engaged in active practice. He made his home at Williamsville until November 18, 1896, the date of his removal to Springfield. He has been active in the interests of the Democratic party, and in 1898, was appointed Assistant County Superintendent of Schools in Sangamon County, in which office he served eight years. He is a prominent Mason, being a Knights Templar, a Thirty-second Degree Mason and a Shriner. He joined the order at Williamsville, when he became affiliated with Loving Lodge No. 263, in January, 1890, and served as Worshipful Master of his lodge; first Worthy Patron of Hawthorne Chapter, O. E. S., at Williamsville; Royal Vizier of Medinah Temple No. 50, D. O. K. K., and at the present time is Conductor of work in Springfield Council No. 1; is Senior Warden of Elwood Commandery No. 6, Knights Templar, and Grand Architect of Springfield Consistory. S. P. R. CALKINS, Hiram C., now retired from active life and living in Springfield, was born in Scioto County, Ohio, March 12, 1845, a son of Ephraim and Armenia A. (Clark) Calkins, natives of New York State. Ephraim Calkins was brought by his mother from New York to Ohio when he was three years of age, and after reaching manhood engaged in farming in the latter State. He brought his family to Illinois and located in Champaign County. He carried on farming there many years and then moved to Adams County, where he continued farming until his death, in 1881. His parents were from Vermont and those of his wife from Connecticut. Seven sons and three daughters were born to Ephraim Calkins and wife, of whom Hiram is the oldest, the others who survive being: Urias R., of Hancock County, Ill.; Miles C., of Farns County, Neb.; Mary E. Hannans, of Kansas.

Mr. Calkins was educated in the country schools of his native State, and in boyhood worked for his father on the farm. He came with the family to Illinois and also worked for his father on the latter's farms in Champaign and Adams Counties, respectively. After his marriage he carried on farming many years in Morgan County and in 1895 came to Springfield. He now lives with his daughter at 155 North Lincoln Avenue. He is a man of stability and reliability and has many friends. He comes of a family whose members have been identified with the pioneer history of various States and have represented the best interests of any community where they have lived. Mr. Calkins is a member of the Baptist Church and in politics is a Republican.

Mr. Calkins was married in Morgan County, Ill., October 20, 1884, to Etheldr J. Rickey, who was born in Greene County, Ill., July 2, 1850, daughter of Jacob Rickey. Her father was a native of Ohio and her mother of Greene County. There were two sons and five daughters, and the only one member of the family who now survives lives in Texas. To Mr. Calkins and wife six children were born, all of whom survive: Mary, wife of Greenbury Cloud, of Oklahoma City, Okla.; Armenia, wife of George Roberts, a carpenter of Springfield; Ira A., and William C. of Springfield; Minnie P., wife of Garrett A. Gill, of Springfield, who is engaged in mining; Hiram E. There are three grandchildren in the family.

CAMPBELL, Alexander (deceased).—The many excellent qualities of the people of Scotland are historical, and because of this they make good citizens whenever they are induced to settle in a community. Hardworking, simple in habits, and thrifty in their saving, they soon acquire property and are never without work. Such a man was the late Alexander Campbell, who was born in Perth, Scotland, January 29, 1842, being a son of Robert and Janet (McIntosh) Campbell, natives of Scotland. Like many of their countrymen, the Campbells came to Canada, where Robert Campbell located in 1855, buying land and engaging in farming. Alexander Campbell was educated in Scotland and remained with his parents until he came to Springfield, in 1864. After coming here he secured employment as shipping clerk at the woolen mills, and was faithfully discharging the duties of that position when he passed away, June 13, 1898, his remains being interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He was a quiet, unassuming man, devoted to his family, and never cared for public office. He was a Republican in political sentiments. He belonged to the Masons and Odd Fellows, and enjoyed his associations with those orders. In religious faith he was a Presbyterian.

On October 14, 1870, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage in Springfield, with Mary Hollowell, born in Blackstone, Mass., daughter of Joseph and Mary (Sloan) Hallowell, natives of England, who came to Massachusetts and later to Springfield. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell: Mary Janet, Elizabeth, Robert, William, and Helen. Elizabeth and Helen are now living with their mother, and three are deceased. Mrs. Campbell resides at No. 529 South Third Street, where a pleasant hospitality is shown the many family friends.

CAMPBELL, Antrim. (Vol. I, p. 76.)

CAMPBELL, Ernest Lee, a sterling young farmer of Sangamon County, residing on Section 26, Loami Township, is one of the best representatives of the agricultural class in this section of the State. He was born in Talkington Township, December 25, 1867, on the farm purchased by his grandfather, William Campbell. The latter was born in Chatham Township in 1823, and died in this county at the age of forty-eight years. He was a son of John and Lavina (Parkinson) Campbell, both natives of Tennessee. John Campbell came to Illinois about 1818 and soon afterward settled in what is now Chatham Township. William Campbell served in the Mexican War for a year. He was the father of fourteen children, eight of whom grew to maturity: Jerry, William and James are deceased; Simon Peter of Eureka Springs, Ark.; Isaac, of Idaho; Jackson is deceased; Lonely married James Workman, a farmer of Christian County, Ill.; Beatrice, wife of George Dodd, a farmer of Loami Township.

Of the above named children, Jerry was the father of Ernest Lee Campbell. He married Mary Wheeler, on January 1, 1896, she being a daughter of Benjamin and Sarah (Thorp) Wheeler, both natives of Ohio, the latter of whom died in 1901. After their marriage, in Fulton County, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Campbell settled on a 100-acre farm in Talkingtown Township, where they became well-to-do, bringing up their two children in plenty. In addition to Ernest Lee they had another son Earland Ray, a farmer of Brown County, Ill. The latter married Miss Hattie L. Belamy, a daughter of John Belamy. Later Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Sr. moved to Loami Township, where Jerry Campbell bought a farm, and there his widow survives. She spent five years in Oregon, caring for her father, but after his death, in 1907, she returned to her homestead. Both she and her husband joined the Methodist Church, and he died in its faith.

Ernest Lee Campbell was born on a farm and brought up to work on it, attending the district school. As his father was well educated, he took a strong interest in his son’s training and taught him many things. The young man remained with his parents until he was twenty years of age, when, in February, 1888, he took a trip through Missouri and Kansas on to Oregon, where he worked on a farm and in a saw-mill. In that State, on December 25, 1889, he married Tirzah Large, born near Fort Scott, Kan., August 3, 1867, a daughter of Thomas and Lydia (Workman) Large, natives of Tennessee and Illinois. In 1891, Mr. Campbell returned to Illinois, renting land in Loami Township until 1893, when he bought fifty and one half acres in Loami Township, paying $80 per acre. In 1905 he sold thirty and one-half acres of that farm for $110 per acre, and twenty acres at $90 per acre. In the same year he bought sixty-nine and one-half acres, paying $80 per acre for a part and $50 per acre for the remainder. In 1907 he bought seven acres, for which he paid $90 per acre. In 1900 he bought forty acres, paying $125 per acre. At present he owns 118 acres, which he holds at $150 per acre. Mr. Campbell was left $2,000 by his father, which gave him a start, and from that small beginning he has increased his holdings until he is now one of the wealthy men of his township. On his land he has been breeding Poland-China hogs and short-horn cattle, and has been successful in all of his operations.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell became the parents of three children, two of whom are in infancy; John William, born November 10, 1889, in Linn County, Ore., married. January 13, 1910, Ada Fitzhugh, born near Ashland, Ill., daughter of Charles and Florence Fitzhugh. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are members of the Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors, while he belongs to the Odd Fellows, No. 901, Loami. Politically he is a Democrat and served as Constable one term. He is proud of the fact that he has never had to sue anyone or been forced to pay his debts through legal proceedings. The Campbell family is of Scotch origin and its members inherit some of the shrewd traits of character which belong to people of that thrifty nation. It is a well-recognized fact that none of this family have failed to prosper, and Ernest Lee Campbell is no exception to the rule.

CAMPBELL, George Bunn.—To many who have never had the opportunity of visiting a modern Illinois farm, the mention of farming brings to mind a team of hot, tired horses, a hard plow and a horny-handed, dusty son of the soil toiling ceaselessly from sunup to sunset. Those who have such ideas would be considerably surprised should they visit the excellent farm of George Bunn Campbell, of Section 28, Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, where they would find excellent machinery doing the place of the ordinary plow of former years, and comfort and recreation in plenty for the agriculturist and his family. Mr. Campbell was born on his present farm and in the residence in which he now lives, April 20, 1856, a son of Robert and Cynthia S. (Penny) Campbell.

Robert Campbell was born August 13, 1823, in Cartwright Township, a son of Maxwell Campbell. He was reared to the life of a farmer, but educational advantages being limited at that time, he was forced in after life to study by reading after his day’s activities on the farm were over. He was married in Cartwright Township to Cynthia S. Penny, who was born October 28, 1826, in the eastern part of Cartwright Township, whence her parents had settled after coming from Kentucky. Immediately after their marriage in 1847, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell settled on the farm now occupied by George Bunn Campbell, and here spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Campbell was one of the leading men, not only of his section, but of the entire county. He was elected Constable, and in order to supply himself with the proper education, studied and read after his farm work was done and then attended to the duties of his office. First a Whig and later a Republican, he always devoted much of his time to forwarding movements which he felt would be of benefit to his community, and at the time of the Mormon disturbances at Nauvoo was one of those to go to that point to oust the disturbers. He was a staunch Union man during the Civil War and fearless in standing up for what he thought was right. He and his wife were staunch members of the Methodist Church, and charitable and kindly to all, and it has been said of them that no one was ever turned away from their door with a harsh or unkind word. During the early days Indians were often seen in the vicinity of Mr. Campbell's home and at one time for a week a party camped on his farm. He was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, later to become President of the United States, when the latter was a clerk in the store of Mr. Moffat at New Salem. Mr. Campbell died March 12, 1910, his wife having passed away October 22, 1899, and both were buried in the Richland Baptist burial ground. Mr. Campbell's funeral was largely attended and his pall-bearers were his grandparents, Forrest, Guy, Ralph and Horace Campbell, Robert Sayer and Henry Sorensen. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were as follows: Samuel H., born March 14, 1849, who died in St. Joseph in 1904, leaving a widow and two sons, Robert T. and Roy; Nancy C., born July 25, 1851, who married Jacob J. Harnsberger, a farmer of Cartwright Township; Matilda C., born November 8, 1855, residing in Tallula, is the widow of C. C. Sayer, and has had three children, Maudie, Irene and Robert; Lloyd C., who is deceased; George Bunn; Peter A., born September 13, 1858, a resident of Tallula, who married Laura Grider and has two children, Forest and Ralph; Elizabeth, born August 18, 1860, who died in infancy; William J., born September 24, 1862, who also died in infancy; Ida J., born December 13, 1863, who married Charles H. Bell, residing in Springfield; John D., born October 24, 1866, who is living in Colorado, married Nancy Smith, two children, Margaret and Lucelle; and Charles A., born December 14, 1868, who is engaged in farming and stock breeding near Tallula, Ill., married Cora Beck, one child, Horace.

George Bunn Campbell, family known as Bunn, received a good common school education in the district schools of Cartwright Township and at the age of nine years started to work on the home farm, taking his place behind the plow and working with diligence at home until his marriage, October 11, 1877, to Miss Jenny Dobson. She was born in Athens County, Ohio, January 2, 1850, daughter of Richard and Susan (Craig) Dobson, the former of the Athens County and the latter of Morgan County, Ohio. The Dobson family emigrated to Illinois and settled in Morgan County, but in 1874 removed to Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, where Mrs. Dobson died in 1879. The father then went to make his home with his son, P. L. Dobson, at Woodstock, Iowa, where he died in November, 1876, when he was brought back and laid to rest beside his wife in the Jacksonville Cemetery, the town in which the family had first settled on coming to Illinois. They were parents of these children: Anna, wife of D. C. Warner, of Decatur, Ill.; Lizzie, who is making her home with Mrs. Campbell of Richland and Susan Tenn.; Matilda, deceased, who was the wife of John W. Laird, was married in Ohio, came to Illinois, and went thence to Kellerton, Iowa, where her husband is still living; Mrs. Campbell; and four children who died in infancy.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Campbell rented a farm in Menard County, Ill., where they made their home until 1879, then located in Richland and followed farming there until 1883. At this time they removed to the vicinity of Stanberry, Gentry County, Mo., Mr. Campbell buying some land and renting other property, and bought and sold two farms. He remained there seventeen years, engaging in farming, mostly grain raising, and being reasonably successful in his enterprises. In 1903 his father became seriously ill and desired that the son return home to take charge of the farm and nurse him through his last illness and from that time until the father's death Mr. Campbell cared for him tenderly.

Mr. Campbell has remained on the home farm and has spent much of his time in stock breeding, having inherited from his father a love for fine stock. He recently purchased a fine jack, "Blue Jim," fifteen hands high, weight 350 pounds, seven years old, bred in Calloway County, Mo., and he also has one of the best bred animals of Missouri. Mr. Campbell has made his own way in the world since attaining his majority and his farming and stock raising enterprises have been uniformly successful.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have had two children: Guy A., born July 17, 1878, an electrician buying at Paxico, Mo.; and Lottie B., born May 17, 1882, a wife of Henry H. Bell, residing in Tallula, Ill., by whom she has had four children,—Guy, Lorene, Georgie and Bernice. Mr. Campbell has always been a Republican and for a number of years has been a member of the district school board. Socially he is connected with Pleasant Plains Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, and his wife has been a long been active members of the Richland Baptist Church.

CAMPBELL, John H.—Each year finds the ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic thinning; each year finds fewer of the gray-haired veterans who as boys marched away from home and left behind them all but their country's battles; each year many answer their last roll-call, and it will be at a not far distant date that the last of these brave and gallant men have gone to their rest. Invariably it has been found that those soldiers who had the best records during their army service have been the ones to whom success in after life has come, and it is certainly a fact that the strict discipline and severe training they received has had much to do in fitting them to fight the battles of peace, and making them as good citizens as they were soldiers.

An honored veteran of the Civil War who has achieved success as an agriculturist, and who also has the distinction of being a pioneer of Sangamon County, Ill., is John H. Campbell, carrying on operations on Section 27, Cartwright Township, who was born in this township, May 19, 1828, a son of Maxwell Campbell, who settled in Sangamon County in 1832.

In John H. Campbell's youth there were no free schools, and his education was secured in the subscription schools of that day, taught by teachers who boarded around among the patrons of the district and who received from the parents a certain sum for each pupil. As soon as he could swing an axe or hold the plow handles Mr. Campbell started to work on the home farm and often in the early days while at work on the place he would see bands of Indians who at that time were just leaving this part of Illinois. Helping to clear away the timber, break the prairie and drain the swamp land, Mr. Campbell enjoyed both the pleasures and hardships of pioneer life and can now look back over the marvelous changes that have been wrought since those early days. He often hauled goods from Beardstown, five yoke of oxen being used, and drove the hogs to market overland.

On February 27, 1851, Mr. Campbell was married to Minerva E. Bumgardner, whose wife died when Mrs. Campbell was but a child. These children were born to this union: Alonzo, died at the age of three; William J., died November 24, 1853, was married February 2, 1871, to Aaron Thompson, who died, leaving her two daughters, Sarah N. and Rose, and she married (second) a Mr. Butcher; Nancy E., born August 5, 1861, married John McHenry, a resident of Billings, Mo.; William J., born April 25, 1867, married Miss Amanda B. (Marshall) Bennett, the former born in New York State and the latter in Canada. They were married in Coshocton County, Ohio, February 13, 1844, daughter of John Bennett and Amanda M. (Marshall) Bennett, the former born in New York State and the latter in Canada. They were married in New York and both died in Ohio, and to them there were born the following children: Nicholas H., of Coshocton, Ohio, enlisted in Fifty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry and served until 1865, when he was honorably discharged; John A., a member of the Eightieth Ohio Volunteers, died while in the service; Mrs. Campbell; James E., of Coshocton, Ohio; Anna M., wife of James Sargent, of East St. Louis; Gertrude, wife of James Webb, of Coshocton, Ohio; Mary, wife of Lewis Call, also of that place; and Harry F., who was last heard of in North Dakota. The mother died in 1854 and the father about 1900. After the death of Mrs. Bassett the family was broken up and Mrs. Campbell went to Jacksonville, Ill., to visit a sister, and while there accepted a position as nurse in the insane hospital, a position she held for five years. To Mr. and Mrs. Campbell one daughter has been born, Clarus G., who married Frank B. of Coshocton, Ohio, December 24, 1904, and they have had three children: Gladys H., born April 16, 1905; Florence M., born May 22, 1907; and John Harry, born December 3, 1909. Mr. Houghton is a farmer in Panhandle, Tex.

John H. Campbell comes of military stock, his grandfather, Robert Campbell, having served in the Revolutionary Army, and the battle of Cowpens having been fought near the old Campbell home. Mr. Campbell remembers his grandmother's telling of a woman who during this battle rushed out to rob the dead soldiers, only to be instantly killed herself by a cannon ball. In 1862 John H. Campbell enlisted in Company F, One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three years or during the war, and served until his honorable discharge in 1865, participating with his regiment in all the struggles of the war and gaining for himself an honorable and distinguished record. Among his most notable engagements were those of Vicksburg and the surrender of Richmond. He remembers an amusing incident after he had been transferred to the Eastern Army under General Grant. It seems that the ammunition had been landed at City Point and General Grant had given strict orders that there should be no smoking around the landing. Eventually the General, who was an inveterate smoker, approached the supplies with a lighted cigar in his mouth, when he was hastily approached by a negro soldier who ordered him to throw the weed away, and the general, with a grim smile, recalling his own orders, had to do so. At one time the army corps of which Mr. Campbell was a member captured an English vessel at Fortress Monroe, loaded with arms and ammunition for the South, and one of Mr. Campbell's most highly prized relics is an old Enfield musket that was taken from the vessel. Mr. Campbell's regiment, at the time of the Grand Review at Washington, was unable to participate in that great pageant, as it was at that time stationed at Baltimore, Md. Immediately after his discharge Mr. Campbell returned home and took up farming again, eventually purchasing the property adjoining the old home place on Section 27. He has become one of the successful farmers and stockraisers of his section and now has a fine property of 110 acres, although in his latter years he has not been so actively engaged in farm work, owing to a stroke of paralysis suffered several years ago.

For many years he and his good wife have been active in the work of the Richland Baptist Church, and Mr. Campbell has also been very active in his work for matters of an educational nature, casting his first vote for a free school in 1851. He is a popular comrade of Dick Johnson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Tallula, Ill., of which he is serving as Chaplain.

CAMPBELL, Maxwell McClellan.—The younger farmers of Sangamon County are rapidly revolutionizing agricultural methods. They have increased land values so materially that few farmers are now willing to part with their holdings at any price. Under the present scientific methods Sangamon soil is yielding prolifically, and the returns are correspondingly large. One of the foremost farmers of the later generation is Maxwell McCellan Campbell, born November 21, 1802, on the farm he is now operating with his father, on Section 27, Cartwright Township. He is a son of William V. Campbell, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work.

Mr. Campbell was married on May 27, 1886, to Ida L. Craig, of Menard County, Ill., born September 4, 1867, near Jacksonville, Morgan County, Ill., on the Jacksonville and Springfield Road. She is a daughter of John H. and Anna (Spurgeon) Craig, the latter being related to the celebrated divine, Rev. Charles Spurgeon, of England. Mr. and Mrs. Craig were both born near Athens, Ohio, but were married at Tuscola, Ill.; Mrs. Craig grew up in Douglas County but in 1870 removal was made to Menard County, where Mr. Craig purchased land and died in 1877, his widow surviving until she too passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Maxwell Campbell, September 17, 1903. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Craig: Francis Craig, a farmer near Virginia, Ill.; Mrs. Campbell; Larkin H., born in May, 1868, and died December 20, 1870; William D., born April 28, 1874, is a stock and grain dealer of Woodstock, Iowa, and Charles Hamilton Craig, born January 23, 1877, now of Los Angeles, Cal.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Campbell settled on a farm south of Pleasant Plains, but in 1857 they began operating a portion of the old home. Mr. Campbell, while giving much of his time to agricultural matters, finds time for other enterprises. In 1901 he joined with five others in establishing the Boynton Telephone Company, and in 1907 Mr. Campbell, E. D. Boynton and John N. Howard bought out the interests of the other stockholders, and Mr. Campbell was made its President, still holding that office. This company has about one thousand patrons, and as the system is operated under the best of conditions, the equipment being entirely modern, an almost perfect service is given. In 1906 Mr. Campbell, with eight others, incorporated the Pleasant Plains State Bank, he being on the first Board of Directors, and he still holds that office. The bank is one of the most solid in the county, owing to the conservative management of those in control, and it handles a large amount of business. He has served 12 years on the board of directors of the Springfield Mutual County Fire Insurance Company which carries over four million dollars of insurance in the county.

After the death of his mother Mr. Campbell and his wife came to the old home, where they have since lived. Mrs. Campbell assuming charge of the household. One child, Ethel Cordelia, was born to them on July 21, 1887. She is a very talented young lady, who has been given a fine musical education by her affectionate parents, so that there is no lack of entertainment in their pleasant home. Mr. Campbell is a member of the Odd Fellows, belonging to Lodge No. 770, and the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 139, as well as to the District Court of Honor. His political affiliations are with the Republican party and he has held many of the township offices. For thirty-five years he has been a member of the Richland Baptist Church, to which his wife and daughter also belong. This church was organized in 1839, Mr. Campbell is very active in church and Sunday School work and has for years been interested in the uplift of his fellow men, and he has accomplished much good among his associates. He and his wife seem to closely bound together as many occupying the same relationship, and their devotion to each other is very touching. The younger man is proud of his father's record, and long and useful life, with the vigor he still displays, while the eldest looks with pride on the business acumen and enterprise of his son. The two are universally respected and their home is one always happily visited, for a hospitable welcome awaits anyone who comes within their doors.

CAMPBELL, William, who owns an excellent farm in Springfield Township, Sangamon County, was formerly a machinist and worked at his trade thirty years in Springfield. Mr. Campbell was born in the Highlands of Scotland, May 30, 1845, and is a son of Robert and Jeanette (McIntosh) Campbell, the former born in 1818 and the latter in 1820, both in Perthshire, Scotland. The father brought his family to Ontario, Canada, in 1856, and there engaged in farming until his death in 1881. His widow died in 1880. There were five sons and three daughters in the family, of whom three sons and one daughter survive.

William Campbell received his early education in the schools of his native country and finished it at the schools in Ontario. As a boy he worked on a farm and in 1868 moved to Springfield. He operated a farm under the best of conditions, the equipment being entirely modern, an almost perfect service is given. The two are universally respected and their home is one always happily visited, for a hospitable welcome awaits anyone who comes within their doors.

June 7, 1870, Mr. Campbell was married, at Springfield, to Miss Elizabeth Hedley, who was born in Springfield, May 9, 1847, daughter of Daniel and Nancy (Simpkins) Hedley. Mr. Hedley, a carpenter by trade and a native of Pennsylvania, came to Sangamon County in 1830 and there worked at his trade until his death. His wife was from South Carolina. He enlisted in 1861 in the Tenth Illinois Cavalry, served as a nurse in the hospital corps, and was killed in Missouri, in 1862. He and his wife had six daughters and four sons, of whom all survive save two daughters. Seven children were born to Mr. Campbell and his wife, of whom six survive: Edith, wife of O. H. Duke, a lumber dealer of Illiopolis; Cora, a teacher in the Converse School in Springfield;
Jessie, wife of R. F. Woodruff, who is engaged in farming near Springfield; Robert, in livery business in Ephrata, Wash.; Emma, a teacher in the Converse School; Herbert at home. There are four grandchildren in the family. Mr. Campbell has the good-will and esteem of his neighbors and is a man of unquestioned principles of honor. He served three terms as Justice of the Peace of Springfield Township. He is a staunch Democrat in politics and actively interested in public affairs. He is a member of the Congregational Church.

CAMPBELL, William (deceased), one of the prominent farmers in his part of Sangamon County, whose widow occupies a beautiful home at Buffalo, was born in Ireland, March 15, 1823, He was one of four children and, his father being a farmer, he was brought up to a practical knowledge of agricultural operations and methods. He was educated in his native land and remained there until some time after the death of his parents, being the only member of his family who came to America. Locating first in Canada, he farmed there several years. Thence he moved over into New York State and farmed in Saratoga County until 1858, when he came west to Sangamon County, Ill., where he farmed till the Civil War began. Then he served by enlistment one year in Company L, Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, participating in several battles and accepting a discharge only on account of sickness which disabled him from further duty, as is shown in government records. Returning to Illinois, he lived at Peoria until his death, which occurred in 1873. His widow and her family soon afterward came to Buffalo, where she is now living with her two sons.

Mr. Campbell married in Orange County, New York, March 3, 1844, Miss Martha Sargent, born in Lancashire, England, December 17, 1833, daughter of George Sargent, a farmer, who came to the United States and farmed in Orange County, New York, until 1856, then settled in Sangamon County, where he lived out the remainder of his life. Mrs. Campbell is of a family of seven sons and three daughters. Her brother, George Sargent, lives in Dawson, Sangamon County, a retired farmer; her sister, Mrs. Emma Alexander, lives in Cornland, III., wife of a farmer. Mrs. Campbell is a member of the Christian Church.

To Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were born nine children, seven sons and two daughters. Three of the sons have passed away, and the others are as follows: William H. and George S., live with their mother; John H., is a citizen of Oklahoma; Alexander lives in Decatur, III., employed as a foreman in the operation of the Illinois Traction System of electric railways; Martha J., is the wife of Norman Murphy, a farmer of Christian County, Ill.; Cora A., married Charles McMullen, of Montana, who is winning success as a farmer. Mrs. Campbell has seventeen grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

CAMPBELL, William Lee, a retired farmer living at Rochester, Ill., is a member of an old family of Sangamon County. He was born at Pleasant Plains, April 15, 1843, a son of Hugh and Susan (Schreves) Campbell, both natives of North Carolina, where their first four children were born. The family came to Illinois and were early settlers of Cartwright Township, locating on the farm which formerly belonged to the pioneer minister, Peter Cartwright. Four children were born to the parents after they came to Sangamon County. Those of the children who now survive are: William L., of this sketch, and Nelson, also of Rochester. The family lived in Cartwright Township seven years, five of which were spent on the Cartwright farm, turned over to property of Judge Taylor, where they lived ten years, after which they came to Rochester and the father purchased a farm in the neighborhood, where he died in 1863 and his widow in 1868.

As a boy William L. Campbell went to school in a log building, fitted with slab benches and poorly furnished, one of his early schoolmates being DeWitt Smith. He worked on the farm for his father many years and after the latter's death continued agricultural operations until his retirement a few years since. He was an enterprising and industrious farmer and won success in this line. He now has a comfortable home in Rochester. The family is one of the older ones of Rochester and its members are prominent in local affairs. Both Mr. Campbell and his wife are useful members of the Methodist Church and ready to forward any object which has in view the betterment of the community. Both were personal friends of Abraham Lincoln, whom they remember with great regard.

Mr. Campbell was married at Springfield, June 14, 1867, to Elizabeth Money, born in Loudon County, Va., May 8, 1848, daughter of P. A. Money, a carpenter by trade. Both the father and mother were born in Fairfax County Va., and the latter's maiden name was Margaret James. Mr. Honey followed his trade in his native State until he came to Illinois in 1855, at which time he had three children. He located at Rochester and there followed his trade until his death, helping to erect many houses and other buildings in the vicinity and becoming owner of considerable property. He and his wife had six daughters and two sons, of whom the following survive: Louis A., a carpenter living at Denver; Henry Tyler; Margaret, wife of Albert Burk, of Rochester; Mrs. Campbell; Susan, wife of Frank Miller, a machinist living at Decatur, III. teacher of North Dakota. There are ten grandchildren and one great-grandchild in the family.
Mrs. Campbell's father enlisted at Camp Butler in the One Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and served one year during the Civil War, taking part in several battles.

CAMPBELL, William Van Buren, one of the oldest pioneers of Sangamon County, and a man widely and favorably known, was born and reared on the farm which has been his home for seventy-five years. His birth occurred May 5, 1836, on Section 27, Cartwright Township, bening a son of Maxwell and Nancy (Plunkett)
Campbell. Mrs. Campbell was a sister of Silas Plunkett, whose family history is treated of elsewhere in this work. Maxwell Campbell was born in North Carolina, October 29, 1795, being a grandson of Robert Campbell, born in Scotland. The latter, with six sons, settled in North Carolina prior to the Revolutionary War, all of his sons participating in that struggle, they being James, John, Robert, William, Samuel and George. Robert Campbell, the father, was killed in the service. The second Robert was the father of Maxwell-Campbell. The marriage of Maxwell Campbell occurred July 25, 1822. His wife was born in 1806, in the same county as her husband. The following year they came to Sangamon County, settling on the north side of Richland Creek, in what is now Cartwright Township. They located on Section 27, erecting a log cabin, and became successful farmers of their locality. Previous to the formation of the Republican party he was a Whig, but after its formation, Mr. Campbell voted its ticket, having been a friend of Abraham Lincoln. The aged mother of Mr. Campbell accompanied him to Illinois and died here April 7, 1844, when she had almost reached the age of one hundred years.
The children born to Maxwell Campbell and wife were as follows: Robert, born August 13, 1823, a successful farmer died, March 12, 1910;
Jane died in infancy; John H., born May 19, 1828, enlisted in Company F, One Hundred

ing no issue; Dorcas M., born April 3, 1833, made F. W. Irwin, January 25, 1851, died March 25, 1886; William V., born May 2, 1836; Jasper, born May 22, 1839, also a member of Company F, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, was captured and confined in Andersonville for several months, suffering untold hardships. Maxwell Campbell's well-known integrity and uprightness caused him to be selected to administer many estates. While he never accepted office, he was loyal in his devotion to his party and advocated the establishment of schools and maintenance of good government. His death occurred August 8, 1881.

William Van Buren Campbell was born amid pioneer conditions and grew up on the 120-acre farm his father had entered from the Government, which later passed into his possession.
His education was secured in a typical log cabin and his boyhood was spent in hard work on the farm. On February 13, 1862, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage with Mary E. Valentine, born in Ohio, December 14, 1844, but brought to Illinois about 1854, her parents Samuel and Sophia. (Young) Valentine then locating on a farm in Cartwright Township, where they remained until death claimed them, she passing away in 1889 and he in 1885. They left a large family; Sylvester, Samuel, Ellen, Phillip, Sophia, Eva and India.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Campbell began their married life on forty acres of the homestead, eventually coming into possession of the whole. Four children were born to them: Maxwell M., born November 21, 1862; Jasper S., born September 23, 1864, died September 24, 1883; Oliver H., born January 8, 1870, died October 12, 1872; Cora, born June 4, 1873, wife of Richard R. Wells, a farmer of Salisbury Township, has two children, Earl E. and Beulah.
Mr. Campbell died December 27, 1888.

Mr. Campbell now owns 267 acres of fine farm land, and has made a specialty of breeding and raising blooded stock, his horses and large mules being noted for their excellence. He also devotes considerable attention to the Duroc Jersey and Poland-China hogs, shorthorn cattle and Oxford sheep. Mr. Campbell has held many of the more important township offices, supporting the Republican ticket, and has been a friend of progress. While not a member of any religious denomination, like his father he believes in the good work of the church and attends service at the Baptist Church in his neighborhood. He is a man of kindly disposition, genial in manner, who makes and retains friends wherever he goes. Interested in the Old Settlers' Association, he has served as its Vice President for a number of years and is an important factor at all their meetings.

CANFIELD, Charles W., who was for many years actively identified with real estate interest in Springfield, Ill., now lives retired from active life, in his home at No. 1404 South Glenwood Avenue, that city. Mr. Canfield spent many years on a farm near Springfield, and has been a resident of Sangamon County for more than fifty years. He was born in New Orleans, La., February 22, 1820, son of Robert F. and Ruth Halsey (Walton) Canfield. The father was born in New Jersey February 22, 1807, and the mother was born in New York City in 1808. Robert F. Canfield was for many years interested in the real estate business in New Orleans, to which city he went as a young man. There he was married and there the reminder of his life was spent. His father served in the Black Hawk War. Robert Can-field was employed in the Custom House at New Orleans during the administrations of Presidents Jackson and Taylor, and dealt very extensively in real estate in that city. also settling up many of the French claims against the government. His Grandfather Caldwell came to America from Ireland before the Revolution, serving in that war and in the War of 1812. Robert Canfield’s son Henry served through the Mexican War, taking part in every battle in that struggle.

The education of Charles W. Canfield was received in the city, where for some time he attended a school on LaFayette Square. Upon leaving school he first took a position as grocery clerk in New Orleans, continuing three years in this business, this being about the time of the Mexican War. Later on he worked for a wholesale grocery house, Bailey & Company, of New Orleans, then took a position under his father as a clerk in the Custom House, where he remained three years. In 1853 he came to Illinois and for twenty-five years lived on a farm of 600 acres a few miles west of the city of Springfield, which had been left him by his mother. He was an enthusiastic and intelligent farmer and became successful in this occupation. About 1858 he moved to Springfield and embarked in business in the line of real estate, in which he achieved a fair degree of success, but for the past few years he has lived retired from active business life. He became well known in the business circles of Springfield and his dealings with his fellows have been marked by good business judgment and strict adherence to honesty and integrity of methods. In politics he is a Democrat and in religious views a member of the Presbyterian Church. His mother was one of the organizers of the first church of that faith in New Orleans and was an earnest worker in its interests. Mr. Canfield has given his countenance and assentance to many worthy causes and movements and is a man of kind and charitable instincts, interested in the general welfare and in the needs of the poor. Besides his residence he owns other city real estate in Springfield. He is well known in many circles and was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, whose home he visited in company with his mother. He relates many interesting incidents of Mr. Lincoln’s life, one of which has to do with the morning of the latter’s nomination for the presidency. He and Mr. Canfield had met and were standing at the place now occupied by Bressmer’s, when Mr. Lincoln received his notification by telegram of this important event in his life, and said “I’ve got a little woman at home who wants to see this.”

On his father’s side Mr. Canfield is a relative of Gov. Duncan. He was an excellent shot in his earlier years, and has been known to kill twenty prairie chickens in nineteen shots. He now resides with his son Mark, who is a resident of Springfield.

Mr. Canfield was married near Springfield to Miss Mary Parker, who was born in New Jersey and died in Springfield in 1850. Her parents came to Illinois in an early day and spent their remaining years on a farm near Springfield. Eleven children were born to Mr. Canfield and wife, eight sons and three daughters, and eight of them are now living. They are: Walter, of Springfield, Deputy Game Warden of Illinois; Andrew, foreman for Vredenburg Lumber Company, of Springfield; William, engaged in transfer business; John, a constable living in Springfield; Mark, a painter by trade; Wade, a farmer living near Springfield; Josephine, wife of Jacob Slater, living in Pana; Fannie, deceased; Georgette, wife of William Chamberlain, of Springfield. Mr. Canfield has fifteen grandchildren.

Mark Canfield married Maud Gambrel, and they have two children, Glendy Burk and Robert Logan. Mrs. Maud (Gambrel) Canfield is a daughter of Henry and Frances Ford (Davies) Gambrel, natives of Springfield, Ill., and of St. Louis, Mo., the mother being deceased and the father still living. The mother of Frances Ford Davies was a daughter of Gov. Ford, of Illinois, who used his own money in clearing the debts of the State, and became famous in the Mormon War, and she died March 16, 1910, at Lincoln, Ill.

CANFIELD, Erastus D., a prominent and well-known citizen of Springfield, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, conducts a small broom-making factory at his home, 1245 West Governor Street, and is fairly successful in this enterprise. He has been engaged in present plant twenty-one years and has established a paying business. Mr. Canfield was born at Genesee Valley, N. Y., April 17, 1837, son of John and Mary A. (Blair) Canfield, the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Genesee. The father moved from Massachusetts to Genesee Valley as a young man and for some time conducted a barrel factory there. He followed the trade of cooper all his life and was located in business at various places. He took an active part in politics and became well-known as an eloquent public speaker. He died when his son Erastus was but nine years old. The father moved to Ohio in 1838 and conducted a factory several years near Hamilton. He died at Cambridge City, Ind., where the family had located. His widow moved back to Ohio with her children and later went with her son Erastus to Minnesota, where he took up a government claim and lived three years. The mother was a graduate of one of the largest seminaries in the State of New York. She died in 1865.

Erastus D. Canfield received his education in the country schools of Butler County, Ohio, his mother having returned to Millville, that county, after her husband’s death, and as a young man he worked at wood chopping in the winter and on a farm in the summer until he took up the trade of broom-making, at which he worked several years in Ohio. While he lived in Minnesota he spent short periods of time in various cities, going first to St. Louis and later to Pana, Ill., where he worked at his trade, until the breaking out of the Civil War. He enlisted from Pana in Company B. Thirty-fifth Illinois Infancy, and served three years, being mustered out at Springfield. He took part in many important engagements, among them being Pea Ridge, Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, in which he did his full duty as a soldier and won a good re-ord. Upon leaving the army he took up the occupation of broom-maker at Springfield, which he has since continued there. He and his son Wellington live together at the home of the former. He is now in his seventy-third year and enjoys excellent health, being able to carry on his business to good advantage. He is well known for the excellent work he turns out and never relaxes his vigilance in keeping up the standard he has set for his product.

Mr. Canfield was married near Springfield, in 1866, to Harriet Kelly, born near Spring Creek, Sangamon County, and two children blessed this union: Wellington and John C., both contractors, living in Springfield. Mrs. Canfield died in 1870 and Mr. Canfield married (second) Elizabeth Rodgers, a native of Ohio, who died in 1909, having borne her husband no children. Mr. Canfield is very fond and proud of his nine grandchildren. He was acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and remembers him well. Mr. Canfield is a prominent member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., and in politics has always supported the measures and men of the Republican party. He is a member of the Douglas Avenue Methodist Church, of Springfield, and is an active promoter of its good work. He helped form the present organization and has always been prominent in furthering its interests. He has been successful in business through his own ambition and energy and is a self-made man, highly esteemed for his many fine qualities of mind and heart and his public-spirited and charitable actions.

CANHAM, John.—Land in the vicinity of Springfield is so valuable that its fortunate possessors will not sell at any figure. This locality was once the home of Indians and wild animals, but today contains some of the highest priced farming land in the country. One of the men owning some of this valuable land is John Canham, of Woodside Township. He was born in Cambridgeshire, England, April 25, 1845, a son of John and Phoebe (Bally) Canham, both of England. The father was a farmer and came to the United States in 1854, sailing from Liverpool and landing at New York. From that city he came to Jacksonville, Ill., and worked in Morgan County as a farm hand for two years, before engaging in farming on his own account. After four years in Morgan County he came to Sangamon County, locating on a farm in Dixon Township and there continuing until his death. There were ten sons and two daughters in the family, five of whom still survive. The education of Mr. Canham was secured in the excellent public schools of his native place, and during his boyhood he worked on the home farm for his father. He did not come to the new home until a year after the father, but after joining the latter worked with him, and came with him to Divernon Township. Still later he located on ten acres of choicest land in the vicinity of Springfield, which has continued to be his home for the past twenty-eight years. He does both farming and gardening on his land, which has been so well developed and in so desirable a location that he has refused $400 per acre for it. His home is a comfortable one and in it his children have been born.

On November 12, 1870, Mr. Canham was united in marriage with Sarah Knight, in the city of Springfield. She was born near Somerset, England, November 12, 1849. Her parents came to America, settling on a farm in Sangamon County many years ago. Mrs. Knight died in August, 1905, but the father survives, although he has attained an advanced age. For a number of years he farmed and conducted a truck garden. Three sons and one daughter have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Canham: George, who lives in Springfield being in the employ of the Wabash Railroad Company; Louis lives at home; Cleve lives in Springfield, and Minnie lives at home. There are five grandchildren in this happy family, who are the delight of their grandparents.

Mr. Canham has taken considerable in-interest in fraternal matters, belonging to Liberty Camp, No. 1524, Modern Woodmen. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party, but he has never been willing to allow his name to be used on its ticket. An excellent example of the transplanted Englishman, Mr. Canham possesses those traits of character which have made his nation famous the world over for so many years, and is a real homemaker. Frugal and industrious, he has worked hard and saved his earnings, investing them carefully. Developing his property, he has made it so valuable that it is justly regarded as one of the best truck farms in the State. He is an excellent farmer and gardener, understanding every detail of his work. His products are so superior that they find a ready sale at fancy prices, and his ten acres yield him an income larger than many a general farmer enjoys from a farm many times its size, which is unprofitably operated. Never seeking public notice, Mr. Canham endeavors to do his full duty as a business man and as a citizen, and has won the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has dealings.

CANTRALL, Jacob M., a retired farmer living at 1115 Patton Avenue, Springfield, Ill., was born near Cantrall, Ill., December 26, 1841, and is the fifth child of Joshua M. and Sarah (Cantrag) Cantrall, natives of Ohio. Jacob M. Cantrall passed his boyhood on a farm near the village of Cantrall, and attended school about one mile from home, in a log school house, where the seats and desks were made of hewed sycamore logs arranged around the edge of the building. His first teacher was John D. Swallow and later ones were J. B. Hall, L. J. Sweet, Mr. Collins, Mr. Mulliner, Mr. Hoyt and Mr. Hickey. Mr. Cantrall still has in his possession a "Reward of Merit" card given him when he was twelve years old, by Mr. Sweet. He worked on the farm with his father from the time he was twenty years old. He was gone twenty-four years of age, then began farming on his own account on a farm of eighty acres two miles from Cautrall.

December 22, 1869, Jacob M. Cantrall married Miss Marian J. Tufts, daughter of Thomas J. Tufts, then a resident of Sangamon County. She was born May 14, 1848, and died March 26, 1879. Mr. Cantrall was married (second) January 15, 1880, to Miss Martha Brown. She was born August 28, 1861, and died January 16, 1898. By his first marriage he had two children, as follows: Ada E., born February 7, 1873, married E. L. Margrett, of Palmer, Ill.; Cora M., born October 12, 1878, married James M. Alexander, February 9, 1898, and they reside in Springfield. By the second wife the following children were born: Jacob Ernest, born July 15, 1883, married Jennie M. King and they live on a farm north of Springfield; Ula Joshua, born June 4, 1886, married Elsie LaRue, and they live at 1111 Patton Avenue. Mr. Cantrall was a member of the Cantrall Christian Church, which he joined in 1862, and for seven years was deacon. Since coming to Springfield he has joined the West Side Christian Church, in which he has served two years as Deacon. He is a stanch Republican and actively interested in the public welfare. He has lived in Springfield since 1862, retired from active life, and has many firm friends in the city. He is a man of personal integrity and sincerity and universally respected.

CANTRALL, Zebulon Graham (deceased), belonged to a family which has been prominent in Sangamon County, Ill., since its early settlement. The name of this family the town of Cantrall was named. The first of the family to settle here was Levi Cantrall, grand uncle of Zebulon G. Cantrall. The subject of this sketch was born in Sangamon County, May 7, 1835, son of Joshua Metz and Sarah Cantrall, both of whom were natives of Ohio. Joshua M. Cantrall came to Illinois as a young man and secured a farm in Sangamon County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He died in 1890 and was buried in Cautrall Cemetery.

Zebulon G. Cantrall received his education in the country schools and remained on the farm with his parents until his marriage, then began farming on his own account. He came to Springfield in 1880 and took up carpenter work, becoming a successful contractor, but on account of failing health abandoned this business and accepted an agency for the Prudential Life Insurance Company. He had been a resident of Springfield sixteen years at the time of his death. He was a stanch Republican and actively interested in public affairs. He served seven years as Assessor of Fancy Creek Township, three years as Collector, twenty years as School Director, and was also a Constable. He became a prominent and well known citizen of Springfield and was much esteemed for his many good traits and his honest, reliable character. He was greatly mourned by his family and many personal friends. He was a devout member of the First Christian Church and much interested in charitable and benevolent causes.

Mr. Cantrall was married in Sangamon County November 6, 1864, to Miss Elizabeth J. Lilly, who was born in Augusta County, Va., November 19, 1838, daughter of William and Mary B. (Dobbs) Lilly, the father a native of Albemarle County, Va., and the mother of Louisa County, Va. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cantrall: Mary A., deceased; Mrs. Melissa E. Womack, of Springfield, whose husband is employed as bookkeeper in a large factory; Celia J., wife of Frank Gilman, in theatrical business, now living at Houston, Tex.; Noah M., deceased; Arminta L., and Amelia E., deceased; Alfred E., a carriage painter, is unmarried and lives with his mother; Zebulon G., connected with a wholesale house in Springfield, is unmarried and lives at 127 East Carpenter Street, Springfield, Ill. Mr. Cantrall's death occurred May 3, 1896, at Springfield, and his remains were interred in Cautral Cemetery. Mrs. Cantrall's father, William Lilly, participated in the War of 1812, serving in a Virginia regiment.

CAPPs, Jabez. (Vol. I, p. 78.)

CAREY, John M. (deceased).—Many of the present generation of Irish-Americans in Springfield will readily remember the late John M. Carey, for many years a city employee and business man, whose death occurred November 8, 1890. It was not so many years before, on the night of July 7th, that he had saved the midnight train from plunging from the Chicago & Alton bridge into the Sangamon River, after a heavy storm had caused a flood that washed one of the pliers away. Mr. Carey was born near Queenstown, Ireland, the son of John and Mary Carey, both of whom died in Ireland.

John M. Carey came to the United States as a young man with his two brothers, Thomas and William, and after landing at New York City came direct to Springfield. John became watchman at the Chicago & Alton railroad bridge, where he remained many years, and it was while holding this position that he performed the deed that saved many lives. On the night above mentioned during a heavy storm, which had continued for several days, Mr. Carey became suspicious that the rain would damage the bridge, and, taking a lantern, started out to investigate, finding that one of the pliers had washed away. He managed to stop the midnight train in time to save it and for his services received the sum of $25. Later he accepted a position with the watch factory, where he was employed for nine years, but subsequently went into the grocery business. He finally became a minister for a few years and then retired, his death occurring at his home in Springfield, November 22, 1877. He was a member of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church. He was a Democrat in politics and served for a time as trustee and for years as Justice of the Peace of Ridgeley, before that town was incorporated with Springfield.

On November 22, 1877, Mr. Carey was married to Catherine Rohan, who was born near London, Ohio, October 17, 1836, a daughter of Patrick and Catherine (Sheehan) Rohan, both of whom are deceased. To Mr. and Mrs. Carey there were born the following children: Nellie M., who is deceased; Margaret J., who married Jacob Owens; William J., of Tacoma, Wash.; Elsie C., Alice L. and Mary C., at home; and John A. and Walter M., deceased.

CARMEAN, Robert.—The calling of farming is not an easy one. At best it is exhausting work, but he who follows it with any degree of success will reap handsome profits and in his declining years have all the comforts that come to those whose active lives have been well spent. Robert Carman, now living retired in Springfield, was for many years engaged in farming in Sangamon County, Ill. He was born in 1848 in Pickaway County, Ohio, a son of Noah Carman. When he was five years of age, in 1853, the family moved to a farm in McDonough County, Ill., and there Mr. Carman grew to manhood, learning by practical experience the work of farming, which he had chosen for his life calling, and obtaining his education in the public schools. In 1861 the family moved to Morgan County, Ill., and two years later, when fifteen years old, Mr. Carman enlisted in Company I, Seventeenth Regiment, United States Cavalry, serving until the close of the war as a member of the Fifteenth Army Corps. He took part in many fierce engagements and three horses were killed under him, one of which fell upon his leg. After a service marked with signal bravery, he was honorably discharged in October, 1865, at Camp Butler.

After completing his service to his country Mr. Carman returned to the work of the farm and in 1870 was married to Miss Kate Conley, of Champaign County, Ill., who died in September, 1896, having been the mother of the following children: Alexander, Lulu, Katy, Harry, George, John, Robert, Fred and Roy, of whom Lulu and Katy are deceased. In 1875 Mr. Carman came to Springfield and for five years was identified with the ice business, but eventually returned to the farm, where he was engaged until building his present residence and retiring from active life, in 1897. He is a member of the Second Methodist Episcopal Church, in the faith of which his wife died. His politics are those of the Republican party. He is held in high esteem by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance, both as a worthy comrade of the Grand Army of the Republic, and as a citizen.

CARNES, Alexander L., a well-known and reliable citizen of Chatham, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, is now living retired from active life. He was born in Ross County, Ohio, September 24, 1844, son of Alexander W. and Mary (Shoemaker) Carnes, the former born in Germany in 1814, and the latter born in Ohio in 1822. The father was a preacher in the Methodist Church. He came to the United States as a young man and settled in Pennsylvania, going thence to Ohio, where he was married. He died at LaFayette, Ind., in 1868, having moved there that year, and his widow died there in 1871. He served in the Eighteenth Ohio Battery two years during the Civil War and was mustered out at Camp Dennison, Ohio. His parents were natives of Germany and his wife's parents of Kentucky.

Alexander L. Carnes received his education in Chillicothe, Ohio, and spent his boyhood and youth on a farm. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company D, Seventy-third Ohio Infantry, at Chillicothe, under Thomas Beach, and was mustered out at Lookout Valley, Tenn., January 1, 1864. He re-enlisted in the same company the day he was mustered out, under Captain Downing, and received his final discharge at Camp Dennison, in August, 1865, having served his country faithfully and well for four long years. He participated in the Battles of Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, second Battle of Bull Run, Cedar Mountain, Lookout Valley, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, Atlanta, Buzzard's Roost, Savannah and Bentonville, besides many less important skirmishes. He served under Sherman on his progress to the sea, also served under Joe Hooker, and held the rank of Sergeant and later Lieutenant of his company. He has a record of which he may well be proud and is a member of the G. A. R.

In 1872 Mr. Carnes moved from Ohio to Illinois, and some years afterwards moved to Kentucky, but four years later (1890) returned to Illinois. He had served four years as constable while living in Ohio and has always been an active member of the Republican party. For thirty years he has been a faithful member of the Methodist Church and has always been willing to promote the cause of education and religion. He taught school in Kentucky, Missouri and Illinois, and is well informed on subjects of public interest. He is held in high esteem by all who know him. He has spent the greater part of his life in agricultural pursuits, in which he has been very successful. He receives a good pension and is in comfortable circumstances financially.

Mr. Carnes was married at Paris, Ill., September 1, 1872, to Miss Nancy Jane Dyke, a native of Ross County, Ohio, born in 1843, daughter of William and Mary (Daily) Dyke, the former born in England and the latter in Ohio. William Dyke came to Illinois in 1864 and died

In Chatham, in 1800, his wife having died in Ohio. Two children were born to Mr. Carnes and his wife: Mabro L., born at Sidney, Ill., September 12, 1873, and Ambro D., born at Williamsville, Ill., October 10, 1876. Ambro is deceased, but his daughter married W. G. Hat ten, lives at Chatham, Ill., and has had seven children, three of whom survive. Mr. Carnes was married (second) to Miss Hannah R. Donathan, who was born in Indiana, daughter of Martin V. and Elizabeth (Hamilton) Donathan, both of whom were born in Kentucky, and they moved to Indiana, where they lived but a short time. One child was born to Mr. Carnes by his second marriage, Magnus May, born at Carrollton, Ky., February 12, 1908.

CARSON, John M.—Some of the older farmers of Sangamon County have retired from their active labors, establishing themselves in one of the pleasant villages, where they enjoy the fruits of their labors. One of these retired farmers who stands high in general esteem is J. M. Carson, of Loami, born in Fayette County, Ill., March 17, 1857, a son of John and Margery (Parkinson) Carson, who were, it is believed, natives of Tennessee. They were married in Madison County, Ill., moving to Sangamon County about 1820. From there they went to Fayette County, where the father died. Later the mother returned to Sangamon County, marrying John Campbell. There were nine children born to her first marriage, four of whom survive: William P., of Loami; Amanda, wife of Peter Campbell, of Chatham Township; Isaac, of Oregon, and J. M. There was no issue by the second marriage. Both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell are now deceased, she dying at the age of seventy-one and he at the age of eighty-five years, firm in the faith of the Baptist Church of which he had long been a member, and one of the representative men of the county.

When he lost his father, J. M. Carson was but a lad, and accompanying his mother back to Sangamon County, later he lived in Morgan County, and when twenty years old began farming on rented land in Chatham Township, Sangamon County, still later going to Loami Township. In 1855 he married Elizabeth Workman, daughter of David Workman. Her father was a brother of William Workman, and an uncle of Isaac Workman. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Carson located in Loami, but in 1857 removed to Crawford County, Kan., where they bought land, remaining until about 1862, when they returned to Sangamon County and stayed until the close of the war. Once more they went to Crawford County, Kan., making it their home, until 1870, when Mr. Carson traded his property there for land in Maxwell Township, which he later sold, buying a farm in Chatham Township. When he sold the latter he bought another farm, adjoining Loami, and this continued the family residence until 1901, when he sold it, buying a pleasant home in the eastern part of Loami, where he is spending his declining years. Ten children were born to him and his wife, but only four survive: Amanda, wife of T. Eunice Lee, of Chatham Township; Minerva, wife of William H. Workman; Louisa, wife of Samuel Workman, of Loami, who conducts a neat market; Peter, a farmer in the vicinity of Loami. Lydia married Thomas Torrence but is dead, as is her husband; John D., died at the age of sixteen years, and the other children died in infancy. The mother of this family passed away in 1876, being buried near Avoca, Crawford County, Kan. On March 25, 1880, Mr. Carson was married to Mrs. Sarah Jane Hudson, daughter of Levi Campbell, a native of Tennessee. Mrs. Carson was born June 29, 1843. Her father died when she was only a child. She has one sister, Mary F., wife of Kirk Lary, of Garnett, Kas., and a brother, Staley D. Campbell, of Ponca, Okla. Mrs. Carson had two children by her first marriage, one of whom died in infancy, the other being Lucy E., wife of James Greer of Loami, where he is a contractor and builder. In religious faith Mrs. Carson is a Baptist. Mr. Carson has always voted the Democratic ticket.

CARSON, William P., still residing on his farm, Section 29, Maxwell Township, has practically retired from active life, being able to afford to do so, for his 320-acre farm yields him good income. He was born in Woodside Township, Sangamon County, December 25, 1830, during what was known as the big snow, which covered the entire State for three and one-half to four feet deep. He is a son of John Carson, born in South Carolina in 1794, and grandson of James Starrett Carson, also born in South Carolina. The great-grandfather, John Starrett Carson, whose name appears in the history of the Carolina States, came of Scotch-Irish ancestry, establishing himself in South Carolina at an early day. He was one of six brothers who came to the United States, locating in the Carolinas. James S. Carson, grandfather of Mr. Carson, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, joining the army when still a boy, and participating in the battle of King's Mountain. At the close of the war he went to Tennessee, where he rearmed his family, and there John Carson, father of William P. Carson, grew to manhood's estate, enlisting in the War of 1812. Upon the expiration of his military service he returned to Tennessee, only to find that his father had sold the home and moved to Illinois. The son followed the father and in 1818 established his home in Madison County. There he married Marijory Parkinson, whose birth occurred in Tennessee. Soon after their marriage they went to live in Morgan County, and about 1820 came to Sangamon County where Mr. Carson bought wild land to the extent of 300 acres in Woodside Township, developing it into one of the finest farms in the county. Still later he moved to Fayette County, there dying November 15, 1844, aged fifty years. After this sad event his widow, with her family, returned to Sangamon County. Later she became the wife of John Campbell, of Chatham Township. She bore her first husband nine children, all of whom attained maturity, and of them three now survive, two brothers and a sister.

William P. Carson was reared on a farm in Sangamon County, attending the subscription schools held in log houses, with puncheon floor and slat seats. He was early called upon to do a man's work and remained with his mother until he was twenty-one years old, when he obtained employment by the month with other farmers. On April 5, 1855, Mr. Carson married Minerva Workman, of Loami Township, a daughter of David Workman, an early settler of the county, who came from Bourbon County, Ky.

Like so many young farmers, Mr. Carson rented land as soon as he married, and within a year bought eighty acres on Section 20, in what is now Maxwell Township, moving to it April 5, 1856. There was a small log cabin on the property and in it they resided for sixteen years. At the time they located there the wild prairie grass was higher than a man on horseback, but they soon had the land under cultivation and it is now the best farm in the township. From time to time Mr. Carson added to his original purchase, until he now owns 200 acres. The log cabin has been replaced by a substantial frame residence and splendid barns are provided to shelter the stock.

Mr. Carson became parents of nine children: David, born February 7, 1856, lives in Idaho; Sarah, born February 7, 1858, married John D. Burton, of Loami Township; John Calloun, born October 21, 1859, died January 29, 1890; Elizabeth, born April 7, 1862 married John Adams; Lydia Ann, born April 8, 1864, married J. W. Workman, a farmer in Maxwell Township; Lee, born January 23, 1867 is operating the old farm; Amanda, born July 23, 1869, married Mayhew Workman, a farmer of Loami Township, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Nancy, born November 14, 1872, and Diana, born November 10, 1874, are both deceased. Politically Mr. Carson has always been a strong Democrat, casting his first vote for Franklin Pierce. While never caring for office, he has served in minor township offices. Mrs. Carson is a member of the Presbyterian Church. The Carson family are widely known, and their friends are always cordially welcomed at the hospitable home, over which Mrs. Carson presides with kindly intent.

CARSWELL, Thomas.—In seeking the reason of personal success one invariably finds that the men who rise to positions above their fellows are those who have everlastingly kept at what they started out to accomplish and, through sheer perseverance, have finally reached their goal. These are the kind of men that have brought Sangamon County to its present state of prosperity, and one whose name may be mentioned in this connection is Thomas Carswell, now living retired after a long period spent in agricultural pursuits. Mr. Carswell is a native of Scotland, born November 15, 1830, son of Thomas and Jane (Hunter) Carswell, who spent their lives in farming in that country.

Thomas Carswell spent his boyhood and youth on his father's farm, and received his education in the schools of his native country. In 1857 he came to America and engaged in farming in Sangamon County, Ill., whence at 1866 he removed to Christian County, but in 1880 returned to Springfield, where he has since made his home. Mr. Carswell's occupation has always been that of a farmer and until recently he was the owner of considerable farming property near Springfield. A Republican in politics, Mr. Carswell served eight years as Justice of the Peace in South Fork Township, Christian County, and for four years has held a like position in Springfield. His religious connection is with the Methodist Church.

May 3, 1866, in Christian County, Ill., Thomas Carswell was united in marriage with Caroline D. Fox, who was born in Virginia, August 10, 1831. In 1842, when Mrs. Carswell's parents first located in Illinois, her father, who was a prominent physician, was the only doctor between Springfield and Taylorville. Of the eight children of Mr. and Mrs. Carswell, five are living: Amanda, wife of John T. Sheppard, engaged in real estate and insurance business; Charles H., engaged in the grocery business; Minnie, who married John Calhoun; Isabelle C. married J. H. Carter; and Albert B., who married Elizabeth T. Carter, and are engaged in the preparation of the Johnson Hatcher Company, married Anne E. Byers; and Albert B., of the Johnson Hatcher Company, married Mamie Boll. Mrs. Carswell's maternal grandfather, Thomas Leslie, was a colonel in the Revolutionary War and she is eligible for membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution.

CARTER, Darius.—After many years of tilling the soil the average farmer comes to a time in his life when he feels that he has earned a rest and that his years of hard labor should be rewarded by retirement. Usually, however, he finds it hard to break away from his years of habit, but once he settles down in the groove of the new order of things, he makes one of his community's best citizens. Darius Carter, a veteran of the great Civil War and a highly esteemed retired citizen of Springfield, was born west of Auburn, Sangamon County, Ill., June 6, 1845, and is a son of Platt Star and Flora M. (Carter) Carter.

Platt Star Carter was born June 29, 1815, in Warren, Conn., where his wife was born July 25, 1815. He came from Connecticut to Springfield in 1833, but two years later returned to his native State and was married. He then came back to Sangamon County, with a two-horse wagon, and settled on a farm near Auburn, where he remained until 1851. He then moved to Waverly, lived there until 1909, and in that year went to Girard, Ill., where he is now living at the remarkable age of ninety-five years, his wife having died in 1904, when eighty-nine years of age.

Darius Carter went to school at Waverly, Ill., and spent his youth much as do other farmers' sons. He was reared to the heavy toil of the farm, and on reaching his majority took charge of his share of the property, which he continued to work until his retirement. In 1896 he removed to Decatur, Ill., where he resided until 1904, then settled in Springfield. During the Civil War Mr. Carter enlisted in Company C, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served about four months. He is a Republican in political matters, was Town Clerk in Springfield Township in 1897, and in 1893, 1894 and 1895 was Road Commissioner in Loomis Township, and Tax Collector of Springfield Township in 1906. He is fraternally connected with Hazel Camp, Modern Woodmen.

On April 29, 1873, Mr. Carter was married at Waverly, Ill., to Sarah Poor, born October 1, 1850, near Knoxville, Tenn., whence her parents came to Waverly, Ill., in 1866, her father being engaged in farming. Both of Mr. Carter's parents are now deceased. Of the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Carter, one daughter died at the age of twenty-six years; Chester R. was accidentally killed March 2, 1910, while in the discharge of his duties as an employee of the Wabash Railroad Company; Frederick M., is foreman of the warehouse and yards of the National Oil Company; and Avis B, is the wife of Judge Rice, living at No. 1315 East Jackson Street, Springfield, salesman for Ball Brothers, cigar dealers and manufacturers. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have two grandsons and one granddaughter.

CARTMEL, Marion.—Tilling the soil is the oldest occupation known to man, antedating history itself. Through all the ages the farmer has been a person of importance, and never more so than to-day, when the whole country is dependent upon him and his products. Sangamon County has produced some of the best farmers in the State, and among those who, for many years, were connected with the agricultural interests of this locality, none stands higher than Marion Cartmel, now living in retirement at Riverton, after years spent in active work. He was born in Clear Lake Township, July 19, 1845, a son of John M. and Mildred R. (Rain- don) Cartmel, the former born in Bath County, Ky., in 1802, and the latter born in Virginia, May 24, 1807.

John M. Cartmel came to Sangamon County in October, 1830, with his father, Andrew Cartmel, who entered land from the Government the same fall, to the extent of eighty acres, and there he lived until his death. Andrew Cartmel was a Virginian, born in March, 1766, but later moved to Bath County, Ky., and thence to Sangamon County. After his father's demise, John M. Cartmel continued to farm the eighty acres of land until he, too, died, in 1883, near Walnut, Kan., while on a visit to his son James. He had three sons and five daughters, two of whom survive; Marion, subject of this sketch, and John W., of Tecumseh, Okla., a prosperous farmer of that locality.

Marion Cartmel grew up, as did the other boys of his neighborhood, alternating attendance at the district school with work on the farm, and later having the advantages offered at the German Prairie schools, at the place now known as Bissell. He succeeded to the old homestead entered from the Government by his grandfather of which he owned sixty acres and which he later sold. He owns his comfortable home in Riverton, which is surrounded by three acres of land. He has lived there since April 29, 1905, when he retired from his farm. He served as School Director for seventeen years in Clear Lake Township. The Christian Church, of Riverton, holds his membership, and he is a liberal supporter of its work.

Mr. Cartmel was married, north of Springfield, February 1, 1872, to Melissa O. James, born at Laurel, Franklin County, Ind., June 30, 1852. Her father, a shoemaker, came to Springfield at an early day but after four years in that city went to Rush County, Ind., coming back to Springfield in 1870, to engage in mining. Still later the family moved to Barclay, where both parents died. Mr. James was a loyal man and served his country in both the Mexican and Civil Wars. He and his wife had nine children, seven of whom, including Mrs. Cartmel, survive. Mr. and Mrs. Cartmel became parents of seven children, five of whom are living: Margaret M., who resides at home; Bertha, wife of R. W. Beeler, lived on a farm north of Springfield, one child, Emerson C.; Myrtle, wife of Fred Todt, lives on a farm southwest of Hillsboro, one child, Mildred E.; Viola, wife of Arthur Lanham, lives on a farm at Edina, Mo.; and Ada, wife of Joseph Wilson, of Riverton, one child, Velma O. There are three grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Cartmel has every reason to be proud of his work as a farmer. Not only did he take care of his family and rear his children to be useful members of society, but he bore his part in his township and church, and laid up a competence sufficient to provide for himself and wife in their declining years, and leave a considerable estate to his heirs. When all this is the result of the patient, unflirig endeavors of a man who had no advantages of wealth or position to help him, there is considerable ground for credit, and those who know Mr. Cartmel best realize that he is fully entitled to all that is accorded to him.

CARTWRIGHT, Peter. (Vol. 1, p. 82.)

CARTWRIGHT, William, now living retired in his handsome home at 2140 North Ninth Street, Springfield, spent many years, working at the trade of ironworker in that city. He was born at Scranton, Pa., June 3, 1857, a son of John and Mary (Rees) Cartwright, the father a native of England and the mother of Wales. The father, also an ironworker by trade, came from England to Scranton and there the family lived many years, moving thence to Springfield in 1870. There were four sons and five daughters in the family, one child being born in England, and the following now survive: Edward, living on Ridgely Avenue, Springfield; William; Mrs. Margaret Pritchard, of Springfield and four other daughters. The parents died in Springfield.

Mr. Cartwright received his education in the public schools of Pennsylvania, supplemented by a course in the Springfield schools. He learned the trade of ironworker as a boy and followed it many years. Later he spent twenty-five years with the Devereaux Mines, at Springfield, being company man, during this time being employed in what was then known as Ridgely. He is well knowing in the city, where he has many friends, and is established in the confidence of his community. He has worked hard since early youth and has endeavored to make the most of his opportunities for advancement.

Mr. Cartwright married Victoria Pritchard in March, 1876, at Springfield. She is a daughter of Thomas Pritchard and was born in Boston, Mass., September 24, 1859. Her father was a native of England and her mother of Ireland. He was an ironworker by occupation and moved from Boston to Philadelphia, where his death occurred. His widow afterwards came to Springfield and there spent the remainder of her life. To Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright twelve children were born: Mary married Thomas Miller, a member of the Springfield police force; Margaret, married Ralph Houston; Carrie, wife of Thomas Murray; Lottie, Mrs. Dapron; Daley, wife of Carl Manley; William, Edward, Thomas, David and Leo, all at home; two died young. Those surviving are all residents of Springfield. There are twelve grandchildren in the family.

CARVER, Felix (deceased).—Many of the earlier residents of Sangamon County, who drew from its fertile soil, a comfortable fortune, have passed away, but what they accomplished still lives, and is remembered not only by their families, but the locality which they helped to make what it is today. One of these sturdy, reliable, successful farmers of the county, who prior to his death was a resident of Springfield, was Felix Carver, born in Dayton, Ohio, October 4, 1830. He was a son of Jacob and Elizabeth (Hoover) Carver, both natives of Ohio. The boyhood of Mr. Carver was passed on his father's Ohio farm, while he attended school, and assisted in work about the home. Thus he grew up into a helpful manhood, and when he came to Sangamon County, in 1852, he was able to put into practice the knowledge he had gained in Ohio, eventually developing a fine farm of 160 acres in Clear Lake Township. For a number of years, he served his district as School Director, and was one of the influential citizens of the township. In 1896, Mr. Carver retired from the farm, moving to Springfield, where he died, September 25, 1908, firm in the faith of the Christian Church of which he was a consistent member. His remains are interred in beautiful Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Carver was married in Springfield, January 22, 1857, to Rachel T. Donner, a daughter of William and Elizabeth (Hunter) Donner, both of whom are now deceased, and lie in Oak Ridge cemetery. Mrs. Carver was born in Sangamon County, May 7, 1841. She and Mr. Carver had the following family: Albert, born December 17, 1862, is married, residing at 120 West Allen street; Henry, born April 4, 1871; Frank, born March 7, 1873; Charlie V., born February 14, 1875, and Margaret E., born September 16, 1878, and two who are deceased. Mrs. Carver has spent her life in Springfield and its vicinity, and owns her residence on South Second Street, where she is now enjoying the comforts her well-spent life has entitled her to. She is a charming lady, kind-hearted, devoted to her home, family and Presbyterian church, and she is honored and beloved by a wide circle of warm personal friends.

CARVER, Albert, was educated in the public schools of Sangamon County, and was graduated from the Springfield High school in June, 1885. Four years later, he was graduated from the University of Illinois at Champaign, with the degree of B. S., and was selected by the faculty as one of the class orators. He went to Europe in 1891, and spent a year in post-graduate work at the University of Berlin, Germany. Returning home, he conducted a chemical laboratory in Chicago where he did all kinds of work, as a manufacturing and analytical chemist, until elected to the position of professor of chemistry and physics in the Springfield High school in the fall of 1895. He served as Assistant Principal for three years, and at present is at the head of the department of physics.

On August 12th, 1896, Professor Carver was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth C. Payran, who was one of Springfield's most efficient teachers.

CARVER, Margarite Mae, was educated in the public schools of Sangamon County, graduated from the Springfield High school in 1898. She has spent much time in travel, both in this country and Europe; taught for a number of years in the county schools, and later in the Springfield public schools. She is an active member of the First M. E. church of Springfield and resides with her mother at No. 838 South Second Street.

CARVER, Frank.—The Carvers are one of the oldest families in Sangamon County, the grandfather of Frank Carver having brought his family there before the winter of the "Deep Snow," and located in Clear Lake Township, where they have since resided. Frank Carver was born there March 7, 1867, and is a son of Felix and Rachel (Donner) Carver, the former a native of Ohio, born near Dayton in 1827, and the latter a native of Clear Lake Township. Felix Carver accompanied his father, Jacob Carver, to Sangamon County, and lived on a farm in Clear Lake Township the remainder of his life, passing away on September 24, 1908. The mother now lives on South Second Street, Springfield. There were five daughters and two sons born to Jacob Carver and wife, all of whom are now deceased. Felix Carver and wife were parents of children as follows: Elizabeth, the oldest, wife of Michael Grubb, of Riverton, now deceased; Albert, a teacher in Springfield High School; Henry, living four miles west of Springfield; Charles, of Springfield; May, wife of William Newlin, a railway mail clerk residing at Springfield; Frank, of this sketch.

Mr. Carver has spent his entire life in Clear Lake Township and has lived on his present farm of fifty acres, which he owns, for the past sixteen years. He received his education in the vicinity and worked for his father in boyhood. He is an industrious and wide-awake farmer and follows modern methods and ideas in his work. Fraternally he belongs to Mud Lake Camp No. 629, Modern Woodmen of America, of Riverton, and he and his wife are members of the Royal Neighbors. Both are members of the Christian Church.

Mr. Carver's marriage occurred in Clear Lake Township, July 9, 1890, when he was united with Christina Zorn, who was born in Gardner Township, May 20, 1873, daughter of Henry Zorn and wife, both natives of Germany. Mr. Zorn was three years of age when his parents brought him to the United States and located at St. Louis, later coming to Springfield, Ill. A short time later he removed to Salisbury Township, and lived there until thirteen years of age, then, at his mother's death, went to Havana, Ill. At the age of twenty-two years Mr. Zorn began farming in Gardner Township and continued this occupation until he moved to Springfield. His wife was brought to the United States at the age of five years. Of their children two sons and five daughters are now living: Mrs. Mary Wennebog, wife of Otto Wennebog, a coal operator of Farmersville, Ill.; Rose, wife of Elmer Glasebrook, of Peoria; Elma, Mabel and Leo, at home with their parents; Howard, a pharmacist of Cincinnati, Ohio. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Carver, namely: Arthur, a member of the United States Marine Corps, located in the Philippine Islands; Elsie, teaching school in Menard County; Felix, Ruth, Bernard, Frank, Rachel and Violet, all at home. The family stand well in the community and have a wide circle of friends.

CARY, Albert Ross, a prosperous and well-known farmer of Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County, is a native of the county, born in Rochester Township, February 23, 1859. He is a son of Samuel H. and Annie (Fogle) Cary, the former born in Delaware, November 11, 1823, and the latter born in Ohio, in 1836. As a young man Samuel H. Cary removed from Delaware to Ohio, where he was married, and later he and his wife came to Sangamon County, where he died October 17, 1900, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery in Rochester Township. His wife died April 4, 1882. They came down the Ohio River from Marietta to Cairo, thence up the Mississippi to Keokuk, where they remained a short time, then came to Quincy, Ill., and later by wagon to Springfield, and spent the remainder of their lives near that city. The parents of Mr. Cary were natives of Ireland and died in Delaware, and the parents of Annie Fogle removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio and died there. Samuel H. Carey was a farmer by occupation and was successful in his operations.

Albert R. Cary attended the country schools of Cotton Hill Township and afterwards engaged in farming, which occupation he has since followed. He has spent his entire life in his native county, living first in Rochester and later in Cotton Hill Township, and has spent but little time outside the county, having made a trip to Ohio and another to Kansas. He is a useful, reliable citizen and an intelligent, energetic farmer, having the respect and esteem of all who know him. Besides his farming interests he is a stockholder in the farmers' Elevator Company, of Breckenridge. In politics he has always been a Democrat, has served as School Director and was elected Assessor two terms, but defeated for this office in 1910. He is the owner of 115 acres of land in Cotton Hill Township and takes pride in its fine condition. He is fond of his home and belongs to no fraternal societies. Though his wife is a member of the Christian Church, he is affiliated with no religious organization.

(Hall) Snodgrass, farmers of Cotton Hill Township, and natives of Sangamon County and Ohio, respectively. Four children have blessed this union: Elton Ray, born in Sangamon County, April 12, 1891; Don Floyd, November 23, 1893; Ada Bell, June 11, 1900; Clarence Ross, August 11, 1900.

CASLICK, Nicholas, a retired farmer living at 1115 North Fifteenth Street, Springfield, Ill., was born in Jersey County, Ill., October 10, 1844, and spent his early years on his father's farm receiving his education principally in the public schools. He is a son of Nicholas and Madeline (Garber) Caslick, both natives of Switzerland, the father born in 1799 and the mother in 1812. The father came to America in 1823 and the mother about the same time.
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

He lived in Jersey County until his death, in November, 1894, and his widow also died on the farm there in 1903.

As a boy Nicholas Caslick learned the details of farming and he followed this occupation most of his active life. Soon after leaving school he entered the army, and in 1860 left the service then began farming at Grafton, Ill., where he lived until 1892, then moved to Edgar, Neb., and thence to Springfield in 1906, retiring from active life. He was an enterprising and successful farmer and was able to retire from active life in 1906. He owns the home where he resides and is highly respected in his community.

Mr. Caslick served in the Civil War, joining Company K, Ninety-seventh Illinois Infantry, and being transferred to Company C, Thirty-seventh Illinois Infantry, which regiment spent the latter part of its services in Texas, being mustered out at Houston, that State, in May, 1865, and finally discharged in Springfield on the last day of that month. They had traveled 17,000 miles, nearly 3,300 of it by marching. He participated in the battles of Vicksburg, Spanish Fort and others, and made an excellent record as a soldier. He joined the G. A. R. in 1875. He is also a member of the Odd Fellows, which he joined in 1870; in religious views is a Methodist and in politics is a staunch Republican. CATLIN, Malcolm, a general farmer and stockman of Section 20, Gardner Township, was born in St. Louis, Mo., April 8, 1871, a son of Ephraim Catlin and his wife Metella who bore the same name and was a distant relation. The father still resides in St. Louis. For a number of years he was a druggist, and then began gaining control of the Catlin Tobacco Co., founded by his father, Daniel Catlin. For years, he was the leading factor in its large operations, and still retains a heavy block of its stock. He was prominent in financial circles for a long period, and is still active in some lines. Losing his first wife about 1872, he married again, his second wife being Camilla Kayser, by whom he had two children: Ephraim and Emilie, both married, the latter to Arthur Sheppy of St. Louis.

Malcolm Catlin was the only child of his father's first marriage and was but a year old when he lost his mother, so his grandmother took charge of him and he was brought to Gardner Township and reared among healthy country surroundings, attending the district school. Later, he went to the Western Military Academy at Alton, Ill., and after six years' course, came back and for two years assisted in caring for the farm. On October 21, 1896, he was married to Laura Cresswell, born in Loami Township, December 16, 1869, daughter of John C. and Mary A. (Gibson) Cresswell. David C. Gibbon was one of the first settlers of that part of the county. John C. Cresswell was born near Carlinville, Ill., and at an early day moved to the vicinity of Loami. He came of Scotch ancestry. His death occurred about 1878, while his widow survived him until 1891, both dying on their farm. They had five children: Catherine, died in infancy; Alice married James L. Buckley of Arms Pass, Tex., issue,—Blanch, Oalmer and Norman; David E., married, issue,—Bertha L.; Lizzie, married Eugene Champlain of Chicago, issue.—Alfred H., Percy C. and Bessie E., and Mrs. Catlin.

On their wedding day Mr. and Mrs. Catlin came direct to their present beautiful home on Section 20, Gardner Township, comprising eighty-two acres of well cultivated land. Mr. Catlin is a practical farmer and makes a specialty of experimenting with new varieties of seeds, believing that no seed is too good or too high priced for his purposes. His abundant crops testify to the wisdom of his methods.

Mr. and Mrs. Catlin have two children: Malcolm, born February 3, 1898; Carmella Marie, born May 28, 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Catlin have affiliated with the Presbyterian Church of Farnscliffe, Ill. A stanch Republican, he has served his party for a number of years as School Director. The people of his district owe him a heavy debt for his endeavors to secure the best teachers for the children, for he believes in giving to them every educational advantage that lies within the province of the Board. Such men as he make up the great backbone of the nation, and his influence for good is widespread.

CHAMBERS, James, Jr. (deceased), who for twenty-five years operated his farm near Curran, Sangamon County, was prominent in his community and interested in its welfare and progress. He was a successful farmer and devoted himself assiduously to developing his farm and bringing it to a high state of cultivation. He was born in Maryland, February 25, 1812, son of James and Mary E. Chambers, the former also a native of Maryland. The parents were farmers.

After obtaining an education in the public schools of his native State, James Chambers, Jr., helped with the work on his father's farm, living with his parents until he moved west and settled on a farm in Sangamon County, Ill. They were well known and highly respected members of society and representative of the best interests of their community, their greatest public service being to rear their six children to honorable man and womanhood.

CHAPMAN, J. S.—Retirement from any line of active endeavor does not necessarily mean a cessation of interest in the progress of events, but often rather the securing of leisure for more intelligent study of civic matters. One of the substantial citizens of Springfield is J. S. Chapman, a retired engineer, residing at No. 110 South State street. He was born in Greene County, Pa., April 15, 1829, a son of John and Pemella (Rhine) Chapman, natives of Lancaster, Pa., and Virginia. The father farmed in Greene County, Pa., for many years, but later moved to Wayne County, Ind., engaging there for two years in farming, when he went to Madison County, Ind., to follow his trade of brick mason. There he spent two years more, then came to Sangamon County, which continued his home until his death, the mother having died in Madison County. There were six sons and six daughters in the family, of whom three children survive: Abijah, of Ottawa, Kan., aged eighty-eight years; Stephen G., of Pueblo, Cal., aged eighty-six years, and J. S. John Chapman was in the War of 1812, while Abijah Chapman was in the Mexican and Civil wars. The great-grandfather, Stephen Gilbert, was a Revolutionary soldier, serving under General Washington. His wife, Rachel Gilbert, lived to be 115 years of age. On the maternal side of the house the ancestors originated in Scotland, and on the father's side in Germany.

J. S. Chapman was educated in the subscription schools of Madison County, Ind., and during his boyhood worked on the farm, thus continuing until sixteen years old. He then began working on the Indianapolis & Madison Railroad as switchman. Later he became fireman, but left to engage with the Indianapolis & Bellefontaine Railroad for seven years. His next employment was with the Pennsylvania Railroad as engineer, but two years later he went with the Indianapolis & Pennsylvania Railroad for a year. He was with the Wabash Railroad, running from Fort Wayne and remained with that company for three years. At the time the Great Western Railroad was in course of construction, he came to Illinois by the stage route. An uncle of his, Stephen D. Gilbert, then controlled many stage routes in the western country, and Mr. Chapman accepted a position with the Great Western Railroad as engineer. After three years in the employ of that company he began in Old Berlin, thus continuing until the spring of 1890, when, stimulated with the idea of western migration, he went to Pike's Peak, where he prospected with remarkable success. After a year there, satisfied with the results of his trip, he returned as far as Omaha, Neb., and enlisted in the Twenty-fifth Missouri Volunteer Infantry. After a service of five months he returned to Old Berlin to resume his farming. He continued farming there two years, then settled on a farm west of Springfield, where he remained seven years. His next change was made when he moved to Menard County to farm for two years. Mr. Chapman then bought a saw-mill at Peoria, conducting it for four years, then located near Monroeville, Ill., and after two years there moved to Athens, Menard County, where he had the misfortune to lose his wife. He remained at Athens for six years, then came to Springfield where he has since lived, and is now making his home with his son. He is a Republican, and was at one time Deputy Sheriff in Sangamon County and for sixteen years served as Constable. On February 14, 1859, Mr. Chapman was married on the line between Morgan and Sangamon Counties, to Susan M. Auberry, born in Kentucky, February 8, 1839, a daughter of John Auberry, born in Kentucky, as was his wife. A farmer, he came to Sangamon County in hopes of bettering his condition, locating near Loami, where his wife died, and he died in 1864. He and his wife had three sons and three daughters, two of whom survive: George Auberry, of Iowa, and Mrs. Sarah McDaniels, of Kansas. Mrs. Chapman died in November, 1894. She and her husband had seven children, three of whom are now living: John, a holisting engineer, of Springfield, married Rachel Jordan, born in Menard County, three children: Forest, Eunice, Otho, Eva M. Gladys and Dorothy E.; William E., a holisting engineer, of Zeigler, Ill., and Jacob, of Zeigler.

CHESNUT, John A. (Vol. I, p. 89.)

CHILD, John L.—One of the oldest settlers of Sangamon County, is John L. Child, now living retired from active life at his beautiful home at 547 West South Grand Avenue, Springfield. Mr. Child came to Illinois at the age of five years, in 1833, and has resided in Sangamon County seventy-six years. He was born at Potsdam, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., March 28, 1829, son of Stephen and Hannah (Lyman) Child, the former a native of Vermont and the latter of New York. The father of Mrs. Child, John Lyman, was a Surgeon in the War of 1812. Stephen Child, with his wife and children, accompanied a party consisting of fourteen families, from New York to Sangamon County, Ill., the journey extending over a period of eight weeks. They held services each Sunday while on the way, having a clergyman in their party, and all came direct to Sangamon Town, where they settled. Mr. Child built a house out on the prairie and founded the Town of Farmington, CHILDERS, John.—It will not be long before the Grand Army of the Republic will be represented only by spirit processions which ought to pass with each Decoration Day before the minds of the rising generations. Each year finds the ranks sadly depleted and Major Childers the old soldier would have lived longer had it not been for injuries to body and health received during those wonderful campaigns which will go down into history as the greatest ever planned and executed by man. One of those yet left is John Childers; of Springfield, born in Knob Nervers, Missouri, May 5, 1838. He is a son of Isaac and Lottie (Lewis) Childers, both born in Tennessee. The grandfather on the paternal side of the house was a prominent divine of the Methodist Church in Scott County, Ill. When John Childers was but a child his parents moved to Christian County, Ill., and here he grew up of the school, alternating attendance at the district school with helping on his father, who was a farmer. He remained at home until the outbreak of the Civil War.

In 1862 Mr. Childers enlisted in Company H, One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois Infantry, participating in the engagements at Holly Springs, Mullinap, Mood Beach, Little Rock, Siege of Vicksburg, Jackson, Lookout Mountain, Kennesaw Mountain, the Seven Days Battle of the Wilderness, and was with Sherman on his famous March to the Sea and back through the Carolinas, as well as in other battles of less importance, being mustered out in 1865, at Washington, D. C., and discharged at Camp Butler, Springfield, Ill., where he served his post, G. A. R., and is one of its enthusiastic members. The Methodist Church claims his membership and support. He is a stanch Republican, feeling that he can do no less than uphold the principles of the party founded by the great Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Childers lived in Girard, Ill., in July, 1855, after his return from the war to Hattie Sparks, born at Jacksonville, Ill. Her father served with distinction during the Civil War. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Childers: William, Susie, Frank, Jessie, Oliver, Pearl and Grace, all of whom survive. Mr. Childers has devoted himself to farming with considerable success, but is now retired, living in Springfield. His life has been a full one and he has never forgotten the stirring days when so much depended upon him and his fellow privates. Without the privates, none of the battles could have been won, no matter how skillful the generals, consequently, to them belongs the major part of the honor of the successful termination of the struggle.

CHILDERS, William.—Owing to its location, Springfield is a great distributing market for points all over the State, as well as to those lying outside. The immense rich farming regions lying contiguous to the city pour into it vast quantities of products of all kinds, the now known as Farmingdale. Stephen Child was engaged in farming all his life, and both he and his wife died on his farm near Farmingdale. They were the parents of four children, of whom but three now survive, namely: Stephen, living at Farmingdale; Mrs. Martha Anderson, of Richland, and John L.

John L. Childs was educated at Farmingdale, and after leaving school worked for his father. He was engaged in farming all his life until about ten years since, when he moved to Springfield and retired from active life. He was energetic and industrious, careful in the management of his affairs, and possessed considerable business ability, so that he was able to accumulate considerable property, owning a farm at Farmingdale, the house where he resides, and other property. He and his wife enjoy good health and are highly esteemed by their many friends. They attended the funeral of Abraham Lincoln and both remember him well. They also attended the first State Fair held in Illinois. They have witnessed many changes in Sangamon County and have been greatly interested in the progress of the county. Mrs. Childs is a member of the Christian Church and Mr. Childs is a member of the Republican Party, always supported the principles of that party.

The marriage of Mr. Childs occurred at Richland, Ill., when he was united with Mary E. Anderson, who was born there April 17, 1836. Her father, General Moses K. Anderson, was born near Bowling Green, Ky., November 11, 1808, and resided in active Illinois Cassavilla, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Strong, of Dickson County, Tenn. After their marriage they came to Sangamon County, where Mrs. Anderson died, in 1859, leaving six daughters and three sons. Mr. Anderson married (second) his first wife's sister, who was a mother to his children, and she died in 1850. He located in Carlin, where he accumulated several hundred acres of land, where he remained until 1869, when he moved to Springfield. Soon after the Black Hawk War he was elected Brigadier General of the State Militia, and at the removal of the capital to Springfield, in 1838, Gen. Anderson was appointed by Gov. Carlin, Adjutant General, which office he filled from 1839-57, and during this time rode horseback from Sangamon County to Nauvoo, Ill., the seat of the "Mormon War." Gen. Anderson also served as Justice of the Peace twenty-eight years, and held various other local offices. He died in Springfield and those of his children who survive are: Mrs. Child; Melinda E., Mrs. Joseph Potter, of Jacksonville, Ill.; Marena E., Mrs. William P. Mitchel, of Springfield, and George W., of Enid, Okla. Gen. Anderson was a member of the well-known "Snow Bird" Club.

Two sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Childs, namely: Frank and Charles, both engaged in farming. There are five grand-children and one granddaughter lives with Mr. Childs and his wife in Springfield.
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

handling and shipping of which engage the ability and energy of many of our leading men. Through their energy and their progressive spirit in meeting demands of outside markets, the stock business has reached immense proportions, and one who controls a large volume of it here is William Childers, who has had a long and varied experience in this line of endeavor. He was born near Springfield, in Sangamon County, August 7, 1824, being a son of John and Hattie (Sparks) Childers, the former born on a farm in Putnam County, Tennessee in 1807, and the latter on her father's farm, in Macoupin County, Ill., in 1845. The parents were farming people and attained a fair measure of prosperity. John Childers proved his loyalty to the Union by serving in Company H, One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois Volunteers, for a period of three years.

William Childers was educated in the county schools of Sangamon County, and when he left school first worked for his father. Later he left the farm to engage with Cudahy Packing Company, as manager, holding this responsible position for five years and gaining a remarkable insight into the stock business during this period. His interests were thus enlisted in stock dealing and he left the company to go into business for himself, now being one of the largest operators in this field in this part of Illinois. In 1905 Mr. Childers was appointed Deputy Sheriff and for three and one-half years efficiently acted in that capacity, gaining an intimate appreciation of the duties pertaining to the office. In the fall of 1910 he was a candidate for the office of Sheriff. Having always been a resident of Sangamon County, Mr. Childers' whole interest is centered there, and he has its welfare deeply at heart. His political views have never changed from the time he cast his first vote for a Republican candidate.

When he was nineteen years old Mr. Childers was married to Mary Anderson, born in Morgan County, Ill., in 1871. Her father was Roadmaster of West Division of the Wabash Railroad for eighteen years, and one of the most reliable men of that service. Two daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Childers: May, aged seventeen, and Cecelia, aged eleven years. Mr. Childers comes of German descent and appears to have inherited many of the sturdy virtues of that people, whose industry, intelligence and thrift are known the world over. In all of his business relations he has shown shrewdness and keen insight into existing conditions, and his success has been the result of his own unaided efforts. He and his wife are deservedly popular in Springfield, where they have a host of friends, all of whom they welcome at their delightful home.

CHRISTMAN, Peter (deceased), who was for many years successfully engaged in gardening in Springfield, Ill., was born in Betrea, Germany, in 1824. His parents were natives of Germany, who spent their entire lives there. Peter Christman was educated in the public schools and became employed in the vineyards near his home, where he learned the business which he followed all his life. He was married, at Betrea, Germany, March 19, 1863, to Lena Gor-}

Mr. Clancy was married in Springfield, April 19, 1872, to Miss Ellen Sullivan, also a native of County Waterford, Ireland, whose parents were farmers and spent their entire lives in Ireland. Five children, three sons and two daughters, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Clancy, two of whom are now living. The son, James, lives at Lincoln, Ill., where he has charge of a Department of the State School for Feeble-minded Children, and the daughter, Ellen, married Edward Toth, a horse-shoer of Springfield, and they live with her father.

CLAPP, Charles Franklin, City Comptroller of the City of Springfield, Illinois, was born on a farm near Bement, Piatt County, Illinois, July 29, 1867, a son of James M. and Emily J. (Crain) Clapp. His father was born at Grandview, Edgar County, Illinois, March 7, 1841, and his mother was born near Bement February 17, 1847. The Clapps are of German descent and were early settlers of Illinois. James M. Clapp was educated at Mattoon, Illinois, and for a number of years was employed at the grain elevators and in the baggage department of the Illinois Central Railroad Company at that place. He subsequently carried on farming near Bement, until he enlisted in July, 1862, in Company H, 107th Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was mustered in on September 2, 1862, at Camp Butler, near Springfield, Ill. After serving eighteen months, he was discharged on account of sickness and disability and returned to Bement in December, 1863, where he again engaged in farming, and on March 29, 1864, was married to Emily J. Crain. He has had a very successful life as a farmer and in a general mercantile business at Bement, and later at Atwood, Ill., where he now resides, having retired from active pursuits. He is a member of the G. A. R. Post at that place, belongs to the Anti-Horse Thief Association, is a member of the Church of Christ, in politics is a Democrat, and has served one or two terms as Mayor of Atwood. He and his wife are the parents of six children, four sons and two daughters: Charles F.; James Albert, a farmer living a half mile north of Atwood; Martha Elizabeth, wife of John H. Richey, a farmer living five miles northwest of Atwood; Catherine, wife of William R. Harshbarger, connected with the Illinois Traction Company and living at Decatur, Illinois; Edward S., a mechanic living at Atwood; and William Lester, a farmer living five miles northwest of Atwood.

Charles F. Clapp received his first schooling at Bement, Ill., and later attended the district school in the country until sixteen years of age when he entered the High School at Atwood. After graduating from High School, he spent two more years on the farm and then entered the Gem City Business College at Quincy, Illinois, from which he was graduated with high honors, and for six years taught in its various departments, the last two years as Principal of the Advance Bookkeeping Department, and has always had recognized ability in the line of bookkeeping, becoming an expert accountant, whose services were most valuable to any business firm. Upon giving up the profession of teacher, he accepted a position with the International Rock Plaster Company, of New York, as bookkeeper for their branch factory at Decatur, Illinois, resigning this position one year later to engage in a general merchandising business with his father in Atwood, Illinois. One year later he accepted a position as bookkeeper with the Western Manufacturing Company at Kansas City, Mo., resigning this position two years later to accept a position with the Satty Manufacturing Company of Springfield, Ill., at their Kansas City Branch. Eighteen months later he was called to their home office at Springfield, where he organized and took charge of their billing department until the Company was consolidated with the Racine Wagon & Carriage Company of Racine, Wisconsin, when he was given the position of head bookkeeper and chief accountant at the Springfield office. He was in the employ of this company for about fourteen years, resigning his position to accept the office he now fills as Comptroller of the City of Springfield.

Mr. Clapp owns a half interest in the Grocery Business of Harris & Clapp, 1015 West Lawrence Avenue. His partner, Mr. E. B. Harris, is now serving his second term as president of the Springfield Retail Grocers Association. Mr. Clapp was instrumental in organizing the Springfield Accountant's Association in 1908, and was its first president. He belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and Sons of Veterans. In politics he has always been a Democrat, and at the primaries, February 28, 1911, was a candidate for the nomination for the office of City Commissioneer, the only one hundred and nine in the race with only eight to be nominated. He did not succeed in getting the nomination but left ninety behind him. While living in Atwood, he served one term as Village Treasurer. He is a member of the Christian Church and an active supporter of its cause.

At Monticello, Illinois, December 7, 1902, Mr. Clapp married Miss Irene Twyman of Springfield, Ill., who was born there September 18, 1880, daughter of Samuel H. and Susan A. (Place) Twyman, the father born in Henderson County, Kentucky, and the mother at Adrian, Michigan. Mr. Twyman and wife have had four children: Lucila, deceased; Henry P., bookkeeper and proprietor of the Daily News, Paris, Illinois; Leo F., city salesman for the Cable Piano Company, Chicago; and Irene, (Mrs. Clapp,) Mr. Twyman's father was also a native of Kentucky, and the Places were an old family among the early settlers of New York State. Mr. Twyman was a Republican and took an active interest in city politics, holding various positions; was Mayor Pro Tem for a period of five or six months, and was an Alderman at the time of his death.

Three children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Clapp, the first two being twins, son and daughter, and died in infancy; and Charles Franklin, Jr., born January 27, 1910, Mrs. Clapp is a member of, and an enthusiastic worker in the interests of the Christian Church, and for several years taught in the Sunday School, during much of which time she was also Chorister in the Sunday School and sang for a while in the church choir. Mr. Clapp's home, at 1229 North Eighth Street, which was erected by him, shows his good taste in its location, architecture and finish.

CLARK, Edward O., one of the oldest native-born residents of Sangamon County, was born near Williamsville, December 3, 1851, a son of Oramel and Jane (Stewart) Clark, both of whom were natives of St. Lawrence County, N. Y. The parents came to Illinois in 1818 and soon afterwards the father erected a blacksmith shop at Athens, where he lived several years. He was a soldier in the War of 1812. The Clark family later moved to a farm near Williamsville and there the mother died in 1832. They lived on the farm until 1855, the father also conducting a blacksmith shop, then they located in Springfield, where he purchased property at the corner of Ninth and Edwards Streets, and there he spent his remaining days. There were several children in the family, and there are two sons now surviving, Edward O. and William A., the latter a resident of San Diego, Calif., where he went at an early day. The father was married a second time and four daughters were born to this union.

During his boyhood Edward O. Clark attended the country schools near his father's home, and he worked on the home farm until he was twenty-three years of age, then moved to Macon County and there carried on farming on his own account for twenty-five years. He conducted a hotel at Carlinville eleven years and in 1855 came to Springfield, where he conducted a hotel two years and then retired from active business life. He has many friends in the city and is a representative, useful citizen. He has voted the Republican ticket since the inception of that party and has never been too ill to attend the polls on election day. He and his wife were firm friends of Abraham Lincoln, who visited their home many times. He has a pleasant home at 931 East Cass Street, Springfield, where he has lived several years. He is a member of the Methodist Church. He has a clear memory of early times and conditions in Sangamon County and has been a witness of many changes and improvements there.

February 14, 1851, Mr. Clark was married at Waverly, Ill., to Miss Virginia F. Harris, a native of Jacksonville, Ill., born March 8, 1835, she is a daughter of Thomas R. and Eliza (Fry) Harris, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of Kentucky. Mr. Harris came to Waverly in 1834 and there for many years conducted a tannery and became a large landowner, having first entered land from the Government. Both he and his wife died at Waverly. They were parents of four daughters and three sons, of whom two daughters now survive: Mrs. Mary E. Ryders of Waverly, and Mrs. Clark. The oldest son, John L., served in the Civil War and was killed at the Battle of Shiloh; Sidney T. was the second son; William J. also served in the war, and all three are now deceased. One child was born to Mr. Clark and wife, Etta C., married Samuel Lewis, and both are now deceased, leaving one son, Edward Clark Lewis, who served in the Spanish-American War.

CLARK, Henry R. (deceased).—The pioneers of Illinois laid the people of this mighty Commonwealth under heavy obligation to them, for without their brave efforts present conditions would have never been developed. Sangamon County is proud to honor the names of those who came here at an early day and, enduring the hardships incident to the time and locality, gradually subdued the wilderness and produced well-cultivated farms and flourishing towns. One of the men who was thus representative was Henry R. Clark, for some years before his death a retired farmer of Riverton, born in Rye, England, April 14, 1819, a son of Philip and Mary (Gavitt) Clark. Philip Clark was born in England, March 25, 1780, while his wife was a native of Paris, France. Philip Clark was a seaman and during one of his voyages landed in Boston, in 1817. So pleased was he that he remained in that city for several weeks, then traveled by land to New Orleans. He returned to England, but with the intention of returning, which he did in 1818, landing in Baltimore. From there he went to Pittsburg, and thence once more to New Orleans. After a short stay in the Delta City, he went to New Harmony, Ind., and from there, after a short stay, to Illinois. His next change was made when he moved on to St. Louis, but he remained there only a short time, traveling back across country to Sangamon County, where, conditions suitting him, he located near Rochester, in November, 1819, and sent for his family to join him in the new home. This family had been augmented during his absence by the birth of Henry R., one of five children born to his parents, namely: Mary E., Philip, Margaret, Selina and Henry R. The father of this family was one of the very early settlers of this county, and reared his family to work hard and appreciate the advantages offered by their new home.

Henry R. Clark was educated in the primitive log schools of his neighborhood, and became a sturdy son of the soil, gaining his living by tilling the land. His early life was spent in Clear Lake Township, and at one time he was very active in its agricultural life. Up to the time of his death, at the advanced age of ninety-one years, he was still interested in farm matters. He enlisted at Springfield, September 1, 1861, in Company B, Tenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, serving all through the war as a wagon master, being mustered out at Camp Butler. At one time in his career Mr. Clark was a millwright and he owned the first mill built in Sangamon County.

The present marriage of Mr. Clark occurred September 9, 1868, to Rebecca A. Tucker, born August 19, 1843, in Bedford, Ky. Her parents came to Warren County, Ill., locating near Galesburg, in 1842, remaining there for nine years, but later going to Missouri, which continued their home. In 1862, the disturbances there resulted in their going to Scotland County, Mo., where they remained, the father passing away in that locality when sixty-six years of age, the mother living to be seventy-five years old. Mrs. Clark is a most charming lady, who presides over her home with dignity and true housewifely skill. Mr. Clark was married before, in Sangamon County, in 1842, to Jane Trotter, who bore him two children; Thomas B., a farmer of Clear Lake Township, and Emma J., wife of J. E. Butler, a farmer of the same township.

For many years Mr. Clark had been a member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R. He was a Methodist in religious faith. The Republican party always held his fealty. He was well acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and imbied his political opinions from that fountained head, considering him the greatest man of his time. Mr. Clark was one of the most representative men belonging to the pioneer class of Sangamon County, and his recollections of early days were very interesting and valuable. He died February 3, 1911, being nearly ninety-two years of age.

CLARK, James L., (deceased).—The late James L. Clark, of Springfield, Ill., well known as an honored veteran of the Civil War, and a most upright, public-spirited citizen, was highly esteemed by his many friends and acquaintances. Those who knew him best were impressed with his luminous goodness of heart and his generosity, and will long remember this kindly, charitable gentleman. He was a most loving husband and father, a man of quiet, industrious habits, and also very fond of the companionship of his friends. He was an ardent Republican all his life, and was very active in the interests of his party, having been several times honored by election to offices of honor or trust. Mr. Clark was successful in his financial way and his principal occupation was hotel-keeping. He was born in Arcadia, Morgan County, Ill., December 10, 1838, son of Daniel and Mary (Peas) Clark, both natives of the State of New York. The father was a steamboat captain and brought the first boat that sailed up the Illinois River to what is now Beardstown, he later becoming one of the early settlers of Morgan County.

The early education of James L. Clark was acquired in his native county and he attended school some time, at Jacksonville. Upon leaving school, he became employed as clerk. He was a young man of sober, industrious habits, and was well liked by his employers. He lived in Springfield at the time of his marriage, but in 1882 moved from there to Ashland, Ill., where he conducted a hotel several years. While living in Ashland, he was elected President of the Village Board on the Republican ticket, serving three terms in this office, and also received the appointment of Postmaster there, under President Harrison. In 1890, Mr. Clark returned to Springfield and engaged in conducting a hotel, in which business he remained until three years prior to his death. He was well informed on every detail of his business, and through his personal supervision of the various departments of his establishment, won a reputation for a well-kept hotel that assured his financial success.

August 17, 1861, Mr. Clark enlisted in Company D, Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, at Berlin, Ill., for service in the Civil War, and was mustered out at Springfield July 22, 1865, with rank of Corporal. He was a member of Stephenson Post G. A. R., in which he had served in every office from Guard to Post Commander, and was also a member of the Union Veterans' Union, of which he at one time served as Colonel. He was also a member of the I. O. O. F., being a Past Noble Grand of Oak Lodge, of Ashland, Ill., where he had filled the various officers' chairs, and he had been affiliated with the order within a few months of a quarter century.

Mr. Clark was married in Springfield, March 1, 1870, to Mary Elizabeth Brewer, born in Lexington, Ky., daughter of William E. and Martha A. (Weils) Brewer, natives respectively of Beardstown Ky., and Marion, Ky. Mrs. Clark's grandfather Weils, was killed by the Indians during an Indian war and her great-grandfather Brewer was killed in the Revolution. Three children were born to Mr. Clark and wife, namely: Martha Ann, born April 10, 1873, died at the age of three months; Lucinda, born December 18, 1875, is the wife of J. A. Reynolds, a native of Galena, Ill., and now in the employ of the Bell Telephone Company at Bloomington, where they reside; Isabel, born May 5, 1877, died at the age of five months. Mrs. Clark owns her home at 206 West Capitol Avenue and also owns a residence at 329 South Spring Street, Springfield. She is prominent in social circles and is at present serving as Past Department President of the Ladies of the G. A. R., and is also a member of the National Staff of the order. She is Chaplain of Triple Link Rebekah Lodge No. 577; ex-Treasurer of Royal Neighbors Camp No. 113; ex-President of the Patriotic Daughters of America, Camp No. 3; has held all the offices in Gov. Tanner Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., of which she is now Conductor; is a member and was a delegate to the National Convention of the auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans. She is interested in the good work of all these orders, and contributes her full share towards their success. Mr. Clark died September 8, 1907, aged sixty-eight years, seven months and twenty-eight days, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He was an earnest and devout member of the Methodist Church.

CLASPILL, Samuel H., a substantial and representative citizen of Springfield, Ill., has lived for the past forty-five years in his comfortable home at 400 West Capitol Avenue. He was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, October 30, 1828, son of Basil C. and Anna (Gough) Claspiell, both natives of Virginia. The father was a blacksmith by trade and brought his family to Ohio in 1826, living ten years in Hamilton County. He then moved to Dearborn County, Ind., and lived there forty years, dying there in 1856. His widow survived him many years and died at the age of ninety-three in 1855, in Wisconsin, being buried in the ceme-

The education of Samuel H. Claspiell was ac-who spent their entire lives there. They had eleven children. Joseph Claus was reared on a CLAYTON, John Franklin.—The business of farming as now carried on by the intelligent and up-to-date agriculturists is as different from the farming of several decades ago as could be imagined. The day of the work-hardened, horny-handed farmer is over. In these days we see the agriculturist who uses scientific methods, retired in time to spend the remaining years of his life in the enjoyment of a well-earned competence. John Franklin Clayton, who is carrying on agricultural operations on an excellent property of 176 acres in Sections 25 and 26, Ball Township, is one of Sangamon County's scientific farmers, and in addition has the distinction of being a self-made man. He was born October 1, 1866, in Ball Township, Sangamon County, Ill., a son of Marcus D. and Susan Ann (Matthew) Clayton.

The Claytons are of English descent, the progenitors coming to Georgia with General Oglethorpe, but later removal was made to Caldwell County, Ky., where Mr. Clayton's grandfather, John Shelton Clayton, was born August 2, 1802. The family came to Morgan County, Ill., in 1828, and an uncle of Mr. Clayton, Alexander Clayton, was born in Morgan County, Ill., September 16, 1829, but they later returned to Kentucky. Marcus D. Clayton was born March 16, 1834, in Caldwell County, Ky., and as an infant was brought to Illinois by his parents in a prairie schooner, accompanied by his two brothers and a sister, the family first stopping in Morgan County and in the following year (1835) locating in Sangamon County. He spent almost his entire life on a farm in Sangamon County, and is now living retired at Chillicothe. He was married September 28, 1859, to Susan Ann Matthew, who was born August 29, 1843, in Sangamon County, and on September 29, 1899, they celebrated their Golden Wedding, numerous members of the family and old acquaintances to the number of three hundred being present.

John Franklin Clayton was educated in the public schools of Ball Township and as a youth worked on the home farm, his father training him to carry out the work in the most scientific manner that had yet been introduced. He remained at home until he was married, teaching school in the winter and farming in the summer. He then began farming for himself, finally locating on his present farm, to which he has added until he owns 176 acres. This farm is on the exact spot once occupied by Squire Joseph Campbell. A tragedy is connected with it, for when the gallant husband and father left home to fight against the Indians in the Black Hawk War, leaving his wife and three children behind, he little knew that a cruel fate awaited them. The busy mother was making soap, and while thus engaged, several roving Indians came to the little cabin and threw the three children into the holling soap, which fearful act was witnessed by a Mr. Pulliam, one of the early settlers, as he was riding by on horseback. Being alone, he was powerless to lend assistance. The sword carried by Mr. Campbell during this war is now owned by Mr. Clayton, in addition to a number of other relics of those early days. Mr. Clayton is compiling a genealogical record of his family, which promises to be very interesting as well as valuable from a historic standpoint. Since coming into possession of his farm, Mr. Clayton has erected some good buildings, bought improved machinery and raises blooded live stock. He is well known in Ball Township, where for four years he served as Deputy County Clerk under Mr. S. M. Rogers, from 1889 to 1893. His politics are those of the Democratic party, and he fraternizes with the Modern Woodmen of America. Ridiculously he is connected with the Methodist Church.

After three years as a bachelor on his own farm, Mr. Clayton was married, April 7, 1897, one-half mile southwest of Zion Methodist Church, in Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County, Ky., to Mrs. E. Dozier, who was born in this County, March 7, 1877, daughter of Thomas W. and Mary (Greenwalt) Dozier, the former born April 14, 1845, and the latter July 19, 1852. Mr. Dozier died December 2, 1910, and is buried at the cemetery of the Zion Methodist Church. He was a member of the Masonic order and his funeral was in charge of that fraternity, many Masons coming from surrounding towns to attend. A Democrat, he served several terms as Supervisor of Cotton Hill Township. His widow is now residing at No. 1814 South Seventh Street, Springfield. The grandmother of Mrs. Clayton was a Miss Armstrong. A member of this family, Ahe Armstrong, commanded a division under General Washington, participating in the battle of the Brandywine. He and General Washington had been surveyors together, and companions during hunting expeditions and both killed buffalo, being intimate friends.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Clayton are as follows: Esther, born September 3, 1893; Miriam, born February 22, 1901, died August 14, 1902; Thomas Edgar, born June 14, 1905, and Mary, born May 30, 1908. Mr. Clayton is one of Ball Township's good, reliable citizens, and is public-spirited to a high degree, always aiding in those movements which his judgment tells him will be of benefit to the community or to his fellow-townsmen. During his long residence here he has made many acquaintances and his friends are legion.

CLEMENTS, Henry D. (deceased).—The late Henry D. Clements was one of the most substantial and respected citizens of Mechanicsburg, where he lived for several years. Mr. Clements was born in Kentucky, December 28, 1830, a son of John Clements, a native of Kentucky and a farmer. The parents were early settlers of Sangamon County, Ill., and located on a farm in Mechanicsburg Township, where the remainder of their lives was spent. The family has been identified with the best interests of Sangamon County ever since and many of its members have been interested in agricultural operations. The boyhood of Henry D. Clements was spent on the father's farm, and he was early trained to the occupation at which he spent all his active life. He received his education in Sangamon County and carried on farming on his own account in Mechanicsburg Township during the greater portion of his active life. Mr. Clements was married in Mechanicsburg, Oct-ber 20, 1853, to Elizabeth Shane, who was born April 14, 1835, and died July 23, 1871, and to this union nine children were born, of whom but two survive: Laura, wife of Robert Ely, of Mechanicsburg, and Alma, wife of John Hart, living on a farm west of Springfield. Mr. Clements married (second) June 30, 1873, in Springfield, Mrs. Martha (Baldwin) Hale, who was born in Indiana in 1845, daughter of William B. Baldwin. Her father came to Christian County, Ill., from Indiana, at an early day, and spent many years in farming there, then sold out and moved to Mechanicsburg, where he lived until a short time before his death, which occurred October 22, 1910, at the home of his daughter. Mrs. Rachel McVey, rescued Mr. Pulaski, Ill., where he had gone on a visit. He was then eighty-nine years of age. He and his wife had five daughters and one son, and but two of these children now survive, Mrs. Clements and Mrs. Rachel McVey.

The first marriage of Mrs. Clements was to William W. Squires, who was born in Illinois in 1826. On this union four children were born, of whom three now survive, namely: Margaret, wife of Scott Grundy, of Cerro Gordo, Ill.; William S., who lives in Spaulding, Ill.; Nellie, wife of Edward Squires, of Divernon. There are eighteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Clements was a man of public spirit and interested in the welfare and progress of his community. He was a member of the Methodist Church and a Republican in politics. He had won many warm friends and was one of the best known men in his part of the county. His death occurred December 12, 1902. His widow owns a comfortable home in Mechanicsburg and other property in the vicinity. Mr. Clements was fairly successful in his business enterprises and endeavored to provide well for his family.

CLEMENTS, Zakery T., of Springfield, Ill., was born in Boone County, Ind., January 13, 1840, son of Denman J. and Alice (Coons) Clements, the father born in 1812 and the mother in 1811, both natives of Kentucky. The parents of Denman J. Clements were farmers and natives of Kentucky and he moved to Indiana from Kentucky as a young man. He carried on farming there thirty-seven years and in 1858 moved to Illinois, locating on a farm in Macon County, where he died in 1869. He was always successful in his operations and an able farmer. His parents and those of his wife were natives of Kentucky. Three sons of Denman J. Clements served in the Civil War, namely: David T., who was killed in the Battle of Chickamauga; Edwin T., lives on a farm in Macon County, where he has lived all his life; James M., served three years in the One Hundred Fifty-second Illinois Volunteers, afterward moved to Carthage, Mo., where he died. The two first mentioned served in the One Hundred Fifteenth Illinois.

Zakery T. Clements spent his boyhood on a farm and early learned to work. He was educated in Macon County and afterward engaged in farming, which he has carried on most of his life, except the past eight years, when he has lived in Springfield. He accompanied his parents to Illinois from Indiana and about 1894 moved to Missouri, where he lived eight years, then came to Springfield. He is a member of the Stuart Street Christian Church and is a staunch Republican. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. F. He is well known as an honest, upright citizen and has many friends.

Mr. Clements was married, at Blue Mound, Ill., July 22, 1882, to Miss Mary M. Abbott, who was born in Taylorville, Ill., in 1853, daughter of Major Thomas and Mary (Bremer) Abbott. Major Abbott served in the Civil War under General Logan and was a prominent man in his community. Both he and his wife were natives of Illinois and of good pioneer stock. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Clements, namely: Willie, born at Blue Mound, Ill., in 1883, deceased; Stella, born at Blue Mound, in 1885, deceased; Dean, born in Taylorville, in 1902, deceased; Laura B., born in Missouri, January 8, 1887, married Thomas York, lives in Springfield, and they have one child, Mary Estella; Flora G., born in Missouri, August 9, 1889, married Ernest La Rosae, of Springfield, and they have one child, Harry H.; Minnie A., unmarried, is in the employ of the Interstate Telegraph & Telephone Company, of Springfield.

CLENDENIN, Henry Wilson, editor-in-chief of the Illinois State Register and President of, and a large stockholder in, the printing and publishing company; was born in Schellsburg, Bedford County, Pa., August 1, 1857. His father, Samuel Miller Clendenin, was a native of Lancaster County, Pa., his grandfather, Samuel Clendenin, being cashier of a bank in Lancaster and an influential citizen of that town. Great-grandfather John Clendenin and his son of the same name, were soldiers in the Revolutionary War, serving under Washington, in some of the hardest fought contests of that strife. The Clendenin family emigrated from the North of Ireland and located in Pennsylvania, where the elder of the two Revolutionary soldiers was born in 1733.

Samuel M. Clendenin was a thoroughly educated man, and when starting out in life chose teaching as a profession. While pursuing the duties of his chosen calling at Bedford, Pa., he met Miss Elizabeth Henry, with whom he was united in marriage in 1836. The estimable lady was the daughter of George Henry, a well-to-do business man and prominent citizen of Bedford. Her paternal grandfather emigrated from Ireland about the close of the War of Independence. The family originally came from Scotland, tracking their lineage to the same stock that gave this country Patrick Henry, the eloquent Virginia patriot and statesman. From Bedford, Samuel M. Clendenin and his wife removed to Schellsburg, in the same county, and there the subject of this sketch was born. It will be noticed that Mr. Clendenin's lineage is Scotch-Irish, a race noted for intelligence, integrity and energy. Both of his grandmothers, however, were of German descent, belonging to a race whose industry, honesty and thrift have done much to make America what it is to-day. The paternal grandmother bore the name of Mary Miller, while the maternal grandmother was known in her youth as Elizabeth Hendr. In 1839, while our subject was still a babe, his parents turned their faces westward, and crossing the mountains in wagons to Pittsburgh, took a steamboat and proceeded down the Ohio river and up the Mississippi, to Burlington, at that time a mere village in the then Territory of Iowa. Indians were plentiful and Mr. Clendenin says he can well remember how, as a little boy, he learned some Indian words in order to deliver to them messages from his parents. For many years Samuel Clendenin taught school in Burlington, and also held the offices of Justice of the Peace and Clerk of the Court, being a Democrat in politics. He afterward engaged in mercantile pursuits, until in 1857, when he disposed of his property and removed to Barton County, Mo., where he engaged in farming, dying in 1858.

The parental family included five children, namely, Henry W., our subject; George S., deceased; John M., deceased; Margaret H., wife of Henry A. Newhouse, a retired farmer of Woodson County, Kan., and Mary A., who married Leonard Wells of Yates Center, Kan., and who died in 1884. Our subject grew to manhood in Burlington, Iowa. There were no public schools in that section during his early childhood, but the father being a teacher, the lad was carefully instructed and given the best education his father's means and the advantages of the place afforded. He received an academical education, and began the study of Latin under proficient teachers before he was nine years old, becoming familiar not only with Latin, but also with Greek, French and Spanish. As a student Mr. Clendenin was industrious and rapidly advanced in all his studies. His tastes were literary, and he was an omnivorous reader. So fond of books was he that before he was eighteen he had collected a library embracing many of the standard works of history, poetry and fiction, purchased with his own earnings. He was early attracted to journalism as a profession, and before he was fifteen years old persuaded his father to let him leave school. He secured the position of "devil" in the office of the Burlington Hawkeye, then a tri-weekly paper, and remained in that office over four years, mastering the art preservative in all its branches, doing also, from time to time, some literary work on the paper.

Graduating from the Hawkeye in 1857, when twenty years of age, Mr. Clendenin turned his face eastward, and instead of going with his parents to Missouri, went to Philadelphia where he followed his calling both as a practical printer, and also in editing matter for publication. He came West again in 1858, and found employment in Peoria, Ill., where he worked on the daily Transcript as foreman and telegraph editor, and also in other offices. After a couple of years, he returned to Philadelphia and was employed there in April, 1861, when the Civil War began. He enlisted as a private soldier, in the Twentieth Pennsylvania Infantry, and served with that regiment from April, 1861, until the latter part of August of the same year when he was mustered out, receiving an honorable discharge. His regiment was engaged in the Potomac and Shenandoah Valleys and was a portion of the time under the command of Gen. George B. McClellan. Mr. Clendenin saw and participated in some fighting, but was fortunate in not receiving a scratch. The military spirit since Revolutionary days has been manifest in the family, some of whom served with distinction in the War of 1812. John M. Clendenin, our subject's uncle, was a graduate of West Point Military Academy, and an officer in the regular army until his death. He served in the Black Hawk and Florida wars. A cousin, David R. Clendenin, who was a Colonel of an Illinois regiment during the late Civil War, was afterward a Colonel of cavalry in the regular army. He died at Galesburg, Ill., a few years ago.

As soon as he was mustered out of the army, Mr. Clendenin returned to Illinois, his mother having removed with her family from Missouri to Rock Island County, this state. Again taking up journalistic work, he occupied various practical and editorial positions in Illinois and other states. He had charge of the Burlington (Iowa) Gazette for about one year, and of the Metamora (III.) Sentinel for about the same length of time, supporting and voting for his old commander, George B. McClellan, at Metamora while in charge of the Sentinel. In 1865, Mr. Clendenin located in Keokuk, Iowa, where he resided for the next sixteen years. The first eleven years of his residence in Keokuk, he was employed as foreman, or superintendent, of book and job printing offices, ten years as superintendent of the book and job department of the Daily Gate City. While in this capacity, he also did considerable reporter and literary work. In 1876, he formed a partnership with George Smith and Thomas Rees, associates in the Gate City office, and under the firm name of Smith, Clendenin and...
Rees, they purchased the Constitution, the Democratic daily and weekly newspaper at Keokuk, which they published for years. Mr. Clendenin occupied the position of editor-in-chief of the Constitution, and conducted it with great ability, skill and success.

Shortly after his location in Keokuk, Mr. Clendenin persuaded his mother to make her home with him, which she continued to do until her death in January, 1880, while on a visit to her daughter in Kansas. She had then reached the advanced age of eighty-one years. His sister, Margaret, also lived with him and he gave her the benefit of a good education. During his residence there, he occupied various positions in social, religious and business activities. He was for some time President of the Young Men's Christian Association and one of its most active promoters. He was an active Odd Fellow, having passed all the Chairs in the Subordinate Lodge and Encampment, and served as a representative in the Grand Lodge of the State. He was a delegate to and Vice-President of the Democratic State Convention at Marshalltown in 1877, and also represented Lee County in the Democratic State Convention at Cedar Rapids in 1878, Council Bluffs in 1879, and Burlington in 1880, and exerted a large influence in local and State politics.

It was in 1876, that Mr. Clendenin met Miss Mary Elizabeth Morey, of Monmouth, Ill. This acquaintance ripened into an attachment, and they were married October 25, 1877, at the residence of the bride's parents in Monmouth. Miss Morey was a charming and accomplished young lady, the daughter of Daniel Hazard and Mary H. P. (Chamberlain) Morey, and was born January 22, 1854, at Kirkwood, Mo., where her parents were then residing. Her grandfather, Hazard Morey, purchased seven thousand acres of land in Ohio, whilst he removed when his son, the father of Mrs. Clendenin, was only a boy. Daniel Morey was a native of New York, but was reared on a farm in Ohio, and was one of sixteen children, who have since scattered all over the country. Daniel Morey removed from Ohio to Illinois and afterward to St. Louis, where he married Miss Mary H. P. Chamberlain, of Jacksonville, Ill., who was then teaching school in St. Louis. The Chamberlain family were from Salem, Mass., whence Timothy Chamberlain, the father of Mrs. Morey, removed to New York, from there to Virgina and finally to Illinois, where he located in Jacksonville. He was a contractor and builder of stone work and among other structures, erected Monticello Female Seminary, which stood for many years, but was destroyed by fire November 4, 1888. He afterward purchased a farm near Jacksonville and devoted his time to agriculture. On the maternal side, Miss Morey was of French, English and Scotch lineage, and came of an old Massachusetts family, being descended from the Denis, Devereux, Grant and Chamberlain families. Several of her ancestors were Revolutionary soldiers and sailors. One was commander of an American war vessel, and was killed during that war. Through her father, she was descended from English ancestors, who came to this country and settled in New York, in the last century. Daniel H. Morey followed mercantile pursuits in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois, finally settling at Monmouth, where his children, D. H., Jr., George, Mary E. (Mrs. Clendenin), Etta Adele and Aurelia Laurist were educated. He was a Royal Arch Mason. He and wife are now deceased.

Mrs. Clendenin was graduated from Monmouth College, in the class of 1874, with the degree of B. S. She is a lady of literary tastes and of many graces and accomplishments. After her marriage she acted as literary review editor of her husband's paper, writing the book notices and reviews. She is also, when her health permits, active in church and benevolent work, and finds time from the cares of her family to accomplish, in an unostentatious way, much for the good of humanity. She is an active member of the Congregational Church. There have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Clendenin, five children, as follows: Henry Francis, born October 21, 1879; Elizabeth, July 29, 1881; George Morey, January 29, 1883; Clarence Rees, July 31, 1886; and Marie Etta, October 16, 1890. The first daughter died in infancy. The first named was born in Keokuk, and the remainder in Springfield.

In 1881, the firm of Smith, Clendenin & Rees sold the Keokuk Constitution and bought the Illinois State Register, the oldest Democratic paper in the State, and removed to Springfield with their families. They took control of the paper June 18, 1881, since which time, Mr. Clendenin has been its editor-in-chief. In 1886, George Smith, Esq., the senior member having died, the firm was changed to a corporation and Mr. Clendenin was made its President. Since removing to Springfield, Mr. Clendenin has taken an active part in the business and political affairs of the city and State. He has been a delegate to various county and State conventions and was a member of the Democratic State Central and State Executive Committees, for four years from 1884 to 1887, inclusive, and devoted much time to its political work. In 1886, he was appointed Postmaster at Springfield by President Cleveland and served the people most acceptably in that position for more than a year after the inauguration of Cleveland's Republican successor, The postal affairs of the city were never more efficiently and energetically managed than under Mr. Clendenin's administration and the record of his office stood among the highest at the Department in Washington. He was appointed Custodian of the Government building in 1886, at Springfield, by Daniel Manning, Secretary of the Treasury, and had charge of the United States bulldog and grounds until superseded by Secretary Windom, in 1889.

In addition to his professional and political duties Mr. Clendenin has many other calls upon his time and services. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of the Grand Army of the Republic and other societies. In the Grand Army of the Republic, he was appointed Aid-de-Camp by Gen. Phillip S. Post, when Department Commander of Illinois, and an Aid-de-Camp on the National Staff by Gen. Russell A. Alger, Commander in Chief of the National Encampment, G. A. R. for 1889 and 1890. Mr. Clendenin was a delegate from his congressional district to the National Democratic convention of 1896, which met in Chicago and nominated William J. Bryan for President. A personal friend and admirer of Mr. Bryan, and himself a lifelong Democrat, he gave Mr. Bryan his earnest personal and editorial support in that campaign, and in his two subsequent ones.

It would exceed the limits of this sketch to enumerate all the public matters in which Mr. Clendenin has been active during his residence in Springfield. He was especially active through the State Register in the movements that resulted in lifting Springfield out of the mud and making it the best paved city in Illinois. In every movement for advancing the growth and prosperity of the city, he has taken a lively and so far as is possible, an active, direct interest. He was one of the chief promoters and a member of the Executive Committee of citizens who inaugurated in Springfield, and conducted by laborious and tireless efforts to a successful accomplishment, the Centennial celebration of the adoption of the Federal Constitution on April 30, 1889. He, with his associates, has always felt especially proud of the successful results of their efforts. In that celebration some 6,000 children and many adults participated, and it was witnessed by tens of thousands of spectators. Six thousand white metal medals, prepared expressly for the occasion were distributed to the children and teachers as they moved in procession, every one carrying a flag under an evergreen arch built across Capitol Avenue. Such a grand spectacle was never before seen in Springfield, if in any other city in America. It was an object lesson in patriotism, which will be remembered by all who participated in and witnessed it so long as they live. He was appointed by the City Council a member of the commission to locate the public library building, now called the Lincoln Library, and to select the architectural design. The building was erected at a cost, with the ground laid by more than $100,000, $75,000 of which was contributed by Andrew Carnegie. He is now and has been a large part of the time since the erection of the building, a member of the Board of Directors of the library.

That Mr. Clendenin is a busy man goes without saying. The duties connected with editing a paper of the standing and character of the State Register at the Capital and political center of the Empire State of the West, are in themselves exacting. To those duties are added his other official and private activities, his cooperation and personal assistance in forwarding all public enterprises of a social, charitable and business character, and an earnest and active participation in the political work of the party. As a writer, his style is vigorous and clear; his articles give evidence of care in preparation and an earnestness of purpose that commands for them commensurate weight and influence. Probably no Democratic paper in the State is so widely quoted by the country press of its party as is the State Register, and certainly none wields a greater influence in the policy of the party to which it belongs.

In his private life, Mr. Clendenin lives quietly and modestly. He is retiring and reserved in disposition, domestic in his habits and spends all the time he can spare from business and public duties with his family in their pleasant home, where he takes delight in the society of his wife and children. Mr. and Mrs. Clendenin are both members of the Congregational Church, of which he is an official. They occupy a comfortable residence at No. 1009 South Second Street, which they erected and built in 1885, and in which they have among their treasures a valuable library. Mr. Clendenin has never aspired to office or been ambitious of wealth; his disposition has been to serve his friends, his party and the public more than himself. With the consciousness of being industrious and useful as a journalist, and honest and public-spirited as a citizen, he pursues the even tenor of his way with no undue anxiety as to wealth or official preference.

COBERLY, Jobe.—Some men seem able to win friends without effort, their disposition being such as to attract other men to them and hold them fast by bonds which cannot be found in every walk of life and are an addition to a community, for where they are there are not likely to be dissensions or disturbances of any kind, as they are universal peace-makers. One of the most highly respected residents of Springfield, a man who enjoys the friendship of all with whom he has ever been brought in contact, is Jobe Coberly. Mr. Coberly was born in Madison County, Ohio, July 24, 1838, being a son of James and Ellen (Kinney) Coberly. The father was a farmer of Madison County, and he and his wife spent their lives there. They both came of good old pioneer stock, and were universally respected.

Jobe Coberly was brought up in Ohio, receiving a district school education and working on the farm. In 1861, when his country had need of him, Mr. Coberly enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and when his term of service expired he re-enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Illinois Infantry, serving in the latter for one year and being mustered out in 1865. He participated in a number of the great battles of the war, including those of Stone River, Murfreesboro, Pea Ridge, Chickamauga, Atlanta, and others of less importance, and never failed to do his full duty.

Returning home, he engaged in farming for some years, then went into railroad work. Finally, on account of his age, he was relieved and made flagman for the Wabash Railroad. Many men of his age, who could not be content to retire, but Mr. Coberly is too active, and takes pleasure in the fact that he is just as useful today as he ever was, although in a different capacity. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. His religious faith makes him a Catholic and he belongs to the Church of the Immaculate Conception of Springfield. In politics he is a Republican, loyally supporting the principles of the party Abraham Lincoln helped to found.

In 1875 Mr. Coberly was married in Champaign, III., to Elizabeth Porter, daughter of Thomas and Eliza Porter. The parents were natives of Ireland, and came to Pennsylvania, where Mrs. Coberly was born. The father was a shoemaker by trade and eventually came to Champaign, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Coberly had two children, the elder of whom is Elmer E. During his years of toil Mr. Coberly has been mindful of the future, always saving something from his earnings, and now owns his home at No. 1227 East Madison street. In his gentle, kindly way, Mr. Coberly has made himself a general favorite and has gained the esteem and respect of employers and neighbors for his faithfulness and industrious habits.

CODY, John, a representative and successful farmer of Capital Township, Sangamon County, Ill., is a man of intelligence and industry and conducts his work in a modern, scientific manner. He is a native of the county, born in New Berlin Township, August 17, 1872, son of Thomas and Johanna (Morrisey) Cody, both natives of Ireland, the former born in Limerick. The family came to America in 1840 and settled in Sangamon County at the age of fourteen years. He settled on a farm in New Berlin Township, where he and his wife still reside. They were parents of seven daughters and three sons, all of whom survive. They are well-known and highly respected in their community and have met with fair success.

John Cody was educated in the public schools of New Berlin and made the most of his opportunities in this line. After leaving school he worked on his father's farm and later worked on his own account in New Berlin Township. He came to his present place in 1907 and rents 300 acres of good farming land.

He was married in New Berlin, January 16, 1910, to Barbara E. Lee, born November 29, 1877, daughter of Morris and Emeline (Campbell) Lee, the former born in Ireland and the latter in Loami Township, Sangamon County. Mr. Lee came to Sangamon County in 1864. He and his wife had fifteen children, of whom eleven (eight daughters and three sons) are still living. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cody, namely: Thomas J., John M., Robert E., Joseph W., Maurice and Barbara A., all at home.

Mr. Cody is popular among his many acquaintances for his friendly, genial manner, hisielding integrity, and his fine conversational powers. He is a man of great enterprise and ability, and has shown good business judgment in the conduct of his affairs. He and his wife are members of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church. In politics he votes for the men and measures he thinks are for the best interests of all the people, and takes an active interest in public affairs and issues.

COE, John C.—Farming as an occupation is proving so successful that those who have been engaged in this line of activity all their lives have no reason to complain of the results. Sangamon County has no more substantial men forming those who with wealth has been generous, not only yielding excellent crops, but increasing in value until its possession today spells money in no inconsiderable amount. One of the prosperous farmers of the county is John C. Coe, of Rochester. He was born at Loudoun County, Va., January 5, 1825, being a son of Horatio and Catherine (Gribb) Coe. Both parents were born in the same county as their son, the date of the mother's birth being 1789, and she died September 2, 1836. The father, who was born January 24, 1784, died in Virginia, July 24, 1841, and was buried at Ebenezer Church.

John C. Coe came from Loudoun County, Va., to Illinois in 1842, arriving in Sangamon County, April 23rd. At that time he was only seventeen years of age, and sought a new home where he could grow up with the country. April 1, 1848, in company with Thomas Rucker, Abraham Clark and Henry Sims, he went to Callaway county, Mo., and brought in by the sheriff in an oxen yoke. He remained there until the spring of 1851, then returned to Sangamon County. His trip across the plains took six months and was full of thrilling events. He went into partnership with a man, built a saw mill and also bought 125 acres of land. Beginning as a farm hand, he saved his money until he was able to buy land, to which he added from time to time, until now he owns 320 acres north of Rochester in the township of that name and twenty acres in the village, in addition to his home. His education was meager, but he has added to his knowledge by observation and is now very well-informed, possessing good common sense and a clear perception of values.

The military history of the family is not generally known, aside from the fact that Horatio Coe served as a soldier in the War of 1812, but in times of peace the Coes have been valuable additions to any community in which they have located.

Mr. Coe was married in Rochester Township, by Rev. William Johnston, on August 11, 1853, to Charity Grubb, daughter of Richard and Charity (Morrison) Grubb, of Loundon County, Va., born October 1, 1820. She died September 20, 1908, and her remains are laid to rest in the beautiful Rochester Cemetery. She came to this state November 5, 1831, with her brother Ebenezer and sister Jane. Two children were born of this marriage: Richard H., born February 21, 1855, Theodore Curtis L., born July 13, 1859, died June 14, 1870. Richard H. Coe is now improving a farm in North Dakota, but his family reside in Rochester. He married September 19, 1879, Lucy Denchfield of England. She died March 21, 1886. They had four children, two living, John E. and Philip. He, married in 1880, Sabina Vigal of Kentucky, and by this union there were five children: Charity, Richard, Samuel William McK., Theodora L. and Jeannetta. John E. Coe married Linnie Elizabeth Cowper of Winchester, Ill., and they have one child. Lucy. Philip Coe married Mand Hallens Mrs. Coe was a lady of lovely Christian character, whose gentle nature endeared her to all who knew her. Her loss is deeply felt by her family, who continue to mourn her and miss her kindly ministrations. The Methodist Church of Rochester held her membership gratuitously, and her devotedness to that denomination, contributing of his means towards its support. All his life Mr. Coe has been a Republican, learning from the great Lincoln himself. While he has never been willing to go before the public for office, he has done his duty as a private citizen and is much interested in his home town. His property has been carefully accumulated through many sacrifices and hard work. Industry and thrift were his watchwords from boyhood up and his success shows what can be accomplished by a determined, hard-working young man. He has witnessed many changes since he came here nearly sixty years ago. Sangamon County is a different place from what it was in 1842, and he has ably borne his part in making it what it is today. He has advocated good schools, the establishment and maintenance of churches, building of roads, and the development of the natural resources of the county. The influence of such a man is certainly for good, and his fellow citizens appreciate his worth at its true value, as they show whenever occasion offers.

COE, Samuel Jacob (deceased).—Much that is best in a man is not appreciated until death has taken him from the midst of his friends and relatives. Then it is that deeds of kindness and acts of charity are discovered, and his true worth comes to light. One of the men who held the high esteem of his fellowmen wherever he lived, was the late Samuel Jacob Coe, formerly of Rochester Township, Sangamon County, where he was engaged in farming for a number of years. Mr. Coe was born in Loundon County, Va., September 14, 1827, being a son of Horatio and Catherine (Grubb) Coe, the former born January 24, 1784, died July 24, 1841, and the latter January 11, 1798, died September 5, 1836, and both were natives of Loundon County. The father was a farmer. S. J. Coe with five brothers and one sister came to Sangamon County April 28, 1842, arriving in the county on April 28th. Settlement was made in Mechanicsburg Township, where Samuel Jacob Coe remained until 1850, when he went west to Idaho. For the next twenty-five years he was interested in various enterprises there, farming, conducting a livery and feed stable, and holding stock in the Idaho Gold Mining Company, with a mine in the vicinity of Kelton, Idaho.

In 1878, Mr. Coe returned and, going to Loundon County, Va., there married, October 16, 1878, Mary M. Grubb, born in that county July 30, 1833, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Smith) Grubb. The Grubb family is an old and honored one in Virginia where her parents lived and died, having reared a large family of children to do them credit. Mrs. Coe had four sisters and five brothers, of whom Mr. Mabery Smith Grubb is living near Mechanicsburg; Virginia E. Grubb and Mrs. Rose Thompson near Hillsboro, Loundon County, Va.; and all the others except Mrs. Coe have passed away.

After his marriage Mr. Coe returned to Sangamon County and located four miles east of Mechanicsburg, operating a farm in that locality until 1893, when he retired from active business and settled down in Rochester, where he lived until his demise. This sad event occurred January 19, 1910, at his home, and his widow and a brother, John Coe, of Rochester, now in his eighty-fifth year, were left to mourn his loss. The funeral services were held in the Methodist Church of Rochester, January 21, 1910, being conducted by Rev. Wright and Rev. Hartman. The address was very touching and a large crowd gathered to pay the last honors to a man so universally respected and esteemed.

In early life, Mr. Coe was a stanch Republican, but in his later years he voted the Prohibition ticket. Business cares occupied him to the exclusion of public matters, and aside from being interested in good government and moral uplift, he did not participate in them. Fraternal matters did not interest him, and he devoted his leisure time to his home and his church. While a resident of Mechanicsburg, he united with the Methodist Church, in 1884, and continued faithful to its creed until his death. Mrs. Coe is also a member of that church and one of its most earnest workers.

After his death Mr. Coe resided in a pleasant home in Rochester, which her husband's care provided for her; she also owns some rich farm land in Sangamon County and additional property in Rochester. She is a lady whose many excellent traits of character have endeared her to her neighbors and church associates, and she occupies a prominent place in her community. Mr. Coe was a man of few pretensions, who aimed to do his full duty as he saw it, and to guide his life according to the Golden Rule, leaving behind him the record of a blameless life, a stainless honor, and many friends who knew and appreciated him at his true worth.

COE, William (deceased).—When William Coe reached Sangamon County, he found it very different from what it is today. Then there were few good roads; the land was in a wild state; heavy timber bordered the water courses, and there was no indication of the wealth which was to develop here. Like so many others, he came with his mind bent upon securing cheap land and developing conditions that would make the community he selected a good home for his family. Little by little, he cleared off his land, cut down the trees, built suitable shelters for his family and stock, and then, turning his attention to other matters, aided in establishing a church and school. As time went on, he gained in power, and when he died, was one of the leaders of the Republican party in his town ship and one of the prosperous farmers of Mechanisburg. He was born in Bourbon County, Va., May 22, 1817, being a son of Horatio and Catherine (Grubb) Coe, both natives of Loudoun County, he was born January 24, 1784, and she January 11, 1789. His death occurred July 24, 1841, while she passed away in 1836. He was a soldier of the War of 1812.

The education of William Coe was obtained in Virginia and he was reared to the life of a farmer but when he came to Sangamon County in 1842, he found very different conditions there from those which prevailed in his native State. Mr. Coe bought land and owned about 425 acres at one time, and his widow now owns a large acreage two miles south of Mechanisburg, as well as her comfortable residence in the village of Rochester.

The marriage of Mr. Coe took place in Springfield, November 2, 1851, to Elizabeth J. Kimes, born in Sangamon County, northeast of Springfield, February 26, 1834, a daughter of Louis and Sarah (Short) Kimes, natives of Tennessee. Mr. and Mrs. Coe had children as follows: Mrs. Edward Humphrey, who lives on a farm in Oklahoma, issue, four living children, Flora, Laura, Edwin and Curtis; Charlotte E. Sprinkle lives on a farm near Edinburg, Christian County, issue, three children; James M., Norvila G. and Rosco; George, a farmer living on the home place, south of Mechanicsburg, married Viola Lahue, issue, seven children; Lena M., Elva Myrtle, William D., Summ C. Urcula and Ruth; Ellen E. Barbee lives on a farm in Christian County, issue, three children; Ethel, Horatio and Edith; Altha Lahue, a widow, living at Decatur, Ill., issue, five children; Estella, Earl, Elmer, Olive and Misnie; William E. is a farmer of Sangamon County living east of Mechanicsburg, issue, six children; Verna, Bertha, Elizabeth, William, Earl and Ralph; Ann deceased, was the wife of Edwin Robins; Ann deceased, was the wife of Edwin Robins; Ann deceased, was the wife of Edwin Robins; Ann deceased, was the wife of Edwin Robins. Jennie and Olive; Horatio J., deceased, issue, two children.—Clara and Albert, who reside in Decatur; Elizabeth, deceased, was the wife of Jacob Bullock, issue, two children, of whom one, Pearl, now survives; one child died in infancy. Of the children left by Mrs. Ann Robins, two are married: May married John Williams and has one child, and Jennie married a Mr. Bruecker, issue, two children.

Although prominent as a Republican, Mr. Coe was never willing to allow his name to be used on the ticket, believing he could do more good as a private citizen than as a public official, but he was always ready and willing to exert his influence in favor of good government and moral uplift. The United Brethren Church of Mechanicsburg held his membership. Mr. Coe passed away at his residence, two and one-fourth miles from Mechanicsburg, August 9, 1892. His funeral was largely attended, for his many friends sought to pay a last honor to one for whom they had so long entertained such deep respect. His remains were interred in the cemetery at Mechanicsburg.

Mrs. Coe removed to Rochester, where she purchased a residence, and since then has lived in that village, enjoying the comforts her husband's labor had secured for her. She is a lady of kindly disposition, who has many friends there and thoroughout the county. In the early days she proved herself a friend indeed to those in trouble. Whenever there was sickness or death in a household Mr. Coe was one of the first to arrive, to offer sympathy and material help. Her life has been spent in caring for her husband and children, and she is proud of them and the record her husband made as a true, honorable, upright, Christian man, agast whom none can honestly speak a word of censure. To look back upon a life that has so little to regret, one must have lived well, and Mrs. Coe has made no mistakes to remember. Her children and friends rise up and proclaim her blessed, and she wears a crown of true womanhood. Mrs. Coe has had ten children, twenty-eight grandchildren, and thirteen great-grandchildren.

COGDAL, Thomas Jefferson, a mason contractor and builder, is a pioneer of Cantrall, Ill., where he is a prominent citizen. His birth occurred on Rock Creek, Menard County, near the Sangamon County line, July 12, 1849, and he is a son of Isaac and Sarah (Whitlow) Cogdal, the father a native of Kentucky and the mother of North Carolina, was born in 1824 and accompanied her parents to Illinois in 1846. The family located near Richland, Sangamon County, and in 1848 she was married to Mr. Cogdal. The young couple settled on a farm on Rock Creek and Mr. Cogdal did some farming, but erected a lime kiln, prepared lime and shipped it to many parts of Illinois. This was the first kiln erected in that part of the State and furnished material to be used in the old State House, which is now used as the Court House. Mr. Cogdal also worked on this building as a mason. He was a member of one of Kentucky's best families, had a good education and had been admitted to practice at the Bar. His son well remembers when Isaac Cogdal came home with his sheep-skin certificate entitling him to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, being thus an associate of John M. Palmer, Abram Lincoln and other prominent lawyers. Mr. Cogdal was a native of old Salem. Mr. Cogdal's birth occurred in 1811 and in boyhood he was brought by his father, John Cogdal, to Illinois. John Cogdal located in the southern part of Menard County in 1821 and became one of the prominent men of central Illinois in early days, being a Baptist minister. He organized the Baptist Church at Cherry Grove, now known as Tallula Church. He had five sons and one daughter, all of whom are now deceased. Rev. John Cogdal was a native of Ireland and left his native land in order to be allowed peaceably to worship according to the dictates of his own conscience.

The career of Isaac Cogdal was one of marked ability as a lawyer and as a conductor he was instrumental in erecting some of the notable buildings of his part of Illinois. In politics he was a strong Republican, but upon the candidacy of Horace Greeley for President, stumped the State in his behalf. Being a fluent and convincing speaker, he brought many to his way of thinking. He was always ready to serve his constituents in public office and honor but refused to do so. He held to the principles of Democracy the latter part of his life. He died July 29, 1887, and his widow survived him many years, passing away March 22, 1905. They were associated with every movement for the uplift and betterment of their community and all who knew them appreciated their sincerity and worth.

Mrs. Cogdal was one of Nature's noblewomen, well known for her charitable disposition and warm heart, ready to visit the sick and afflicted and offer what comfort and aid lay within her power. Mr. Cogdal was notable as a man of broad views, liberality and charity. He was a careful student of the Bible and in religious views was a strong Universalist, being always ready to discuss the subject of religious beliefs and to set forth his reasons for espousing that faith. He was known throughout the State for his integrity and uprightness.

Thomas J. Cogdal received his early education in the district schools and later attended college at Whitehall, Greene County, after which he learned the trade of mason. He remained with his parents until July 3, 1873, when he was united in marriage with Liza Penny, who was born in Menard County, September 6, 1856, daughter of William and Polly Ann (Yoakum) Penny, pioneers of that county. The Penny family removed to Texas about 1850, remaining there eight years and then came to Booneville, Mo., where the father died. The mother located near Salisbury, Sangamon County, where she passed away. They had four daughters and two sons: Frank and Seth H. Penny are deceased; Ellen, widow of James Loyd, lives at Pleasant Plains; Llua is Mrs. Cogdal; Louisa is the wife of Elmer Douglas, of Chatham; Maggie, wife of Victor Black, of Joplin, Mo.

After his marriage Thomas J. Cogdal took charge of the home farm and also worked at his trade, being successful in both lines of work. He remained on the farm until 1882, and there all his children were born, namely: Palmer E., born October 10, 1874, a contractor and builder, married Mary Luck, of Tallula, III., where they reside; Harry L. Cogdal, born September 6, 1876, married Nellie Hensley, who was reared by John Hensley, and they have one child, Blanche; their child Ida May died in infancy; Chester Edward, born September 1, 1880, married Nora Luby, is an electrician and lives at Pleasant Plains; Alonzo Freeman, born November 15, 1885, died in infancy; LeRoy, born October 11, 1887, a farmer; Paul Cornelius, born November 3, 1891. Harry L. Cogdal is a professional engineer and resides at Pleasant Plains, III. In 1892 Mr. Cogdal left the farm and became one of the prominent citizens of Pleasant Plains, purchasing a pleasant home on West Church Street, where he has since resided. He is as skillful in his work at masonry as in his younger days, and the demand for his services is so great he has not felt as if he could retire. He has built two of the finest buildings on the town and has also helped in the construction of culverts and bridge work. He has always been identified with the growth and development of the region where his entire life has been spent and many buildings and other work will long stand as a monument to his skill. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, Pleasant Plains Camp No. 139, also of Welcome Lodge No. 770, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He and his wife are active members of the Methodist Church at Pleasant Plains. He has been very successful in his work and is surrounded by every comfort and by the warm regard of a wide circle of friends. He is a Republican in politics and was for many years Postmaster at Loyd, Menard County, and also served under Sheriff Brainard as Deputy Sheriff in Sangamon County.

COHEN, Samuel N. (deceased), for several years a successful grocer and business man of Springfield, Ill., was a native of Russia, born March 28, 1856, a son of Lewis W. and Annie Cohen, both natives of Russia, where they lived on a farm. The boyhood of Samuel N. Cohen was spent on his father's farm and after leaving school he was employed as a book-keeper. He finally emigrated to the United States, and about 1885 located in Springfield, where he engaged in business as a wholesale grocer. He was enterprising and industrious and was successful in his line of business. He made many friends in Springfield and at his death left considerable property.
Mr. Cohen was married, in Austria, August 10, 1879, to Miss Sarah G. Bischpefer, who was born in Austria, April 10, 1858, a daughter of Charles and Bessie Bischpefer, both also natives of Austria. One son and one daughter have been born of the union of Mr. Cohen and his wife; Dora, who married Michael Yaffe, of St. Louis, where they reside, and William, born September 10, 1884, and is a book-keeper residing in Springfield. Mr. Yaffe and wife have three children, namely: Samuel N., born August 28, 1901; Harold M., March 20, 1904, and Bessie, March 5, 1907, all in St. Louis.

Mr. Cohen's death occurred February 20, 1898, and his remains were buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He was sincerely mourned by his family and many friends. He was a member of the Jewish Church, at Seventh and Mason Streets, Springfield, and fraternally a member of the Royal Arcanum of Springfield, being affiliated with Council No. 1105. He was a Democrat in political views but never took an active part in public affairs. Mrs. Cohen resides at 505 North Fifteenth Street, Springfield.

COHN, Mrs. Annie.—Some of the largest property holders in Springfield are women of ability having been left well-to-do by fathers or husbands. Among those whose material welfare was thus provided for is Mrs. Annie Cohn, one of the highly esteemed ladies of the city. She is the widow of the late Max Cohn, who for many years was closely associated with the business life of the city as a merchant. Mr. Cohn was a native of Germany, who after receiving a good education in the high schools of Germany, came to this country, and for some time traveled for several dry goods firms, in this way becoming thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the public. Eventually, his travels brought him to Springfield, and he recognized the importance of this city as a distributing point for a large retail trade. He established himself here in business, and built up a large mercantile business. He had served in the army in Prussia before coming to America, and was a man who always tried to do his full duty as he saw it.

Mrs. Cohn is a most estimable lady. She and Mr. Cohn were united in marriage in Springfield. Three children were born to them: Dave, aged twenty-three years; Fannie, aged twenty years, and Sarah, aged eighteen years, all bright young people. The family belong to the Jewish church, in which they take an active part.

The death of Mr. Cohn occurred May 28, 1898, and in him the city lost one of its live, progressive business men, and his family a kind and loving husband and father. Mrs. Cohn has brought up her children in a way that is a credit to her and her husband, and is to be honored for her efforts along this line.

COLBURN, Henry William.—The rural delivery mail carriers are held in the highest esteem by those whom they connect with the centers of industry. They bring to the farmer the news of national happenings and put him in touch with the largest commercial houses in the world. These carriers have to be men of responsibility, whose probity and reliability have been thoroughly tested, and one who is an excellent representative of his class, is Henry William Colburn, of Loami. He was born December 20, 1863, a son of Ebenezer and Elizabeth (Davis) Colburn, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work.

Mr. Colburn attended school in his native town of Loami, and his first work was in the large flouring mill owned by his father, which was the first of its kind in this part of the county, drawing trade for a radius of forty miles. After ten years of this employment he began handling carriages, wagons and farm implements, thus continuing until his appointment as carrier in March, 1903, since which time he has faithfully attended to his duties, and gained the confidence of those on his route. His standing was 97 per cent. In the civil service examination. He is also a Violinist of considerable ability having had several years experience as teacher of that instrument.

On September 13, 1888, Mr. Colburn was married to Anna E. Hilgenberg, also born in Lomni in August, 1868, daughter of William Hilgenberg, a native of Germany. Mrs. Colburn died in 1896, having borne her husband two daughters: Bernice M., born October 6, 1889, and Ruth M., born October 8, 1894. Miss Bernice is a graduate of the high school, and is a musical genius, having for a year been a teacher of instrumental music, and making a specialty of the piano. The other daughter, after graduating from high school, and after ten years' work and being Valedictorian, standing highest in the county, is now teaching at seventeen years of age. She fitted herself for teaching; standing highest among the towns in the county examination, when only fifteen. During all the grades she had stood at the head of her class, winning a silver medal when only eleven years old. On October 29, 1899, Mr. Colburn married Mrs. Emma (Davidson) Henry, born near Palmyra, Ill., August 27, 1872, widow of Edward H. Henry. The death of Mr. Henry occurred August 4, 1899. She is the daughter of Winchester and Mary (Bates) Davidson, and was brought by her parents from Ohio, where her birth occurred, to Illinois. Mrs. Davidson died when Mrs. Colburn was only nine years of age, and the latter was reared in the home of Charles M. Poley, of Auburn. Mr. Davidson survives, making his home with his son, Mr. Colburn. There were three children in his family: Mrs. Colburn, Cora M. and Joseph W. Mr. and Mrs. Colburn have three children: Marjorie A., born February 18, 1901; Beulah F., born July 3, 1903, and Howard Wayne, born March 18, 1900. For seven years Mrs. Colburn was a teacher in Portland, Ore., and held a state certificate in that State. She comes of a talented family and owns some much-prized and valuable paintings executed by her grandmother. These bear verses composed by this venerated lady. Mrs. Colburn herself is an artist of ability and her productions adorn the walls of the comfortable home, owned and Improved by Mr. Colburn. In addition Mrs. Colburn is the author of many charming poems, and enjoys training her children to make the most of their attainments. The atmosphere of this home is charming, and no one comes within it without being made the better for it. A faithful Dunkard, Mrs. Colburn lives up to the teachings of her church and teaches her children to live upright, Christian lives.

Mr. Colburn is a Republican and his party has shown its appreciation of his services by electing him to the office of Tax Collector and Township Clerk by a large majority. Fraternally he is a Mason, Odd Fellow, Modern Woodman of America, and he and his wife belong to the Eastern Star and Royal Neighbors. He has been a representative to the Grand Lodges of Masons and Odd Fellows and filled all the chairs in the Knights of Pythias, holding the office of Secretary for fifteen years, and has been a representative to the Grand Lodge. He took the Grand Lodge Degree of the Odd Fellows and is very prominent in all of these fraternal organizations. Mrs. Colburn has been Recorder in the Royal Neighbors for five years, her abilities being recognized in it as well as in the Eastern Star Order. It would be difficult to find any family in Sangamon County more truly representative of its best interests than this one, and which exerts a better influence in social and literary circles.

COLBURN, Levi Otis, who for seventy-five years has been identified with Sangamon County, has characterized his long life in this section by usefulness and good citizenship, and has carried many splendid qualities to his fellow townsmen. He was born November 13, 1835, in Lomni Township, Sangamon County, Illinois, son of William Colburn and a grandson of Paul and Mehitable (Ball) Colburn natives of Hollis, Hillsboro County, N. H., where the former was born in 1761 and the latter in 1757. They were married in Massachusetts and there eleven children were born to them, but in 1809 the family removed to New Hampshire.

William Colburn was born June 3, 1793, in Sterling, Mass., and was married to Achea Phelps, who was born July 9, 1796, at Hebron, N. H., and after their marriage they went to Ohio, which was at that time considered the Far West, although they did not reach that State until after many hardships had been encountered and conquered. To them there were born the following children: Clarissa, born October 27, 1816, in Pittsfield, Pa., married William S. Walker; Abigail, born April 29, 1818, at Marietta, Ohio, married Lawrence Underwood; Fanny, born January 4, 1820, at Marietta, Ohio, married David Phelps (his second marriage); Mehitable, born December 5, 1821, in Illinois, married David Phelps; Samuel Paul, born in Sangamon County, Ill., September 15, 1823, married Me-linda Colburn, a cousin; Margaret P., born April 7, 1825, married Lewis Cottermen; Isaac, born February 22, 1827, married Julia Ensley; Daniel W., born July 2, 1829, married Lucinda Huffmaster; William S., born February 20, 1831, in Sangamon County, Ill., was a member of the Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteers, married Mary Ensley; Ebenezer, born April 6, 1833, married Nancy Huffmaster; Levi Otis; David P., married Turza Mengel; and John T., born November 23, 1840, married Martha Back, residing in Lomni, Ill. William Colburn and his wife were honorable, God-fearing people, useful pioneers of Sangamon County, and people whose memory is held green in the hearts of many of Sangamon’s leading families. He died June 10, 1863, his widow surviving him until 1878. In the early days, Mr. Colburn had been a Whig, and on the organization of the Republican party he joined the new party. He was never an office seeker, but his strict integrity and reliability were known by his fellow townsman and on one occasion he was elected to the office of Constable. On being given his first papers to serve, he found the party in such poor circumstances that he refused to make the eviction, paid the bill out of his own pocket and resigned his position, deciding that his was too tender a heart to conscientiously fill the duties of his office.

Until he was eighteen years of age Levi O. Colburn attended the subscription and district schools of his locality, and at that time he went to work at the carpenter’s trade with his brother-in-law, Lewis Cotterman, receiving $8.00 per month, his board and washing. Later he secured a position at the same business which paid him $1.50 per day, with William Hammond, for one season, but subsequently became clerk in a store and continued thus for about eighteen months. Next he purchased a set of tools and did Journeyman’s work and contracting from 1858 till about 1875. Then he worked for his brother Ebenezer, who owned a saw and grist mill which was one of the best in this part of Sangamon County. On July 13, 1862, fired with patriotism, Mr. Colburn enlisted in Company C, Fifty-first Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, the regiment being formed at Chicago, Ill., and soon in the thickest of the fight, participating in some of the bloodiest and hardest-fought battles of the war, which included Stone River, Chickamauga, Resaca, and others. In the battle of Chickamauga Mr. Colburn was shot through the left shoulder and was sent to the hospital, where he was offered a furlough, but this he refused. He left the hospital in Nashville, Tenn., December 15, 1863, and rejoined his regiment January 14, 1864, at Blain’s Crossroads, after a trip of twenty-five days, and was with his comrades at Adairsville, Ga. The Fifty-first was one of the regiments which were always ready and eager for action, and it conducted itself with honor in such struggles as Peach Tree Creek, Spring Hill, Franklin and Nashville, Tenn., and took care of Hood while Sherman marched to the sea. Mr. Colburn, with the exception of the time he spent in the hospital recovering from his wound, was with his regiment in every march, skirmish and battle, and had a war record of which any man might be proud, when he was discharged at Nashville, June 16, 1865, and mustered out in Chicago, June 24th following. After serving his country with bravery and honor, Mr. Colburn returned to his home and worked at his trade.

On July 7, 1867, Mr. Colburn was married to Christine Kinney, who was born in Madison County, N. Y., March 17, 1844, daughter of William Kinney, who came to Sangamon County in 1836. Mrs. Colburn has one brother and three sisters living: George W. Kinney, of Loami; Margaret A., widow of Marcus Lindsey, residing on a farm in Loami Township; and Martha J., wife of Cyrus B. Sweet, a farmer of Loami. After his marriage Mr. Colburn located in his home in Loami and engaged in working at his chosen trade, becoming successful in his undertakings and assisting in the growth and development of his community. He has seen many changes in this part of the county during his long life here, and although he has been retired from active pursuits for the past few years, he is still to be found in the front rank of all movements that promise to be of benefit to the citizens of his section. Mr. Colburn has always been active in church and charitable work and is affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal denomination.

To Mr. and Mrs. Colburn have been born these children: Bertha O., born April 15, 1868, living at home; William Ernest, born August 28, 1869, connected with the commission firm of Coe and Company, Springfield, and a prominent member of and earnest worker in the Young Men’s Christian Association, married May 1, 1888, Mary L. Lowery; and George P., born January 2, 1874, a farmer in New Berlin Township, Sangamon County, married April 28, 1910, Annie Kerr.

COLEMAN, James W.— The Coleman family was among the earliest to settle in Sangamon County, and its representatives bore their full share in the early development of the region. James W. Coleman was born near the first log cabin erected in Ball Township, November 23, 1838, and is a son of Jonathan B. and Mary (Dodds) Coleman. Jonathan B. Coleman was a native of Nashville, Tenn., born November 16, 1811. The Dodds family was of Irish origin, and Mary, daughter of Joseph Dodds, was born in Kentucky, and they later moved to Nashville. In 1818 Joseph Dodds came to what is now Ball Township and became one of the most extensive land-owners in the county. His death occurred in 1865. His brother, Thomas Dodds, served with distinction in the Revolutionary War. The family reached Illinois Territory in March and in November of the same year Illinois was admitted as a State, so they are planning to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of their settlement in Ball Township, in 1938.

When he was a boy of seventeen years, Jonathan B. Coleman came to Sangamon County with his aunt, Frankie Hutton, and soon after began splitting rails, which occupation he followed a short time, then learned the trade of millwright. He worked at his trade until March, 1835, the date of his marriage to Mary Dodds, soon after which he purchased a piece of land and erected a frame building, the first of its kind in the vicinity. This house had walls of siding split from walnut trees, and the sills, joists and rafters were all made by Mr. Coleman, the building consisting of one room and in size being 24 by 28 feet. The first Cumberland Presbyterian Church erected in the county was built on land donated by Jonathan B. Coleman, in 1827, and this is yet in the possession of the organization. He and his wife lived on the farm he had purchased until late in life, then removed to the city of Springfield. They were parents of ten children, five of whom died in infancy, the others being: James W., the oldest; Joseph E., of Los Angeles, Calif.; William Harvey, died in Denver, Col., about 1894; Elizabeth A., widow of Lemuel Dyson, resides in Divernon Township; Mary Eveline, wife of A. Stark, of Bellevue, Idaho. The parents moved to Springfield in 1854, lived there two years, then purchased a farm in Ball Township, where they spent the remainder of their lives. He died in 1855, at the age of eighty-four years, and his widow survived him two years, passing away in 1857, at the age of eighty-two. In politics he was first a Whig, but upon the organization of the Republican party espoused its principles. He believed it the duty of every good citizen to cast his vote at every election, and lived up to this view. He never sought public office for himself, although he was active in the councils of his party. He was one of the most respected and honored men of his community, public-spirited and enterprising, and was always ready to do his share to promote the moral and material progress of his fellow-citizens. He and his wife were devout members of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church.

The childhood of James W. Coleman was spent on his father's farm in Ball Township, and he attended the subscription schools of the day. However, he also had the opportunity to attend public school, and there completed his education. He remained on the home farm until about twenty-three years of age, and February 18, 1862, married Miss Margaret Bowman, a native of Wayne County, Ill., and they located on a farm in Ball Township. In 1864 he moved to Springfield, learned the trade of carpenter, and lived in that city until 1867. In the latter year they returned to the country to live, locating on a farm in Divernon Township, and in June, 1867, Mrs. Coleman died, having borne two children, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. Coleman soon afterwards moved to Petersburg, Ill., and engaged in the livery business, having twenty-seven horses.

June 27, 1869, Mr. Coleman married (second) Miss Elizabeth Mengle, who was born in Loomis Township, Sangamon County, in 1843, daughter of Levi Mengle, a pioneer of Sangamon County. Mrs. Mengle came to the county with her parents in 1810. In 1869 Mr. Coleman returned to the farm and two years later moved to the vicinity of Grove City, Christian County. In 1873 he began working at the carpenter's trade in Auburn, in 1878 moved to Virden, returned to Auburn one year later, and in 1880 returned to the old home farm, of which he took charge. In 1881 he moved to Loomis, in 1884 to Virden, and in 1890 returned to the home farm, caring for his parents until their deaths. He purchased a saw-mill, which he conducted until 1905, in September of which year he located in Chatham, where he purchased a comfortable residence and retired from active life.

Mr. Coleman and his wife have children as follows: Lina J., wife of Cyrus Scott, of Colorado Springs, Colo.; Leslie E., of Lawrenceville, Ill., and they also had a daughter, Nina May, who married Charles C. Corry, and died, leaving one child, Howard.

Mr. Coleman has been a Republican since he was old enough to vote and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. He was well acquainted with both Lincoln and Douglas. He and his wife are members of the Christian Church. He has been a resident of the county most of the time for about seventy-three years and has witnessed the development of the region from a wilderness to its present prosperous condition. He has always been identified with the best interests of the community where he has lived and has won the respect and esteem of all with whom he has been associated.

COLGAN, Eugene.—Prominent in a group of representative business men of Sangamon County, Eugene Colgan, coal magnate and operator, man of affairs and capitalist, is an interesting personality for many reasons. He is a man whose native ability has led him un faltering into the avenues of commercial success and enabled him to climb from a humble position in the great coal industry to the attainment of a goal where he has more than realized his early ambitions. He was born at Springfield, Ill., April 5, 1857, and his parents were Edward and Mary (Mathews) Colgan. The father followed railroadng and his death occurred at Springfield February 14, 1900, and his burial was in Calvary Cemetery. The mother still survives.

Eugene Colgan is a product of the public schools of his native city, being a graduate of the High School in the class of 1874. He has been identified with the coal industry throughout his entire business career, beginning as an office boy and gradually advancing through until he became book-keeper, office manager, and finally Secretary of the company with which he was so long connected. Subsequently he became individually interested in mining properties, and mainly through his mining interests has been developed the flourishing village of Cantrall. His two large mines are situated in Sangamon County and his financial interests are more or less connected to the attainment of a directorship in the New Automobile Company, of Springfield, and the possession of valuable city realty. His handsome residence is one of the elegant mansions of Springfield, its location being on West Grand Avenue, and its refined hospitality is a feature of the city’s social life.

Mr. Colgan was married June 25, 1890, to Miss Katherine V. Foley, a daughter of Michael and Katherine Foley, old and substantial people of Springfield for many years. They married early and immediately went to housekeeping on the northwest corner of Monroe Street and Glennwood Avenue, Springfield, and continued to reside there until the close of their lives. The old home still belongs to the Foley estate. Michael Foley was a coal contractor during his entire business life. His death occurred April 5, 1889, and that of his widow on January 11, 1908. Mrs. Colgan was born, reared and educated in Springfield. She is a lady of many accomplishments, a musician of rare skill and an artist of much talent. The walls of the beautiful home are adorned with many choice productions of her brush, and their presence adds to the refining influences of this cultured, modern home. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Colgan, Mary Regina and Howard Eugene. Children in a marked degree inherit the admirable qualities and remarkable talents of their parents. Their talents have been fostered and encouraged and they have been given advantages far beyond the ordinary.

Mary Regina Colgan was born at Springfield May 25, 1892, and became a pupil at the Sacred Heart Convent when aged but five years. The good Sisters cherished and encouraged the remarkable talent for music that the child even then displayed, and she remained a student of the Convent until she graduated. She then entered a French convent which is under the direction of the Ladies of Loreto, of Chicago, and there took a post-graduate course, making a specialty of languages. She was also a student of music at the Chicago Musical College and studied the violin under the famous master, Hugo Herrmann, of Berlin, Germany; piano under the great Italian artist, Ernesto Concolo; and harmony under Adolph Bronne. During her period of advanced instruction she won many flattering tributes to her ability, when her proud instructors brought her forward at studio recitals. Miss Colgan at present is pursuing her studies in the city of New York, where she is under direct instruction of notable virtuosos, including the great Hungarian master of the violin, Arnold Volpe, the conductor of Volpe’s Symphony Orchestra, and the equally great piano teacher, Carl V. Loechman, of the Loehman Conservatory of Music. She is a young lady of sweet and engaging personality, and is a social favorite in her native city.

Howard Eugene Colgan, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Colgan, was born at Springfield, January 21, 1895. He received his early education at St. Agnes Parochial School, from which he graduated as valedictorian of his class, after which he entered the Springfield High School. He has served two terms in the capacity of page in the House of Representatives at Springfield, and through his efficiency, intelligence and courtesy, has made friendships with statesmen from all over Illinois, who will watch with interest his future career.

In political views Mr. Colgan is a Democrat and is an able supporter of the cause of his party. When he was elected a member of the City Council (this event taking place when he was just twenty-one years of age), he had the distinction not only of being the youngest Alderman on record, but also of being elected from a Republican ward. He has numerous fraternal connections and belongs to various organizations of a business, charitable and social nature. Among these may be included the Business Men's Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Knights of Columbus, the Woodmen, the order of Ben Hur, the Foresters and the Loyal Americans. With his family, he belongs to the Roman Catholic Church.

COLLINS, Harry—The beautiful town of Riverton offers many advantages to those seeking a home where they can secure urban advantages, combined with country conditions. Its present prosperity is the result of the efforts of the men who were instrumental in its founding and upbuilding, and one who is deserving of more than passing mention in this connection is Harry Collins, one of its oldest residents, who lives in his comfortable home, retired from former activities.

Mr. Collins is a native of the Emerald Isle, born in County Monahan, May 12, 1883. He is a son of Harry and Mary (Laughlin) Collins, natives of Ireland, where the father was a blacksmith, and where both parents lived and died. The grandfather of Mr. Collins was also a blacksmith, and the family was an old one in the locality in which he was born. His birth took place in the house which witnessed the marriage of his parents.

Harry Collins the younger grew up in Ireland, there receiving what education the parish school afforded and learning the blacksmith’s trade from his father. However, he was not content with the opportunities there offered, and in 1864 sailed from Queenstown for New York City, whence he made his way to Morgan County, Ill., locating fourteen miles from Jacksonville. He conducted a shop there for a year, moving then to Murrayville. After a year in that place he went to Petersburg, where he assisted in sinking a coal shaft. Following a short stay in that place he came to Springfield, but lived there only a few months, until he located permanently at Riverton. For many years he conducted a blacksmith shop in Riverton, and is one of the best known men of this trade in the county.

Mr. Collins was married in County Durham, England, August 15, 1844, to Alice Curran, born in Ireland, who passed away March 10, 1905. She was taken to England from Dublin, Ireland, by her parents. Her father was a farmer, who eventually followed his daughter to the United States, and, locating in Riverton, spent his declining years there. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Collins, but only one survives, Rose, wife of Joseph Parsons, a grocer of Riverton. Mrs. Collins was a good-hearted woman, whose kindly sympathy made her many friends. She could always be counted upon in trouble, and was the first to be sought in cases of emergency. A steadfast member of the Roman Catholic Church, she lived as a true Christian and her memory is tenderly cherished in the hearts of her husband and daughter, who deeply mourn her loss.

Mr. Collins is a Democrat but has never been willing to come before the public for political recognition, although he is personally so popular that he would doubtless run ahead of his ticket. For many years he has been a consistent member and liberal supporter of the St. James Roman Catholic Church, of Riverton. Mr. Collins has always been deeply interested in his home town and its welfare. Genial, warm-hearted, generous, Mr. Collins has made friends wherever he has lived and knows men all over the county.

COLLINS, James Joseph.—The standing of any city with the traveling public is largely based upon the character of its hotels, and the quality of service rendered by them. Especially is this true in any capital city, for to it come men from all over the State, whose entertainment is in the hands of the hotel man. Springfield for years counted among its representative men of this class the elder and younger Collins, who, from 1870 until 1906, rendered yeoman service to the city in this respect. When the father retired the son took up the work until he, too, left the active arena of endeavor for a less strenuous career. James Joseph Collins, the son, was born in Springfield, February 2, 1866, being a son of Thomas and Ellen (Nugent) Collins. The former was born in County Meath, Ireland, in 1837, while his wife was born between Navan and Kells, County Meath.

When Thomas Collins was seven years old he was brought to America by his mother and two brothers, both of whom survive him. The family lived at Utica, N. Y., for some time, but later moved to Wilmington, Ill. Here young Thomas herded cattle, driving them to Chicago markets. Desiring to advance himself, he left the farm, coming to Springfield in 1863, and for some time worked for Dr. Fowler on South Second Street, following which he was in the employ of the Illinois Bank. Soon later he secured the contract for lighting the city lamps, and from 1865 to 1870 was in the saloon business. It was in the latter year that he opened the Washington Hotel, which he made so well known for fourteen years that it was one of the favorite hosteries of the city during that period. In 1881 Mr. Collins founded the hotel which bore his name, and for sixteen years was its genial host, his son James succeeding him upon his retirement. Mrs. Collins came to this county about 1848, making the trip on a sailing vessel which consumed three months on the voyage. She and her husband met in Springfield, where they were married, February 28, 1865, and in addition to their son, James Joseph, this couple had one daughter, Mrs. Alice O'Reilly, now deceased. The death of Mr. Collins occurred September 18, 1906, his wife having passed away in 1892. In politics Mr. Collins was a Democrat, but never sought public office, preferring to give his attention to his business affairs. His religious belief made him a Catholic and he belonged to the Immaculate Conception Church of Springfield.

James Joseph Collins attended St. Mary's parochial school and Prof. Bock's school, discontinuing his studies when eighteen years old, to give his attention to helping his father in the hotel. Growing up in the business, he learned its every detail, and when he assumed full control, was an ideal host in every respect. Not only did he do everything within his power to make his guests comfortable, but he won their friendship, and his retirement in 1906 was regarded as a calamity by those who had enjoyed his good cheer in years past, although he leased his business to a very reliable and trustworthy successor, W. H. Hawks. Like his father, Mr. Collins has never taken any part in public events, but has faithfully cast his vote for the candidates of the Democratic party. He, too, is a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

The marriage of Mr. Collins was celebrated at Springfield, Ill., April 29, 1895, with Elizabeth V. Colgan, daughter of Edward Colgan. During his career as a hotel keeper and since, Mr. Collins has demonstrated the fact that he is one of the solid, reliable men of the community, and one who can always be depended upon to support any measure which in his judgment will work out to the betterment of the majority.

COLLINS, Joseph Henry, was born in Missouri, and is a son of John C. and Eliza (Van Buskirk) Collins, natives of Kentucky, of English and Dutch ancestry. John C. Collins, soon after his marriage, which occurred in Kentucky, moved to Missouri. He was one of the first half-dozen settlers in the locality where he entered land and made his home the remainder of his life. It is said that the first deed recorded in the county was made to John C. Collins, for eight square sides of land. He was Judge of the County Court, and for a number of years practiced law as an attorney.

Joseph Henry Collins received his early education in the public schools, attending a country school near his home where he grew up to manhood. Before he was of age he entered La Grange College, Missouri, and after his graduation, engaged in newspaper work for nearly two years. He soon decided that teaching offered a field for usefulness more to his liking, and became an instructor in a college.
Later he was elected Superintendent of Schools at Canton, Mo., which position he held for three years.

Mr. Collins came to Springfield in 1880, and, with the exception of two years, has been connected with the city public schools ever since, first as Principal of a grammar school for three years, then Principal of the High School five years, and for twenty-one years Superintendent of City Schools. He is well-known throughout the State, his courtesy and agreeable personality having made him many friends. He has been President of the Illinois State Teachers’ Association, a Vice-President of the National Education Association, a State Director of this organization four years, and Illinois State Manager at the meetings of the National Education Association held at Washington, D. C.; Los Angeles, Cal.; Charleston, S. C., and Detroit, Mich. For over twenty years he has been a Director of The Springfield Homestead Association, a building and loan organization of which he was Secretary during the two years he was out of school work.

In 1875 Mr. Collins was married, in Missouri, to Julia C. Hay, a native of that State. His second marriage occurred in 1900, when Mrs. Mabel Patterson, of Michigan, became his wife.

Mr. Collins has never been active in politics, being independent in the matter of voting. He has been a member of the Baptist Church from boyhood, and his fraternal connections are with the Masons, in which order he is a Past Commander of Elwood Commandery, Knights Templar, and is also a Scottish Rite Mason.

CONKLING, Clinton Levering, a prominent and successful lawyer of Springfield, Ill., is a member of the well known firm of Conkling & Irwin, who have an extensive practice, being employed largely in the interests of corporations, municipalities, trustees and estates. Mr. Conkling holds directorships in several financial institutions and has held various local public offices. He is a native of Springfield, born October 16, 1843, son of James Cook and Merce Ann Riggs (Levering) Conkling, the former born in New York City, October 13, 1816, and the latter born in Georgetown, D. C., November 27, 1817. James C. Conkling graduated from Princeton College in 1835, studied law in Morris-town, N. J., about three years and was then admitted to the Bar. In 1838 he came to Springfield, Ill., and there his death occurred, March 1, 1890. He served as Mayor of Springfield in 1845, and as Member of the House of Representatives of the Seventeenth and Twenty-third General Assemblies of the State of Illinois (in 1851 and 1867), was a Presidential Elector on the Republican ticket in 1860 and 1864, and a member of the Bloomington Republican Convention in 1856, with Mr. Lincoln. He was a life-long friend of Mr. Lincoln and the latter addressed to him the famous “Lincoln-Conkling Letter” in 1862. He was one of the original members of the Lincoln Monument Association. He served as State Agent for the State of Illinois at Washington during the Civil War, and was special aid to Governor Yates in 1861, in organizing State troops. Mr. Conkling served four years as Postmaster at Springfield, being appointed in 1890. He was a Trustee of Blackburn University, at Carlinville, also a Trustee of the Illinois State University, at Urbana. He was for many years an Elder in the Second Presbyterian Church in Springfield. He was one of the most prominent lawyers of his time in the State and was well known for his public spirit and patriotism.

The emigrant ancestor of the Conkling family came from Nottinghamshire, England, to Salem, Mass., about 1638 and removed thence to Southold, L. I., in 1650. From the latter place his descendants emigrated to every part of the United States, and the branch from which the family here described was descended removed to Baskingridge, N. J., about 1690. Many of the name participated in the Revolutionary and Civil Wars.

Clinton L. Conkling spent his youth in Springfield, where he attended private schools until 1800. He was never a very robust child, so did not take part in the more strenuous sports of boyhood, but was fond of hunting and fishing and was a rather close student. He entered Yale College in 1800 and graduated four years later, then studied law in his father’s office and was licensed to practice in Illinois Courts in 1806. He was afterward admitted to practice in the United States Courts, including the Supreme Court. After leaving college he spent a short time in a clerical position with Bowen Brothers, then large wholesale dry-goods merchants in Chicago, then returned to Springfield and began his study of law. He began practice in partnership with his father, under the firm name of J. C. and C. L. Conkling. About 1874 the younger Mr. Conkling became interested in a manufacturing enterprise, but three years later resumed his practice. In 1888 Mr. Conkling formed a partnership with Joseph M. Grout, which continued until the death of the latter, in 1902. In October of the latter year Mr. Conkling became partner with Edward F. Irwin, and the firm assumed its present name.

Mr. Conkling is a lifelong resident of Springfield and has been identified with many public movements. He is a Union Republican and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, but in local affairs votes for the man he considers best fitted to fill office, regardless of political convictions. He served nine years as a member of the Board of Supervisors of Sangamon County and was Corporation Counsel for the City of Springfield from 1898 until 1902, inclusive. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Illini Country Club, Springfield Golf Club, of Illinois State Bar Association, Illinois State Historical Society and of the Lincoln Guard of Honor. He was the Secretary at the organization and for some time thereafter, of the National Lincoln Monument Association and had under his management a large part of the popular contributions to the erection of a monument to Lincoln at Springfield. He was one of the witnesses to certify to the identity of President Lincoln's remains when they were for the last time exposed to view in September, 1901, and were then laid away for all time beneath the reconstructed Lincoln Monument.

Mr. Conkling is a Director of Ridgley National Bank and also holds a Directorship in the Sangamon Loan & Trust Company and the Workingmen's Savings & Homestead Association. He holds the office of Vice President and Director of the Lincoln Library. Fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, having belonged to the order about forty years, and being affiliated with Lodge No. 465, of Springfield. He was for thirty-five years been a member of the Blue Lodge of Masons and for thirty years a Knight Templar, and is affiliated with St. Paul's Lodge A. F. & A. M. and Elwood Commandery. Mr. Conkling is a member of the Second Presbyterian Church, to which he has belonged since 1861, and has been a Ruling Elder since 1873. He was Master of the Building Committee for the erection of the present church edifice, which was recently completed. He has served as Delegate at various times to various judicatories of the Presbyterian Church in various parts of the United States. The recruiting officers would not accept Mr. Conkling as a volunteer in 1861, but he served during the summer of 1863 as a member of the Home Guard, in Baltimore, Md. He was the first person to inform Abraham Lincoln of his nomination for the office of President in 1860, which fact is mentioned in the transactions of the Illinois State Historical Society, in the issue of May, 1895.

Mr. Conkling was married at Springfield, March 12, 1867, to Miss Georgiana Barrett, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., November 29, 1846, and three children were born of this union: Georgiana, born October 28, 1872, now Mrs. Waldo S. Reed, of Englewood, N. J.; Katherine Levering, born December 1, 1874, now Mrs. John S. McCormick, of Pittsburg, Pa.; Annie Douglas, born May 18, 1877, died at the age of eighteen months.

Mr. Conkling is an eloquent, concise speaker, and has won a high place in his profession. He has always taken keen interest in all movements for the public welfare, and, like his father before him, has favored the growth of industrial activities in the community. He has been called upon to fill many positions of honor and trust and has given freely of his time and strength to further benevolent causes in which he has been interested. He owns valuable business property in the city and has been very successful in his financial enterprises.

CONKLING, William H., Assistant Postmaster of Springfield, is a son of William J. Conkling, whose public and private life has been marked by a well-known resident of Sangamon County.

William J. Conkling was born in New York City in 1826, a son of Stephen and Sarah (Belknap) Conkling, who moved to Mount Vernon, Ohio, in 1831; moving to Leroy, Ill., in 1839, he worked his way through and obtained his college education at Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio. He came to Springfield, Ill., in 1853, and entered the office of his brother, James C. Conkling, with whom he studied law, being admitted to the Bar October 14, 1854. William J. Conkling, the father of our subject, passed away in 1883, leaving three children: William H. Conkling, Ella G. Buckley and Grace H. Leavert.

William H. Conkling was married in 1884 to Miss Sadie J. Thompson, of Jacksonville, Ill., who died in 1905, leaving two children, Grace H. and Almea J. In 1907 Mr. Conkling married Miss Margaret McManus, daughter of Patrick and Ann McManus.

Conkling was born and reared in Springfield and took an active part in many public affairs. In 1893 he was one of the citizens who came forward with a proposition to secure to the City of Springfield a home in which to transact its municipal affairs, the results of which accomplished the erection of the present City Hall. He was selected by Mayor Wheeler in 1897 as City Comptroller serving four years, when Mayor Wheeler was appointed as Postmaster, and Mr. Conkling's appointment as Assistant Postmaster demonstrates that his services were valuable as a public official. Mr. Conkling was prominently connected with the erection of many municipal improvements in connection to the City Hall, and was an active worker in the Republican ranks. He was a pupil of the public schools, graduating from the Springfield High School in the class of 1878, directly after which he entered the employ of Christian Wolf, then a prominent and successful butcher and furrier, where he remained ten years, then he and C. J. Giblin purchased the stock of Mr. Wolf and two years thereafter formed a partnership with C. D. Roberts, which arrangement continued until his appointment as City Comptroller in 1897.

Mr. Conkling is a thirty-second degree mason, a member of Elwood Commandery K. T., a member of Navarre Lodge No. 142, Knights of Pythias, also holds membership in the Modern Woodmen, Court of Honor, Elks and Sangamo Club, and is one of the Directors of the Springfield Commercial Association. The Second Presbyterian Church holds his membership.

Mr. Conkling was the founder of Hawthorne Place, that beautiful addition and the first modern one ever platted in the City of Springfield. The record of this young man demonstrates that many of the sons of great men follow in the footsteps of their fathers, and make their lives successful, as well as leave monuments to the memory of their zeal and enterprise.

CONNELLY, Terrence.—Ireland has sent to this country some of her best sons and these men make excellent citizens and never lack for friends. Some of the most popular men of Springfield are those who owe their birth to the Emerald Isle, and one of these is Terrence Connelly, residing on Rochester Road. He was born in County Donegal, Ireland, in August, 1848, a son of William and Margaret (McShirley) Connelly, both of Ireland. The parents never emigrated, rounding out their lives in Ireland, where they were farming people. They had three sons and two daughters, but Terrence is the only survivor.

Terrence Connelly was educated in Ireland and during his boyhood worked on the farm. As a young man he sailed from Queenstown to Quebec, whence he went, a short time later to Montreal, and there spent several years. He then came to Chicago, but two years later came on to Springfield, arriving in 1865. Immediately he found employment with Hunter & McNeill, cattle dealers, continuing with them for three years. He then became coachman for former Governor Matteson, following which he traveled through the country selling dry-goods. After four years of this he began farming, but still later engaged in work at the St. Nicholas Hotel. For some time he was in the Springfield woolen mills, and following this was an employe at the State House for two years. Fourteen years ago, he came to live in his present house on the edge of Springfield, surrounded by five acres of land, and is now engaged in gardening.

In August, 1876, Mr. Connelly was married in Springfield to Miss Anna Conlon, born in County Mayo, Ireland, where her parents lived and died, although her brother Peter is now a resident of Springfield. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Connelly: William enlisted during the Spanish-American War and served in the Philippines; John resides in Champaign County, Ill., where he farms; Louise is in the employ of the John Bressmer Company; Manuel married Arthur Sheridan, of Champaign, and the rest are deceased. Mr. Connelly is a Democrat. He is a devout Roman Catholic, belonging to St. Patrick’s parish. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and has been connected with Liberty Camp for twenty years. His land is very valuable and he takes great satisfaction in it and the magnificent vegetables he raises there. After so many years of changes, he takes pride and satisfaction in his permanent home.

CONNOLLY, Major James A.—Few names are more familiar in the great State of Illinois and to Sangamon County in particular, than that of Major James A. Connolly, distinguished alike in the profession of law, in military achieve-ments, in political life, and in public service. He was born at Newark, New Jersey, March 8, 1842, a son of William and Margaret (McGuire) Connolly. Although he came of an agricultural family and environment, James A. Connolly very early gave indications that his life career would reach far beyond his father's field and ambitions. As a boy, he was apt, even when a student in the common schools of Morrow County, Ohio. His ability was still more forcibly shown after he entered Selby Academy, at Chesterville, and later when he was a law student at Mt. Gilead, Ohio. Upon his admission to the Ohio bar in 1859, he began practice with his former preceptor, Judge Dunn, of Mt. Gilead, and continued with him for one year, when in 1860, he established an office of his own at Charleston, Ill.

In the meantime the Civil War had broken out, and in 1862, the young attorney put aside the rich promise of the future in his profession, to become a member of the One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, assisting in raising a company of which he was elected Captain. On the organization of the regiment, he was chosen Major. With his command, he joined the Army of the Cumberland, and was active in all the campaigns that closed with the battle of Chattanooga. He was then assigned to duty as Division Inspector of the Fourteenth Army Corps. Major Connolly was afterward connected with Sherman’s army on its memorable march to the sea, and accompanied the victorious forces to that great and impressive showing of loyalty and patriotism, the Grand Review at Washington City. On many fields, he had shown his valor as an officer, winning recognition and was awarded the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

After his honorable retirement from military life, Major Connolly returned to Charleston, and there resumed his professional duties continuing the private practice of law until March, 1876, when he was appointed United States District Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois, continuing an incumbent of that office until June, 1883, when he retired and took a change in the administration. When the Republican party regained ascendency, he was re-appointed to the office, by the late President Harrison, July 1, 1880, and continued to serve through four more years. In the meanwhile, Major Connolly had become a very important factor in State politics, having been twice elected to the State Legislature, there serving on the Judiciary, Railway and Library committees. In 1886, he was the candidate of his party for Congress and in the contest carried both his own and Morgan Counties, reducing the normal Democratic majority of 4,000 to 900. In 1888, he refused a second nomination for Congress, but, in 1894, and again in 1896, he was renominated. In each case being elected. In May, 1884, he was appointed Solicitor of the Treasury, by President Arthur, an appointment confirmed by the United States Senate, but he declined the honor. In 1888, he was a candidate before the Republican State Convention for Governor, and received a flattering vote. In 1893, he entered into a law partnership with Thomas C. Mather, which continued until the death of the latter. His present partner is Carey E. Barnes.

Major Connolly was married at Gambier, Ohio, February 9, 1863, to Mary Dunn, daughter of Jacob Dunn, and sister of his former preceptor and Law partner, Judge Dunn. Major and Mrs. Connolly attend the services at the First Presbyterian Church, Springfield. He is fraternity affiliated with the Masons, the Elks, the Loyal Legion and belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic, having been Department Commander of the latter for 1810-11.

CONNOLLY, James Austin. (Vol. I, pp. 116-117.)

CONREN, John, who has been a resident of Riverton, Ill., for the past thirty-five years, has spent most of his life in farming, but has retired from active pursuits. He is well-known and highly regarded in the community as a public spirited and useful citizen and has many friends. He is a native of County Wexford, Ireland, born in 1855, son of Richard and Ellen (Doyle) Conren, also natives of that county. The parents spent their entire lives in Ireland, where the father was established in business as a cattle buyer and caried on farming. There were six children, and five daughters born to them, of whom but three children survive, John and two daughters.

John Conren spent his boyhood on a farm and received his education in his native county. He continued farm work until 1870, when he came to America, landing at New York, whence he went to Litchfield County, Conn., and worked on a farm one year. He heard of the wider opportunities offered in the west and came to Springfield, Ill., where he secured work at the city water works. A year later he was employed in the work of excavating for the State Capitol, and when that work was completed, engaged in farming in Sangamon County.

A few years since Mr. Conren retired and now owns property in the village of Riverton. He was reared in the Roman Catholic faith and is a devout member of that church. Politically he is a Democrat, but has never taken an active part in public affairs. He is a man of good character and unquestioned integrity and much interested in the welfare of the community where he lives. He is unmarried.

CONROY, Martin, of Springfield, Ill., was born in County Mayo, Ireland, March 11, 1844, son of Martin and Catherine (Magrarr) Conroy, the former born in County Mayo, in 1822, and the latter in County Galway, in 1825. The father was a farmer by occupation and both he and his wife died many years ago in County Mayo. Martin Conroy Jr., was reared on a farm and educated in the common schools of his native country. He was very fond of cricket and football as a boy and liked outdoor life. After leaving school he worked at herding sheep and cattle. At the age of ten years he went to Liverpool, England, and for twenty years worked in the coal mines in the vicinity. In 1869 he came to America and located in Springfield, where he resumed the occupation of miner.

Mr. Conroy was married, in Virden, Ill., November 25, 1872, to Miss Catherine Diegman, who was born in County Roscommon, Ireland, in 1856, daughter of Patrick and Catheirne Diegman, both natives of County Roscommon, who spent their lives on a farm and died in Ireland. Children as follows were born to Mr. Conroy and his wife: Martin J., born June 20, 1879; Patrick, born in 1881; William, in 1886, and Edward in 1890. Martin Jr. is a moulder, Edward, a book-keeper, and the other two sons follow mining. All reside in Springfield. Mr. Conroy is a man of quiet tastes and very fond of his own home and children. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and in politics is a Republican. He joined the Loyal Americans and the Catholic Order of Foresters in 1895. He has always been very hard-working, industrious and thrifty, and is much respected in his community. He owns his home at 1125 Reservoir Street.

CONVERSE, Albert L., a resident of the city of Springfield, Ill., since 1846, has for many years been prominently identified with the civil and official life of his community, and is recognized as one of the leading business men of central Illinois. He has been prominent in political affairs in his part of the State and, as the choice of the Democratic party, served during the Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth General Assemblies of Illinois, during which time he acted on the Revenue, Appropriations, Agriculture, Sanitary, and various other important Committees. Mr. Converse has for nearly forty years been greatly interested in agriculture and stock-raising, and has exhibited very practical knowledge and experience in his operations along these lines. He is interested in every movement calculated to benefit his community and has been one of the leading figures in the development of some of the leading industries in his part of the State. He has the best interests of his city, county and State ever at heart, and at the same time has been able to attain personal financial success to a very gratifying degree. The birth of Mr. Converse took place at Plainville, Ohio, June 29, 1842, and he is a son of Henry and Nana J. (Priest) Converse, natives of New Hampshire and Vermont, who were married in New York, soon afterward moved to Alabama and thence to Ohio, where the father became a farmer and oil-manufacturer. In 1840 he removed with his family to Springfield and there purchased the land now occupied by Albert L. Converse and his brother.
Henry Converse became a successful farmer and stock-raiser of Sangamon County and took a prominent part in public affairs. He served nine years as a member of the Board of Supervisors and was active in educational and religious work in Springfield, his work and influence in this connection being of lasting benefit to the city. He was a man of high intelligence and true worth and won many lasting friendships among the best class of citizens, in both public and private life. He was for many years identified with the Baptist Church. His death occurred in Springfield, January 25, 1889, his wife having passed away in 1882. They had celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary nine years before his death. Henry Converse left two sons to mourn his loss: Albert L. and William O., both residents of Springfield.

Albert L. Converse received a good education in the public schools of Springfield and applied himself to his studies with interest and pleasure. He read medicine with Dr. Charles Bryan, of Springfield, and afterwards attended lectures at the Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., graduating from the medical department with the Class of 1864. He spent ten years in the successful practice of his profession in Macon and Sangamon Counties, but on account of failing health abandoned his profession, remaining in the entirely successful pursuit of agriculture and stock raising. Among the large enterprises which he helped organize and conduct is the Springfield Paving Brick Company, which does a large business and makes frequent shipments of its output throughout Illinois and into adjacent States. During this time he has served many years as President of this company and has helped promote many other local enterprises. He has been active in local politics and served three years as Supervisor, for two years of which he was Chairman of the County Board. Since the Democratic party adopted the platform upon which they nominated William J. Bryan as their candidate for the Presidency, Mr. Converse has abandoned their ranks and has affiliated himself with the Republican party, in whose interests he has been an indefatigable and useful worker, expressing his views on public occasions with great force. He is an eloquent and interesting speaker and is very practical in his ideas and suggestions. He has traveled extensively throughout the United States and has twice visited Europe. He is an active member of the Baptist Church and fraternally is a Master Mason. He has spent most of his life in his present home at 1346 North Eighth Street.

Mr. Converse was married in Springfield, September 6, 1864, to Miss Henrietta, daughter of Aaron Thompson, of Springfield, and six children have blessed this union, namely: Florence, born in 1865, died at the age of sixteen years; Anna, born in 1867, widow of Dr. Frank B. Smith, of Springfield; Olive, died at the age of nineteen months; Henry A., an Attorney, born in 1875; Albert E., a Dentist, born in 1881; Henrietta, born in 1890. The children attended the fiftieth wedding anniversaries of both their paternal and maternal grandparents.

COOK, (Gen.) John. (Vol. I, p. 120.)

COOK, John F., who for twenty-six years was identified with the contracting and painting business in Pawnee, Ill., and who is now living retired from business activities, has been connected for a long period with the official life of Sangamon County. Mr. Cook was born in Grayson County, Ky., September 23, 1847, a son of James J. and Polly (Ashley) Cook. His paternal grandfather was born in Mercer County, Ky., where he spent his entire life attaining the advanced age of ninety-four years, while his maternal grandfather, a native of Grayson County, Ky., died in Missouri at the age of ninety-six years, James J. Cook was born in Mercer County, Ky., and was married in Litchfield, Ky., to Polly Ashley, who was born in Grayson County, that State. He spent his entire active life in agricultural pursuits, and is now living retired, having reached the age of eighty-nine years, while his wife died in 1866. They were the parents of the following children: John F., Squire, Evan, William, Robert, Daniel J., Solomon, Nancy J., Sarah E., and Amanda E., all born in Grayson County, and all now living except William, Solomon, Sarah A. and Nancy Jane.

John F. Cook received his education in the public schools of Grayson County, Ky., and remained at home until he had attained the age of twenty-five years, at which time he left the home farm and began to learn the painting trade. He came to Sangamon County, and located in business in Pawnee, where he has since resided, gradually working into contracting and making his business successful. He was always an energetic and enterprising business man, and his many sterling qualities gained him many friends. This, when considered with the fact that he always lived up to the letter of every contract made by him, assured his business success, and he succeeded in accumulating a competency that permitted him to retire from active business life. On August 1, 1864, Mr. Cook enlisted at Litchfield, Ky., in Company G, Thirty-fifth Regiment Kentucky Mounted Infantry, under Capt. Meredith, but in October of the same year was sent home on account of sickness, and never rejoined his regiment. He is a member of the Anti-Horse-Thief Association. In politics he has always been a Republican, with Prohibition leanings, as he is a strict temperance man. He has been a member of the Village Board, Game Warden, Constable and Deputy Sheriff. With his family he attends the Methodist Episcopal Church.

On July 12, 1883, one mile east of Pawnee, Ill., Mr. Cook was married, by the Rev. William Wheeler, to Mary Nicholls, who was born October 12, 1858, in Clinton County, Ill., daughter COOLEY, Charles H. (deceased).—The late Charles H. Cooley was descended from Virginia ancestors, who lived and died in the Old Dominion. His parents were Joseph and Sarah (Ragsdale) Cooley and he was born in Virginia, March 31, 1817. His father, a farmer, also operated a mill on the north fork of the Hoosier River near Panama. There were three sons and three daughters in the family, of whom Marion Cooley, of Scotland County, Mo., is the only survivor.

Charles H. Cooley was educated in public schools near his boyhood home and grew up as his father's assistant on the farm and in the mill. He came to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1844, but soon went to Nauvoo, Ill., where he farmed one year. Then he returned to Sangamon County, bought land and farmed in Clear Lake Township for several years, until he sold his holdings there in order to remove to Buffalo Hart Grove, where he continued farming some years. He removed thence to a farm near Spaulding, Ill., which he purchased and which he worked till he retired from active life. He then located at Dawson, where he died in 1894 and where his widow and members of his family are living at this time. He was a Democrat, a man of decided public spirit and for twelve years honorably filled the office of School Director. He was identified with the Methodist Episcopal Church, as are also Mrs. Cooley and members of her household.

Mrs. Cooley was Miss Nancy E. McDaniel. She was born near Barclay, Sangamon County, a daughter of William M. McDaniel, a native of Bracken County, Ky. Her mother was of Illinois nativity, born on the site of Barclay. Mr. McDaniel farmed and raised stock in Sangamon County until his death, which occurred March 29, 1854. Mrs. McDaniel survived till 1899, dying at her home in Riverton. Philip Smith, Mrs. Cooley's grandfather, was a soldier in the Black Hawk War. She had a brother and two sisters. Her brother has passed away; her sister Lillie is the wife of William Randolph, who lives near Spaulding, Ill.; her sister Kate married Albert Libka and lives near Riverton, Sangamon County.

The home and other property of Mrs. Cooley at Dawson rank with the good property of the town. She bore her husband eight children, six of whom are living. The eldest of these is Virginia, a teacher and a member of her household. Her sons Charles H. and Louis C. live in Dawson. Lillie M., a daughter living with her mother, is a teacher in the Dawson public school. Her daughter Ethel M., is the wife of James Rutherford, of Rochester, Sangamon County. Marion G. Cooley lives in Montana.

COONS, James (deceased).—The hardships endured by the early farmers of Illinois cannot be appreciated by the present generation, who are used to the conveniences of today. Yet if it had not been for the efforts of these pioneers, the mighty Commonwealth, of which we are all so proud, would still be a wilderness, with wild animals prowling over the vast expanse of prairie. The Coons family is one which was prominently associated with the development of this locality, and one of them who was for many years a successful farmer of Clear Lake Township was the late James Coons. He was born in 1833, a son of Martin and Margaret (Grimsby) Coons, natives of Kentucky. Martin Coons moved to Morgan County, Ill., from Kentucky in 1829, and, locating on a farm on Big Indian Creek, five miles north of Jacksonville, made it his home for a quarter of a century. After the death of his wife he went with his family to Sangamon County, in 1850, and settled on a farm near New Berlin, where his death occurred. There were seven children in his family, and of them two now survive: George E. Coons, now of New Berlin, who is ninety-four years of age, and Benjamin, of Kansas, eighty-four years old. James Coons was educated in the little log school north of Jacksonville, Morgan County, where he sat on slab benches and did without any of the modern appliances of a schoolroom. At the same time, he was brought up to hard work by his father, who taught him to be an efficient farmer. When the family moved to Sangamon County, James came with them, and after the father's death, with two of his brothers worked on the homestead for a time, then bought a farm in Clear Lake Township, which continued to be his home until his death, which occurred in 1888. Mr. Coons was married March 3, 1850, in Morgan County, to Sarah E. Sturgis, born seven miles north of Jacksonville, Morgan County, November 2, 1832. Her father was born in North Carolina, on Christmas Day, in 1798, while her mother was born in Zanesville, Ohio, February 5, 1799. Mr. Sturgis came from North Carolina to Morgan County, Ill., in 1823, locating on a farm, which continued to be his home for two years. He then entered government land to the amount of 163 acres seven miles north of Jacksonville, but in 1856 sold this and bought another farm, dying there in May, 1874. His widow came to Sangamon County, locating near New Berlin, where she died in 1881. The grandfather of Mrs. Coons, Joseph Vance, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Mr. and Mrs. Sturgis had seven children, two of whom survive: James Sturgis and Mrs. Coons. This brother lives with Mrs. Coons and her sons, on a forty-acre tract in Clear Lake Township, which she owns. She and her husband had five sons and five daughters, six of whom are now living: John E., also lives at home; George B., also lives at home; Margaret, wife of Andrew Reynolds, of Benton, Mo.; Luna R., and Charles D., farmers of Rochester Township; Elizabeth, wife of Richard Smith, of Springfield. There are twenty-one living grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Coons was a consistent member of the Baptist Church and died firm in its faith. He had been a liberal contributor and was missed from its congregation. The Republican candidates received his vote and he earnestly supported the principles of his party. He was quiet and unostentatious and was devoted to his family. He worked hard all his life and was well satisfied with his surroundings. His memory is kept green in the hearts of his widow and children, who knew and appreciated his many virtues.

COOPER, David D. (deceased)—What the earlier farmers of Sangamon County accomplished during the years they struggled with the many disadvantages always present in an undeveloped country, no mere words will describe. That they succeeded, probably far beyond their wildest hopes, existing conditions prove, but not enough gratitude is shown for their work, their privations and their plans, laid with such care that those who have succeeded them, are able to carry them out without trouble. One of these men, whose names are remembered with respect and veneration, is the late David D. Cooper, formerly a farmer of Section 29, Williams Township. He was born near Sherman, Sangamon County, August 10, 1829, being a son of Meredith Cooper, of Tennessee, where he married.

The parents came from Tennessee to Illinois, making the trip on horse back. They carried a feather bed, and slept on it in the open air. Reaching Sangamon County, they located on a farm in Sherman, where they developed a farm, brought up their nine children, and lived out their useful lives. During the Black Hawk War, the father defended his brood and community by enlisting, and was one of the honest, sturdy old pioneers of this county.

Growing up amid strictly pioneer conditions, struggling for every advantage, David D. Cooper developed a fine character. While attending the primitive schools of his day he did a man's work on the homestead, rendering his father loyal and efficient service. Over fifty years ago he bought thirty acres of land in Section 29, Williams Township, where his demise took place March 8, 1900. His widow still resides on the farm his loving care provided for her, surrounded by the comforts of life.

On May 17, 1855, Mr. Cooper was married in Williams Township, to Juliette Withrow, born in Macoupin County, March 22, 1840. Her father was born in Kentucky, where he married, and with his wife came to Illinois at an early day, settling five miles southwest of Springfield, and later moved to Williams Township where they died. There were three sons and three daughters in the family, Mrs. Cooper being the only survivor. Five sons and three daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, six of whom survive: Mrs. Susie C. Wright, widow of Walter Wright, resides in Riverton; James A. resides in Roodhouse, Ill.; Mary D., wife of N. Huffman, resides near Dawson; Eugene resides near Sherman; Augustus resides at home with his mother; Myrtle E., wife of William Giadden, resides in Hayworth, Ill.

Mr. Cooper belonged to the Methodist Church, and took much comfort in his religious associations. His life was ordered according to the creed of his church and he lived and died a true Christian. His widow belongs to the same religious denomination. In politics he was a Democrat and faithfully supported the candidates of his party. Steadfast of purpose, earnest in his work, Mr. Cooper rounded out a useful life and left behind him the memory of many kindly deeds, numerous acts of charity and a general uprightness of living that had its influence not only upon his immediate family, but upon all with whom he came in contact.

COOPER, Robert V. (deceased).—The Cooper family is one which bore a prominent part in the settlement and development of Sangamon County, its representatives having continued to carry on the farm and keep the felled, the prairies planted, roads developed from Indian trails, and eventually Sangamon County was made over into one of the most progressive portions of the mighty Commonwealth we are all proud to own as our State. The late Robert V. Cooper, although not himself a pioneer, for he was born in the county, July 10, 1834, participated in much of the early settlement work, and suffered with the others all the privations and dangers of those days. He made his home on Section 32, Williams Township for many years prior to his death, and was one of the best known men of the county. Mr. Cooper was a son of Meredith and Polly (Witcher) Cooper, both of Tennessee.

The parents came to Illinois at a very early day at a time when land could be obtained for $1.25 per acre, settling on a farm which lay along the Sangamon River. Several years later they came to the farm near the one now owned by the widow of Robert V. Cooper, and both died there. They were parents of twelve children, but only one, Ambrose Cooper, of Missouri, survives. During the Black Hawk War Meredith Cooper served as a soldier, for Indian atrocities were very real in those days and the men of Sangamon, although not in a direct line of most of the trouble, felt very uneasy for the safety of their families.

Robert V. Cooper was educated in Williams Township and worked on the farm for his father, spending his entire life in this township, with the exception of two years when he lived in Kansas. While in that State he was a Justice of the Peace and was conscripted into the Southern Army, but was fortunate enough to escape service. Returning to Sangamon County, he resumed farming on the homestead, where his death occurred, January 13, 1888.

Mr. Cooper was married in Riverton, Ill., February 9, 1864, to Lavina H. Garner, born in Washington County, Ind., July 20, 1844, a daughter of A. S. Garner, who was born in Tennessee, but his wife was a native of Indiana. Mr. Garner moved from Tennessee to Virginia, where he married, and in 1856 went to Indiana, remaining in Madison County for a short time. Later he came to Sangamon County and settled in Williams Township, two miles from Williamsville, where he operated a farm for two years, then moved to a farm near Mr. Cooper's. Later he bought a farm near Sherman and lived on it until his death in 1876. His wife had died in 1854, having borne him four children, two of whom survive. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper had no issue. Mrs. Cooper is proud of the fact that her great-grandfather, John Smith, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, being a body guard of General Washington. Her grandfather, Elijah Smith, marched on a battle field, when families were gathered on the field, and was named by General Washington. Mrs. Cooper rode on the first engine run over the Chicago & Alton Railroad, from Williamsville to Springfield. As she remembers much of the early history of this locality, her conversation is very entertaining. Abraham Lincoln was a familiar figure to her, as was Stephen A. Douglas, and other great men of the period. Further than this, Mrs. Cooper had the pleasure of being in Mr. Lincoln's office after his election to the presidency for the first time, and shook hands with him, proffering her congratulations, which he appreciated and accepted in his characteristic manner. The farm of forty acres owned by Mrs. Cooper on Section 32, Williams Township, is numbered among the most valuable in the township.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cooper early joined the Methodist Church, and Mr. Cooper died, as he had lived, firm in its faith, a true Christian gentleman. In politics Mr. Cooper was a Democrat. He was a man of kindly disposition, whose many charities were distributed in secret, for he was retiring by nature, and preferred to do good without publishing it to the world. The family with all of its connections is well known here, as are the connections of Mrs. Cooper, and all are highly esteemed.

COPPLE, Jacob.—One of the men who through long years of hard work and careful saving accumulated property sufficient to keep him in comfort the rest of his life, is Jacob Copple, residing at No. 2106 East Cook Street, Springfield, who was born in Indiana, March 12, 1822, a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Copple, both natives of Indiana. The parents came to Illinois at a very early date, spent a short time in Sangamon County, then removed to a farm in Christian County. They rented land in Christian County and lived there until the mother died. The father died one year later. Three of the several children of the family survive: Jacob; Matthew, a farmer of Mechanicsburg Township; and Bessie Warcutt, of Galveston, Tex.

Jacob Copple received a common school education and after leaving school engaged in farming. He farmed in Christian County for some years and then began farming in Mechanicsburg Township. He continued until his retirement to Springfield in 1897. He then purchased his present residence, where he lives in well-earned retirement.

Mr. Copple was married in Montgomery County, Kan., in 1852, to Mrs. Amanda (Kelly) Wilson, daughter of William Kelly and widow of Solomon Wilson. She was born in Mechanicsburg Township, March 12, 1840. Her parents were farmers of the township, and there died. By her first marriage, Mrs. Cupple had ten children, those living being: James, of Leavenworth, Kan.; Louis, of Oklahoma; John, of Springfield; Luther, living in the west; Solomon, of Joplin, Mo. and Mrs. Cupple had one child now deceased. Mrs. Cupple has twenty-four grandchildren.

Mr. Cupple owns his home and is a man of means. He belongs to the Christian Church, as does his wife. The Republican party expresses his political views and he gives its candidates his support.

CORDES, Michel.—Germany has contributed much towards the citizenship of the United States, and emigrants from the Fatherland have invariably turned out to be thrifty, honest and energetic, ready to do their share in the advancement of the interests of their adopted country and, by making the best of the opportunities offered them, winning success in whatever line of endeavor they have adopted. Michel Cordes, a self-made man, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits on a farm of 247 acres on Section 7, Gardner Township, is a German-American citizen, born January 26, 1851, in Horsten, a son of Schwur and Anke Mary (Helmearch) Cordes.

The father of Michel Cordes was a weaver by trade and also had a small farm in his native land, where he and his wife died about 1833. They had five children, as follows: Mary, the wife of Heinrich Gebhardts; Annie, the wife of Albert Behrends; Johanna, the wife of Dietrich Harms, a farmer of Gardner Township; Amet, the wife of Gerhard Ghrilten, a farmer in Curran Township; and Michel.

Michel Cordes received his education in the schools of his native land, and went away from the time he was six until he was fourteen years old. After leaving school he started to learn the trade of weaver, but not liking this trade, went to work on his father's farm, on which he continued until he was twenty years old. In 1871, hearing of the opportunities offered to the ambitious young man in America, he decided to visit the New World, intending to return to Germany in two years if he was not satisfied with conditions as he found them. He left home in August, 1871, and after a voyage of twelve days landed in New York, whence he came to Illinois, locating at Eureka, Woodford County, but two weeks later went to work for a German farmer. Herman Harms. In the spring of 1872 he worked for various parties, earning good pay, and in 1873 secured employment on the farm of Isaac Reding, near Taliula, Ill., with whom he continued until the winter of 1876. In the spring of 1875 Mr. Cordes had been married to Miss Gerhardina Hussmann, who was born in Eitzel, Germany, where her parents had both died. Mrs. Cordes' only sister, Johanna, married Reppe Heinrichs, remained in Germany, and had two sons, one of whom is living with her in the Fatherland and the other, Henry Heinrichs, is a farmer in Bethel Township, McDonough County, Ill.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Cordes rented a farm near Salisbury, in Salisbury Township, and continued thereon until 1877, when they removed to the farm of a Mr. Pierce in the same township, but in 1879 again moved, renting the farm of John Watts, a tract of 160 acres located in Cartwright Township, in company with two other parties. In 1880 Mr. Cordes decided to rent on his own account and subsequently located on the 200-acre farm of John N. Watts, and for thirteen years continued to reside there, being very successful in his operations. Having saved some money, Mr. Cordes then purchased 247 acres of land on Section 7, Gardner Township, paying $75 per acre, and there he has continued to reside to the present time. Coming to this country practically penniless, Mr. Cordes has worked his way to the front ranks of the substantial men of his community by perseverance, good management and honest dealing, and his farm is now one of the best in his section of the country, the brush has been cleared, the land fertilized so that it yields fine crops, and the farm stocked with fine horses, cattle and hogs, of the latter the Duroc-Jersey being Mr. Cordes' favorite breed. During the forty years that he has resided in Sangamon County he has established a record for uprightness of character, and is esteemed and respected by all. In 1880 Mr. and Mrs. Cordes are consistent members of the Lutheran Church, and in 1881 he was elected, by the local farmers, a member of the District School Board, in 1883 he was elected, by the farmers of Cartwright and Breakfast Townships, a member of the Township Board, where he has thus far served with good effect.

Mr. and Mrs. Cordes have been the parents of five children, as follows: Schwur Albert, born November 15, 1876, now assisting his father in the cultivation of the home farm; Herman H., born November 14, 1879, a farmer in Cartwright Township, married Anna Wilms, has a daughter, Louise; Anna M., born September 19, 1882, married Dietrich W. Evers, a farmer in Greenville, McLean County; Johanna C., born October 11, 1886, living at home; and Margaretta, Gerhardtine, born May 15, 1892, died September 25, 1906.

CORRELL, Charles David.—A seven hundred acre farm is a large one to be operated by one man, and yet so thoroughly have modern methods been installed in Sangamon County that progressive agriculturists there do not find the duties too onerous, assisted as they are by sons or efficient hired men. Such a property is owned by Charles David Correll of Section 18, Uliopolis Township. He was born in the village of Uliopolis, September 30, 1878, being a son of David and Sarah Elizabeth (Peden) Correll, the former born in Mechanicsburg Township, September 3, 1835, and the latter in Zanesville, O., October 19, 1856. The father was a farmer and stock raiser all his life. The granddaddy on the paternal side of the house moved to Sangamon County at an early date, and helped in its development, being numbered among the pioneers of those times.

Mr. Correll, of this record, received an excellent education, attending ward schools at Springfield and Decatur, and graduated from Whipple Academy at Jacksonville, from a two-years course at Illinois College at Jacksonville, and graduated in law from the legal department of the University of Michigan.

On January 27, 1904, he married Violet Jane Rule, born January 23, 1887, in Pioneer, Iowa, daughter of Thomas O. and Barbara (Dann) Rule. The children of Correll and Mr. Correll are: Charles, born November 11, 1904; Barbara Isabelle, born December 20, 1906, and an infant born August 5, 1911. Since his marriage Mr. Correll has lived on his farm. It contains 700 acres and he devotes it to raising stock for the market. The old tavern, or half-way house, used to stand near the spot where stands his high comfortable and handsome residence, some 300 yards back from the road, on a high knoll, which overlooks the surrounding country. The house is modern and well adapted for comfortable living.

Since March, 1910, Mr. Correll has been President of Uliopolis Bank. Fifteen years ago he joined Company I, Fifth Regiment, Illinois National Guard, and served three years. He belonged to the Uliopolis Lodge No. 521, A. F. & A. M., since 1899, and eleven years ago connected himself with Kedron Chapter. In 1900 he joined Lodge of Perfection; in 1910, Rose St. C. and Prince of Jerusalem. While not taking any active part in politics Mr. Correll generally votes the Democratic ticket. He is a member of the Methodist Church. Leading a quiet, eventless life, Mr. Correll is contented with his lot and well he may be, for he stands very high in his community, and has a fine farm and a delightful family, while his surroundings are as pleasant as any man could ask.

COULTER, Earl C., was born in New Berlin, Ill., January 31, 1876, and is a son of Frank G. and Mary C. Coulter. He is a grandson of Francis Taylor, who was one of the pioneers, having come from Bridgeport, Conn., to Sangamon County in the autumn of 1859.

Mr. Coulter spent his boyhood days on his father's farm and received his education in the public school of New Berlin, graduating from the High School in the class of 1893. After finishing school he remained on the home farm until he reached his majority, when he rented some land west of New Berlin and started life on his own account, with a determination to make the best of his opportunities, and with several years of valuable farming experience to his credit.

In 1901 Mr. Coulter purchased eighty acres of land situated in Section 21 of his native township and built thereon a home, where he still resides. His first house was destroyed by fire in the winter 1906 but in 1906 he erected a very comfortable and handsome residence to replace the old one. He has excellent buildings on his farm for sheltering his stock and also his farming implements. He has always been a great lover of good horses, and has given considerable attention to the breeding of mules. In 1910, in partnership with Charles Shuff, he purchased a celebrated jack known as "High Tide," standing 14½ hands high and black in color, which at the age of two years weighed 1,050 pounds, and was the winner of the highest award in the two-year-old class and also winner of the award in the grand champion exhibit for all ages at the Illinois State Fair in the same year. Mr. Coulter and Mr. Shuff also purchased a purebred Percheron stallion, weighing 1,500 pounds, known as "Lee." Both the jack and the stallion are kept on Mr. Coulter's farm, which is known as "Clover Leaf Farm."

Mr. Coulter has always been devoted to farm life and has always taken great pride in keeping a very comfortable and wholesome environment on his place. He is a leader in this line and is a leader in stock-raising in his part of the county. He has brought his eighty acre farm to a high state of cultivation and is known as a hustling, energetic young man, whose success is the result of unflinching perseverance and good judgment. He takes a deep interest in every public enterprise, and is always to be found on the side of right. Renared by a devout Christian mother, he united with the Presbyterian Church early in life, and has for years been a supporter of the church and of the moral uplift of the community.

In politics Mr. Coulter is a staunch Republican and he was one of the Yates delegates to the State Convention made famous by the deadlock which lasted twenty-five days. He is President of the Sangamon County Farmers Institute and is a gentleman in the highest sense of the term and a man of earnest purpose and endeavor.

He has spent his entire life in New Berlin Township, where he has many warm personal friends and well wishers.

COUNCIL, Alvin, belongs to one of the oldest families of Sangamon County, his grandfather owning property in the township as early as 1819. He was born on the Council house stand, on the Springfield and Peoria turnpike, near his present home, May 19, 1873, son of George Washington and Olivia Laura (Miller) Council. The father was born August 6, 1834, and the mother, a native of West Liberty, Ohio, was born February 17, 1851, and they were married March 24, 1883, locating on the farm where his parents settled in 1819. George W. Council enlisted October 25, 1862, in Company B, One Hundred Thirtieth Illinois Infantry, for three years, and was transferred to Company G, First New Orleans Volunteer Infantry, in which he served nearly a year after the close of the war, then was honorably discharged.

Hardy Council, father of George W., was born near Tarboro, N. C., September 20, 1793, was taken by his parents to Tennessee, thence to Barren County, Ky., and subsequently to White County, Ill. He was there married in 1816 to Jane Hanna, who was born in Kentucky, February 25, 1795, and the next year they came to Sangamon County on horseback, arriving there in August, 1819, and locating in what became Fancy Creek Township, Mrs. Council met him here with her, on her horse, a sack of wheat and many household implements, and Mr. Council carried what farming tools and implements he was able to bring. He built a rough cabin and, unable to obtain a plow, took a grubbing hoe, or old-fashioned mattock, and dug up about an acre and a half of land, on which he sowed the wheat his wife had carried, and reaped a good crop. When the land was surveyed there was a line between his cabin and the ground where he had raised his crop, and he was able to enter but one piece, choosing the one containing his habitation. He and Robert McClelland, who came at the same time as himself, cut a large amount of grass, which they stacked for their horses and cattle, but not being aware of the danger from Prairie fires, were unprepared for such a contingency, and before they knew it their hay was all burned. They fed their stock by cutting down elm trees so they could eat the buds. He and his wife had seven sons born on the farm, of whom five reached maturity: John H., Vernon, William E., Robert and George W. Hardy Council and his wife both died in Sangamon County, he July 26, 1873, and she March 30, 1863.

Alvin Council received his education in the public schools and early chose the occupation of farming, in which he has always met with gratifying success. He became associated with his father in farming and stock raising. He has lived twelve years on his present place, which contains two hundred ninety acres of good farm land, and although for the past five years he has been unable to take an active part in its cultivation, still lives there and superintends the work. He belongs to the Methodist Church and is a Republican in political belief. He is a progressive and enterprising citizen and interested in every movement for the general welfare and prosperity. He served some six years as School Director, but otherwise has held no public office. He is the best known man in the community, where he has a large number of friends.

Mr. Council was married January 17, 1898, to Rita Kate Barber, also a native of Fancy Creek Township, born April 12, 1877, daughter of Andrew Jackson and Margaret Elizabeth (Lake) Barber, her father a native of Virginia, born in Fauquier County, October 5, 1836, and her mother born in Fancy Creek Township, December 15, 1843. The grandfather of Mrs. Council, Bayliss G. Lake, was born in Fauquier County, Va., November 1, 1795, and was married in Frederick County, October 5, 1820, to Eliza Glasscock, born in Loudoun County, October 31, 1800. They moved to Clark County, Ohio, where three children were born. Bayliss G. Lake and John McBeth started April 3, 1827, on foot, to see Illinois, and arrived at Springfield, April 14th. After spending a month with some friends in Sangamon County, Mr. Lake made an engagement to help herd some cattle and drive them east, and arrived home in June of that year with many more than he had when he started. He returned to Sangamon County with his family, taking a wagon drawn by four horses, and arriving in the fall of 1827, in what became Fancy Creek Township, where he and his wife had six more children.

Two children have been born to Alvin Council and wife, Florence Bessie, October 3, 1906, and Harold Barber, February 28, 1901.

COUNCIL, Emerson, is one of the younger farmers who have wou success in Sangamou County, and owns the Council family homestead in Section 12, Fancy Creek Township, which place was secured in 1819 by his grandfather, Hardy Council, one of the earliest settlers of the locality. Emerson Council was born on this farm July 27, 1855, son of George Washington and Olivia Laura (Miller) Council, the father born on the family homestead, August 6, 1834, and the mother born at West Liberty, Ohio, February 17, 1851. They were married March 24, 1868, and located on his father's farm. George W. Council enlisted October 25, 1862, in Company B, One Hundred Thirtieth Illinois Infantry, for three years, and was transferred to Company G, First New Orleans Volunteer Infantry, in which he was Second Lieutenant, and served in that capacity until nearly one year after the close of the war, being then honorably discharged. He and his wife became parents of the following children: Clifford, Ids E, Alvin, born May 19, 1873, a sketch of whom appears in this work; Emerson. The family was established in Sangamon County by Hardy Council, who was a native of North Carolina, and prominent among the first farmers of Sangamon County, a full account of whom appears in connected with the sketch of Alvin Council in this work.

In boyhood Emerson Council attended public school and helped with the work on the home farm. He has never cared for other occupations than farming and has studied the needs and possibilities of Sangamon County land. He enjoys a quiet, peaceful life and has a comfortable home. He is progressive along all lines of agriculture and stock-raising, and is the owner of a desirable farm. He is well known and popular among his neighbors and associates, and is interested in local affairs, although taking no active part in politics. He is a Republican in his views and has been a member of the I. O. O. F. for four years. In religious belief he is a Methodist, being a member of the church at Sherman. He is unmarried.

COX, Thomas, a section foreman for the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company and one of the most faithful employees of that system, is a reliable and well-known resident of Springfield, living on West Mason Street. He was born in Belfast, County Derry, Ireland, November 11, 1850, a son of Thomas and Mary (Lamb) Cox, both natives of Ireland, who lived and died on the family farm in that country. One of their daughters resides in Belfast, Ireland, and she and Thomas are all who now survive.

After a common school education received in Ireland, Thomas Cox was brought by an aunt to America, when only eleven years old. They landed in Boston, whence they went to Warren County, N. J., where the lad found work with a farmer. Later he entered the employ of the Delaware & Lackawanna Railroad, in New Jersey, but in 1860 came to Illinois, settling in Chicago, where he remained for a time. He then worked in the stone quarries near Joliet, and about 1866 he entered the employ of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, remaining with them for a time. He was then with the Big Four as section foreman at Carbon, Ind., but in 1900 returned to the Chicago & Alton at Springfield, and is now in their employ.

In November, 1888, he was united in marriage, in Springfield, to Miss Mary Fogarty, born near Farmingdale, Ill., a daughter of Irish-born parents, who settled there at an early day. Mr. Fogarty was a farmer for many years, but later worked for the Buffalo & Ohio Railroad Company, continuing in their employ until his death. His widow survives him, making her home in Farmingdale. She and her husband had six sons and five daughters, of whom four survive. Mr. and Mrs. Cox have no children. He is a Democrat and belongs to the Modern Woodmen. He and his wife are Roman Catholics and belong to the St. Agnes parish. Mr. Cox is a solid, responsible man, who has many friends and deserves the prosperity which is his.

COX, Thomas. (Vol. I, p. 123.)

CRAIG, John Newton, a well known and successful farmer of Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War, having served three years in the Confederate Army. He was a brave and faithful soldier, and (though in the light of subsequent events he feels he should have been enlisted for the other side) did his full duty as he then saw it, and is worthy of credit and honor for the part he played in the struggle. Mr. Craig is a native of Scotland, born August 7, 1836, son of James and Martha (Arbuckle) Craig, both also born in Scotland. The parents were farmers and came to America in 1847, landing at Quebec, where the mother died while in quarantine. The father moved farther west and his death occurred at Guelph, Canada, during the same year. They were parents of four children, all of whom survive, namely: Daniel, John N., John D. and Jennie. The Craigs were descended from an old English family, of royal descent, and the grandparents of John N. Craig died in England.

The boyhood of John N. Craig was spent on a farm and he received his early education in the Canadian schools. He afterward attended Tennessee College in Giles County, Tenn., and also studied in night school in Louisville, Ky. He moved from Canada to Michigan, thence to Springfield, Ill., and then to Pulaski, Tenn., and was living at the latter place at the beginning of the Civil War. He enlisted in Company K, First Tennessee, Captain C. Fields, under the command of George Manney, and served from 1861 until 1863, leaving the service after the Battle of Chickamauga. He was wounded at the Battle of Perryville and taken prisoner, but soon afterward exchanged. The important battles in which he participated included: Shiloh, Perryville, Chickamauga, Greenbrier, Cheat Mountain and many skirmishes.

As a young man Mr. Craig learned the trade of cabinet-making, but has spent most of his life in agricultural pursuits. He has always been fond of outdoor life and as a boy liked all kinds of sport. He was married (first) in 1860, in Springfield, Ill., to Jennie Dowling, and they became parents of children as follows: James S. and Flora, both of whom are deceased and are buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Mr. Craig was married (second) in Springfield, in 1880, by Rev. Hale, to Mary Ann Murphy, born in Ireland, daughter of William and Ann (Hill) Murphy, and one of the latter of whom died in Illinois. Five children were born to Mr. Craig and his second wife, as follows: William H., born May 7, 1881, married Dora Hyle and they live in Chicago; John Arbuckle and Alexander, twins, born August 17, 1883; Matilda Bess, August 17, 1886, and Jennie Lind, August 12, 1888. All were reared and educated in Sangamon County and all survive. The family are members of the Methodist Church. Mr. Craig is held in high esteem by all and is considered an industrious, useful citizen. He served sixteen years as Justice of the Peace of Cotton Hill Township. He owns eighty-five acres of fertile land where he lives and carries on general farming. He is honest and upright in all his dealings and interested in the welfare and progress of the community.

CRANE, James L. (Vol. I, p. 605.)

rious lines in Sangamon County, Ill., mention should be made of the late James Crawley, who for many years was engaged in agricultural pursuits and in blacksmithing on Sections 3 and 7, Ball Township. He was born in McLean County, Ill., in 1840, a son of Conrad and Elizabeth (McClellan) Crawley, natives of Missouri, where the latter died, the former passing away in Menard County, Ill. Mr. Crawley's grandparents on the paternal side were Missourians and spent their entire lives in their native state, while his Grandfather McClellan came to Sangamon County, and there his death occurred.

James Crawley secured his education in the country schools of Sangamon County, Ill., and his boyhood was spent on the home farm. As a youth he engaged in blacksmithing and lived with his parents, who were Abolitionists. Mr. Crawley was living in Illinois when the Civil War broke out and enlisted in Company I, Seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which organization he served until the close of the war, being mustered out July 8, 1865, at Springfield, at which time he had risen to the rank of Sergeant. During his army service Mr. Crawley engaged in many desperate battles, including Corinth, Chatanooga, Nashville and Clarksville, and he was twice wounded, once in the arm and once in the head. After returning from the war Mr. Crawley again engaged in blacksmithing and farming, and his widow was living on the farm of fifty-eight acres situated on Sections 1 and 2 in Ball Township, Ill., when he died.

Mr. Crawley was a Republican in politics, but could never be induced to accept any position of public preferment. His family are members of the Christian Church and, while he was never a member of any religious denomination, he was always charitably inclined and supported the Christian Church to the extent of his financial ability. Mr. Crawley was a popular comrade of A. J. Weber Post, Grand Army of the Republic, at Pawnee, Ill.

Mr. Crawley was married in Sangamon County, Ill., December 7, 1865, to Elizabeth Shoup, who was born in the county June 18, 1840, daughter of Timothy and Mary (Keyes) Shoup, natives of Ohio, who died in Sangamon County, both being buried in Newcomer Cemetery. Mrs. Crawley's grandparents on both sides of her family were natives of Ohio, who came as agriculturists to Sangamon County, Ill., and there they lived.

To Mr. and Mrs. Crawley were born three children, as follows: Mary Edna, born September 11, 1866, married J. T. Weston, resides in Springfield, Ill., and has one son, Harry, who married Martha Schafer, of Chicago, by whom he had a child who died in infancy, and they now reside in St. Louis; John E., born April 14, 1868, married April 27, 1888, Sarah A. Young, born in Sangamon County, January 21, 1879, and they live on the old home place and have two children, Gracey May, born January 25, 1890, and Ernest Leo, born July 14, 1900; and Clara May, born July 9, 1876, married Edward Rohrer, now a well-known agriculturalist carrying on operations in Sangamon County, and they have three children—Elmer (born August 12, 1891), Leroy (born January 12, 1896), and Irene J. (born April 4, 1890).

CREAMER, Patrick.—Some of the most brilliant men this country has ever had were either born in Ireland or came of Irish parentage. Not only are they successful in a business way, but they dominate politics and make friends wherever found. Sangamon County, fortunately, has many of these genial, pleasant sons of Erin, and one who has friends all over this part of the state is Patrick Creamer, now living retired in his pleasant home in Illiopolis. Mr. Creamer was born in the western part of Ireland, in 1833, being a son of Michael and Ann (McCargy) Creamer, natives of that country. Neither of his parents came to America, but passed away in Ireland. Of their large family Mr. Creamer is the only one now living in Sangamon. Growing up on the farm in Ireland, Mr. Creamer attended the parish school, but was not at all satisfied with his opportunities, so in 1848 left home, going first to Liverpool, whence he sailed to New York. Arriving in that city he spent a week there, then went south to Philadelphia, where he arrived, February 12, 1849. This continued his home until 1858. During this time he worked along different lines, finally leaving for Chester County, Pa., to farm. Returning to Philadelphia, he remained there a short time, then came west to Elklat, Logan County, Ill., where he worked on various farms for nine years, but during this time bravely served his adopted country, entering in 1852 into the Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was discharged on account of illness. Returning to Sangamon County, he resumed his farming. By saving his money he was able to buy land, now owning eighty acres in addition to his home in Iliopolis. This farm he operated until his retirement in 1896, since which time he has taken life more easily.

The marriage of Mr. Creamer occurred in Philadelphia, January 31, 1866, to Mary McCabe, born in Ireland. Both of her parents came to America, settling first in Logan County, but several years later moving to Sangamon County, where they bought a farm, making it their home until death claimed them. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Creamer, who died in infancy.

The Democratic party has always found a stanch supporter in Mr. Creamer, but he has never cared to run for office although his personal popularity would doubtless cause him to run ahead of his ticket. Since childhood Mr. Creamer has been a consistent member of the Roman Catholic Church, and the parish priest of Illiopolis finds in him an able lay assistant in religious work.

The records of the lives of those men who came to Sangamon County before it had attained its present importance, show how much the people of today owe to those who prepared the way. Farming in early days was not the profitable business it is today, nor was it prosecuted so easily. There was but little demand for products and prices were low. Transportation to the larger cities was costly, so the farmer of half a century ago did not expect to do much more than make a bare living. This being true, it is easy to recognize what sacrifices were entailed so that even little might be saved. Literally, penny by penny was the necessary money accumulated to make a payment on a bit of land. Once it was owned there came the hard work of, breaking the soil, planting the seed, harvesting, and then, most difficult of all, finding for the grain a good market. No wonder farmers of those days wore out and are now enjoying a much-deserved rest, retired from business worries.

CREIGHTON, James A. (Vol. I, p. 124.)

CRISSEY, Stephen T.—Agricultural conditions in Sangamon County, Ill., have changed greatly during the past twenty-five or thirty years, and even the farmer of a decade ago is surprised by the innovations he finds when he makes a trip to a farm, the operation of which he has turned over to other hands. Methods, machinery and ideas have improved, with the result that better crops are grown and the farmers work economics more and more a thing of machinery, to replace the hard physical labor of a few years ago. One man who has seen the various changes in the calling of farming is Stephen T. Crissey, a venerable citizen of Springfield, and a veteran of the Civil War, who was for thirty years engaged in agricultural pursuits in the county. Mr. Crissey was born in Westchester County, N. Y., March 20, 1838, and is a son of Alva and Julia A. (Tuttle) Crissey, natives of Bedford, N. Y., where the former was born in 1797 and the latter in 1807. The family resided in Westchester County until 1854, at which time they moved to Bates, Ill., sixteen miles west of Springfield, and after spending two years there moved to a farm near Springfield, where Mr. Crissey's parents died. His paternal grandfather fought during the American Revolution.

Stephen T. Crissey received his education in the country schools of his native locality, after leaving which he went to learn the printer's trade in New York City, and worked there for a short time. He came West with his parents in 1854, and there continued to farm for many years, retiring in 1890, when he came to Springfield. He owns a comfortable home at No. 1227 West Lawrence Avenue, in addition to a large farm and fruit orchard, and is considered one of the substantial men of his community. Mr. Crissey has always been a staunch Republican and has served a number of terms as School Director. In 1860, while living in Loami, Ill., Mr. Crissey took part in a political parade as a member of the "Wide Awake Marching Club," which went from that town to Springfield, the procession carrying a large flag and marching in the yard of Abraham Lincoln's home, and serenaded Lincoln at the ratification of his nomination. He showed his patriotism later by enlisting in Company B One Hundred Thirteenth United States Infantry, from Bunker Hill, Ill., and was a prisoner at the Confederate prison in Smith County, Tex., at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln. In August, 1865, he was mustered out of service, his time having expired. He is a member of Stephens-son Post No. 30, Grand Army of the Republic. His religious affiliation is with the Methodist Church.

On April 2, 1879, Mr. Crissey was married in Springfield to Emma Duey, who was born in Clupensburg, Pa., in 1850, and whose parents, Philip and Catherine (Dunbar) Duey, natives of same place, were farming people, and came to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1866. Both died there. Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Crissey the following are living: Eliza, a pattern-maker at a mill, which was deposited on South Eleventh Street; Lula, wife of Harry Roundtree, in the employ of the Bruce Searles Piano Company; May, wife of George Henze, a cigar manufacturer of Jacksonville, Ill.; and Florence, wife of Frank Williams, in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company at Springfield, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Crissey have thirteen grandchildren.

CRISSEY, William Henry (deceased), who was for many years a carpenter and builder of Springfield, Ill., was born in Westchester County, N. Y., February 5, 1828, and spent his childhood and youth in his native State, where he received his education. He was a son of Benjamin and Julia (Tuttle) Crissey, the former a native of Westchester County and a shoemaker by trade. After leaving school William H. Crissey engaged in farming and in 1852 came to Illinois, locating on the Ketcham farm in Sangamon County. This farm contained 3,500 acres and Mr. Crissey was engaged in farming on it as assistant manager. In 1864 he located in Springfield, which has since been the family home, and soon became engaged in carpenter work. He later began contracting on his own account and became very successful in this line of enterprise. Mr. Crissey was married in Westport, Conn., December 17, 1851, to Miss Hannah Jennings Lockwood, who was born in that State, August 2, 1832, daughter of Samuel and Susan Julia (Bunell) Lockwood, both natives of Connecticut. Ten children were born to Mr. Crissey and his wife, of whom five survive, namely: Frank L., a contractor residing in Springfield;
Hattie R., unmarried and living at home with her mother; Nellie M., wife of Frank R. Rogers, resides in Springfield, and have two children—Hattie E., wife of Herbert L. Moore, and F. Donald, resides in Springfield: Susie married Frank P. Gayle, lives in Chicago, and they have one child, Frank W.; Frederick, of Springfield, is married and has five children—Norman H., Harold E., Frederick, Robert and Howard, all at home except Norman and Harold, who attend school.

Mr. Crissey was a member of the First Methodist Church at Fifth and Monroe Streets, Springfield, and in politics was a stanch Republican, although he never took a very active part in public affairs. He was an expert carpenter and won an excellent business reputation. He was a man of social instincts and had many friends, who genuinely mourned his loss. He was devoted to his family and always solicitous of their welfare. Mr. Crissey died in Springfield, December 19, 1879, and his remains were buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

CROOK, Alija Robinson, Ph. D., traveler, educator, author and scientist, on December 15, 1906, became Curator of the Illinois State Museum of Natural History, at Springfield. Heredity and environment both had their influence in shaping the life and career of one who for years has reflected honor upon the State of Illinois. The story of his ancestors is interwoven with the early settlement of New England, and he is a direct descendant of William Bradford, the second Governor of the Plymouth Colony. Of the same family came Major-General George Crook, of military fame.

Alija Robinson Crook was born at Circleville, Ohio, June 17, 1864, a son of Rev. Isaac and Emma (Wilson) Crook. Dr. Isaac Crook was born at Crossenville, Perry County, Ohio, December 9, 1833, and is a native of Kentucky, Wash. He married Emma Wilson, who was born at Delaware, Ohio, November 10, 1836, both he and his wife were graduated from the Ohio Wesleyan University, and he has the degrees of A. M., D. D. and LL. D. For many years he was a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for a number of years was President of the Ohio Wesleyan University, at Athens, Ohio. At the time of his superannuation, he was Presiding Elder of the Chillicothe (Ohio) District. He was a Delegate to the General Conferences and to the Ecumenical Conferences held at Washington and the World's Missionary Conference at Edinburg. He is the author of a number of works, the best known perhaps being: "Jonathan Edwards," "John Knox," and "The Great Expectation," and as a contributor to numerous magazines.

Alija R. Crook secured his degree of A. B. at Ohio Wesleyan University in 1887, and further pursued his studies at Berlin, Zurich and Munich, receiving the degree of Ph. D. at Munich University in 1902. Subsequently, he was a special student in the British Museum, the Jardin des Plantes and the Brussels Museum, but prior to this, he had been superintendent of the public schools of Mt. Carmel, Ohio. After three years of study in German universities he became professor of natural history at Wheaton (Ill.) College, and continued there until 1893, then became professor of mineralogy and economic geology, at Northwestern University, at Evanston, Ill., where he remained until 1906, when he accepted the position of Curator of the Museum of Natural History in Springfield. Prof. Crook has traveled extensively and has written much, while as a lecturer he has appeared before many scientific bodies, his knowledge of numerous subjects having been obtained first hand. He has climbed Mt. Blanc, Orizaba, and other peaks, has been a member of numerous scientific expeditions, and has personally visited almost every part of the United States and Mexico, and has also made trips to Siberia and Asia Minor. In order to be able to enjoy many of these expeditions and take an able part in the work then done, Prof. Crook has found it necessary to be something of an athlete, and acknowledges a fondness for aquatic and ice sports, also being a tennis player of no small skill.

December 28, 1904, Prof. Crook married, at Chillicothe, Ohio, Miss Florence Wayne Purdum, who was born at that place December 4, 1875. They have three children, Elinor, born August 27, 1907; William Henry, born January 10, 1909, and Robert Purdum, born May 23, 1911. Prof. and Mrs. Crook are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In his political convictions, he is a Republican, and it is a part of his creed that a public office is a public trust. For fraternal organizations in general, he has never had any taste, but he is identified with a number of scientific bodies, and retains his interest in his old college Greek fraternity. He was twice resident and twice President of the Science Club of the Northwestern University; was twice Honorary Curator of the Chicago Academy of Sciences; is a member of the Sigma XI, (an honorary scientific society); belongs to the National Geological Society and the Academy of Sciences of St. Louis; is a Fellow of the A. A. A. S., a Fellow of the Geological Society of America; Mitglied Der Deutschen Geologischen Gesellschaft. He was the organizer of the State Academy of Science, and its Secretary during 1907-10.

CROWDER, James H. (deceased).—Kentucky has given to Illinois some of its best citizens. The people of the Blue Grass State came of pioneer stock that pushed bravely into the wilderness and redeemed it from the savages. When the offspring of these pioneers grew to maturity the same love of adventure, the same longing to carve out new homes, assailed them, and they in turn sought new territory, and thus many of them came to Illinois, finding here congenial surroundings. The late James H. Crowder, who for many years was a prosperous farmer and stock dealer of Sangamon County, was born in Green County, Ky., a son of John C. and Polly (Lasswell) Crowder, natives of Kentucky and Tennessee. The father was a farmer and stockman, who in 1824 brought his little family from Kentucky to Illinois, locating in Sangamon County, where they farmed for years. Eventually the parents moved to Springfield, where both passed away, having rounded out useful lives.

James H. Crowder was brought up in Sangamon County, attending district school and working with his father. Those were primitive times, but he never thought he was in any way harmed by the hard work and hardships, for they developed his character and made him able to meet his after experiences bravely and well. In 1849 he secured 160 acres of land, which he began developing into a stock farm. In time he became the owner of about 200 acres, and was recognized as one of the best farmers and stockmen in Sangamon County. However, in the later years of his life he met misfortunes and reverses. In one respect he was fortunate in having a wife who was a true companion and helpmate, and through her untiring efforts he was well provided for up to the day of his demise. Gradually he began dealing in stock and his business was conducted upon an extensive scale. His death occurred April 15, 1900, at the family residence, No. 1241 West Edwards Street. He had retired from his farm in 1875, moving to Springfield, which continued to be his home until his death. In politics he was a Republican, but, although he cordially supported the candidates of his party, he did not care for public life. He early joined the Methodist Church, of which his wife was a member.

On April 10, 1849, Mr. Crowder was married in Springfield to Mary Ann Wright, born in Kentucky, November 7, 1831, a daughter of Thomas O. and Jane (Phillip-Sparks) Wright, who came to Sangamon County when Mrs. Crowder was eight years old. There are two of the Wright children surviving: Thomas Wright, of Springfield, and the widow of Rev. Armenstraut, a minister of Griggsville, Ill., during his life, and there Mrs. Armenstraut still resides. Mr. and Mrs. Crowder had no issue. Mrs. Crowder was interested in her home and the work of her church, and was a pleasant, kindly, Christian woman, who accomplished much good and had many warm friends. Mrs. Crowder is now deceased.

CROWDER, Rev. Thomas Jefferson (deceased), for many years prominent in the Methodist Church, and an active supporter of Prohibition, was one of the honored residents of Springfield. He was born May 28, 1835, in the west end of Springfield, a son of John C. Crowder, born in Green County, Ky., in 1802, who there married Mary Lasswell. With his wife and two children, he came to Sangamon County, in 1824, entering land in what is now the west end of Springfield, and becoming one of the most successful farmers of his locality, raising fine stock. He died in his farm during an epidemic of cholera, in 1863, and is buried on the home farm.

Thomas J. Crowder was educated in the country schools and even in childhood was a great reader of the Bible, and espoused the cause of temperance at a very tender age. He signed the pledge when twelve years old, and Abraham Lincoln guided his hand as he wrote his name. This occurrence took place in a school house, after the to-be-distinguished man had addressed an enthusiastic audience on the subject of temperance. Having always been of a religious turn of mind, Thomas J. Crowder began preaching when not more than eighteen years of age. He held charges in both Kansas and Nebraska during the stirring days in the history of those two States, and, needless to say, advocated the Free Soil principles, suffering for his ideas.

On January 14, 1874, Mr. Crowder was married in Jacksonville, Ill., to Martha Tomlin, who was born on her father's farm at Pleasant Plains, September 11, 1838, but later lived in Jacksonville. He was a member of the Historical Society and the W. C. T. U., having been connected with the latter for thirty years. In the Second Presbyterian Church she is a strong and influential member, and gives much attention to its Missionary Society. All her life she has been a teacher in the Sunday school, and she shared in her husband's advanced temperance ideas.

Mr. and Mrs. Crowder had children as follows: J. William, at home; Elizabeth, Mrs. John E. George, of Springfield; Martha Louise, at home; and Edward, of Springfield.

Mr. Crowder passed away February 22, 1911, being seventy-five years and nine months old. During his long and active life he gave liberality of his time and mental attributes to the various causes he so deeply loved. He enlisted for service in the Civil War and although refused on account of physical defects, served in the Home Guard. He held many responsible offices, belonging to the Republican party after its formation, until the Prohibition party became national, and he always acted as his conscience dictated. In 1895 he located in Springfield, at No. 926 Governor Street, where his death occurred. His work as a member of the State Historical Society cannot be over-estimated, and he wrote a number of treatises to defend his position and advance his cause. Charitable and loving, following out in his daily life the principles of the religion he taught, Mr. Crowder rounded out a useful life, and when he died the whole community sorrowed as over the loss of a personal friend. He had lived in stirring times; the earlier part of his life was spent in struggling to help free the black man from the curse of slavery, and the latter part was equally strenuous in behalf of the slaves of alcohol. Such a man will never be forgotten; the good he accomplished will live on into eternity, and men will grow better, civic conditions will improve, and the cause of Prohibition and religion advance, because of the never-ending efforts of those whose sole purpose in life is to uplift their fellows.

CROWDER, William A. (deceased), for many years a resident of Springfield, Ill., was one of that city’s most useful and worthy citizens, being ready to give his support and influence to the promotion of any public movement or enterprise. He was a native of Springfield, born April 15, 1842, son of Washington and Isabel (Laughlin) Crowder, the former born in Lexington, Ky., July 9, 1813, and the latter, also a native of Lexington, born September 27, 1817. The father was a farmer and came to Sangamon County in an early day, settling just outside of Springfield, where the remainder of his life was spent.

The education of William A. Crowder was acquired in the public schools of Springfield and in a business college in that city. After leaving school he taught for several years in the business college then conducted by Messrs. Rutledge & Davidson, and then moved to Oskaloosa, Ia., where he worked in the grocery store of his uncle two years. He then returned to Springfield, and after working two years in the same store, took the position of book-keeper in the grocery store of George Connelly, where he remained eight years. Then for a short time he filled a similar position in the employ of A. H. Saunders, after which he retired from active life. He was an industrious and faithful worker and looked after the interests of his employers also fully. He won many friends in the course of his residence in Springfield, and his loss was keenly felt in many circles. His death occurred at his home, 806 North Tenth Street, Springfield, in 1891. He was a devout member of the Methodist Church and in politics was a Republican.

Mr. Crowder was married in Springfield, November 31, 1865, to Isabel Lauterman, a native of Springfield, born December 23, 1841. Her father came to Springfield from Lexington, Ky., at an early day and entered land where the State House now stands, and afterward entered land which is now included in Washington Park. His wife came from Greensburg, Ky., to Springfield, also in an early day. He died in 1863 and she in 1861, both in Springfield. The Lauterman family lived near the home of Lincoln in Springfield, and were often favored with his visits, so that Mrs. Crowder has many pleasant memories of him, having known him well as a neighbor. Ten children were born to Mr. Crowder and his wife, of whom seven are now living, namely: Charles L., of Springfield, a baggage-man in the employ of the Chicago & Alton Railway Company; Fred C., also of Springfield; George E., of St. Louis, a pressman by trade; William L., of Springfield, linotype operator for the Springfield News; Ethel B., wife of P. L. Irwin, of Fresno, Calif.; Gertrude, wife of William Pannell, a stationary engineer living in Springfield; Henrietta, wife of Arthur Billington, an employee of the Illinois Watch Company. Mrs. Crowder has five grandchildren.

CRUDDEN, Patrick (deceased).—Springfield is in the center of a rich mining district that attracts workers from all over the world. The mines give employment to thousands of men, who find in the dangerous occupation a means of obtaining a livelihood. Patrick Crudden, now deceased, was a coal miner there. He was born in County Monahan, Ireland, in 1827, and was a genial, warm-hearted, hard-working man, who had friends wherever he went. He was a son of Barney and Mary (Matthews) Crudden, both born in Ireland, where the father was a farmer.

Growing up in Ireland, Patrick Crudden lived with his parents and worked on their farm, until he came to America in search of better opportunities. About 1866 he located in Springfield, which continued his home until his demise, May 4, 1907. His remains were interred in Calvary Cemetery, having been a consistent member of the Catholic Church. In political faith he was a Democrat, but never cared for office.

Mr. Crudden was married in Durham, England, in 1833, to Bridget McCardle, born in Ireland, January 3, 1830, a daughter of John and Alice (Murray) McCardle, also natives of Ireland. Mr. McCardle was a farmer in Ireland, which remained his home until his death. Mr. and Mrs. Crudden had the following children: Patrick, born May 9, 1857; Mary Anna, born May 7, 1859; Burnett, deceased, born December 22, 1860; Alice, deceased, born January 1, 1865; Rose, born July 5, 1870; Kate, born in 1874; Margaret, born January 5, 1882. Mrs. Crudden’s home is at No. 1803 East Jackson Street. The family are prominent in the Catholic Church, to which all belong. The respect and confidence which Mr. Crudden inspired for his honesty and integrity, won for his family a recognized place in the community, and they are reaping the benefit of his hard work and sterling traits of character.

CULLOM, Shelby M. (Vol. I, p. 125.)

CUMBERWORTH, George H.—Many representative men of Sangamon County, after being engaged in a number of other undertakings, return to the cultivation of the soil, believing that in nothing else can they obtain such satisfactory results from their investments of time and money. One of the progressive farmers of Capital Township is George H. Cumberworth, born twelve miles from Sheffield, in Derbyshire, England, October 17, 1839, a son of Henry and Caroline (Hawkins) Cumberworth, both natives of England. Henry Cumberworth was a miner, who followed his calling in his native land until he left for America in 1862, sailing from Liverpool and landing in New York. From that city he came direct to Springfield, where he found employment with the Wabash Railroad Company, but after a year with that company commenced farming. For four years he farmed, but then began mining, and is still in that line of work, although now seventy-eight years old. His home is in Gardner Township. He had the misfortune to lose his wife, June 3, 1895. Their family of three children are all living; George II.; Joseph, a farmer of Capital Township, and Mrs. Anna Cummins, of Gardner Township.

The education of George H. Cumberworth was obtained in a ward school in Springfield. He came to America a year after his father. After leaving school his first work was on his father's farm, but later he went into the mines, and continued in them until he was thirty-two years of age. At that time he embarked in a moving and transfer business in Springfield but after continuing it a quarter of a century, sold out, and in 1902 bought his present farm in Capital Township.

The marriage of Mr. Cumberworth occurred in Springfield, October 18, 1893, to Mary Davis, born in Illinois, January 6, 1856. Her father was a farmer, but is now deceased, as is the mother. Mr. and Mrs. Cumberworth are the parents of two children, Earl and Clara, both of whom are at home. The Methodist Church holds Mr. Cumberworth's membership. He has voted the Democratic ticket since attaining his majority, but does not seek public office. Fraternally he belongs to the Royal Americans. He is one of the progressive men of his township, thoroughly abreast of the times, and understands and appreciates the immense possibilities of agriculture.

CUMMINGS, Joseph.—There are many men now living who remember well the great martyr Abraham Lincoln, whom the world recognizes as the greatest American. They recall the man as they knew him in Springfield, remembering nothing but good, and even to this day their eyes fill with tears as they think of his fate. One who has this distinction is Joseph Cummins, a retired farmer of Illiopolis, born in Ross County, Ohio, July 17, 1832. He is a son of Robert and Elizabeth (Shriver) Cummins, the former born in Maryland in 1803, and the latter in Little York, Pa., in 1822. Robert Cummins was a farmer and came to Illinois in 1840, settling in Logan County on a farm which he continued to operate up to the time of his death, in 1865. The family born to himself and wife comprised ten children, but all who survive are Joseph Cummins; Mrs. Elizabeth Corn, of Coffey County, Kan.; Mrs. Catherine Trollop, of Delavan, Tazewell County, Ill.; Mrs. Margaret Payne, of Normal, Ill.

Joseph Cummins was educated in the country school near German Prairie, Clear Lake Township, and during his boyhood he worked for his father on the farm. Learning this line of work in his youth, Mr. Cummins has carried it on all his life in Sangamon and Logan counties. In 1898 he moved to Illiopolis Township, but in 1906 retired to the village, buying his present very comfortable home.

On October 25, 1866, occurred the marriage of Mr. Cummins and Miss Mary J. Cochran, in the old American House at Springfield. She was born in Franklin County, Pa., in 1834, a daughter of Samuel Cochran, who came to Illinois in an early day, locating in Sangamon County, where he engaged in farming, thus continuing until his death. Mrs. Cummings died in 1900, having borne her husband three children: Mary E., wife of George Rose of Pekin, Ill.; Winfield S., of Sangamon County; and Laura E., of Deland, Ill. There are two fine grandchildren in the family.

The religious connections of Mr. Cummings are with the Methodist Church. He is a Republican and had the honor of casting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Cummings greatly misses his wife, whose death was a great shock to him. She was a lovely lady, whose sweet and Christian character endeared her to everyone who knew her. After a long and useful life Mr. Cummins is now enjoying the fruits of his well-applied industry.

CUMMINGS, Peter (deceased), who for many years carried on a farm in Sangamon County, Ill., passed away in the prime of life, leaving a widow and five children to mourn his loss. He was born in Quebec, Canada, and received his education there. His father, Edward Cummings, a butcher by trade, was born in Ireland, and his mother, Alice (Butler) Cummings, was a native of France. The parents were married in Canada and there spent the remainder of their lives.

Mr. Cummings joined the navy in boyhood and served several years. He came to Sangamon County after the close of the Civil War and there became a successful farmer. He was married in Sangamon County, November 11, 1870, to Adaline Slaven, born in Pike County, Ill., daughter of W. H. Slaven, a native of Virginia, while his wife was born in Tennessee. W. H. Slaven was an early settler of Pike County, where he carried on farming for a time, then removed to Iowa and spent the remainder of his life there, passing away January 31, 1895. His widow survived him until June, 1876, and died in Williamsville. Mr. Slaven enlisted in a Missouri regiment for service in the Civil War. Five children were born to Mr. Cummings and his wife, of whom four survive: William, a painter living in Springfield; Nellie, wife of Jerry McGrew, of Williamsville, has two children, Bessie and Henrietta; Thomas, in the employ of the Wabash Railroad Company, lives at Taylorville; George, a chef, living at Williamsville.

In religious views Mr. Cummings was a Methodist, and his widow is a member of the Baptist Church. He was a Republican in politics, but took no active part in public affairs, being much devoted to his home and family. He died January 21, 1887, in his fortieth year, and was buried in Walnut Hill Cemetery. He was respected and esteemed by the entire community where he had lived many years, and his loss was genuinely mourned by many friends. For the past twenty-three years his widow has lived in her present home in Williamsville, which she owns. Mr. Cummings was an enterprising and industrious farmer and upright and honest in all his dealings, enjoying an excellent reputation among his associates.

CURRIER, Mrs. Mary Priest.—No names in the long list of prominent and useful men of Illinois stand higher, or have a better chance of preservation against forgetfulness, as generations sweep on into eternity, than those of Priest and Currier, both of which are so intimately associated with the history of the State. The remarkable careers of John W. Priest and Silas Wright Currier, have already been covered in another portion of this work. Their success were built on such firm foundations, that only total oblivion can erase their names from the tablets of Illinois' great and noble men. Their descendants and those who were in any way associated with them, have every reason to be proud of them.

Mrs. Mary Priest Currier, daughter of one of these men and widow of the other, is one of the most highly esteemed ladies of Springfield. She was born in that city, November 21, 1848, daughter of John W. Priest, whose biography appears on another page in this volume. Mrs. Currier is a graduate of the Springfield High School, and learned in her home those virtues and housewifely characteristics which have made her so excellent a wife and mother. She did more, however. Realizing very early in girlhood that she possessed a mind that was masculine in its strength, she daily added to her store of knowledge growing interests that took place about her. She has taken an active interest in all that tends to the advancement of womanhood and character, having served on the Board of Managers of the King's Daughters' Home for Old Ladies, and the Home of the Friendless; is a member of the Woman's Club of Springfield; is a life member of the Daughters of the American Revolution; is a member of the King's Daughters, of the Foreign and Home Missionary Societies of the Baptist Church, and the Ladies' Aid Society. No mere words can do justice to what she has accomplished through her efforts and influence. It is to such women as she, that so many of the improved conditions in Springfield, and the State of Illinois, are due. Mrs. Currier is entitled to several bars on the insignia of the Daughters of the American Revolution, from the fact that she is a descendant of several participants in the war for American Independence, and is also entitled to membership in the society of Colonial Dames.

On July 15, 1878, Mrs. Currier was united in marriage with Silas Wright Currier, born in Potsdam, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., January 8, 1846. One daughter, Mary Currier Hatcher, was born in Springfield, June 19, 1880, a full sketch of whose life will be found elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Currier has long been an active and very efficient member of the Central Baptist Church of Springfield.

CURRIER, Silas Wright (deceased).—When a man who has been a power in any community dies, his loss is felt keenly, and it is then that his true worth is first realized. His work among his fellow citizens had been going on, quietly and steadily, but had not been appreciated until his taking away deprived others of the benefit of his labors, so it was not until then that they could fully sense his true merits. Silas Wright Currier, one of Springfield's foremost men, whose death robbed the community of an able, upright citizen, was born in Potsdam, N. Y., January 8, 1846.

Frederick Currier, the father of Silas W. Currier, was born in Vermont, in 1806, of English and Welsh ancestors, and his life occupations were those of a farmer and carpenter. He was married to Adeline Ellis, whose ancestors fought in the Revolution, born in 1810, in Vermont, of Scotch lineage. They had the following children: Mrs. Hannah Hand, now a resident of Flushing, L. I.; Mrs. Adeline Roe and Mrs. John Young, both of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Edward F., who resides in Oneonta, N. Y.; Franklin, a Civil War veteran, who died in Michigan; Henry, a soldier, who served at Forts Island during the war; Silas Wright; Henry and George, both of whom died at Norfolk, N. Y.; Harriet, who died at Brooklyn, N. Y., at the age of seventy-two years; and Ida, who died in infancy. The father passed away at Norwood, N. Y., in 1882, and his widow died in Brooklyn, in 1899.

Silas Wright Currier was a business genius, and he had no peers in the line of organization and promotion. The one thing, and the only one, that held him back was his utter refusal to take part in any plan that would deprive others of their just and full due. Clean, honest and upright in all of his own dealings, he could not see his way clear to associate himself with others who were not as scrupulous. Mr. Currier was the organizer of the Elevator Milling Company, which purchased the old Eastman elevator and later erected a plant and warehouse. This business grew to extensive proportions becoming one of the most important industrial interests in Springfield. He remained in the capacity of president and treasurer of this large enterprise up to the time of his death, his service covering a period of sixteen years. In addition he was a stockholder and Director in the State National Bank; a stockholder in the Springfield Paving Brick Company, a heavy stockholder in the Hotel Silas, which he himself erected; was also engaged in farming in Clear Lake Township, Sangamon County, and in Christian County, Ill. Mr. Currier's interests were of a varied character, but he handled them all in that keen, decisive manner that marks a leader in the business world, notwithstanding the fact that for years, he was handicapped by poor health.

On July 15, 1878, Mr. Currier was married, in Springfield, to Mary E. Priest, the native of that city, born November 2, 1848, daughter of John W. Priest, one of Springfield's most prominent citizens, whose biography appears on another page in this volume. One daughter, Mary (Currier) Hatcher (whose biography also appears elsewhere in this work), was born of this union, June 10, 1880. Fraternally, Mr. Currier was connected with the Elks and belonged to the Sangamo Club. He was always a generous contributor to church, fraternal and charitable movements, as well as to any enterprise that promised to be of benefit to Springfield or the State. The name of Silas Wright Currier will ever be associated with all that is sincere and upright, and he will be remembered as an example of the highest type of citizenship. His death occurred November 20, 1902.

DALBEY, James Eastman, member of a family that has long been prominent in Springfield, III., was born at the family home at 1157 North Third Street, October 23, 1876, the only son of Charles P. and Araminta L. (Power) Dalbey, the paternal ancestors being of Scotch-Irish parentage and the maternal ones English. The Power family emigrated from Kentucky, where they were people of position and prominence, to Sangamon County, Ill. Joel Dalby was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, about 1827 or 1828, and passed his boyhood on a farm there. As a young man, he and two of his brothers came to Springfield, Ill., and shipped live stock from there. The parents of James E. Dalbey were married in Springfield and made their home at the house on North Third Street which has since been owned and occupied by the Dalbey family. The father died in 1883 and the mother in 1890. They were members of the First Presbyterian Church and were parents of two children, Jenny Emeline, who was born in 1872 and died in 1876, and James E.

In boyhood James Eastman Dalbey attended the public schools of his native city, from which he graduated with the class of 1895, and when eighteen years of age entered the employ of the Municipal Electric Light Company, where he works at the present time. He has become a skilled and capable electrician and is one of the city's most trusted employees. He is most thorough and conscientious in his work and has thus been able to secure an advance in his position from an inferior one in the beginning to one of importance and responsibility.

Mr. Dalbey was married in Springfield, November 14, 1900, to Miss Bertha Kelly, daughter of the late J. H. and Tilda Kelly, and one child has blessed this union, Araminta Tilda. Mr. Dalbey inherited the family home at the death of his parents and has kept this handsome place in good repair. He and his wife are members of the United Brethren Church, of which Mr. Dalbey is Trustee at present. Mr. Dalbey is a Republican in National elections but in general votes for the best man, regardless of party affiliations.

DAMKUS, Joseph K., a well-known citizen of Springfield, III., was born in the village of Sothkalane, Russia, March 19, 1875, his parents being natives of the same village. The father, Baltremelus Damkus, was born in 1825 and died in 1910, and the mother, Antinie Tomoszaitis, was born in 1832 and died in 1907. The father was a farmer and he and his wife spent their entire lives in Russia. They were parents of ten children, nine sons and one daughter, Joseph K. being the ninth child. They were: Benedict; John; Tom; Frank; William; Michael, died at the age of thirty-eight years; Anton died at the age of twenty-one years; Joseph, named after the oldest child, who died three years of age; Sister Weronika, lives in Russia.

In youth Mr. Damkus was unable to attend school, and is practically self-educated. He remained at home and worked on his father's farm until eighteen years of age, when he came to America, arriving in 1893. He remained in Chicago during until 1896. He went to Russia in 1897, returned to Chicago, but the following year came again to Springfield, where he located permanently. He followed coal mining several years, and in 1906, under the administration of Mayor David Griffihis, was appointed on the police force. He has served as police officer under the administrations of Mayors Roy Reece, and John Schnepp. He is independent in political views, and is a member of SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church. He has made the most of his opportunities for education and improvement since coming to America, and is able to speak ten different languages, being a natural linguist.

Mr. Damkus was married in Springfield June 11, 1901, at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, by Father Hickey, to Isabel Adomaitys, who was born in Balandzin, Russia, in 1876, a daughter of Michael and Peatraonly Adomaitys Zlotokas. DANIEL, Nathan T.—One of the important features of all Illinois cities is the location there of retired farmers who, after years devoted to the tilling of the soil, have given up active pursuits. and are prepared to devote more time to the study of civic conditions. Nathan T. Daniel has made Springfield his home for some years and in earlier years was a well-known agriculturist. He was born in Clay County, Ill., November 10, 1847, a son of John and Paulina (Barrakh) Daniel, the former born in Clay County, Ill., in 1824, and the latter in Ohio, in 1825. The father was a farmer and spent his life in Clay County, where his death occurred. The paternal grandfather was a soldier of the Mexican War, who located in Clay County, Ill., at a time when that locality was but sparsely settled.

Nathan T. Daniel grew up in Clay County, working on a farm, and he has devoted his life to this class of work. In the fall of 1866 Mr. Daniel left Clay County, going to Kansas, where he remained until 1871 when he moved to Indiana. In 1875 he returned to Clay County, whence he came to Sangamon County, which has since been his place of residence. Mr. Daniel served under Custer, in Company S, Nineteenth Kansas Cavalry, participating in the battle of Antelope Bluff. In which Chief Black Kettle was killed. In addition, he was a participant in other less important engagements. While a staunch Republican, Mr. Daniel has not taken an active part in public life, but can always be counted upon to give an active support to any enterprise he believes will be beneficial to the community at large. In religious faith he is a Presbyterian.

Mr. Daniel was married in Clay County, Ill., August 20, 1875, to Sarah Davis, born in Ohio, in 1855. The following children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Daniel: Estella, born August 28, 1876; Flora, born in October, 1878; Edward, born April 29, 1880; Elizabeth, born November 7, 1882; Louis E., born in October, 1884; John, born April 2, 1886, and Alvin, born August 30, 1892. The family have a pleasant residence at No. 1700 East Maple Street. He is a man of pleasing manner, social in his tastes, and has a number of warm personal friends in Sangamon and Clay Counties. Before his retirement he had owned and developed a fine farm which was one of the best in his neighborhood. His success was due to his industry and thrift, as well as to his knowledge of the best methods of farming.

DANIELS, James M., who has long been a resident of Sangamon County, Ill., and has seen many changes take place in this section, has the distinction of being one of the self-made men of Pleasant Plains, where he is now engaged in the poultry, egg and fish business. Mr. Daniels was born near Chillicothe, Ohio, November 18, 1841, a son of John and Percilla (Radeliff) Daniels, and a grandson on the paternal side of a Revolutionary soldier who served throughout the war.

The parents of Mr. Daniels, both natives of West Virginia, were married in that State, which they left about 1827 to go to Chillicothe, Ohio, where seven of their fourteen children were born. Of their children those living are: Nancy Daniels, widow of Chesley D. Smith, now residing in Oklahoma City, Okla.; Samuel, who resides in South Dakota; and James M. In 1849 John Daniels and wife settled in Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, but in 1852 the family went to Daviess County, Mo., and lived until 1858, then moved to Abingdon, Ill. While at this place the mother and two children died of cholera, there being an epidemic in Illinois at that time, and the father returned to Daviess County, Mo., where he remained until his death in February, 1855.

In 1860, when but nineteen years old, James M. Daniels decided to return to Illinois, working his passage back by helping his brother-in-law, William Willis, drive his stock from Missouri to Sangamon County. He had left with a cash capital of ten cents in his pocket, but during a friendly scuffle with his brother, John, lost this small sum. John Daniels afterwards went to Centralia, Ill., and there died. Thrown thus on his own resources, James M. Daniels secured work in which he saved enough in Illinois and about 1860 had saved enough to rent a farm. On January 9, 1868, he was united in marriage with Miss Matilda Parkinson, who was born near Circleville, Ohio, November 15, 1850. daughter of Hugh and Ellen Frances (Jackson) Parkinson, natives of New York and Baltimore, Md., respectively. The Jackson and Parkinson families both removed to Circleville, Ohio, where Mrs. Daniels' parents were married, and they came to Illinois in 1856, settling in Cardwright Township, where Mr. Parkinson carried on farming until 1874, in that year removing to Christian County. Here he purchased a farm, which he operated until his death about 1892, while his widow still survives, having reached the ripe old age of eighty-five years. To them there were born a large family of children as follows: Stephen, who died at the age of forty-one years; David, who died in 1901, when fifty years of age; Carrie, who was the wife of George Sutton, both being deceased; Sarah, who died at the age of sixty-four years; John, who lives with his mother at Millersville, Ill.; Joseph, a retired merchant of Springfield; Ella, the wife of Thomas W. Knott, of Millersville; Anna, the wife of Cyrus Moore, of Assumption; Minnie, the wife of Edward Allison, of Chicago; William, a farmer near Pana; and Newton, residing at Shelbyville, Ill.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Daniels located on a farm and in 1871 purchased a farm in Cardwright Township, which Mr. Daniels operated until 1882, then selling out to buy the farm now operated by Marshall Grider. In 1887 that farm was sold and Mr. Daniels entered the lumber business, but for the past few years he has been engaged in the egg poultry and fish business at Pleasant Plains. He can look back with pleasure over his many years of hard work, from the time when the present town of Pleasant Plains was but a mud-hole and the country wild and uncultivated, and can also take pleasure in the fact that he is now a substantial business man through the efforts and industry he has expended, from the time when his capital was ten cents. Mr. and Mrs. Daniels now reside in a pleasant home on East North First Street, where all the friends of Mr. Daniels are sure to find a welcome. They have long been members of the Methodist Church and Mr. Daniels, while never seeking public preferment, has always been interested in Democratic politics. Fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America at Pleasant Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels have had four children: David, born September 4, 1853, a traveling lumber salesman whose home is in Springfield, married Olive Smith; Luther, born September 18, 1873, section foreman for the Central Pacific & Saint Louis Railroad Company, married Mollie McGraw and has one child, Velma; Hattie, born October 16, 1873, is the wife of Albert Irwin, of Florence, Ill., and have two sons—Loran and Leonard; and James A., born October 15, 1876, Cashier of the bank of Heyworth, Ill., married Miss Libbie Purvines and had two children, Russell and Guinlin.

DASHER, Edwin Huston, Sr.—Sangamon County has an established reputation all over the State for the quality and excellence of its instructors, through whose efforts the schools of this locality have been developed so remarkably. One of the men who have been largely instrumental in bringing out this desirable condition of educational affairs, is Edwin Huston Dasher, Sr., now of Pleasant Plains, Ill. Mr. Dasher was born at Columbus, Ohio, November 19, 1873, being a son of George Clay and Frances Beatrice (Thomas) Dasher. The father was born at Lewisburg, Ohio, June 12, 1845, while his wife was born at Columbus, Ohio, September 19, 1851. For a quarter of a century, the father was a teacher, during which time he was professor of mathematics at Columbus, Ohio, besides holding numerous superintendencies. His parents came from Virginia, and were of German descent. The Dasher settlement in Ohio occurred in 1855. The Thomas family came from the North of Ireland, so Mr. Dasher has good, sturdy ancestors back of him.

Mr. Dasher graduated from Lincoln High School in 1893, from the Interstate Correspondence School in 1901, and Brown's Business College in 1910. He located in Sangamon County in 1897, when he settled at Pawnee, coming there from Christian County, Ill. He began teaching school September, 1893, at Blue Grass, near Atlanta, Ill., remaining there for a year. He then took charge of schools near Morrisonville, and taught there for nine years, when, in 1897, he taught at Monegan for a year. In 1898, 1899 and 1900, he taught at Shiloh, and for the following two years was at Evergreen. From 1903 to 1904 he taught at White Oak; returned to Evergreen for a year, and then, in 1905, went to King. In 1907 he taught at Saunders, and during 1908 and 1909 was Principal of the Pawnee High School, now holding the same responsible position with regard to the Pleasant Plains High School, receiving a salary of ninety dollars per month. Mr. Dasher has always been enthusiastic regarding his work, and never neglecting any opportunity of enlarging his scope or broadening his outlook. He is a man who possesses in marked degree the power to impart knowledge, and has always been very popular with the pupils and their parents, who have appreciated his efforts. Believing in organization, Mr. Dasher is an active and valued member of the Sangamon County Teachers' Association and the Illinois State Teachers' Association.

On January 18, 1899, Mr. Dasher was united in marriage at Morrisonville, Ill., with Clara Reasoner Lyles, born near that town, December 30, 1880. Mrs. Dasher's parents, John W. and Harriet (Betts) Lyles, came to Christian County, Ill., in 1839, locating at Plano, Randolph County, and one mile east of the southeast corner of Sangamon County. Mr. and Mrs. Dasher are parents of the following children: Daniel Archie, born July 24, 1902; Mildred Evelyn, born October 6, 1906; Edwin Huston, Jr., born June 23, 1908, and Rosecoe Wiley, born November 20, 1910. Mr. Dasher's conscientious applications and principles make him a Prohibitionist. In religious faith he is a Methodist, and for six years was superintendent of a Sunday School near Pawnee and one year at Pawnee. Alive, thoroughly abreast of the day, keenly interested in everything pertaining to his profession, Mr. Dasher is one of the best teachers this county has ever secured, and his valuable services are estimated at their true worth.

DAVIDSON, George W.—One of the most prominent farmers of Sangamon County, Ill., is George W. Davidson, who is always ready to lend his influence and services to any public enterprise in his community, or to help those in trouble or need. Mr. Davidson was born in Ball Township, Sangamon County, March 12, 1855, son of Samuel and Amanda (Knuckles) Davidson whose biography appears on another page of this work.

In boyhood George W. Davidson attended Oak Ridge School in Pawnee Township, and lived at home until he was thirty years of age. He then began farming on his own account and has been very successful. He bought and shipped stock for many years, and has been enterprising and progressive in his operations, being a man of excellent business judgment. He is very fond of fox hunting and outdoor sports of all kinds, and spends many of his hours of leisure in this diversion. He has traveled but little, being very fond of home and devoted to his family. He now owns 410 acres of fine farming land on Section 10 of Divernon Township, and carries on general farming, besides caring for his other business interests. He is a stockholder in the Divernon Grain Elevator Company.

Mr. Davidson was married in St. Louis, Mo., October 22, 1888, by Rev. Matthews, to Ann E. Shepherd, born in Sangamon County, December 12, 1862, daughter of Thomas B. and Amanda (Pyle) Shepherd, the former a native of Maryland and the latter born in St. Clair County, Ill., October 13, 1838, died in Sangamon County, January 30, 1907, being buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield. Mr. Shepherd has retired from active life and lives in Pawnee. Mr. Davidson and his wife have three children, namely: Flossie L., born August 18, 1889; Lella F., December 3, 1891; and George S., April 15, 1907, all at home. Mrs. Davidson is one of three children, the others being: Thomas A., the oldest, a prominent farmer of Sangamon County, married Marian M. Weber and they have three children—Stella M., George W. and Charles R.; Mary E., married Charles W. Anderson, who died in March, 1901, and she now lives in Pawnee and has two children—Leslie C. and Nellie S. Mr. Davidson was one of nine children, of whom four are deceased.

In politics Mr. Davidson is a Democrat, but usually votes for the man rather than for party. He has served as Road Commissioner and School Director. Fraternally he belongs to Court of Honor No. 334 and to the Odd Fellows Lodge No. 200, at Divernon. He and his family are earnest members of the Methodist Church and active in church and benevolent work.

DAVIDSON, Samuel, now living retired from active life, on Section 3, Pawnee Township, Sangamon County, Ill., has carried on agricultural operations all his life and has been successful to a gratifying degree. Mr. Davidson was born in Davidson County, Tenn., October 18, 1821, and is the son of John and Elizabeth (Hall) Davidson, the former born in North Carolina and the latter in Tennessee. The father was a farmer and was brought by his parents to Tennessee when a boy, Davidson County, that State, being named after his father, John Davidson moved from Tennessee to Indiana, bringing his family with him, and later came to Illinois. He located first at Vandalia, and afterward moved to Macoupin County, where both he and his wife died, on a farm about four miles west of Girard. The maternal and paternal grandparents of Samuel Davidson died in Tennessee, where they had located at an early day.

Samuel Davidson received his education in the country schools of Illinois and lived on his father’s farm until he reached his majority, then lived in the family of Abner Knotts until his marriage. He has been a resident of Illinois since he reached the age of five years and has lived in his present home since 1857. He was a hardworking and energetic farmer and brought his land to a high state of cultivation. He has lived retired for several years and hires the work done by others, but retains charge of the conduct of the farm. He owns 160 acres of excellent land and has good substantial buildings on same. He and his wife have witnessed the remarkable development of central Illinois, as she was born in Sangamon County and he has spent most of his life in the State. His parents came with a wagon from Tennessee, and the family bore the hardships and dangers incident to early frontier life.

The marriage of Mr. Davidson took place in Ball Township, May 9, 1850, when he was united by Rev. Bradshaw with Amanda Knuckles, daughter of John and Ann (Collins) Knuckles, the former a native of North Carolina and the latter of New Jersey. The father of Mr. Knuckles was a native of North Carolina, where his death occurred, and the father of Ann Collins, who was born in Virginia, also died in the State. The children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Davidson, of whom four are deceased. Those living are: Samuel M., born September 5, 1861; Thomas J., born March 4, 1864, married Carrie Johnson; George W., born March 12, 1855, lives near his father, is the owner of 560 acres of land, and married Anna E. Shepherd; Aminda M., born March 26, 1856, is unmarried and lives at home; Miriam, born October 5, 1868, is the second wife of Samuel Stout; Charles C., born June 5, 1872, died August 25, 1892; Ann, born April 24, 1881, married John Moore, and died February 18, 1906; Emma A., born March 25, 1858, was the first wife of Samuel Stout (who married as his second wife her sister, Mary, November 13, 1851; Douglas, born June 25, 1853, died November 6, 1893. There are thirteen grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Davidson and his family are active members of the Methodist Church and live up to the principles and tenets of their faith. He has been a prominent man and has owned and occupied the home more than half a century and is well known and much respected by the entire community, as a man of sterling worth and high character. He is a Democrat in politics and served many years as School Director. He has also been for many years a Trustee in the Methodist Church and is interested in every good cause.

DAVIES, Morgan A.—One of the men of Sangamon County in whom burns the fire of poetic genius is the well known poet, Morgan A. Davies, who was highly honored at the Columbian Exposition in 1893, as well as upon many other occasions. He is a native of Wales, born March 15, 1845, being a son of David and Amelia (Jones) Davies, the former born in London, England, and the latter in Wales. The paternal grandfather was an eminent divine of the Baptist faith, while the maternal grandfather was prominent in local affairs, serving his parish as Road Commissioner for forty years. Both parents of Mr. Davies spent their lives in Great Britain, dying in Wales, and he is the only one of his family to come to the United States.
After a boyhood spent in hard work for his father and in the Welsh mines, during which time he received no educational advantages, Mr. Davies came to the land of promise, landing at Castle Garden, July 19, 1839. At once he found employment in the mines at Akron, Ohio, where he remained until 1877, when he removed to Macon County, Mo., there embarking in a grocery business. From that location he went to New Mexico; thence to Spring Valley, finally settling at Divernon, Ill., which is now his place of residence. Since locating here he has taken an active part in local matters, being a strong Republican, and aside from acting as Election Judge upon many occasions, is now Justice of the Peace.

On May 13, 1875, Mr. Davies was married at Coal Valley, Rock Island County, Ill., to Lucy Phillips, born in Wales, who came here when only one year old. Her parents, William and Hannah (Reece) Phillips located first in Iron-town, Ohio, upon their arrival in the United States, but later removed to Coal Valley. Mr. Davies later bought land in Carroll County, Iowa, where both died on a farm they had bought. The grandparents of Mrs. Davies never left Wales. Mr. and Mrs. Davies became the parents of one child, a son, Ithel B., born in Rock Island County, Ill., February 29, 1876. Mrs. Davies was one of six children born to her parents. She and her sisters were born in Wales, but the remaining four were born in the United States.

Mr. Davies is a member of the Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Red Men and Foresters, and is next to the oldest member in the first named lodge. His religious affiliations are with the Congregational Church. Since early youth he has been connected with this denomination and counts his religious experiences as among the happiest of his life. He is a man who carries his religion with him, not making a task of carrying out its mandates, but enjoying them, and his influence for good is deeply felt by all who are brought into contact with him.

Without regular scholastic training, Mr. Davies has taught himself, and has developed his talents until he is one of the best representatives of Welsh poetry the country knows. During the World's Fair at Chicago Mr. Davies had the distinction of being sent to it as the representative of the Welsh Literary World, and while there gained many honors. His genius was recognized and he has a number of medals won during that period. While enjoying his poetic work, Mr. Davies has not neglected practical matters, but has amassed a considerable amount of property, a portion of which has been gained from his writings, and is one of the solid men of Sangamon County. His verse rings with the true Welsh spirit, and his words of encouragement have raised many a drooping spirit and brought back into the fold more than one straying brother, who had forgotten early teachings in the glare of worldly pursuits. Mr. Davies' son is a shareholder and Manager of the Bradley Knitting Company, of Delavan, Wis., also was for twelve years Superintendent of Schools at Delavan, Wis., and Sparta.

DAVIS, George, who has been a resident of Springfield since about 1883, from that time to the present has been connected with mining interests in the vicinity. He has been employed as mine inspector and mine manager by various concerns, and is at present connected with the Chicago & Springfield Mining Company. He has spent most of his life in mining, having worked in several English mines before coming to America. He was born in Gloucestershire, England, July 1, 1846, and after attending the country schools near his home, where he paid a tax of about two cents per week for the privilege, attended a college. He was one of the five children (four sons and one daughter) of Thomas and Ann (Newell) Davis, both of whom spent their entire lives in England, being natives of Gloucestershire. The father was a contractor.

After leaving school George Davis was apprenticed to the trade of tinner, being employed at it only a short time and then became employed in a mine. He traveled throughout England and worked in different capacities in various mines. He emigrated to America in 1881, landing in Boston, and shortly afterwards came to Braceville, Ill., where he spent two years, before locating in Springfield, which has since been his home. He possesses a shrewd and executive ability and has for several years past been a manager for the company by which he is now employed. He is popular with his associates and respected by all who know him, as an enterprising, useful citizen.

Mr. Davis was married, in England, December 24, 1860, to Miss Joanna Jones, who was born in Brecknockshire, South Wales, in 1819, and died in Springfield, February 19, 1910. Her father was a shepherd in South Wales, where he and his wife spent their entire lives. They had two sons and three daughters. Mr. Davis and his wife had eight sons and four daughters, of whom but four sons survive, namely: George, of Springfield; Ernest, of Kansas City, Mo.; Thomas J. and William, of Springfield. Mr. Davis has seven grandchildren. He resides at 1711 East Sangamon Avenue, Springfield. Mr. Davis is a member of the Methodist Church and is affiliated with the Royal Circle organization.

DAVIS, James E.—The family of which James E. Davis is a member, has been well known in Sangamon County, Ill., for eighty years. Mr. Davis is a native of the county, born November 17, 1840, son of Richard and Elizabeth (Neal) Davis, natives of Kentucky, the former born in April, 1800, and the latter born in Nelson County, about 1803. They were married and had one child in Kentucky and emigrated to Sangamon County, Ill., arriving before the deep snow of 1830-31. They had three children born in Sangamon County. Richard Davis was a shoemaker by trade and served in the Black Hawk War. The children of the second marriage and his wife were: George L. died unmarried in 1856;
Diana married Philip Loeb; John H., and James E.

The education of James E. Davis was acquired in the public schools of Springfield and he has lived in the city most of his life. Upon leaving school he began work at brick-making, and enlisted, August 2, 1862, in Springfield, in Company F, Twelfth Volunteer Infantry, serving under General Wallace. He served to the end of the war in this company and made a record of which he is justly proud. He was mustered out at Richmond, Va., August 11, 1863, having participated in many of the important engagements of the war, among them: Battle of the Wilderness, Weldon Railroad, North Ann, Cold Harbor and Pebble Farm. He is a member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., and also belongs to the M. W. A.

Upon his return after the close of the war, Mr. Davis was employed in the blacksmith shops of the Wabash Railroad Company for about eight years, then became a member of the Springfield Fire Department about 1900 and has lived retired ever since. He has always been an enterprising citizen of Springfield and has been deeply interested in its progress and welfare. Having been born and reared in the city, he has a large number of friends. He is highly esteemed for his kindly, genial disposition and his many sterling qualities. He owns a very comfortable home at 907 North Third Street, Springfield, and there he and his wife delight in meeting and entertaining their friends. Mr. Davis is a member of Immaculate Conception Catholic Church and in politics is a Democrat.

The marriage of Mr. Davis took place at Springfield, August 8, 1868, when he was united with Rose McGrane, daughter of Lawrence and Catherine (Bradley) McGrane, born in County West Meath, Ireland, November 31, 1852. Her parents embarked on board a ship which was wrecked, and they were seven months at sea before landing in New York. They came to Morrisst, N. J. The wife died there about 1895. Mrs. Davis was the youngest of eight children and all are deceased. They were all members of the Catholic Church. Two children have blessed this union, Christina, born July 30, 1880, and William J., November 22, 1874. Mrs. Davis is a woman of culture and high character and is loved by all who have the pleasure of her acquaintance.

DAVIS, James W.—After many years devoted to arduous toil, Sangamon County farmers feel that they have earned the right to enjoy the fruits of their labors and, retiring from active work, settle down in towns adjacent to the scenes of their former homes, where they are free to give more attention to civic matters. A representative of this class is James W. Davis, of Illiopolis, born in Adams County, Ohio, March 4, 1833, a son of John and Martha A. (Douglas) Davis, the former born in New York City, and the latter in Pennsylvania. John Davis was a cabinetmaker and wheelwright.

The Davis family originated in Germany, the grandparents of James W. Davis having come from that country to America, locating in New York City. Later they moved to Ripley County, Ind., but, after farming there a short time, went to Kentucky, dying there. From Kentucky John Davis moved to Adams County, Ohio, at an early date, locating in West Union, where he followed his trade of cabinetmaking until 1847, but in that year, losing his wife, he went to Lewistown, Ill., and there spent the remainder of his life, dying at the home of a daughter. There were five children in the family, but all are now deceased except James W.

Mr. Davis was given better educational advantages than many, having the privilege of attending the city school of West Union. During his boyhood he assisted his father, later engaging in different lines. He was in Kentucky when the war broke out, and farmed eight years in Mason County. He then came to Illinois, locating at Mechanicsburg. At the end of two years he went to Lake Fork, Logan County, farming there for three years. From there he came to Illiopolis, resuming farming. He is now one of the retired residents of his town, owning his comfortable home.

Mr. Davis has been thrice married, his first wife having been Margaret Scott whom he married in Kentucky. She was born in Mason County, Ky., and died in Mechanicsburg. She bore her husband four children: Joseph, living in Harristown, Ill.; Sarah, living in Springfield; Mattie, wife of George Phillips, an engineer, living in Illiopolis; George living in Springfield. Mr. Davis was married in Mechanicsburg to Lula Rousch, born in Macoupin County, Ill., and died in Illiopolis, having borne her husband one son, William, living in Springfield. The third marriage of Mr. Davis took place in Illiopolis, to Mary Regan, born in Ohio. Her parents were among the pioneers of Illinois. Mrs. Davis died April 11, 1906. By this marriage there were five children: Edward and Roy, living in Illiopolis; Pearl married John Gano, of Springfield, and one child, Walter, deceased.

A stanch Democrat, Mr. Davis has always supported his party, and appreciation of his services was shown in his election to the office of Constable, in which he served four years. He also served for five years as Town Marshal, and has been Street Commissioner, giving faithful and valuable service in each office. In the Christian Church he has long been a power, contributing liberally towards its support and aiding in its good work. Through earnest efforts he has accumulated considerable property, which places him in comfortable circumstances, and he is now enjoying the results of a well-spent life. There are few men who stand higher in his community than he, and his success is merited, for it has been earned through hard work.

DAVIS, John, who owns a tract of twenty acres of valuable land on the edge of the city of

Springfield, Ill., has been very successful in carrying on farming and gardening and has lived in the vicinity of his present home for twenty-six years. Mr. Davis was born in Somersetshire, England, August 27, 1852, and is a son of Samuel and Anna (Garland) Davis, both natives of England, the former born in 1805 and the latter in 1811, and both died in England. The parents resided on a farm and were parents of four children, three daughters and one son: Eliza Jane, deceased; Sarah Ann, wife of Walter Penn, living in England; Emily, wife of John Culley, a farmer living near Macomb, McDonough County, Ill., and John. The mother passed away in 1801 and the father the following year.

In boyhood John Davis attended the public schools of his native country and worked on his father's farm until about seventeen or eighteen years of age, then worked by the week at farming for three years, being employed by various neighboring farmers. He came to America in 1873 and located first in Sangamon County. He went to Christian County in 1876 and worked there two years, then returned to Sangamon County and purchased a small tract of land where he now lives. He owns twenty acres and, as the land is within the city limits, it is worth about six hundred dollars per acre. He devotes much of his time to gardening and has met with gratifying success in this enterprise. He has a comfortable house at 2300 East Laurel Street.

Mr. Davis was married in Springfield, April 5, 1879, to Miss Mary A. Eddington, born August 27, 1855, daughter of Joseph and Rhoda (Pittman) Eddington, who came to America from England in 1880, locating on Cook Street in Springfield, and both are now deceased. The father died in 1903, at the age of ninety-five years, and the mother in 1907, at the age of eighty-four years. Ten children were born to Mr. Davis and his wife, namely: William, a gardener of Sangamon County; Genevieve, wife of Everheardt Helssinger, a gardener of Sangamon County; Joseph, a gardener; Edward works at home; Anna, wife of Troy Foster, at home; Lillie and Albert at home; Samuel, a miner in Springfield. Mr. Davis has four grandchildren, two girls and two boys.

Mr. Davis is a member of Liberty Camp No. 1534, Modern Woodmen of America, and has belonged to the order about twenty years. His wife is a member of the Royal Neighbors. He also belongs to the Congregational Church. In political views he is a Republican. He came to America a poor young man, about the time he reached his majority, and through his own efforts has acquired a competence. He was reared to habits of industry and integrity and has governed his actions in accordance with principles of honesty and integrity, thus winning the esteem and confidence of his fellows. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have been to England twice and expect to visit their native home again.

DAVIS, J. McCAN.—There are few more interesting personalities in Sangamon County, Ill., than J. McCAN Davis, through whose intimate knowledge of men and events, grasp of politics and political situations, his fellow citizens have gained their comprehensive view of what has been the making of history. A man of versatile talents, seemingly he would have been successful in almost any line of endeavor, and has been particularly so in his literary work, which has covered both journalism and authorship.

J. McCAN Davis was born in Fulton County, Ill., November 19, 1866, and obtained his early educational training in the public schools. In boyhood he developed an interest in journalism and at the age of fifteen years was a contributor to newspapers. He learned shorthand by self-instruction and while yet a boy was able to report speeches. Later he taught school for a short time, but when nineteen years old became editor of a weekly paper at Canton, Ill., and during that time acted as official court stenographer. For a short time he was engaged in newspaper work in Iowa, being managing editor of a daily paper at Council Bluffs.

In the fall of 1888 Mr. Davis came to Springfield and became connected with the Illinois State Journal. In 1889 he became resident correspondent for the Chicago and metropolitan papers, and from 1890 for many years he was correspondent of Chicago, St. Louis, New York and Boston newspapers. In 1891 he was appointed correspondent of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, and has continuously represented that paper at the State Capital. For a number of years Mr. Davis held the position of managing editor of the Legislative Bureau of the Associated Press. He has a wide acquaintance with and a comprehensive knowledge of public men. From 1895 until 1899 he practiced law. In 1897 he was appointed Secretary of the State Board of Arbitration and became an authority on industrial conciliation and arbitration. In cases he was called before the U. S. Industrial Commission for expert testimony and drafted the acts passed by the Legislature in 1893 and 1901, amending the arbitration law.

Mr. Davis is widely known as a writer, and is a high authority on the life of Abraham Lincoln, as well as the politics and history of Illinois. Among his books are "The Breaking of the Deadlock," "Abraham Lincoln—His Book," "How Abraham Lincoln Became President" and (in collaboration with Ida M. Tarbell) "The Early Life of Abraham Lincoln." In April, 1911, he founded "The Illinois Statesman," an illustrated weekly magazine for Illinois.

In 1908 Mr. Davis made a notable campaign for the Republican nomination for Clerk of the Supreme Court of Illinois. He was successful and in November of that year was elected to that office by a plurality exceeding 165,000. His term expires in 1914.

Mr. Davis is married, his wife having been formerly Miss Florence Flower Packard of Canton, Illinois.

DAVISON, James.—Most of the early settlers of Sangamon County have disappeared from the busy haunts of men. Their names may be forgotten, their dust molding in the tomb, but their influence remains. These fertile fields, these busy, teeming cities, are all the magnificent results of their sacrifices and forethought, and will be their silent and enduring monument forever. One who has the distinction of belonging to one of the old pioneer families of the county is James Davison, one of the most prosperous farmers of his part of the State. He was born in Sangamon County, February 20, 1835, a son of William and Sadie Davison, natives of Kentucky, and sturdy pioneers who came to Illinois in 1818 and spent the remainder of their useful lives within the confines of Sangamon County. Their first home was a little log cabin, but they worked hard, reared their children, and departed this life, having rounded out their lives, and developed fine Christian qualities.

James Davison was educated in Sangamon County and remembers well the primitive log schools which form such a vivid contrast to those of the present day. His life work has been farming, and there is probably little about practical farming that he does not know. He owns a magnificent farm in Cartwright Township, where he has spent all his life, and no one there stands higher in the esteem of his neighbors. Mr. Davison has never married. His life has been ordered by the Golden Rule, and he has given of his means to many of whom the world knows nothing, for he does not tell of his charities. A Democrat, he is content to show his support of the party by voting for its candidates. Genial, kind-hearted, always willing to lend a helping hand, Mr. Davison is a great favorite, and is easily one of the leading men of his township.

DAWLEY, Joseph C.—The carpenters and builders of a community contribute much towards its material advancement, as well as to its beauty and substantial appearance. One who has been engaged along this line of endeavor for some years is Joseph C. Dawley, who was born near Rochester, Sangamon County, June 20, 1861, a son of Harrison and Jane (Campbell) Dawley, the former a native of New York State and the latter of Tennessee. The father was a farmer and came to Illinois at an early day, first settling near Old Salem, where he remained several years, then moving to a farm in the vicinity of Rochester. Sangamon County. In addition to farming during the early days, he drove the stage coach between Rochester and Beardstown. He remained on his farm until his death, which occurred in 1883, his widow surviving him until 1885. They had six sons and three daughters, but only two survive, Joseph C. and William, who live with him.

The education of Joseph C. Dawley was secured in the schools of the county and in Rochester, and during his boyhood he worked on the farm, growing up amid healthy agricultural conditions. When he attained his majority he began learning the carpenter's trade, which he has followed ever since, some of the best buildings in Rochester being the result of his work. He is conscientious about carrying out his contracts and has gained a well-merited confidence.

Mr. Dawley has never married, he and his brother living together. He gives much of his spare time to the Methodist Church, of which he is a consistent member, enjoying his association with its religious life. A Democrat, he confines his public efforts to voting for the candidates of his party, not desiring office. In addition to his home, Mr. Dawley holds four city lots in Rochester which are very valuable. He has confidence in Rochester reality, as is evinced by his investments, and is one of the solid, reliable men of his community.

DAWSON, Henry M.—The agricultural interests of Sangamon County are important and extensive, and some of the most progressive and energetic men of the locality are engaged in farming, realizing that in this calling are big profits for those who understand their work. One of these representative agriculturists is Henry M. Dawson, of Section 32, Woodside Township. He was born in Scott County, Ill., July 11, 1859, being a son of Jesse and Anna (Groon) Dawson, farming people, born in Delaware and Scott County, Ill., respectively.

Jesse Dawson came to Illinois from his native State, at a very early day, locating on a farm in Scott County, where he resided until his death, which occurred in February, 1908, when he was ninety-three years of age. His wife passed away in 1882, having spent her life in Scott County, where her parents had been early settlers. She bore her husband four sons and four daughters, and the family is well and favorably known throughout southern Illinois. Four of Jesse Dawson's brothers served in the Civil War.

Growing up on his father's farm, Henry M. Dawson attended the county schools and learned how to till the soil. He remained in Scott County until 1890, but in that year came to Springfield, where he formed a partnership with R. M. Dockum, for the purpose of conducting a grocery on North Grand Avenue, but after six years in this connection embarked in a grocery business of his own on North Sixth Street, continuing there for a year. He then moved to the vicinity of the Leland Hotel, continuing there for ten years, but in 1906, purchased eighty acres in Woodside Township, moving there and becoming very successful as a farmer.

On April 22, 1880, Mr. Dawson was united in marriage at Winchester, Scott County, to Anna Towel, born in Canada, January 5, 1858. Her parents moved to Illinois, settling in Madison County, where they lived until their deaths. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dawson: Nettie (Mrs. E. V. Percival, of Urbana, Ill.); Leonard, Clinton, Mary, Henry and Nellie, all at home. They, with their parents, belong to the Methodist Church.

While residing in Springfield Mr. Dawson served as a member of the Fire Department under Mayor Phillips and gave the city efficient and faithful service. He is a Republican in political faith. Fraternally he belongs to Capital Tent, No. 1, Maccabees, and is much interested in that order. He is a live, energetic business man and an excellent farmer. He conducts his business in a thoroughly up-to-date manner, and has won and retains the confidence of those with whom he is brought in contact.

DAWSON, James H.—Some men attain prominence through financial importance or political influence, but those who endear themselves to their associates because of their Christian virtues are truly great, for their treasures are not of this earth. As a leading and long history of Sangamon County is written it will bear conspicuously upon its pages the name of James H. Dawson, who has ever been active in church and Sunday School work in connection with the Methodist denomination of Buffalo. Mr. Dawson is also a well-known business man of this place conducting, as he does, a first-class wagon-making and blacksmith establishment. He was born in Sussex County, Del., July 12, 1821, being a son of Jesse and Sarah (Beauchamp) Dawson, natives of Delaware. The grandfather on the paternal side of the house was born in England, while the descent on the maternal side was from German stock. Jesse Dawson migrated to Illinois in 1836, arriving in Scott County on August 25th and locating on a farm which he operated in conjunction with a saw-mill, thus continuing for six months, when he bought a half-interest in a grist-mill, operating it for three years. He then bought 240 acres and continued to farm this property until his death, in 1861. His widow survived him for several years. Eight children were born to these parents, two sisters of Mr. Dawson being the only survivors in addition to himself. They reside in Jacksonville. Jesse Dawson served his country as a soldier in the War of 1812, and was a brave man in both war and peace.

James H. Dawson attended school in both Delaware and Scott County, Ill., and worked hard for his father. At the same time he learned the carpenter trade and found ready employment at it in Scott County. Later he conducted a carpenter shop in Winchester, Ill., for seven years. He then went to Harrisonville, Mo., where he worked at his trade for six months, then returned to Scott County and there operated a steam saw-mill, but in the fall of 1863 he came to Sangamon County, to spend two years in farming. For the four years following this he again worked at his trade, after which he located in Buffalo and in 1866 established his present business, conducting a wagon-making and blacksmithing business. Although eighty-nine years old, he is very vigorous, and does a full day's work regularly.

On November 14, 1844, Mr. Dawson was united in marriage in Scott County, Ill., to Elizabeth McLaughlin, born in Ohio, August 16, 1827, and died June 26, 1890. Her parents came from Ohio to Scott County, Ill., at an early day, settling on a farm where both died. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dawson, three of whom survive: Thomas R. who lives in Denver, being engaged in the insurance business; James M. who lives in Danville, Ind., being a paperhanger, and Anna V., who lives at home, keeping house for her father. There are thirteen grandchildren and six great-grand children in the family. Mr. Dawson owns his comfortable home in Buffalo, and is a man of means.

His first vote was cast in 1842, and when the Republican party was organized he discovered in its platform a true expression of his political views, henceforth its patron and candidate his hearty support. Since boyhood he has been an earnest worker in and member of the Methodist Church. He it was who organized the first Sunday School in Buffalo, conducting it in connection with the Methodist Church, and he has served as Superintendent and teacher. Mr. Dawson is a man who carries his religion into everyday life, and it would be difficult to estimate how much good he has done, both by teaching and example. His is a beautiful Christian character, and he is beloved by a wide circle of friends throughout the county.

DAWSON, John (deceased).—In the records of every community there are certain names which stand for much that is good and noble. Their owners are responsible for large developments; have lent their influence to securing improvements, or borne an important part in the political life of the locality. The history of Sangamon County would not be complete without a sketch of the late John Dawson, a hero of the War of 1812, and a man whose probity of character and public-spirited interest in local affairs placed him among the foremost pioneers of this county. Mr. Dawson was born in Fairfax County, Va., in November, 1791, being a son of William and Nancy Dawson, also natives of Virginia. The wilds of the Westwardward had them, and they moved to that State with their family prior to the War of 1812, and were identified with its growth.

John Dawson, growing up in Kentucky amid the strictest of pioneer conditions, became hardy and self-reliant, so that when he enlisted in the second war with England, he was able to bear the hardships of that struggle better than many, as well as the sufferings imposed upon him after being taken prisoner in the battle of the River.
Ralsin. Here he was wounded and carried the bullet in his left lung up to the time of his death. For all of the winter that followed he was held by the enemy, and in after life did not like to think of that period of his existence. After his honorable discharge he returned to Kentucky and continued farming. On October 9, 1837, he was united in marriage with Miss Ada R. Jones, and they had ten children, all of whom are now deceased except Minerva Isabelle Rouse.

Mr. Dawson became a trader on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, and in the intervals continued farming. On his trips, which sometimes extended to New Orleans, he was on the lookout for a suitable location, so that when he decided that Sangamon County was a good one, he came here in 1837, locating a timber tract in the eastern part of Mechanicsburg Township, on the edge of the prairie. To this he added, both by entry and purchase, until he owned 640 acres. From that time on he was intimately associated with the development of the county, giving his best efforts. A strong Whig, he represented his party in the State Legislature, both at Vandalia and Springfield, upon several occasions. Mr. Dawson was one of the "Long Nine" who brought about the removal of the capital from Vandalia to Springfield. Probably no one man contributed more than he to the advancement of Sangamon and Sangamon County, and his memory is tenderly cherished by those who appreciated what he accomplished.

Mrs. Rouse, the only surviving daughter of Mr. Dawson, was born in December, 1833, in the home she now occupies, which stands on the land her father entered from the Government. Her girlhood was spent in the county, where she attended district school and learned from her mother the household graces which made her so excellent a wife. She now owns the homestead of 250 acres, but since the death of her sister in 1900, rents this farm and resides with a friend, a Miss Nelson. The homestead has been highly improved, all but twenty acres being cultivated, and it is now very valuable.

Mrs. Rouse is a consistent member of the Christian Church.

John Dawson has passed away but the memory of the good he accomplished remains. Many of the decisions he gave while acting as Magistrate in his vicinity have stood as precedents for later decisions. He never allowed personal feeling to bias his action but was influenced solely by the highest purpose, and his daughter has every reason to be proud of him and the fact that she is descended from so patriotic, loyal and true a man and public servant.

DAWSON, John. (Vol. I, p. 129.)

DAY, Edward Chester.—Farming rich Sangamon County land is a very profitable business, now that agriculturists operate along scientific lines, and one who is making a success of his work is Edward Chester Day, of Section 26, Illiopolis Township. He was born in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., May 6, 1842, a son of Frank and Amelia (Hogal) Day, natives of Massachusetts, the father having been born May 16, 1810. He was a farmer, who emigrated to Springfield, III., in 1852, spent three years farming in that vicinity, and was also superintendent of a saw-mill. In 1855 he moved to Decatur, to become superintendent of a saw-mill, where he remained until 1862. In that year he embarked in a grocery business, continuing for twelve years, when he moved to Michigan. Spending two years in that State, he then went to Oakley, III., where he established a general store, remaining there until his death, which occurred in 1901. He and his wife had two daughters and one son: Amelia, who became the wife of Edward Bullman, a traveling salesman, who lived in Chicago until his death, when his widow married Walter Griffith, Superintendent of the Kniekerbocker Roofing Company, of Chicago; Miranda, who married A. Fitzgerald and lives in Chicago.

The education of Edward Chester Day was obtained in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., and Springfield and Decatur, III. He assisted his father in all his undertakings, until the latter left Decatur. The young man then went to Lake Fork, Logan County, III., where he farmed until his marriage on August 9, 1862, in Company B, One Hundred and Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving until the close of the war. He participated in many bloody engagements, including the Siege of Vicksburg, Little Rock and others. One of his painful duties was assisting in burying twenty-seven of his own regiment in a well. Food during those terrible days was very scarce, so that cattle were seized and cooked with gunpowder as salt. After many exciting experiments and many narrow escapes, Mr. Day was mustered out at Pine Bluff, Ark., July 12, 1865, and honorably discharged at Camp Butler, Springfield, Ill., August 9, 1865. He then went to Michigan, where he remained during the winter but later went to the southern part of the State and spent six months. He then went to Traverse City, Mich., but a short time later moved to Manistee, Mich., returning to Sangamon County in 1868. He located four miles south of Illiopolis, where he farmed five years, then went to Illiopolis and lived there five years more. He then bought the farm he now owns, consisting of eighty acres in Section 26, Illiopolis Township, which has become very valuable.

Mr. Day was married near Illiopolis, in 1868, to Mary Gassaway, born in Ohio, in March, 1842. Her parents both died in her infancy, and she did not remember either. Her death occurred in January, 1884, after she had borne her husband four daughters and two sons, three of whom survive: Frank R., who lives with his father; Amelia, wife of John Denihan, a farmer of Butler County, Kan., and Mary E., wife of L. A. Bullman, of Chicago, an officer of one of the lake vessels. There are seven grand-children in the family. A veteran of the Civil War, Mr. Day is entitled to distinguished honor for his bravery and patriotic spirit, and his after efforts to establish himself, overcoming the disabilities from which all soldiers suffered, in greater or less degree, as a result of exposure and hardship. He has been connected with the Iliopolis Post, G. A. R., of which he is Adjutant, as well as with the Knights of Pythias. The Methodist Church holds his membership. Always a strong Democrat, he has been called upon to hold the offices of Commissioner of Highways, Assessor and Collector, all for one term, in Iliopolis Township.

DAY, John W.—When the last member of the Grand Army of the Republic has given a final response to the eternal roll call, then will the veterans be properly appreciated. As long as many remain, the soldiers of the Civil War are considered as belonging to the present, and nothing is truly valued until it is taken from us—this is human nature. However, while full honor is not yet accorded those who belonged to the “Boys in Blue,” still a large amount is already given and they stand high in the esteem of their fellow citizens wherever they are found. One of the representative old soldiers of Springfield is John W. Day, born in Muskingum County, Ohio, April 9, 1840, a son of John and Mary (Carr) Day, natives of Pennsylvania. They were farming people, who came to Ohio in an early day and died there. The Grandfather Day also came west to Ohio, spending his remaing days on a farm in that State.

John W. Day was reared like any country boy, receiving a district school education and a thorough training in cultivating the soil and obeying his parents. In 1852 he found expression for his patriotism in enlistment in Company B, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, and was mustered out in 1865, receiving final discharge at Camp Butler. He participated in the battles of Bayou Metoe, Prairie Grove, Little Rock and Cane Hill, as well as others of minor importance. For the past forty-three years Mr. Day has been a resident of Illinois and is loyal to his adopted State. For many years he was engaged in farming in Gardner Township, owning sixty acres, but in 1900, came to Springfield, which has since been his home. He owns 100 acres near Manito, III. He belongs to Stephenson Post, G. A. R., and is much interested in it. His political associates are with the Republican party and for years he served his town as School Director. Mr. Day is a consistent member of the United Brethren Church and gives liberally towards its support.

In Springfield occurred the marriage of Mr. Day and Louisa Williams, the ceremony being performed March 20, 1851. She died and he married (second) Lucy Ann Babcock who died Jan. 6, 1900. Mrs. Day was born in Springfield in 1858, the year the city became the State Capital. Her father and his family came originally from Delaware, but for years were connected with Sangamon County and its affairs. Mr. Day is the father of children as follows: Clarence, who lost his life in the United States service during the Spanish-American War; Walter and Miles, who are both deceased, and Charity, wife of Henry Moore, of Bradford, III. While Mr. Day has been a man of unassuming manner and retiring disposition, devoting his energies to his farming, he has always given his support towards securing good educational advantages and the best government, and can rightly be called one of the public-spirited men of the city.

DEDRICH, Frederick, who has been a resident of Springfield since 1870, has for several years been retired from active life. He has occupied his present home, at 1059 North Sixth Street, for the past forty years, and has seen many changes and improvements in the city during that time. He was born in St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 28, 1833, a son of Frederick and Margaret (Niebolas) Dredrich, both of whom were born in Lorraine, Germany. The father was a farmer by occupation and came to America in 1826, locating in St. Louis, where he spent the rest of his life. The mother died at the age of ninety-two years.

Frederick Dredrich, the subject of this sketch, received his education in a log school house in the vicinity of St. Louis, and at an early age learned the trade of blacksmith. He conducted a blacksmith shop in St. Louis for many years, but after coming to Springfield worked three years in the rolling mills. He was afterwards employed twenty-six years by the Wabash Railroad Company as blacksmith, but retired several years ago. He has been industrious and thrifty and has been able to accumulate some city property. He takes a commendable interest in public affairs and in politics is a Democrat. He is a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church and belongs to St. Joseph's Parish.

Mr. Dredrich was married, in Springfield, June 10, 1857, to Miss Bridget Maloney, who was born in Ireland in 1840 and died in Springfield in 1890. Her parents spent their entire lives in Ireland. Mr. Dredrich and his wife had six children, all of whom are living, namely: James, of Little Rock, Ark.; Joseph, of Los Angeles, Cal.; Mary, living at home; Nettie, wife of Thomas Rhodes, of Buffalo, Ill.; Ada, of Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. Cora Alpizer, a widow, living in Chicago. There are three grand-children in the family. Mr. Dredrich is well known and enjoys the companionship and society of his friends.

DefRATES, James.—There are several lines of business which are absolutely necessary to a community, enterprises which the people must depend upon for their daily sustenance, namely: the bakery, the meat market and the grocery. Probably the latter is the most important, and the former often confused with it. The grocery business is profitable if properly conducted, if the stock is complete and of good grade, the prices scaled reasonably, and (above all) if the proprietor has learned by experience or keen-sightedness what his patrons want. James DeFrates, who conducts a flourishing grocery business on Enos Avenue, is one of Springfield's self-made men. He is a native of the Capital City, born April 1, 1870.

Antony DeFrates, the father of James, was born on the Isle of Madeira, in 1822, where he carried on a retail mercantile business. Soon after his marriage he came to the United States, landing in New York City, whence he came direct to Springfield, and arrived there in very humble circumstances. One of his first employments was chopping wood for Abraham Lincoln, but later he engaged in a teaming business, became successful, and spent the latter years of his life in comfort. His first residence was No. 1012 Miller Street, but he subsequently built a home at Fourteenth and Madison Streets, where his death occurred in 1896. Antony DeFrates married Mary Govin, also a native of Madeira, who died in Springfield about 1899, in the faith of the Presbyterian Church, to which both she and her husband belonged. Their children were as follows: John, Joseph, Mary, Henry Lewis, Mrs. Joseph Barbour and Mrs. Victor Francis. John is a resident of De- catur, Ill., while the rest live in Springfield.

After attending the public schools of Springfield until fourteen years of age, James DeFrates drove a grocery wagon two years for Joe Roderick, and the following fourteen years were spent in the employ of his brother. He was careful with his earnings and finally accumulated enough to enter the field himself, subsequently opening an establishment at Sixth and Madison Streets, in 1902. His business grew to such an extent that he was forced to find larger quarters and sold out, removing to No. 503 North Sixth Street. In April, 1907, his business demanded a larger store, and he sold out to Frank Elshoff. He built his present place of business at No. 711 Enos Avenue, where he has conducted a first-class establishment to the present time, carrying fancy and staple groceries and provisions of all kinds, and catering to some of the best trade in the city.

On June 20, 1896, Mr. DeFrates was married in Springfield to Irene M. Uhler, born on East Capitol Avenue, Springfield, September 28, 1870, and educated at St. Mary's and McClernond public school. Her father was born at South Eighth and Monroe Streets, Springfield, a son of John and Margaret (Hughes) Uhler. John Uhler was born in Pennsylvania, and after his marriage in Maryland, came West, settling in Springfield, where he carried on blacksmithing. Mrs. DeFrates' father spent all his life in Springfield until 1900, when he went to Quincy, Ill. As a lad he helped his father in the blacksmith shop, later carried on a livery business for a few years, and then entered the feed business, operating a sawmill near Sherman. When he was eighteen years old the first call for volunteers for service in the Federal Army during the Civil War was made, and he enlisted in the Seventh Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three months. Later he re-enlisted for three years and serving throughout the war with signal bravery, partaking in some of the fiercest struggles of the great Rebellion, including Shiloh and Corinth. He is a charter member of Stephenson Post, Grand Army of the Republic. His wife died in 1896, having been the mother of but one child, Mrs. DeFrates.

Mr. DeFrates is a Republican in his political views. He and Mrs. DeFrates are consistent members of the Third Presbyterian Church, and have been active in church and charitable movements. They have one daughter, Ruth, at home.

DE FRATES, Manuel.—Portugal has given Sangamon County a number of residents, and they are numbered among its most respected and useful people. Some of them have become specialists along certain lines, and the work they produce is second to none in the country. One of the best representatives of this far-away country in Sangamon County is Manuel DeFrates, residing at No. 1102 East Miller Street, Springfield. He was born on the Island of Madeira, Portugal, September 25, 1848, being a son of Anton and Josephine (Greray) DeFrates, both of Portugal. The parents came to Springfield in 1852, where the father became a peddler, thus continuing until his demise in 1905.

Manuel DeFrates was brought up in Springfield, receiving an education in the public schools there. His favorite pastime during boyhood was playing ball. Later he became interested in horses and for fifteen years was engaged in the race horse business. In 1880, however, he began learning the painting and grading business, eventually embarking in this line of work. He has become so proficient along this line that he now specializes on high-class work only. A true artist, he takes great pride in his finished work and his services are in great demand all over the county.

The marriage of Mr. DeFrates occurred in Springfield, in June, 1867, when he was united with Addie Garden, also a native of Portugal, a daughter of Joseph and Frances Garden, natives of the same land. Joseph Garden was a sea captain, who amassed considerable property in New York City, but did not live long to enjoy it, being drowned in the Gulf of Mexico, while on one of his voyages. His widow survived him, living until about six years ago, when she too passed away in Springfield. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. DeFrates: Ervie, Henry, Bonnie, Lulu, George, Fannie and Myrkle.

Mr. DeFrates' religious connections are with the First Portugal Presbyterian Church of Springfield, of which he is a member. In politics he is a Democrat, while fraternally he is a Modern Woodman, having joined in 1900. Quiet in manner, devoted to his work, conscientious in carrying out contracts, Mr. DeFrates has firmly established himself in the confidence of the business public.

DE FRATES, Manuel.—While there are some large farms in Sangamon County, many others which are smaller in extent are so highly cultivated that they are almost priceless in value, and produce magnificent crops that yield a handsome income to their owners. The climatic conditions of the county make it an ideal place for fruit and truck farming, and many of the farmers devote themselves to one or both of these specialties, with very gratifying results. One of the men who have proven the value of Sangamon County farmland and one who has succeeded far beyond his hopes, is Manuel De Frates, residing on his ten acre farm in Clear Lake Township. He was born on the Island of Madeira in 1850, being a son of Frank and Jennifer (Frates) DeFrates. Their native soil and associations have been the same place. Realizing that their home place afforded few opportunities, the parents left it and came to America in 1857, selecting Springfield as their destination. Arriving in the city they located there, and made it their home until they passed away, the father dying in 1900, and the mother in 1906. They had three sons and four daughters and three children still survive.

Manuel De Frates received a good common school education in Springfield, and after he left school worked at teaming for several years, when he left that occupation and for thirty years carried on farming northwest of Springfield, then moved to his present place of ten acres, in Clear Lake Township.

The marriage of Mr. De Frates occurred in Springfield, November 18, 1872, when he was united with Elizabeth De Frates, born in Springfield, November 14, 1853, but her parents came from the Island of Madeira to Springfield in 1850. Her father was a farmer and he and his wife both died in their new home, where they had made themselves respected by all who knew them. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. De Frates: six daughters, including Mrs. Manuel De Frates, and four sons, of whom five children survive. Manuel De Frates and his wife have had three children: Maud, wife of Kenneth Polk, a carpenter of Springfield; Ralph who is in the employ of C. A. Power, and one who is deceased. There are three grandchildren in the family, who are the pride of their grandparents' hearts.

Mr. De Frates is a member of the Presbyterian Church, and contributes liberally towards its support, for he believes in the good influence exerted by religious bodies. In political faith he is a Republican, but has never aspired to public honors. Hard-working, earnest and conscientious, Mr. De Frates has made the success of his farming which he deserves and it has been gained through his own efforts intelligently directed.

DeFRATIS, John, an honored veteran of the Civil War and a valuable citizen of Springfield, has spent most of his life in that city, having come there with his parents as a small child. By his honest, upright life and his habits of industry he has been successful in a financial sense and has won the esteem and confidence of all who have had business or social dealings with him. Mr. DeFratis was born on the Island of Madeira, about 1846. The father was a retail merchant there as a young man, but not many years after his marriage brought his family to the United States, coming direct to Springfield. Further mention of the family is to be found in connection with the sketch of Joseph DeFratis, a brother of John, which appears in this work.

John DeFratis acquired his education in the public schools of Springfield, receiving but limited opportunity for attending school, and as a boy began to earn his own living. While still young he engaged in driving a team in the city. He enlisted in Company B, One Hundred Forty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for ninety days, and served one year altogether.

Mr. DeFratis was married in Springfield, to Miss Mary Gardner, and four children have been blessed this union. He erected a one-room house, in which the family lived for a time, and by subsequent additions from time to time, as he was able to make them, has now completed a very comfortable home on East Miller Street. Mr. DeFratis is a member of the Republican party and greatly interested in everything pertaining to the public welfare.

DeGAN, George A. (deceased), spent most of his life in Chicago, but since his death his widow has resided at 407 South Sixth Street, Springfield, in the home that was formerly occupied by her parents, Mr. De Gan was a native of Canada, born September 22, 1850, came with his parents to Chicago, as a boy, and there received his education in the public schools. His father was a stone cutter by trade. When the son reached manhood he became active in political affairs and all his life was a stanch Democrat. He became a member of the Cook County Democracy and served some time as Sergeant of Police in Chicago. He was connected with the Chicago Drainage Canal Board. He was a prominent and well-known citizen, and his death occurred in Chicago, by drowning in Lake Michigan, July 3, 1902. He was buried in Graceland Cemetery, and his widow soon after left the city. He left many warm friends and his death was widely mourned. He was a member of the Catholic Church and the Catholic Order of Foresters.

Mr. De Gan was married, in Chicago, June 17, 1891, to Miss Anna Evans, who was born in Streator, Ill., December 10, 1870, daughter of John and Mary (Jones) Evans, both natives of Wales. Mr. Evans, and his wife came to America and settled at Streator, where he purchased a farm and conducted it many years. Later they located in Springfield, where he died September 29, 1895, and his widow March 22, 1904. Both are interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery. Their former home is now the property of their daughter, Mrs. DeGau has won many friends in Springfield and is a woman of high character and refinement. She and her husband had no children.

Decken, Adolph F., Assistant Cashier of Ridgely National Bank, of Springfield. The interests of any financial institution must be carefully guarded and none but the most conservative and experienced men are placed in official positions by careful stockholders. Upon these officials rests the responsibility for the safe conduct and guarding of the standing of the bank and the interests of the depositors. Ridgely National Bank is one of the sound, reliable, conservative moneyed institutions of Sangamon County, and numbers among its depositors many of the best business houses in its locality. It has always been the policy of the bank to have in its office men whose probity is beyond question and whose experience in the financial world would be of service to it and its patrons. In Adolph F. Decken, the present incumbent of the office of Assistant Cashier in this institution, they have found a man in every way worthy of the trust reposed in him.

Mr. Decken was born in Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Germany, July 15, 1848, being the son of John and Johanna Decken. After spending his boyhood in Germany, where he received a common school education in the excellent public schools of his native place, at the age of sixteen years, Adolph F. Decken, with his wife and mother, came to America, landing at New York, in 1864. There he found employment as a clerk until 1868, when he came to Springfield, and since that time has been associated with the business and financial interests of that city. His association with banking affairs dates from 1871, and in 1896 he became Assistant Cashier of the bank with which he is now connected. His long career as a banker has been marked by a conservative policy and governed by a keen, shrewd comprehension of the conditions with which he has been surrounded.

In 1870 occurred the marriage of Mr. Decken and Elizabeth Speth, who died in 1887. Later Mr. Decken married her sister, Julia Speth. He became the father of four daughters and five sons, and all survive with the exception of one daughter. Two of the daughters are married and all the sons are prominent and successful business men. One son is in the bank with his father and shows signs of becoming as good a financier as the latter. Mr. Decken's fraternal affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Court of Honor and the Loyal Americans. For years he has been a Democrat, but does not confine himself rigidly to party lines in local affairs.

The work of a man like Mr. Decken cannot be too highly praised. Coming to this country an ignorant young man, with little knowledge of the language and none of the customs of his new home, he obtained immediate employment and steadily forged ahead, always working hard and being economical in his expenditures. Not only did he save money but he invested it wisely, and in time had amassed a good fortune helping others to do the same. The principles which he employed in the handling of his own resources he still applies to the banking institution of which he is so important an officer, with the result that it occupies an enviable position among financial houses of its kind, and his advice is asked and taken by the most substantial men of his part of the State.

De Jong, Gerhard.—From the beginning of Holland as a nation, its people have been noted for their thrift and industry, so that whenever one of its sons comes to the United States, he is welcomed, for it is known he will become a good citizen. One of the men who is representative of the best class of his countrymen is Gerhard De Jong, born in Holland, March 15, 1845, now living on the edge of Springfield. His father, who was born May 22, 1824, and died in 1890, was a farmer, and the parents spent their lives in their native land, being content with conditions there. They had two children: Gerhard, Arnold, Peter, William, Cornelius, Patermilla, Marie, Cornella, Andrea and Johanna.

After being educated in his home schools, in 1864 Gerhard De Jong left Holland and came to the United States, locating directly in Springfield. He followed printing a number of years, and later became foreman of the West End Brick Yard, but recently retired from active business, having amassed a comfortable property.

On May 23, 1886, Mr. De Jong was married in the Lutheran Church, at Altamont, Ill., to Minnie Zilman, born there in 1867. She passed away January 10, 1904, having been a devoted wife and mother. Her father, Lewis Zilman, was born in Germany, in 1836, and died in 1901. His wife, Minnie, died in 1907. There were the following children in the Zilman family: Houston, Annie, Minnie, Bertha and Gusta. Mr. and Mrs. De Jong had children as follows: Henry, born March 13, 1887; Christian, May 23, 1891; Arnold, July 16, 1893, and Gerhard, born September 1, 1898, and Annie, wife of Emil Reisch, of Springfield.

Mr. De Jong is a Democrat, a Lutheran and a member of the Home Circle Society. He owns a beautiful home on one and a quarter acres of land, where he lives, as well as a house and lot at No. 1917 Laurel Street and two lots at the foot of East Carpenter Street. His life has been an example to others, for he has shown what a young man, ignorant of the language, can accomplish by steady persistence and thrifty saving.

DEMENT, Henry Dodge. (Vol. I, pp. 131-132.)

DENEEN, Charles Samuel, the first Governor of Illinois who, in thirty years, has been elected for a second term, was born in Edwardsville, this State, May 4, 1863; his parents being Samuel H. and Mary F. (Ashley) Deneen. He represents one of the oldest Illinois families. His great-grandfather, Risdon Moore, was a native of Delaware, and from Delaware came to St. Clair County, this State, in 1812. He had previously served as a soldier of the Revolutionary War. On coming to Illinois he brought with him all of his slaves, but after reaching his destination at once gave them their freedom. He figured prominently in the public life of the Territory, became one of the political leaders and was Speaker of the Illinois House of Representatives in the Territorial Legislature in 1814. Following the admission of the State into the Union he served as a Member of the First General Assembly and again in the Third and Fourth Assemblies. In the Legislature of 1823 he was one of the most active in opposing the calling of a constitutional convention for the purpose of changing the constitution and making this a slave State. He was one of the two men who signed a minority report in opposition to that movement and also demanding the total abolition of slavery, this occurring forty years before Abraham Lincoln wrote the Emancipation Proclamation. Because of this, on his return from the Legislature, he was burned in effigy by his opponents at Troy, Madison County, but at the following election was again chosen as a free State Member of the Illinois House of Representatives.

The Rev. William L. Deneen, grandfather of the Governor, was born at Bedford, Pa., October 30, 1788, came to Illinois in 1828, and was for nineteen years a Methodist minister in the southern part of the State. On account of illness, in 1847 he was obliged to discontinue public speaking and took up the profession of surveying, serving as County Surveyor of St. Clair County from 1849 until 1855. His death occurred in 1875. His son, Samuel H. Deneen, father of Charles S. Deneen, was born near Belleville, St. Clair County, Ill., in 1825, but was reared in Lebanon and was graduated from McKendree College. He afterward served for thirty years as a professor in that college, holding the chair of Latin and ancient history. During the Civil War he served as Adjutant in the One-Hundred and Seventeenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and filled the office of United States Consul at Belleville, Ontario, under President Harrison. He wedded Mary Frances Ashley, a representative of one of the oldest families of Lebanon, Ill., where she was born December 18, 1836, her father being Hiram K. Ashley, of that place.

Governor Deneen spent his youthful days under the parental roof, his early education being acquired in the public schools of Lebanon, and supplemented by a course in McKendree College, from which he graduated in 1882. When a boy he had to work upon his father's farm and parental authority attempted to develop in him habits of industry and diligence. It is said that on one occasion he emulated the example of the renowned Tom Sawyer when his father arranged that he should cut and cord a certain amount of wood for a stipulated sum. He gathered together all of his boy friends who needed money and hired them to do the work at so much per day. A few weeks later the father found the work had been done, and the son was several dollars the richer because of the money he had cleared from the labors of the other boys. This ability to manage others has characterized his entire life. While still a young man he determined upon the practice of law as a life work and studied at nights in an interior Illinois county, providing for his own support in the meantime by school teaching, which profession he followed for three terms in the country schools near Newton, Jasper County, and for two terms near Godfrey, Madison County. He came to Chicago in 1885 and started to complete his law studies in the Territorial College of Law, Northwestern Law School. But ere he had mastered the full course his money gave out and he attempted to obtain a position as clerk in a law office. For days he sought employment of this character, but no one needed his services. Finally he was offered a position in St. Paul at a meager salary and he spent a short time there, after which he returned to Chicago and became a teacher in the public night schools, while the day was devoted to the pursuit of his law course. His first law office was a most unpromising one, containing only a few much worn books, a desk and two chairs. Clients, too, were slow in coming, and to keep busy he haunted the county jail and defended the prisoners who were without counsel. Months passed thus and the experiences there gained stood him in excellent stead when he became State's Attorney. Slowly but surely he worked his way upward, manifesting ability that at length won wide recognition. In the early days he would not always contend that his client was not guilty but he would at times contend that sufficient evidence had not been brought out to prove him guilty. This line of reasoning brought to Mr. Deneen no little success and eventually led to his retention as counsel in cases of greater importance. At length his ability brought him to the position of prosecuting attorney and this office proved the stepping-stone to the higher positions which he has since filled. When he took the oath of office it had almost become a proverb that the criminal with any influence could escape. Mr. Deneen, however, announced that he would administer the duties of his office according to law and that an indicted man, no matter what his social position, financial standing, his religion, his politics or his race, must stand trial. When his assistants were ready to present to the Grand Jury the case of George W. Spalding, President of the Globe Savings Bank, and Treasurer of the State University, Mr. Denney called them into conference. One said: "I think we'd better try to have Spalding indicted on the one count—it's the strongest against him." Mr. Denney asked: "How many counts are there against him?" and received the answer: "Twenty-five." Came the quick reply: "Present every count to the Grand Jury." Mr. Denney was prosecuting attorney when the case of Edward S. Dreyer, Treasurer of the West Chicago Park Commissioners, came up. It was a bitter fight and the case went to four higher courts, being twice before the Supreme Court of Illinois, and finally was taken to the United States Supreme Court, where opinions were sustained resulting in conviction. Equally representative of Mr. Denney's methods was his prosecution of a candidate on the same ticket with him in 1900, thereby imperilling the minds of the party leaders the success of the ticket at the polls. When this was said to Mr. Denney he replied, "It may not be expedient but it is right." And with Charles S. Denney to believe in the right of his position is to follow it.

In the early days when Mr. Denney was waiting for practice he became interested in politics. At first it was a local interest that brought him to the bar, and led to his election to the State Legislature in 1880. The position which he took concerning certain vital questions has since made him a factor in National as well as State affairs, and he is again and again called to Washington in consultation with the heads of the party concerning the situation in the Middle West. He proved himself as fearless and as resourceful in the councils of the party as he had in the office of Attorney for Cook County. He received his party's nomination for Governor in 1904 and during the campaign announced himself as the supporter of an enactment of a Constitutional Amendment to enable the General Assembly to pass special laws for Chicago; the civil service law to be applied to the State penal and charitable institutions and the rehabilitation of the State charitable institutions, together with the enactment of a compulsory primary law. At the close of his first term, in the face of strong factional opposition, he was again nominated and re-elected and that he has stood by his campaign pledges is indicated in the fact that during his administration, which now covers six years, legislation has secured the Direct Primary Law, Municipal Courts for Chicago, a State Highway Commission to encourage good roads, a State Geological Commission for the study of State resources, forestry preserves have been provided for, a State Dental Board has been created, safety appliances are required on railroads and inspectors provided for the placing of children in homes and providing for their visitation. The State has also been divided into Insane Districts and the county insane have been taken over by these districts. Legislation has also led to the adoption of a Local Option Law; employers have been required to report all accidents to employees; an act requiring the protection of men employed in structural work; an act for the registration of nurses; coal mining laws were revised demanding the examination of all miners; a two-cent passenger rate law was passed; an act providing the State Treasurer to turn the interest on State money over to the State; a law regulating motor vehicles; an act giving the State Food Commission the right to inspect all foods; the West Park Commission authorized to issue three-million-dollar bonds; an Internal Improvement Commission created and deep-waterway legislation enacted; Commission; an act providing for an Educational Commission to revise all school laws; legislation revising and improving insurance laws: North Park Commission authorized to issue one-million-dollar bonds for small parks; a law authorizing the city of Chicago to fix rates and charges for gas and electricity for power, heating, lighting and other purposes; a Negotiable Instrument Act; the revision of the Practice Act; an act to suppress mob law; an act to prevent policy playing; and thirty State buildings were either built or remodeled.

On the 10th of May, 1891, Governor Denney was united in marriage to Miss Blina Day Mahoney, of Mount Carroll, Carroll County, Ill. Their children are four in number, namely: Charles Ashley, Dorothy, Frances and Blina. The wife and mother was educated at the Frances Shimmer Academy of Mount Carroll. Governor Denney is the idol of his family circle and spends his happiest hours with his wife and children. Mr. and Mrs. Denney hold membership in a Methodist Church and in a quiet, unostentatious yet effective way, he aids in church work and in various charitable movements. Well poised and with imperturbable spirit, the shafts of political ennui glance off, leaving him unharmed, and while there has been nothing spectacular in his life history and in his administration, it is doubtful if any of his predecessors have more genuine friends and admirers than Governor Denney now has.

DENNEY, James.—When a man has passed the age of four score years and ten, spent in earnest endeavor in business and commercial enterprises, in patriotic service during two wars of his adopted country, and in no less patriotic peace, and has then finally settled down to a well-earned rest, he must be considered one of the foremost men of his community, a man whose example should prove of benefit to the youth of the generations to come. James Denney, of No. 1318 East Washington Street, Springfield, one of the oldest men in the county and a resident of Springfield since the year 1872, has such a record. Born February 8, 1829, in County Meath, Ireland, he is the youngest and only surviving one of the family of eleven children of Michael and Bridget (Gannon) Denney.

Michael Denney, whose occupation was that of a farmer in Ireland, served in the British army, and was under General Wellington at the battle of Waterloo, where he lost his right arm and left leg. His death occurred at the old home in Ireland, in 1840, his widow surviving him until 1854, when she passed away at the same place. After the death of the father the children all came to the United States, where all except James have since died.

James Denney was but a lad when he came to this country with an uncle, Ned Denney, and had attended school in Ireland for four years. The passage was made to New York City in the steamship “City of New York,” under Captain Copper, and young Denney went to Brooklyn, to live with a sister, Mrs. Ellen Flannan. There he pursued his studies in a night school until his uncle took him to Scranton to work in the mines, but after one and one-half years there he became a mariner on the U. S. Battleship “Brooklyn,” on which he continued to serve until his enlistment in the Twenty-second New York Regiment, under Colonel Bassett, for service during the Mexican War. The regiment had just arrived at the mouth of the Rio Grande, when news was brought of the surrender of Buena Vista, and was ordered back to New York City and mustered out of service. Soon thereafter Mr. Denney came to LaSalle County, Ill., where for a time he was employed in the United States bonded warehouses, but subsequently took up farming in Stark County, and then went to mining and sinking mines throughout this part of the country, at which he was engaged at the time of his enlistment in the Union Army for service during the Civil War. At Kewanee, Ill., he became a private in Company H, Ninth Illinois Cavalry, under Colonel Brackett, of Chicago, and served with bravery until the close of the war, receiving a bullet wound in the neck, at Tupelo, Miss.

After receiving his honorable discharge, Mr. Denney returned to Kewanee, where he had located some years before, but in 1872 came to Springfield, and that city has been his home to the present time. For many years he was engaged in mining and mine sinking, and in this field became one of the best known men in the State. Finally, deciding that he had earned a rest from his labors, he retired, and is now living in his residence at No. 1318 East Washington Street, which he bought in 1872, on first coming to Springfield. But few citizens attain the grand old age of ninety-two years.

Mr. Denney was married in 1849 to Bridget Quinn, also a native of County Meath, Ireland, who came to the United States when a young woman. Mr. and Mrs. Denney have had eight children, namely: Michael J., Thomas, William, John Joseph, Lawrence, Margaret, Elizabeth and Catherine, of whom the first two are deceased and the rest residents of Springfield. The family hold membership in the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception. In political belief Mr. Denney has always been identified with the Democratic party.

DENTON, Preston.—Only the veterans themselves know what the country owes them, for they passed through the mighty struggle, risking life and limb in defense of the starry flag every American loves so dearly. They kept its silken folds free from the stain of dishonor and kept it waving, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pa-

Dent. While it is true from soil, the blood of thousands who did not return, dyed the battle fields a terrible crimson, and many others have gone through life maimed because of war's mighty cruelty. Sangamon County is proud indeed of her veterans, and shows her appreciation of them, especially on Decoration Day, when both the living and the dead are honored above all others. One of the most highly respected of the old soldiers of the county is Preston Denton, now a retired farmer of Buffalo. He was born in Shelby County, Ill., January 2, 1845, a son of Jonas and Fannie (Nelson) Denton, he born in the North of Ireland and the mother in Tennessee. Jonas Denton came to the United States with his father, who first located in Virginia, but later moved to Illinois, becoming one of the pioneers of Shelby County, where he engaged in farming. Jonas Denton also farmed in Shelby County, but death called him away when Preston was still a lad. The mother survived until 1885, dying in Bourbon County, Kan., where she had gone to reside. There were two sons and three daughters in the family, but Preston Denton is the only survivor.

The education of Mr. Denton was obtained in the school of his district, and even in boyhood he was called upon to do a man's work on the farm owned by his mother. In 1866 he moved to Kansas, where he lived for three years, but then returned to Shelby County to resume farming there. From this place he moved to Christian County, and after farming there for four months, his labors were interrupted by the outbreak of the war, and he enlisted from there in Company C, Sixty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under command of Colonel True, serving nearly four years. He participated in several important battles, among them being Corinth, Gettysburg, Murfreesboro, Nashville, Holly Springs and Bowling Green, as well as many skirmishes, during which time he gave his country a brave and efficient service. He received his honorable discharge, in March, 1868, at Fort Smith, Ark. After this he returned to Christian County to resume farming. In the following nine years there, moved to Dawson, Ill., to take up railroad work with the Wabash Railroad Company. He continued in this for five years, then went back to farming. He came to Sangamon County, where he operated property for seven years, but his health, sadly undermined by the privations endured while he was a soldier, broke down, and he was forced to retire. He came to Buffalo, which has since remained his home. He has a pleasant home and receives a pension from a grateful Government.

The marriage of Mr. Denton took place in Christian County, September 6, 1866, when he was united to Mary M. Coffer, born in Putnam County, Ind., May 31, 1844. Her parents moved from Indiana to Iowa, where her father died, but her mother passed away in Kansas. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Denton, three of whom are still living: James M. resides on a farm near Sherman, Ill.; Arnulda married Albert Statts and lives in Buffalo, and Hattie M., married Franklin Smith and lives in Buffalo. There are eleven grandchildren in the family.

The first vote Mr. Denton cast was for Abraham Lincoln whom he had seen many times, and for whom he entertained a lasting admiration. He is a member of John Beerbann Post, No. 613, G. A. R., and for the past sixteen years has been its Officer of the Day. He has friends all over the county. He is a consistent member of the Christian Church, and few men in Mechanicsburg Township stand higher in the public esteem.

DERRY, James S.—Farming is the oldest recorded calling, and from the beginning of the world men have been profitably engaged in tilling the soil. Many of Sangamon County's most prosperous men are farmers, and one of them is James S. Derry, who rents 140 acres in Springfield Township. He was born in Rochester Township, Sangamon County, October 10, 1862, being a son of Frank M. and Margaret J. (Tibbs) Derry, the former born near Harper's Ferry, Va., September 15, 1837, and the latter in Woodside Township, Sangamon County, September 12, 1844.

Frank M. Derry resided in Virginia until he attained his majority, when he came to Illinois, locating in Rochester Township to engage in farming, although he had learned the undertaking and cabinetmaking business in Harper's Ferry. Until 1884, he continued his farming but in that year engaged in operating a general store. This he sold in 1889 to resume farming in Rochester Township. In 1894 he left the farm and located in Springfield, where for a year he conducted a feed store, but at the expiration of that time, retired. On the maternal side of the house the grandparents were from North Carolina and moved to Berry Station, Sangamon County, where they died many years ago. Frank M. Derry had two uncles who served in the War of 1812, and they were the great uncles of James S. Derry. There were four children in the family born to Frank M. Derry and wife, of whom but two survive: James S. and William F. Two died in infancy. While residing in Rochester Township, Frank M. Derry served as School Director.

The education of James S. Derry was secured in Rochester Township district schools. During his boyhood he worked for his father, but later learned the machinist's trade, securing employment with the Sattley Manufacturing Company, with which he remained for three years, later traveling through the northwest, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin and South Dakota for two years. In 1904, tiring of this kind of life, he began farming in Rochester Township, buying a farm, which he sold and moved to his present one in Springfield Township, comprising 140 acres of as fine land as can be found in the county.

The marriage of Mr. Derry occurred in Rochester, March 30, 1886, to Mary E. Blair, born in Clay County, Ill., April 4, 1864, being a daughter of William Blair, a native of North Carolina, who came to Clay County many years ago, dying there with his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Derry became parents of four children: Harri- son taught school in Divernon for two years, but is now in New Mexico; Myrtle M., married Ellis Hawthorne, connected with the Springfield Car Company; Addie B. lives at home; the eldest, Jessie E., died in 1888.

James S. Derry is a life member of the Douglas Avenue Methodist Church. Fraternally Mr. Derry belongs to the Modern Woodmen and has held every office in that order, being now one of the high dignitaries. In politics he is a Republican and gives the party his hearty support upon all occasions. For some time he was Tax Collector of Springfield Township, and while living in Rochester was Alderman for a number of years. He is a progressive man, who believes in carrying on business according to modern methods. His success has been rapid, but has been legitimately attained. He has never been afraid of hard work and has intelligently directed his efforts in whatever line he has pursued with the result that he has prospered. Socially he and his family are prominent, and all have many friends in the community in which they reside.

De SILVA, Emanuel, an industrious and successful farmer of Sangamon County, has lived on his present farm for thirty-five years and has brought his land to a fine state of cultivation. He was born in Portugal, May 11, 1850, son of John De Silva and wife, both natives of Portugal, the former born in 1829 and died about 1894, and the latter died in 1873. The parents were farmers in their native country and came to America in 1864, locating in Sangamon County, where they spent one year, then moved to Portage Hill. Later they came to Springfield, where they spent one year, then moved to a farm five miles northeast of the city, where they lived five years, when they moved to Sawyer Avenue, Springfield, and spent seven years there. The mother died in 1875 and the following year the father returned to Portugal and spent five years there, then returned to Illinois and located on the farm where his son Emanuel now lives, and where his death occurred. Both he and his wife were buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He had one other son besides Emanuel, who came to America, and who is also a farmer. This son has five children: William, Frank, Robert and Eli, farmers, and Louis, at home with his father.

Emanuel De Silva has been engaged in farming since he was twenty-six years of age and has met with gratifying success. He is an energetic and intelligent man and pays careful attention to all the details of his work. He owns seventy-three acres of excellent land and devotes it to general farming. He is accounted a useful and public-spirited farmer and in politics is a Republican, having served three years as School Director. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church and is interested in many charitable and public causes.

Mr. De Silva was married in Springfield, February 16, 1876, to Mary De Fraties, born June 6, 1855. Her father died in 1875 and her mother in 1903, having located in Sangamon County at an early day. Mr. De Fraties was a gunsmith and for a number of years carried on a business of his own. Five children were born to Mr. De Fraties and his wife, of whom two survive, Mrs. De Silva, and Mrs. Anna Veare. Mr. and Mrs. DeSilva became parents of six children, three sons and three daughters: Manuel, a dressmaker in Springfield; Anna and Pauline, living at home, the latter learning the dressmaking trade; John, in drug business at Chicago; Emanuel, Jr., at home; Joe, working in a shoe factory in Springfield. Mr. De Silva readily makes friends and is known as being honest and reliable in his dealings.

DE SOUZA, Canada B.—Nearly every country of the world has given the United States some people who have done credit to Portugal than from many others, but they are none the less welcome. The people of this faraway land are frugal, industrious and religiously inclined, and when given the opportunities offered here develop into excellent examples of American citizenship. The above is true of the Portuguese in general, but there are special instances of those of that nationality deserve more than passing mention, and this is the case of Canada B. De Souza, of Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County. He was born in Portugal, September 29, 1851, being a son of Joseph and Mary (Spinell) De Souza. Unfortunately he has no knowledge of his mother, she having died before he was born. He re- membered gentle and fostering care. The father was engaged in agricultural pursuits in his native land, where he died about 1900.

Having heard of better advantages to be obtained in America, Canada B. De Souza decided to take his chances and, after much planning and much saving, secured the money to embark on the long trip, from which he landed in Boston, Mass. From that city he came direct to Springfield, where he secured employment on a farm.

For the ten years that followed he worked with one great object in view, eventually owning land of his own. Little by little he saved up the money, until in 1881, he bought forty acres of timberland in Mechanicsburg Township. From then on he labored early and late, first clearing off the timber, then planting his land with the seed best adapted to it. From time to time he has added to his farm until he now owns 220 acres in one body, which is as good farming land as can be found in Sangamon County. All of this is under cultivation, with the exception of five acres, left as timber, which he uses for pasture. On this land he carries on a general farming business, raising cattle, horses and hogs in addition to grains. By experimenting he has learned the best methods of farming and often sets an example his neighbors are not slow to follow.

In March, 1882, Mr. De Souza married Mallinda Dillon, born in Sangamon County, Ill., daughter of Abram and Christina Dillon. Mr. and Mrs. De Souza have children as follows: Abram, Canada, Mary, Frank and Emanuel, all at home. These have been given excellent educations, for although his own advantages were limited, he believes in education for his children of whom he is very proud, and entertains high hopes for their future.

Politically Mr. De Souza is a Democrat, but he has been so occupied with his own affairs that he has not taken a very active part in local matters, although if occasion arose he could be counted upon to take the side of law and order. Frugal, hard-working, and quick to embrace any opportunity offered to better his condition, this son of Portugal has carried out his plans and ought to be proud of what he has accomplished. It is not an easy matter for one foreign-born to come to a new country, being ignorant of customs and language, to get on and become eminently successful, so that Mr. De Souza must be accorded the highest of praise. He owns a fine farm, supports local improvements, and has raised up a family that is a credit not only to himself and wife, but also to the community in which they have lived.

DE SOUZA, Manuel (deceased).—Springfield has had representatives from almost every part of the world among its population, and the city has proven a happy home for those who sought here what they could not find in their native lands, freedom to earn a comfortable living and to worship according to the dictates of their conscience. The late Manuel De Souza came from the Island of Madeira, where he was born November 2, 1840, being a son of Frank and Rosa Ann De Souza, natives of that island, where the father was a stock farmer.

Manuel De Souza was adopted by an aunt, Mrs. Mary De Frates, when he was two years old, and by her was brought to Springfield. He attended school there, and afterwards learned the machinist trade, at which he worked during the remainder of his life, becoming very expert and commanding high prices for his services. Mr. De Souza passed away August 22, 1906, having lived in Springfield for sixty-eight years. During this time he served the Republican party as Alderman from his ward, and was Supervisor more than once. He was made Superintendent of the Water Works, and in this capacity his skill as a machinist came into good play, so that he was able to render most efficient service to the city. For many years he took an active part as a Mason, an Odd Fellow and member of the A. O. U. W., of Springfield. The Presbyterian Church of this city held his membership, and he died firm in the faith of that denomination.

Mr. De Souza was married in Springfield, March 26, 1860, to Charlotte Roderick, born in 1841, on the Island of Madeira. Her father died July 16, 1911, the mother also being deceased. Mr. and Mrs. De Souza had the following children: Frank, born December 23, 1866; Joseph, born November 11, 1868; Lottie, born May 27, 1871; Albert, born May 11, 1875; Rosaline, born July 26, 1880, and Ruth, born April 9, 1882. Mrs. De Souza owns her residence at No. 1205 East Jefferson Street. The family has been active in many movements and its individual members enjoy the confidence of all with whom they are brought in contact. Mr. De Souza was a public spirited man, and contributed both time and money to secure improvements in the city. He believed in its future and was taken away in the midst of a busy, happy life, when he still had much to live for. He left a fine family that is held in high esteem. Mrs. De Souza has eight grandchildren all living in this city. She has a son and daughter at home. She has lived forty-one years in her present home. Mr. De Souza worked at Abraham Lincoln's house for several months and was there when the later was elected President. He always ate at the table with Mr. Lincoln.

DE SYLVER, John, who is proprietor of two hotels at Springfield, Ill., favorably known to a wide circle, including business men, politicians and others who are continually attracted to the capital of the State, is a representative citizen among many lines. He owns and conducts both the De Sylver Hotel and the Brunswick Hotel. He was born in the city, May 5, 1868, a son of John and Lucy (Figueroa) De Sylver. The parents of Mr. De Sylver were both born in Portuguese possessions, the father in 1831, and the mother on the Island of Madeira, in 1836. They came to America and to Springfield, in 1851. The father had been trained more or less in agricultural pursuits, and these he continued in Illinois until his death, which occurred at the home where he had resided in Sangamon County, in April, 1900. He had acquired considerable real estate and a part of it is in the city of Springfield, and is of much value. He married twice, his first wife dying in 1880. He married as his second wife Miss Jessie Silva, who survives him. He was the father of seven children, three sons and three daughters, namely: Julia, who died in 1901, was the wife of Charles Seaman; John; Lewis, who is a resident of Springfield; Minule, who is the wife of Joseph Roderick, of Springfield; Frank, who died early; Mamie, who is the wife of Elmer Roderick, of Springfield, and Minnie Lucy, born in June, 1850, died in 1870.

John De Sylver, with his brothers and sisters, attended the schools of his home township. Afterward he assisted his father on the home farm until he was twenty-five years of age, when he entered into the hotel business at Springfield, immediately meeting with success in the undertaking, and recently has added to his business scope and responsibilities. He is proprietor of the De Sylver Hotel, at No. 505 East Madison Street, and his more recent acquisition was the Brunswick Hotel. Both houses are conducted on the American plan, and it is the aim of Mr. De Sylver to give his guests real comfort, an excellent table and attentive service.

Mr. De Sylver was married by Rev. Van- ders Cantrall in Illinois, on October 13, 1891, to Miss Alice Conner, who was born at Pleasant Plains, Ill., June 12, 1871, a daughter of Jefferson and Louisa (Adams) Conner. Mrs. De Sylver's father was born November 1, 1850, and died December 23, 1883, and the mother was born August 28, 1854, and died October 22, 1899. Mr. Conner was a Democrat in politics, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They were the parents of six children, Mrs. De Sylver being the oldest: Annie, who is the wife of William C. Conner; Addie Belle; Albert, and John, these three residing at Springfield, and Sylvester, who died at the age of three years. Mr. and Mrs. De Sylver have one child, Ernest, who was born July 9, 1893. They attend the Second Presbyterian Church. He is a Republican in politics, but takes more interest in his business than in office-seeking. He is identified fraternally with Aerie No. 457, Eagles, with Nest No. 1191, Owls, and with the Court of Honor, with which his wife is also identified.

DICKMANN, Casper (deceased).—The records of Sangamon County are filled with the struggles of those brave pioneers who came there full of confidence for its future, investing their scanty earnings in farm land. The hiftles saw the settlement there of many foreign-born men, who sought in the new land a home and freedom. In those early days Sangamon County farm land was not so valuable as it is today. Those settling upon it had to overcome much, and yet many lived to reap large returns from this very land. One of the most successful of these early farmers, was the late Casper Dickmann, born in Germany, October 5, 1828, a son of a German-born farmer. Neither of the parents ever left the fatherland, but died within its confines.

Like thousands of other German boys, Casper Dickmann grew up in the country neighborhood.
in which he was born, enjoying such educational privileges as the schools there afforded, and after working some time for his father on the farm, left home to come to America in 1856. Landing at New Orleans, he made his way to St. Louis, and a short time later left that city to proceed on to Springfield and vicinity. There he bought land and farmed on it until his retirement in 1886, when he located in the city.

His death occurred May 11, 1907, and he died firm in the faith of the German Lutheran Church, to which he had belonged for many years.

On January 27, 1876, Mr. Dickmann was married in Springfield to Anna E. Schmoll, born in Germany September 7, 1834, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Oshman) Schmoll. Her parents also spent their lives in Germany. The father died in 1868 and the mother in 1813. Mrs. Dickmann made a trip home in 1899, enjoying very much her visit to her birthplace. Mr. and Mrs. Dickmann have children as follows: Conrad, who lives in Springfield; Catharine E., wife of Rev. William Roesener, a minister of the German Lutheran Church, who lives at Bremen, Ind.; and Mary, wife of Rev. Gottlieb Theils, lived at Stuttgart, Ark., but died six months after marriage. There are nine grandchildren. Mrs. Dickmann owns her pleasant home at No. 317 West Carpenter Street, as well as the farm of 160 acres, which lies on the county line between Sangamon and Morgan Counties. Mr. Dickmann made a success of his farming and was proud of his work. While never interested in public affairs, to the extent of desiring office, he could always be counted upon to give his support to any measure he believed would work out for the good of the community, and had many warm personal friends throughout both Sangamon and Morgan Counties, where he lived for so long.

DILLARD, R. Martin, of Springfield, Ill., belongs to one of the old families of Sangamon County, of which he is a native. He was born in Springfield Township, January 22, 1847, son of Benjamin Franklin and Mary (Crowder) Dillard, the father a native of Virginia, born August 10, 1810, and the mother a Kentuckian, born in 1818. The grandfather, William Dillard, was born in Virginia and in 1830 came to Sangamon County, where he spent the remainder of his life. Benjamin F. Dillard was educated in Virginia and as a young man removed to Kentucky, where for a number of years he was engaged as stage driver. In 1850 he settled in Springfield Township, Sangamon County. The place where he located was known as the old McKinnie Settlement and his wife had come to Sangamon County with her parents when a small child, the trip being made by wagons. Her parents were also farmers, Benjamin F. Dillard was married in Sangamon County, where he lived until his death, September 1, 1889, his widow surviving him until 1870. When he came to Sangamon County he also made the trip by wagon and upon his arrival entered eighty acres of land, which he improved and operated, and he was active and successful in this work until the time of his death. Both died on the home place, where their five children had been born. They were: Eustatia, who married Edward E. Koch; David, who married J. died on the home place in 1864; William R. lives on the old home place; Mary E., deceased; R. Martin.

R. Martin Dillard was educated at the Liberty School, about four miles north of Springfield, and his first work was performed on his father's farm, where he grew to maturity and remained until he reached his majority, when he began farming on his own account. He continued this occupation until 1903, then took up his residence in Springfield, and now occupies a most comfortable residence at No. 633 West North Grand Avenue. He is employed by the Lincoln Park Coal & Brick Company.

Mr. Dillard was married in Springfield by Rev. E. B. Rogers, of the Central Baptist Church, May 3, 1883, to Lucy Frances Cox, who was born in Macon County, Ill., on a place near Mount Zion and eight miles east of Decatur, August 18, 1854. She is a daughter of John T. and Martha A. (Cox) Campbell, the father born in Virginia, December 22, 1831, and the mother a Pennsylvanian, born December 6, 1835. Seven children were born to Mr. Campbell and wife, the oldest being Mrs. Dillard and the others as follows: Emma, wife of Lewis Carpenter, a farmer of Colorado; Luella, wife of William Maxie, a farmer of Fort Scott, Kan.; Clara, wife of Thomas Parkmore, of Roasters, Mo.; Martha, wife of Charles Broodway, a farmer living near Joplin, Mo., where he has an extensive strawberry farm; and William. Lucy Frances Campbell married (first) George W. Coy, September 8, 1871. Mr. Coy was a native of Indiana, born in 1850, and died in 1891. Five children were born of this union: Clara, born May 18, 1872; died in 1881; Rose, born December 21, 1874, wife of John Burns, of Springfield; Arthur L., born November 4, 1876; John W., born January 25, 1878; Edward A., born December 21, 1880. By her second marriage Mrs. Dillard had two children, namely: Alice, born September 27, 1894, a telephone operator and living at home; Benjamin Franklyn, born April 10, 1896.

Mr. Dillard is a member of the Baptist Church and in politics is a Republican. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and has a large circle of friends. He remembers his attendance at the first State Fair ever held at Springfield, and has witnessed many changes and improvements in the city and its environments since he was old enough to take cognizance of such matters.

DILLER, Isaac Roland, has spent his entire life in Springfield, which is his birthplace, with the exception of a few years when he was away at school. Mr. Diller was born July 14, 1854, son of Roland Weaver and Esther Coates (Ridgeway) Diller. The father was born at Downingtown, Chester County, Pa., October 5, 1822, and his wife was born in Philadelphia, Pa., August 20, 1821. Roland W. Diller in early life, learned the trade of printer, settling in Springfield, in 1844, there securing employment on the Illinois State Register. He worked in the State Auditor's office and, having learned surveying in the East, took a contract for platting part of the State of Iowa. He served as Lieutenant in a company enlisted under Gov. Ford in the Mormon War. In 1849, he formed a partnership with Charles S. Corneau, under the firm name of Corneau & Diller, purchasing the drug store of Wallace & Diller, and for over fifty years conducted the business on the east side of the Square. Mr. Diller was converted in religious faith in 1866, and shortly after united with the Presbyterian Church, being elected a Ruling Elder and serving faithfully in that capacity until his death, August 18, 1905. Mrs. Diller was of Quaker descent, but also united with the Presbyterian Church in 1866, and lived a consistent Christian life until her death, March 31, 1880.

The early education of Isaac R. Diller was acquired in the Springfield public schools and he was graduated from the High School in 1871. He attended the Chicago College of Pharmacy in 1873-74, and was graduated from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy in the Centennial Class, in 1876. He entered his father's drug store, upon leaving school, and followed that business until 1901, with the exception of two years devoted to Y. M. C. A. work. He has been connected with the local branch of the Association since he helped organize it in 1874, and has always been most actively interested in its good work. Since 1907, Mr. Diller has been engaged in the business of Real Estate, Mortgage Loans and Agency Work.

Mr. Diller was married in Springfield, Ill., June 30, 1880, to Addie May Hughes, who was born in Springfield, February 19, 1856, daughter of William Thompson and Dorinda (Scott) Hughes. Mr. Hughes was a native of Kentucky, but was opposed to the institution of slavery and moved to Illinois at an early day. His wife, Dorinda Scott, was a native of Sangamon County, where her father was one of the early settlers, being one of the first ministers of the Christian Church, while supporting himself and his twelve children by farming. Mr. Diller and his wife have one son, William Hughes, born February 26, 1884, who, having been graduated from Yale University and Harvard Law School, is now practicing law in Springfield.

Mr. Diller united with the Presbyterian Church in 1866, after the great revival conducted by Rev. E. P. Hammond, and is now an Elder in the First Presbyterian Church and Clerk of the Session. Mr. Diller has always been much interested in all lines of religious work, and during the past few years has devoted much of his time to the work in the interests of the young men of Springfield. He was reared a Democrat, but in 1885, he became identified with the Prohibition party and for several years past has served as County and City Secretary of that party. Mr. Diller has been active in furthering the best interests and moral welfare of his community, and has many warm friends and supporters in his work. His earnestness and singleness of purpose are universally recognized, and he is highly esteemed for his many excellent qualities of mind and heart.

DILLON, Ebenezer B., of Cooper Township, is one of Sangamon County's old and honored farmers and a highly esteemed citizen of the town of Roby, Ill. Mr. Dillon is a native of Sangamon County, having been born in Cooper Township, November 1, 1833, a son of James and Hannah (Williams) Dillon, natives of Ohio and New York respectively. James Dillon moved to Sangamon County as a pioneer at a very early day and, settling in Cooper Township, engaged in agricultural pursuits, which he continued to follow until his death in 1851, his widow surviving until 1864. Of their family of three sons and five daughters, Ebenezer B. is the sole survivor.

Mr. Dillon's education was secured in the old log schoolhouse, with its slab benches and puncheon floor, and was taken when he could get it, or when he could spare the time from his duties on his father's farm. Raised to the life of a farmer, on attaining his majority he decided to make farming his life work, and this he has done. Mr. Dillon is a Democrat in his political views, but has never aspired to office, preferring to give his time and attention to his farm.

On January 18, 1852, Mr. Dillon was married in Cooper Township, to Lucretia Cantrall, daughter of Charles and Pauline Cantrall, the former born in Kentucky and the latter in Alabama. Mr. Cantrall, who was a farmer, operated in Indiana for some years, but came to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1851, and here both he and his wife resided until their death. Of their family of five boys and five girls, Mrs. Dillon, her sister, Mrs. Mary Beckett, of Pleasant Plains, and one brother, Edward, of Quincy, Ill., survive. To Mr. and Mrs. Dillon there have been born ten children, as follows: Melinda, the wife of Canada De Souza, living on a farm near Jordan; Mary Ann, deceased, who was the wife of Joseph Driscoll, also deceased; Hannah, wife of Q. Spinnell, a farmer of Sangamon County; Luella, wife of Frank Cantrall, of Springfield; William and Ebenezer, deceased; Alice, wife of Norman Ridgeway, a farmer of Cooper Township; Josephine, wife of Yankton Holmes, of Mechanicsburg; Georgina, wife of Charles Smith, of Kansas City; and David, who lives at home. Mr. and Mrs. Dillon have twenty-six grandchildren. Mrs. Dillon is a consistent member of the Roman Catholic Church.
DILLON, Thomas M. (deceased).—When a good, earnest man is snatched from his activities, the community suffers a loss not easily sustained. The Methodist Church has many eloquent and steadfast workers among its ministry, but one whose memory will long be cherished is that of the late Thomas M. Dillon, who held many charges throughout the Illinois conference, and during a useful life never spared himself or neglected the heavy duties upon his willing shoulders. He was born in New York City, May 8, 1845, a son of Joseph and Catherine Dillon, natives of New York. The father was a miller and a dealer in cotton.

When he was fifteen years of age, Thomas M. Dillon left New York City and, coming to Springfield, found employment until he began his studies for the ministry, under Dr. Harkey, President of a Springfield college. After his ordination Rev. Dillon was assigned to a number of charges. At first many of them were small, the work was extremely hard, and the remuneration small and poorly paid, but no obstacles could dampen the enthusiasm of this man. Early and late he worked, pleading eloquently with sinners to enter the fold. His powers of persuasion were wonderful, and he shone forth at revivals in a most remarkable manner.

Rev. Dillon was married in Springfield, by Rev. James J. Davidson, June 7, 1868, to Caroline Conant, born in Springfield, September 1, 1844, a daughter of Sullivan and Lydia (Hemmings) Conant, natives of Massachusetts. Both parents were early settlers of Sangamon County, coming there from Massachusetts as early as 1831. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dillon, but out of the tenderness of their hearts, they adopted two daughters: Dora C., an efficient school-teacher of the Rochester schools, who resides with Mrs. Dillon, cheering her declining years and proving herself a daughter in love if not in flesh; and Virginia L., wife of Samuel Byers, of Sangamon County.

The sympathies of Mr. Dillon were too broad for him to tie himself to any political party, as he believed in voting for the man rather than any set principles, aside from those set forth in the Golden Rule, but while living in Springfield he usually voted for Republican candidates. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen, holding membership in the Springfield Lodge. Never sparing himself, Mr. Dillon broke down, and passed away October 24, 1907, in Rochester, Ill., his remains being laid to rest in Oak Ridge Cemetery in Springfield, to await the last resurrection, in which he so devoutly believed. Many pages of this book would be required to do justice to the work of this good man, who quietly went about his Master's work, never seeking worldly preferment, but trying to make the world better for his stay in it and to bring to his fellow-creatures some appreciation of the religion he not only preached, but also lived every day of his blameless life. Mrs. Dillon owns a beautiful home in Rochester.

DISNEY, Thomas.—Farming as an occupation is profitable if followed along scientific lines, but the work of the farmer of today entails much study and not a little scientific training, being in sharp contrast to the agricultural life of several decades ago, when power machinery, tilling, and crop rotation, where things unheard of. One of Sangamon County's farmers who is cultivating his land along scientific lines is Thomas Disney, whose fine little property of thirty acres is located on Section 25 in Illiopolis Township. He was born in Eastern Tennessee, July 28, 1842, a son of Solomon and Sarah (Dray) Disney, natives of that State. The parents came to Macon County, Ill., in 1867, and settled on a farm near Decatur, where the father followed agricultural pursuits for many years, eventually retiring and locating in the town of Decatur, where his death occurred in 1886. Thomas Disney is the only survivor of his father's eight children. He was educated in the district schools of Tennessee and at the University of Kentucky, enlisted, with two brothers, as a member of the Thirteenth Kentucky Cavalry, under the command of Col. Weatherford, of Louisville. He served his full term and received an honorable discharge at the close of the war, having been a good and faithful soldier throughout his service. He was never wounded, sent to a hospital, nor was he ever captured by the enemy. He accompanied the family in 1867 to Macon County, and for two years worked in a brick yard in Decatur, but eventually located in Illiopolis Township, Sangamon County, and engaged in farming, an occupation which he has since followed with much success. He is a public-spirited citizen, always being a staunch supporter of those movements which he feels will be of benefit to his community. He is a Democrat in politics and his religious belief is that of the Christian Church.

In 1867, in Springfield, Ill., Mr. Disney was united in marriage with Sarah J. Miller, who was born near Decatur, Ill., the daughter of Henry and Sarah Miller, natives of Pennsylvania. They came to Macon County at an early date and engaged in agricultural pursuits, continuing therein until their deaths. Two of the three sons and three of the five daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Miller are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Disney have had seven children, and of these four survive: Lula, the wife of John Bonn, living in Illiopolis; and Charles, Edward and Maudi, who are living with their parents.

DOAN, George Franklin.—Among the successful farmers of Sangamon County, Ill., who have become prominent through their intelligence and progressive methods of carrying on their work is George Franklin Doan, who owns a large farm in Section 11 of Woodside Township. Mr. Doan carries on general farming and pays special attention to breeding and raising stock. He has always been interested in high-grade stock and is a great admirer of a fine horse. He has spent his life in farming since leaving school and has carefully studied every branch of the business. Mr. Doan was born in Switzerland County, Ind., August 24, 1857, and is a son of Arthur and Alice Ann (Smelley) Doan, the former of whom spent his entire life in Indiana and died there. The mother married (second) H. C. Clark, and they reside at Olathe, Kan., Arthur Doan was a carpenter and contractor, and his father, a native of Pennsylvania, who emigrated to Indiana and ended his days in that State, was also a carpenter. The parents of Mrs. Doan were early settlers of Sangamon County and were natives of Illinois.

George F. Doan attended public school at Mt. Sterling, Ind., and when a young man came to Illinois. Later he spent two years in Pratt County, Kan., but in 1884 sold his interests there and returned to Sangamon County, where he has since resided. He now owns 360 acres of good farming land and is conducting his operations in a manner to insure the best results. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs and has served as Highway Commissioner and School Director. In political views he has been a Republican since attaining his majority. He is a member of the Methodist Church and fraternally belongs to the Modern Woodmen and to the Anti-Horse-Thief Association. He has a large circle of friends and stands well among his fellow citizens, who appreciate his usefulness as a citizen and his integrity and probity as an individual.

Mr. Doan was married on the farm where he now lives, October 26, 1851, Rev. G. Dungan officiating, to Salome C. Shepherd, born on the farm where she has always lived, November 21, 1856, daughter of Joseph and Fannie (Smith) Shepherd, both of whom are deceased. Mr. Shepherd was born in Ohio, born January 11, 1816, and died August 28, 1891, and the mother, who was born in Pennsylvania, October 25, 1818, died in 1883 and was buried February 19, 1883, both she and Mr. Shepard being buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. Six children were born to Mr. Doan and his wife, namely: One died in infancy; Joseph A., born November 9, 1882, married Amy McGaha and they live in Sangamon County; Fanny A., born September 17, 1885, married William McClellan and they live in Sangamon County and have one son, George William; George S., born April 12, 1889, married Rose Kreigler and they live on one of the father's farms; John S., born January 8, 1892, and Lydia L., born July 31, 1895, both at home. Mr. Doan has every reason to be proud of his fine family of children, all of whom have a good credit to their parents.

DODD, James E.—The farming interests of Sangamon County are in the hands of men well capable of handling them, and the standard of the farmers there comparing favorably with those of any other county. James E. Dodd, of Section 11, Talkingtown Township, who has carried on agricultural operations all his life, and has been prominently identified with the public interests of his section for many years, was born August 24, 1838, in Bradley County, Tenn., son of Charles and Mary (Jones) Dodd and grandson of William L. Dodd. William L. Dodd, who had removed from Botetourt County, Va., to Jefferson County, Tenn., at an early day, came to Morgan county, Ill., about 1825, and remained until failing health caused his removal to Iowa. He then went to Bradley County, Tenn., but in 1844, returned to Illinois, settling in Sangamon County, where his death occurred seven years later. His life was devoted to farming and he was a man of high moral character, being a devout member of the old Missionary Baptist Church. In politics, he was a Jacksonian Democrat. He had the following children: Anna, Josiah, Sarah, Margaret, Charles, Mary, William L., Jessie and John. He died in Sangamon County and his wife in Jefferson County, Tenn.

Charles Dodd was born in Botetourt County, Va., and went with his parents to Jefferson County, Tenn., but in 1836, went to Bradley County in the same State, and was married in McMinn County, Tenn. He purchased land and commenced farming in Bradley County, but in 1851, brought his family to Sangamon County, settling on a farm east of Loami, which property he sold one year later, and purchased the 290-acre farm in the southeast part of Loami Township, which had been partly cleared, for $1 per acre. The tax in those days was about $18 on this farm and the personal property thereon, but Mr. Dodd improved the farm to such an extent that his taxes became $200. He resided in his beautiful home until his death, which occurred November 19, 1881, at the age of seventy years and five months, while his widow survived him until June 4, 1895, being ninety years old at the time of her death. She was an active member of the Methodist Church which she had joined in young womanhood, while Mr. Dodd belonged to no special religious organization, although he gave freely of his means towards all movements of a religious and charitable nature. In politics, he was a stanch and active Democrat, and his fraternal connection was with the Masonic Order, which conducted his funeral. The children born to him and his wife were as follows: Catherine, married Rev. A. A. Lawson of Springfield, Mo.; Nancy, married B. B. Warp of Loami, Ill.; Josiah, Joshua, James E.; William H., who met his death October 8, 1862, while a member of the Seventy-third Illinois Volunteers, and was buried on the battlefield at Perryville; Mary Ann deceased, was the wife of J. W. Hall of Quenemo, Kan.; Amelia married John Ma- hard, a farmer living near Loami; Sarah married William P. Campbell, both being now deceased; Charles, a farmer of Macoupin County, Ill.; Jesse W., residing in Springfield; and Alexandra, deceased.
James E. Dodd's school days were spent in Tennessee and in 1851, he accompanied the family to Sangamon County, Ill., remaining home until 1859, on February 10th of which year he married Annise Jacobs, born in Loami Township, October 10, 1840. After marriage, he rented 120 acres of his father's land in Loami Township, on which was located a three-room house, and in this they resided until 1890, when he moved to Greene County, Mo., and purchased 280 acres of land. This he sold and bought 210 acres in Lawrence County, Mo., but in 1867, he sold this and returned to Sangamon County, buying eighty acres of land in Section 11, Talkington Township. He kept adding to his property from time to time, and as the children grew up and left the parental roof each was provided for. The five children of Mr. and Mrs. Dodd were as follows: Charles O., now deceased, born December 19, 1859, married Lizzie L. Haddix, who resides north of Lowder, and they have seven children,—Rachel, Amy, Edna, Clara, Charles, James E., Vivian, Irvina, and Clarence and are survived; Isabelle, born February 5, 1861, is the wife of Frank A. Johnson, of Coldwater, Mich., and they have five living children—Melvin, Vernice, Rebecca, Anna and John, besides one who died in infancy; Louise, born November 14, 1862, died June 19, 1906; Melgie, born January 14, 1865, married J. F. Haun, resides at Lostine, Ore., and they have two children living, Joy and Edith, and one child died in infancy; James E. Jr., born January 26, 1868, who is connected with the Hershall Manufacturing Company, of Poria, Ill., married Fannie Gish, of Auburn, and they had one child who died in infancy. Rachel, daughter of Charles O., Dodd, married Luther Funderburg, and they have one child, Mary Corine, the one great-grandchild in the family, and live in Chicago. Amy, married Willis Hunley who reside in Chatham, Ill.; Edna, married Alvin D. Meyers of Chicago.

For more than half a century, Mr. Dodd has been identified with the development of Sangamon County, and not only has he seen the many changes that have taken place, but he has been an active participant in them. He has devoted his time to farming and stockraising, has been very successful along both lines, and has also found time to serve in positions of public preference to which he has been elected, as his fellow townsmen have recognized his ability and integrity. For twelve years he served as School Trustee and Treasurer of Talkington Township, was Supervisor ten years, and served as Commissioner of Highways in both Loami and Talkington Townships. In his official duties, he recognized no party rule, but protected his constituents to the best of his ability and thus won their confidence and esteem. Fraternally, he is connected with Masonic Lodge No. 450, of Loami, being one of the original nine persons to organize this lodge, and was first master, and he has been active in building up this organization. Mr. Dodd is a great believer in the benefits of education and as a consequence his children have received exceptional advantages. Charles O. was a teacher in Sangamon County for a long period; Isabelle was for twelve years one of the leading educators of the section, and Melgie, when but sixteen years old was an instructor in the schools of Sangamon County and was finally offered the principalship of the Lostine High School in Oregon, and later married J. F. Haun, a member of the School Board and a banker and extensive landowner in Oregon.

DOENGES, Lewis A., foreman of the composing room of the Edward F. Hartmann Printing Company, is one of the representative young men of Springfield, whose influence is widely felt by those who are acquainted with him and recognize his worth. He was born in Springfield, May 27, 1877, a son of Adam and Mary Doenges, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work.

Lewis A. Doenges attended the public schools of Springfield until he was sixteen years old, thus gaining a practical education. At this time he began learning the printer's trade, in the plant with which he is still connected. Serving his apprenticeship, he was then employed as journeyman, and in 1908 his services were recognized by his promotion to his present responsible position. During the sixteen years he has been with this concern, he has been one week, and is recognized as one of the most efficient and capable men in his line in the county. In June, 1906, Mr. Doenges was united in marriage, in Springfield, to Miss Clara Wheeler, of Breckenridge, Ill., daughter of Dr. H. G. and Nancy (Galbraith) Wheeler. Dr. Wheeler died some time since, but his widow survives. Mr. and Mrs. Doenges became the parents of one child, Louise Alma, born August 19, 1910. In politics Mr. Doenges votes for the man best fitted for the office, without regard to party ties. Fraternally he is a member of the Court of Honor and the Printers' Union. A live man, thoroughly abreast of the times, he has risen steadily through sheer merit to have charge of the department he entered sixteen years ago.

DOERFLER, John (deceased), of Springfield, Ill., was born in Germany, January 12, 1828, son of John and Catherine Doerfler, both of whom were natives of Germany and died there. The father was a miller, and, after receiving his education in the German Lutheran Schools, John Doerfler, Jr., worked with his father in the mill until he came to America, in 1854. He landed in New York in July of that year and lived in that city two years, becoming a broom-maker, which occupation he followed in Springfield after locating there in 1856, until his death. He became an adept at his trade and was fairly successful in a financial way, being industrious and thrifty. He became a highly respected citizen of Springfield, where he won many warm friends, and at his death was genuinely mourned by his family and all who knew him. Mr. Doerfler was always a devout church member and was affiliated with the German Lutheran Church of Springfield. He had served in the German Army before emigrating to America. In politics he was a Democrat and took a commendable interest in the progress and welfare of his community.

In August, 1856, Mr. Doerfler was married, in Springfield, to Miss Elizabeth Traeger, who was born in Germany, January 18, 1828, daughter of Leonard and Catherine (Diedell) Traeger. Children as follows were born of this union, namely: Margaret, married and living in Springfield; Elizabeth, unmarried, living with her mother; Catherine, married and living in Springfield; Anna C., also married and living in Springfield; John, Thomas and Barbara, unmarried, the latter in the employ of the ill-fated Watch Company, and living at home. Mr. Doerfler died in 1895 and his remains were buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. Mrs. Doerfler owns the family home at 355 West Reynolds Street, where she has lived the past twenty-nine years, and is well-known in the neighborhood.

DONELAN, Michael, foreman of the Wabash machine shops, Springfield, and a man of unfailing reliability, has been connected with the shops for forty years, having started in as an apprentice when seventeen years old, under the kindly-remembered Thomas Gorman, master mechanic. After four years' apprenticeship he then worked as a journeyman for many years, finally retiring a few years ago, but in 1910 he returned to become foreman of the shops. He was born in Hartford, Conn., June 7, 1855, a son of Thomas and Bridget (Flitz) Donelan, natives of County Clare, Ireland. The father was born in 1826, but came to the United States in young manhood, living in New York. He learned the trade of stone mason and plasterer, and followed this line of work for some years. While in New York he married. In 1856 the family came to Springfield, where the father found work at his trade, working at it until his death, in 1885. The mother survives, living in Springfield, at an advanced age. The children born to these worthy parents were: Michael; Thomas, a dental surgeon of Springfield; Elizabeth, Mrs. Thomas Hughes, of Springfield.

Michael Donelan was only eighteen months old when brought to Springfield by his parents, so practically all his life has been spent there. His boyhood was spent in the neighborhood of Madison and Thirteenth Streets, and he attended St. Mary's School until he was twelve years old, when his father died and he left school to go to work. His widowed mother needing the help of her eldest born. He first worked as a choir boy in the family of William A. Turney, Clerk of the Supreme Court, remaining with them for six years, when he entered the shops.

On January 11, 1877, Mr. Donelan married Mary Pliek, of Springfield, daughter of the late William Pliek and his wife, Ellen (Murman) Pliek, the latter still surviving, aged seventy-five years. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Donelan were as follows: Thomas died in childhood; John, of Springfield, married Bertha Kahl; Mary, Margaret and William at home; Helen and Elizabeth, deceased; and James and the second Elizabeth, at home. DONNELLY, John, a useful and public-spirited citizen of Springfield, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, has been a resident of the State since 1832. He was born in Augusta, Me., July 4, 1846, son of Francis Donnelly and Sarah Mooney, both natives of the United States. The father was a merchant and importer in New Orleans for many years, and the parents were both living in New Orleans the last John Donnelly heard from them. Francis Donnelly served through the Mexican War, being a member of Major Ringold's Regiment. The family lived some time in Illinois and there John Donnelly received his education in the subscription schools. Upon leaving school he became engaged in farming.

In 1861 John Donnelly enlisted in Company M, Sixth Illinois Cavalry, which later was under command of Colonel Grierson in Richard Yates' Legion. This regiment participated in the famous Grierson Raid. The first battle in which he took part was at Olive Branch, Miss., where the regiment came in contact with Stone wall Jackson. Their next battle was at Hernandez, Miss., and they operated in this vicinity for several months. They had an engagement at Florence, Ala., and fought for sixty-three days at one time. Mr. Donnelly became Sergeant of his company and won a commendable record as a soldier. At the close of the war he returned home and took up the affairs of civil life and has been an industrious, enterprising citizen. He is a member of Stephenson Post, G. A. R.

Mr. Donnelly came to Illinois in 1852 and has since that date resided in the State. In 1876 he began working at the Old North Shaft, Springfield, remaining there one year, after which he worked fourteen years as hoisting engineer at the New North Shaft, leaving this position to accept one with the Springfield Water Works, where he worked twelve years and became chief engineer. He is skilled at his trade and is a life member of the National Engineers of America. He is now employed by the Citizens Coal Company.

Mr. Donnelly was married December 24, 1868, to Mrs. (Ing) Johnson, who was born July 2, 1837, daughter of Christopher and Philemon Ing, the former born in 1811 and the latter in 1815. Her parents settled in Hamilton County, Ill., at an early day, coning from Tennessee, and died in Illinois, the father July 8, 1897, and the mother March 29, 1891. Their daughter had married (first) Aaron Johnson, who was killed, August 4, 1864, in front of Atlanta, and was buried at Marietta, Ga. Mr. Johnson and his wife had one daughter, Louisa, and one son. Three children, one son and two daughters, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Donovan, namely: Frank, Manager of the Galveston (Tex.) Base-ball League, was for two years Manager of the Springfield Team, coming from Rock Island, Teun., to Springfield; Ella D. Williams, living at home; Pernina, wife of John Mountz, a painter and paper-hanger living in Poern. Mr. Donnelly and his wife have three grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Samuel Hoskinson, living in Arkansas. Mr. Donnelly owns a beautiful home near the northeast corner of the Fair Grounds, where he has two acres of land with 150 feet frontage. He is a member of the Methodist Church and for the past eight years has been affiliated with McCormick Lodge No. 4, Loyal Americans, In politics he is a Republican.

DONOVAN, Michael.—Among those whom Sangamon County considers her best and most reliable are those born in Ireland. The sons of Erin have always been noted for their brilliancy of mind and their quickness to grasp offered opportunities, and develop into loyal, devoted citizens of their adopted country. Many of them were brought up to farm life in their native land and instinctively turn towards that occupation upon arrival here, continuing it with marked success. One of these representative Irishmen is Michael Donovan, residing on his fine forty-acre farm on Section 29, Springfield Township. He was born in County Cork, Ireland, June 20, 1842, being a son of Jeremiah and Catherine (Crawley) Donovan, both natives of Cork, Ireland. They were farming people, who never came to America, but passed their lives in Ireland, where they died. There were seven children in their family, four sons and two daughters. A brother of Mr. Donovan is residing in Boston, Mass., being connected with one of the largest banking institutions of that city.

Rear and educated in County Cork, Michael Donovan worked on his father's farm, but was not contented there, so in 1864 he came to America, sailing from Queenstown. Landing in New York, he came direct to Springfield, arriving when the city was plunged into deepest mourning, for upon that day Abraham Lincoln was laid to his last rest. The first employment of Mr. Donovan was as overseer in a brick yard, and he continued there for four years, then commenced to farm and has been thus engaged ever since. About 1885 he bought his present farm of forty acres, which he has developed into a very valuable property. On it he carries on general farming and takes a pride in his crops.

The marriage of Mr. Donovan occurred in Springfield, April 20, 1868, to Mary McCarthy, born in Whittinsville, Mass., September 23, 1857. Her parents, natives of Ireland, came to Boston at an early day, later moving to Whittinsville but a few years. Mr. Donovan came to Sangamon County, where the father began farming. He was accidentally killed by a horse about forty-two years ago, but his widow survived him until 1892. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy, all of whom survive. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Donovan, and three sons and one daughter survive. John has been his father's able assistant, and in later years has come to represent the result of many years of endeavor, he is naturally proud of it. Not only has he made his way in the world and accumulated something for himself and his wife in their old age, but he has reared a fine family, of which he has a right to be proud. His sons are splendid young men and his daughter is charming. Mrs. Donovan has been her husband's able assistant during the years they have lived together and he frankly confesses that he owes much to her. She is an excellent housekeeper, and welcomes the guest who enters their door with true Irish hospitality, which is the most cordial and hearty in the world. The entire family have many friends in the township and are highly respected wherever known.

DORAN, Patrick, a retired farmer living at 801 South Twelfth Street, Springfield, III., was an early settler of Effingham County, Ill., locating on ninety acres of land in West Township, a few miles south of Effingham, where he lived until he retired from active life. Mr. Doran was born in County Wexford, Ireland, about 1834, son of Owen Doran, a small farmer in Ireland, where he died. Owen Doran married Margaret Dwyer, who also died in Ireland, and they had children as follows: Winnie, Mrs. Martin Doyle, of Chicago; Margaret died unmarried; Patrick; Owen, who emigrated to the United States, served in the Civil War in an Illinois Regiment and died in Philadelphia; James, a deep-sea sailor; Margaret, married Henry Carter, of Chicago.

Patrick Doran received but a meager education and began working when still a boy. He remained on his father's farm until he came to the United States, at the age of sixteen years. He sailed from Liverpool and landed in New York, having spent nine weeks on the ocean. The vessel lost her masts and was nearly wrecked. Mr. Doran joined a sister in Philadelphia and found work among the Quaker farmers of the vicinity, spending about four years in this occupation, then went west and worked summers at farming near Springfield, Ill., going south during the winters and working for the planters there.

Mr. Doran was married in Springfield, about 1855, to Miss Catherine Kavanaugh, who was born in Washington, D. C., about 1834, daughter of Morgan Kavanaugh. Mr. Kavanaugh came to the United States from County Wexford, Ireland, and worked on the old National Road and on the first State House of Illinois, he and a Scotchman cutting stone for this building. Mr. Kavanaugh was a brick-layer and stone cutter by trade, but died on a farm in Effingham County. He married Margaret Conners, who also died in Effingham County.

Soon after their marriage Mr. Doran and his wife moved to her father's farm in West Township, which he conducted until he returned to Springfield. He was an able and successful farmer and owns his residence and another house on Jackson Street, Springfield. He and his wife belong to the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception, to the erection of whose building Mr. Doran contributed liberally. He is a Democrat in politics and is actively interested in public affairs. He is ready to forward any movement for the general good of his community and is a useful, patriotic citizen. Children as follows were born to him and his wife: Margaret, widow of John Brennan, of Springfield; Winnifred married James White, of Springfield; William, of Springfield, married Annie McNally; John, of Springfield; Mary Corrigan; Annie married William Lee, of Chicago; Patrick Henry, of St. Louis, married Lottie Jennings.

DORWIN, Harry F., present Secretary and business manager of the Illinois State Journal Company, was born in the city of Springfield August 4, 1835, the son of Phares A. and Caroline (Flisher) Dorwin. His father, Phares Dorwin, came with his parents to Illinois at an early day, settling at Naples, where both died. In 1840, their son came to Springfield, and was there engaged in mercantile business as dealer in stoves, tin-ware, etc., until his death in 1870. Harry F. Dorwin's mother, Caroline Fisher, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fisher, who came to Springfield overland from Franklin County, Pa., in 1840. She was an older sister of the late Mrs. Shelby M. Cullom, and resided in Springfield until her death in January, 1897, nearly twenty-seven years after the death of her husband.

Harry F. Dorwin received his education in the Springfield city schools, and at the age of about sixteen years became clerk, and later Teller, of the State National Bank of Springfield, serving in these two capacities from 1871 to 1876. He then became Secretary to Gov. Cullom, continuing in this position until the election of the latter to the United States Senate (1883), when he became Private Secretary to Gov. John M. Hamilton, successor to Gov. Cullom, remaining one year, (1883-84). Other official positions held by him included those of Chief Deputy of the United States Marshal for the Southern District of Illinois (1884-85), and Assistant in the office of State Treasurers John R. Tanner and Charles Becker (1886-89). Although he has held no elective position, it will be seen from this record that few men in the later period of State history have had a larger or more varied experience in connection with important public offices than has Mr. Dorwin. On the organization of the present Illinois State Journal Company, he became Secretary and business manager of the company, a position which he has retained to the present time, covering a period of more than twenty years, during which the business of the concern has shown an extensive development, giving evidence of his business capacity and devotion to public interests.

On March 31, 1897, Mr. Dorwin was married to Miss Bertha Buck, who was born in Springfield, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. B. Buck; they have no children. Dr. Buck was a surgeon with the rank of Major during the Civil War, among important battles in which he saw service belong that of Gettysburg. A fuller sketch of Dr. Buck will be found in another section of this volume.

Always a Republican politically, Mr. Dorwin's religious affiliations are with the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, while in his social relations he is connected as a charter member with the Sangamon Country Club and the Springfield Association of Commerce. His residence is at No. 606 South Fourth Street, Springfield.

DOTY, Nathan, who has for half a century occupied his present home in Williamsfield, Ill., has for the past ten years lived retired from active life. He is a native of New York State, born March 12, 1827, son of Abraham and Hannah (Campbell) Doty, both natives of New York, the former born in 1801. The parents spent their entire lives in New York. The father was descended from a Mayflower emigrant and the mother was of English descent. They were married in Hoosick, New York, Nathan, one of seven sons, is the only survivor.

Nathan Doty received his early education in Berkshire County, Mass. He helped with the work on his father's farm as a young man and when he left home engaged in farming on his own account. at 402 West North Grand Avenue, Springfield, Ill., was born at Miamiburg, Ohio, October 11,
1837, and is a son of Charles S. and Lucy (Chayton) Drake, natives of New Jersey. The father was born in 1802 and by occupation was a shoe-maker and farmer. The mother was born at Monmouth. Charles S. Drake emi-

He understands the soil on his farm and its peculiar fitness for various kinds of treatment, and is an energetic, progressive farmer. Besides his farming interests he owns stock in the Farmers' Elevator Company, of Divernon. He is a man of upright honesty and integrity and stands well with his neighbors and acquaintances. DRECHS, John (deceased).—The efficiency of German-trained workmen cannot be equaled by any learning a trade in the United States. The training given there is so complete that those who have acquired a working knowledge of any trade in Germany find ready employment upon coming here. John Dresch, a cabinetmaker of Springfield, proved in his work the truth of these statements. He was born in Baden, Germany, January 1, 1832. His father was also a cabinetmaker and he and his wife spent their lives in Germany where they were born and died.

After receiving a good education in Germany John Dresch was taught his father's trade, but realizing that there were better opportunities beyond the ocean, embarked for this country and first located in Pennsylvania. Later he came west, arriving in Springfield in 1861, and from that time on he made the city his home, becoming sincerely attached to it and its people. Upon being naturalized he embraced the doctrines of Democracy and never left the folds of that party. A devout Catholic, he was a member of SS. Peter and Paul Church, dying firm in its faith, August 10, 1908, and his remains were interred in Calvary Cemetery. Although at first in poor circumstances, he soon amassed considerable property, including the beautiful home at No. 514 West Carpenter street.

While residing in Lancaster, Pa., Mr. Dresch was married February 8, 1857, to Mary Gamber, of that city, daughter of Nicholas and Elizabeth Gamber. Mrs. Dresch was only two years of age when her mother died and four years when her father died. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Dresch: Emma, born June 12, 1858; Frank, born Nov. 6, 1860, married Emma Davis and resides at Barry, Ill.; Elizabeth, born September 12, 1861, wife of Charles McBride, Superintendent of Calvary Cemetery; Rose, born June 29, 1863, wife of Frank Schuchardt, a fireman in the city fire department; Cecil, born June 30, 1867; Henry, born October 22, 1868, married Mary Peters, resides in Springfield, and is with The Reisch Brewing Company; Laura, born December 10, 1871; and Anna, born December 9, 1874, wife of William Bretz, cement contractor. Mrs. Dresch has two brothers and two sisters, all living in Lancaster, Pa. The Dresch family is one that stands well in Springfield, and Mrs. Dresch was left in very comfortable circumstances by her husband. The home has been the family residence for a long time, and Mrs. Dresch has many pleasant memories connected with it.

DRISKELL, Joseph (deceased).—Many of the men who labored hard to make Sangamon County what it is today have passed to their last reward, but the effect of their work lives after them and their families are now reaping the benefit of what they accomplished. One of the sturdy, successful, reliable farmers of this locality was the late Joseph Driskell, born in August, 1838, a son of Joseph and Margaret (Gregory) Driskell, natives of Kentucky, where the father was a farmer, who later came to Illinois, where his son was born.

The younger Joseph Driskell attended the Martin School in Sangamon County, and worked with his father on the farm until he bought his own farm in the neighborhood of Springfield. There he resided until he retired, moving to Springfield, which was his home ten years before his demise. He was an excellent farmer and made his property one of the best in the county. A quiet man, devoted to his home and work, he did not join any fraternal associations, and while a Republican, he did not aspire to office. The First Presbyterian Church of Springfield held his membership.

On September 12, 1868, occurred the marriage of Mr. Driskell and Miss Jane Curlock, who was born near Breckenridge, Ill. She is a daughter of Henry and Susan Curlock, natives and lifelong residents of Sangamon County. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Driskell: John L., born in 1867; Mary Ann, born August 3, 1869; William Henry, born November 11, 1871; Maggie, born August 3, 1874; Lida, born November 11, 1880; Joseph, born July 11, 1883; Grover Cleveland, born October 7, 1882; Jessie, born March 7, 1887, and three who are deceased. Mrs. Driskell resides at 1127 East Washington Street, Springfield, where she makes a pleasant home for her family. She is a lady widely known and universally respected, having made this city her home for seventeen years.

DROHAN, Edward.—Springfield presents excellent opportunities for the prosecution of many lines of business, a fact that is appreciated by many. One of the prosperous business men of the city is Edward Drohan, born in Tazewell County, Ill., December 18, 1863, a son of Edward and Margaret (Quinlan) Drohan, natives of Ireland. The parents met and were married in the United States. About 1859 they came to Tazewell County, Ill., but after the death of his wife, in 1866, Edward Drohan, Sr. moved to Edina, Mo., and there his death occurred, in October, 1872. He was a farmer and railroad contractor, but had retired from active business at the time of his death. Although a strong Democrat, he never cared for office. He was a member of the Catholic Church and brought up his seven children in that faith. All of them still survive, Edward Drohan of this biography being the sixth in order of birth.

Edward Drohan, Jr., attended school at Lilly Station, Tazewell County, Ill., but when only eighteen years old he began working for farmers, thus continuing until he was twenty-two. At that time he made a trip to Texas, and on his return settled in Christian County. His energies found expression in several lines of endeavor at Taylorsville, Decatur and other places in the vicinity, until 1908, when he came to Springfield, which has since been his place of residence. He there embarked in business and has met with marked success.

On October 31, 1887, Mr. Drohan was united in marriage, at Taylorville, Ill., with Catherine Perry, born in Illinois, daughter of Patrick Perry and wife, who are deceased. He was a Democrat and a Catholic. Mrs. Drohan was one of a family of three children born to her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Drohan have three children: Nellie A., Edward J., and Donald E., all at home. Mr. Drohan belongs to the Catholic Order of Foresters and the B. P. O. E. His religious connections are with St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of Springfield. He is a genial, pleasant man, who makes friends wherever he goes, and is well liked by them.

DUBINSKY, Jack, an enterprising and successful clothing merchant of Springfield, Ill., was born in Russia, February 12, 1855, and at the age of two years accompanied his parents to the United States. He is a son of Isaac and Rose (Goldwasser) Dubinsky, both natives of Schimsk, Russia, the former born in 1855 and the latter in 1858. The father is now engaged in real estate business in St. Louis. They were parents of ten children.

Jack Dubinsky attended the common and high schools of St. Louis until he was fifteen years old, then began working in the dry goods store of Epstein & Whiser. Six months later he entered the employ of Ferguson McKinley Dry Goods Company, of St. Louis, and a year later went to work for H. Segelman Jewelry Company, working four years in their establishment and three years on the road as salesman, after which he married and established himself in business in Springfield. Mr. Dubinsky began his business career as an office boy for three dollars a week, and by diligence and industry worked up to a salary of $1500 a year by the time he was twenty years of age. In 1907 he embarked in the clothing business on his own account, starting with a capital of $3,000, and building up a lucrative trade. He is careful in keeping up his stock and attending to the wants of his customers and has established a reputation for business honesty and integrity. He owns the home at 1520 East Washington Street. He adheres to the Hebrew religion and fraternally belongs to the Masonic Fraternity and Woodmen of the World, of which he has been a member two years; has been for one year Secretary of the B'nai Abraham Congregation; for one year has been Treasurer of the Modern Knights of Zio and is also a member of B'nai Brith. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Dubinsky was married in Springfield, May 26, 1907, to Miss Ethel Greenberg, and they have one son, Harold, born April 8, 1908. Mrs. Dubinsky is a daughter of David and Fannie (Gingold) Greenberg, natives of Russia. They were married in Russia and came to America on their honeymoon trip, landing in New York about 1880. They reside in Springfield, where Mr. Greenberg is one of the leading clothing merchants. He came to Springfield with less than one dollar in his possession, and has since been able to accumulate considerable property and for the past twenty-five years has conducted his store, having a nice business.

DUBOIS, Jesse Kilgore. (Vol. I, p. 137.)

DUFFIELD, William Henry (deceased).—Connected with the history of Abraham Lincoln is that of William Henry Duffield, for a number of years attached to the State House at Springfield. Mr. Duffield, an ardent admirer of the martyred President, utilized spare moments fashioning pen holders, gavels and canes from the tree which stood in front of the Lincoln residence in Springfield. This tree was planted by Mr. Lincoln about 1857, and when Mr. Duffield conceived the idea of making these mementoos of his old friend, they were bought by people all over the country, who also admired the great man. Mr. Duffield was born in Putnam County, Ind., November 1, 1842, but when he was only ten years old, his parents moved to Greenville Ill.

Brought up to farm life and receiving a country school education, Mr. Duffield early learned lessons of patriotism, and was one of the first to offer his services in defense of his country, enlisting August 15, 1861, in Company I, Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from which he was honorably discharged December 6, 1865, having been made Sergeant.

At the close of the war he returned home and engaged in various occupations. On August 17, 1873, he was united in marriage with Adella Haskell, and they had the following children: Maud, unmarried; Gertrude, Mrs. W. H. Clifford, of St. Charles, Mo.; Charles L., of Springfield; Mary M., Mrs. George Weidiocher, of Springfield; Jessie and Edwin, unmarried.

A year prior to his marriage he had become an attaché of the State House, and in 1874 moved to Springfield, residing on Walnut Street for three years. He then returned to Virginia, III., which had been his home, but in 1897 once more came to Springfield, and there he died, April 10, 1908. A staunch member of the G. A. R., he was Commander of his Post at Virginia. He joined the Methodist Church in childhood, and was faithful to its teachings all his life. In politics he was a Republican. Conscientious, faithful, devoted to his friends, and possessing few (if any) enemies, Mr. Duffield rounded out a useful life, and left behind him a pleasant memory, cherished by those who knew him.

DUMMER, Henry E. (Vol. I, p. 606.)

DUNAWAY, Charles Newton (deceased).—Farmer has become one of the most profitable occupations in which man can engage, and a number of the leading agriculturists of Sangamon County who have been engaged in this calling for a number of years have retired from their labors, having gained a sufficient competency to provide for their needs during the remainder of their lives. One who bore his part in the development of the rich farming lands of the locality was the late Charles Newton Dunaway, who became an important factor in its business life. He was born in Hendricks County, Ind., November 2, 1858, a son of James and Mariiah X. (King) Dunaway, natives of Fallsburg, Ky., the former born October 11, 1811, and the latter in 1808. The father was a farmer and brought his family to Mechanicsburg, Ill., October 15, 1851, engaged in a stock business, became very successful, and lived there until his death, in 1872. His wife had died in 1860, and both are interred in Mechanicsburg Cemetery. They had six children: William, who resides in Springfield; Charles N.; Margaret, wife of John B. Stone, of Haddam, Kan.; Louisa, Julius and Americus, who are deceased. Charles N. Dunaway was educated in the Buffalo Hart Township schools, spending his youth on his parent's farm and learning how to work it and to manage an agricultural estate. Thus it was that when he began working for himself he was able to do so successfully, and continued in that line until 1883, when he began manufacturing harness in Logan County, Ill., where he lived until 1886, then settled in Mechanicsburg and engaged in the same business there for twelve years. Following this he operated a general store at Buffalo Hart Grove for three years, then moved to Rochester and resumed farming operations. He continued agricultural life for nine years, but in 1905 came to Mechanicsburg, where he remained until his death. During the Civil War he enlisted in July, 1882, in Company B, Eleventh Missouri Volunteer Infantry, at St. Louis, but after serv-
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

DUNCAN, Elizabeth.—One of the oldest, if not the oldest citizen, of Sangamon County, is Miss Elizabeth Duncan. Dunaway family. She was born near Mechanicsburg, and has now passed her hundredth birthday. Miss Duncan was born August 8, 1811, and in 1829 emigrated from Bourbon County, Ky., riding on horseback most of the way. Other members of the party who emigrated to Sangamon County at the same time were Irvins Foster, who settled in what is now Curran Township; Monteville Dunum, who settled in Chatham Township, and Mrs. Rebecca McKee, who located in Loami Township. Mrs. McKee had a family of four sons—Samuel, John, James and William—and one daughter, Mrs. Martha Duncan, who was a widow and mother of Elizabeth Duncan, the subject of this sketch. Elizabeth—"or Aunt Betty," as she is affectionately called by her most intimate friends, was never married, but for some thirty years followed the vocation of a tailor, making men's fine suits with the skill of the experienced tailor. In her advanced years she retains her mental and physical energies in a remarkable degree, and is accustomed to visit the city of Springfield two or three times every year where she is cordially welcomed by a number of ardent friends who remember her long life and who have always held her in high esteem. Miss Duncan was present at the annual meeting of the Old Settlers Society of Sangamon County, held at New Berlin, August 2, 1911, and was awarded the prize as the oldest citizen in attendance.

DUNCAN, Milton.—After spending a long career in agricultural pursuits, the average Illinois farmer is ready to retire from active life, take up his residence in a nearby town or city, and there spend the remainder of his life in peace and quiet, enjoying the fruits of his labor. Milton Duncan, a well-known and highly esteemed citizen of Springfield, spent many years in farming and then retired from farm work. He was born on a farm in Gibson County, Ind., in 1848, a son of Josiah and Caroline (Farris)
Duncan, farming people and natives of Pennsylvania and Illinois, respectively.

The educational advantages of Milton Duncan were secured in the country schools of Gibson County, and his youth was spent on his father's farm, where he was trained to the life of an agriculturist. On reaching his majority he secured a farm of his own and operated it until 1885, when he brought his family to Springfield, where he afterwards resided. His life was so busy that he never cared to turn his attention to either fraternal matters or public affairs, although he voted for the principles supported by the Republican party. His religious connection was with the United Presbyterian Church.

On November 10, 1871, near Oakland City, Ind., Mr. Duncan was united in marriage with Mary Richardson, daughter of George W. and Johanna (May) Richardson, the former of whom came from North Carolina and settled on a farm near Princeton, Ind.

He has two children living: L. G. of Riverton, and Mrs. Lillie Todd, a widow, residing at No. 1912 East Edwards Street, Springfield. Mrs. Todd has two children, Arthur and May. L. G. Duncan is a carpenter and contractor at Riverton, and has one child, a daughter, Chloe.

DUNKEL, David Albert, who owns a pleasant home at Pleasant Plains, Ill., is a native of Sangamon County, descended from old and honored American families. He was born near his present home, a little east of the village, in Cartwright Township, April 6, 1857, a son of George and Margaret (Hankison) Dunkel, of Circleville, Pickaway County, Ohio, where they were born, reared and married. They were early settlers of Menard County, Ill., where they purchased land, developed a good farm and erected a comfortable home. The grandfather, John Dunkel, was a native of Pennsylvania, but the family came originally from Germany and the name was then spelled Dunkel. John Dunkel came to Sangamon County in an early day and settled on the farm now owned by J. T. Ferry, in Cartwright Township, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away about 1867, his widow surviving until about 1872. They were people of true Christian faith and active workers in the Baptist Church, being highly respected by all who knew them for their good deeds and public spirit. They were parents of fourteen children, two of whom died in infancy, but twelve reached maturity. Of these but one now survives, Mrs. W. H. Dorand, of Pleasant Plains.

George Dunkel was one of the most prominent citizens of the township, always interested in every public measure and taking part in the development and advancement of his township and county. He was a true pioneer, reclaiming wild land, bringing his farm to a high state of cultivation and preparing for the comfort and welfare of those to follow him.

To such men the present generation owes a large debt of gratitude and respect. In politics he was a Democrat and he and his wife were devout members of the Baptist Church, being found each Sabbath in the house of worship. He was highly respected in his community and spent his last days on his farm, on the 20th of October, 1897. His widow survived him until 1907, passing away when seventy-two years of age, while he was sixty-eight years old at the time of his death. They had four children, namely: Kate, wife of Samuel Farmer, a farmer of Morgan County; Sarah, wife of Charles Smith, of Pleasant Plains, has two children, Lee and Jesse; David Albert, subject of this sketch; John T., a sketch of whom appears in this work. The oldest daughter, Mrs. Charles Smith, has three children, namely: Frances, at home; Edna, Mrs. George Flinn, has one child, Lloyd; Pearl, wife of Charles Brown, of Roodhouse, Ill., has one child, Collete.

David A. Dunkel was reared on his father's farm and educated in the school nearby, remaining with his parents until he was twenty years of age. About 1877 he rented a farm and operated it on his own account. Later he purchased forty acres of land southeast of Pleasant Plains and in 1880 sold it, then purchased sixty acres near what is known as the Franklin School, remaining there until 1883. He was married October 11, 1876, to Mrs. Margaret (Valentine) Dunkel, being then not quite twenty years of age. She was born in Cartwright Township, February 16, 1858, daughter of Samuel Valentine, a pioneer settler of Sangamon County, who lived on the farm now owned by Mrs. Green W. Martin, Mr. Valentine was a man of high character and was greatly esteemed wherever known. He and his wife, Sophia (Young) Valentine, were born near Circleville, Ohio, and reared on farms there. He was a son of John Valentine, a Pennsylvanian by birth, who located in Pickaway County, Ohio, as a young man. The grandparents came to Sangamon County with Mrs. Dunkel's parents, making the journey with wagons. Samuel Valentine's parents both died in the year 1853. He bought 160 acres of land in Cartwright Township, where John H. Campbell now lives, which he later sold and purchased the farm above mentioned as the home of Mrs. Martin, where he and his wife both passed away. He died in 1885 and his wife in 1889. They were reared in the Lutheran faith and were devout and earnest Christians. He was one of Nature's true noblemen, and while he and his wife did not unite with any church after coming to Sangamon County, they attended the Presbyterian Church and gave freely of their time and money towards building up both the church and school in their neighborhood. He was kind and charitable in spirit and manner and always ready to help anyone in trouble or need. He paid good wages for the people he employed and always treated them well, being very tender-hearted and sympathetic toward all his fellows. No one had more warm friends in Cartwright Township than he and he was known as a man of public spirit in all ways. He was a Democrat in politics. He and his wife were parents of three sons and seven daughters, of whom four daughters and two sons are now surviving: Sylvester, a farmer of Schuyler County; Ella W., wife of Philip A. Williams, of Cumberland Furnace, Tenn.; Sophia, widow of Samuel Campbell, residing at St. Joseph, Mo.; Mrs. Dunkel; India Isabel, wife of John Kirby, when last heard from was living near St. Louis, Mo.; Samuel, a blacksmith of Pleasant Plains. Those deceased are: Mary, wife of W. V. Campbell, a sketch of whom appears in this work; Cordelia, who married James E. Campbell, and both are now deceased; Clara Emma Rosetta died at the age of twenty-three years, a lady of beautiful Christian character, loved by all; Israel, deceased. Mrs. Dunkel was reared in a good Christian home.

To Mr. and Mrs. Dunkel children were born as follows: William T., born May 14, 1877, living in Pleasant Plains, purchased Maggie McGraw and they have six children—David Lamont, Everett P., William Floyd, Viole May, Leonard E., and Mary Fay; Samuel Andrew, born February 7, 1880, married Maud Lewis and they have three children—Richard Harold, Lester Lee and Leila Pearl; George Boynton, born December 2, 1887, living at home and working in the rural delivery mail service out of Pleasant Plains; Cora Viola, born April 15, 1881, wife of Oliver D. Smith, a farmer living near Rochester. The parents have given their children educations to fit them for their part in life and the latter have been an honor to the good name and character of their ancestors. Mrs. Dunkel's maternal grandparents were David and Betsy Elizabeth (Mires) Young, both natives of Pickaway County, and Mires settled in Schuyler County, Ill., where he and his wife died. David Young had three children: Ella Young married Dennis Barks and both he and his wife died in Circleville, leaving three daughters and one son, the daughters still being on the old home farm in Pickaway County.

In 1883 Mr. Dunkel sold his farm and moved to Tallula, Ill., where he conducted a butcher business one year, then returned to Pleasant Plains and for a time conducted a meat market there. In 1892 he again engaged in farming and followed that occupation until 1903, when he received an appointment from the Government for work in the rural delivery mail service. He having a route out from Pleasant Plains, which village has since been his home. His commission was received in February, 1904, and he has since been a faithful servant of the Government and of the people of the section where he resides, continuing his work during bad weather and having missed but two trips, these being on account of the delay of trains. He is a lover of fine horses and owns a high bred stallion named Rattler Hal, Jr. He is the owner of a pleasant home and he and his son have five good horses which they use in the service of the Government. Politically he is a Democrat and he and his wife are active members of the Presbyterian Church. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Court of Honor, and his wife is also a member of the last-named organization. Mr. Dunkel and wife are highly respected and have many friends.

DUNKEL, John Thomas, a prominent farmer and stock-raiser of Section 30, Cartwright Township, is a native of that township, born about two miles east of his present home November 7, 1858, son of George and Margaret (Hankison) Dunkel, the father born near Circleville, Pickaway County, Ohio, where he and Margaret Hankison were married and where their first child was born. About 1850 they purchased land in Menard County, Ill., established a home there, and later sold it to purchase a farm in Cartwright Township. They lived on the farm in that township until a short time before his death, then moved to Pleasant Plains, Sangamon County, where the father died October 2, 1897, his wife surviving him until June, 1905. He was for many years an active and useful member of the Baptist Church and helped very materially in its progress. In politics he was a Democrat. He was a quiet, unostentatious gentleman, highly esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

John T. Dunkel was educated in his native township, attending the Plunkett School, and early began to help with the work on his father's farm. February 18, 1880, he married Miss Emma E., daughter of Silas P. Plunkett. A rather full history of the Plunkett family is included in County History of Sangamon County, published in 1905. The first recorded marriage of the family was that of John D. and Mary C. Plunkett, the latter being a daughter of John D. and Mary E. Dunkel, who were married in 1817. A lovely wedding was that of Mr. and Mrs. Dunkel, witnessed by many. They have 135 acres of land and a most beautiful home a short distance north of the Plains.

Mr. Dunkel is practically a self-made man and has been successful in his chosen career. He pays special attention to breeding fine stock and among his possessions are two brood mares who have borne him seven colts each, all of them now surviving, being of the Percheron and Norman stock. He has always been interested in the affairs around him and is a citizen who intends to do his full duty in the highest sense of the word. He helps every enterprise which is for the good of the public and he and his wife are active members of the Baptist Church at Pleasant Plains. Mrs. Dunkel is an active member of the Ladles' Aid Society of the church and Mr. Dunkel has long been one of the officers of the church organization. Both are members of the Court of Honor and he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. He and his wife are earnest Christians and apply their religion to their everyday life. He has always acted with the Democratic party. Mrs. Dunkel is one of the most highly esteemed women of the community and is envied by many for her skill in making butter, in which she greatly excels.

DUNKEL, Milton, one of several honored retired farmers living at Pleasant Plains, Sangamon County, Ill., is of that good old Ohio stock which has done so much for the development of the Middle West. He was born in Pickaway County, Ohio, July 30, 1848, a son of Andrew and Angeline (Young) Dunkel, and is the only survivor of his father's family. The family of Dunkel is of German origin and was founded in America in colonial times. Andrew Dunkel was born in Ohio December 4, 1821, son of John and Catharine (Morchard) Dunkel, who had five children, only one of whom, Mrs. Levina Dorand, wife of W. H. Dorand, contractor and builder, of Pleasant Plains, now survives. Andrew and Angeline Dunkel had three children, two of whom, a son and a daughter, died in infancy. John and Catharine Dunkel moved from Pennsylvania to Ohio not long after the close of the War of the Revolution. Eventually they moved to Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, where Mr. Dunkel died in 1868 and his widow in 1872. Angeline (Young) Dunkel was born in Fairfield County, Ohio, daughter of David and Elizabeth (Myers) Young, both of German descent and born in Berks County, Pa. Her father spent all his active years as a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church, chiefly in Fairfield County, Ohio. He died when Mrs. Young was only three years old. Later her mother married Jacob C. Valentine, of Pickaway county, Ohio, and lived to be seventy-five years of age. Angeline Dunkel was born February 15, 1827, and was educated in subscription schools, and by her own efforts becoming a woman of fine attainments for her day and generation. She was twenty-one years old when she married. It was in 1855 that the family came to Illinois and Mr. Dunkel took up land in Cartwright Township, Sangamon County. At eighteen she united with the English Lutheran Church at Circleville, Ohio. After they came to this state, she and her husband joined the Missionary Baptist Church of Richland, with which they were helpfully identified as long as they lived. She passed away February 25, 1890, aged sixty-three years, and be September 4, 1808, aged seventy-three years.

Milton Dunkel came as a lad with his parents to Sangamon County in 1855, was brought up to a practical knowledge of farming, and obtained his education in the public school near his boyhood home. In 1872 he married Miss Dora A. Smith, born in Cartwright Township, a daughter of William and Sarah (Dorety) Smith. Mr. Smith was born in Scotland and Mrs. Smith in North Carolina. They married in the State just mentioned and came to Illinois in 1844 and both died when Mrs. Dunkel was as yet only a child, he in 1849 and she in 1853. By trade Mr. Smith was a carriage painter. His son, Robert B. Smith is a farmer in Cartwright Township and another son, William W. Smith, is a farmer in Anburn Township. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Dunkel settled on the old Dunkel homestead, where they farmed successfully till February 22, 1890, then moved to Pleasant Plains, where Mr. Dunkel had bought a beautiful home and they lived there very happily till Mrs. Dunkel died. She was born near the old Richland Baptist Church August 24, 1850, was married March 13, 1872, joined the church mentioned June 1, 1873, and died March 7, 1907, aged fifty-six years, six months and thirteen days. As a girl she was distinguished by a mild disposition and a gentle, affectionate nature. Her early conversion tended to develop and strengthen those admirable qualities. Her life in the church was marked by growing earnestness and increasing interest in the progress of the Redeemer's Kingdom on earth. She was always attentive to the sick and generous to the unfortunate. In her home life she was a model of faithfulness and loving kindness. Her spiritual home was early put in order and her temporal home was no less carefully looked after. These lines were dedicated to her by one who knew her well:

"Life, I know not what thou art,
But know that thou and I must part,
And when or how or where we met
I own to me's a secret yet.
Life, we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather—
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear,
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time,
"Say not good night,
But in some brighter clime
Bid me good morning."

Her home was noted for its genial hospitality. In all that she loved and loved to do she had her husband's sympathy. He has always been ready to contribute his full share toward the advancement of religion and education. Friends in need have ever found him a friend indeed. In politics he is a Democrat. He was a mem-number of the County Board for two years, including the time of the remodeling of the Court House, was a Township Trustee from 1859 to 1908 and Tax Collector in 1894. His public spirit has made him a citizen of whom his neighbors are justly proud.

DUNLAP, Alexander.—Since the days of the building of the pyramids of Egypt, the contractor and builder has been an important figure in the advancement of a community. To him is entrusted the material expression of the architect's skill and the artist's evolutions. The builder of today, however, has to meet problems which never came up to confront those who erected the stately piles of ancient Greece and Rome. Modern sanitation, electric wiring, and the many other complications of construction in this century, requires the services of thoroughly experienced men. One who has attained more than local celebrity along this line is Alexander Dunlap, of Springfield, whose work is to be found on a number of the Sangamon County public buildings, as well as the State Capitol Building. He was born in Knox County, Ky., July 17, 1836, a son of James and Margaret (Tinsley) Dunlap, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. James Dunlap came to Morgan County, Ill., in 1847, being one of the pioneers of that locality. There he engaged in farming until 1854, when removal was made to Sangamon County, where a farm was secured and operated until the father died in 1881. The paternal grandparents of Alexander Dunlap came originally from Belfast, Ireland, and there is a strain of the open-hearted, genial Irish people in Mr. Dunlap's makeup.

The education of Mr. Dunlap was secured in the country schools of both Morgan and Sangamon Counties, and while attending school he was helping on the farm. After leaving school he worked for several years at farm labor, but in 1861 began learning the carpenter's trade, and has been engaged along this line ever since, eventually branching out into a contracting and building business. As long as the present public buildings of Springfield stand, his work will be remembered and its merit recognized. In 1856 Mr. Dunlap went to California, where he remained for two years, working in some of the large mines of that State, but with the exception of that period, his life has been spent in Springfield and vicinity, since he came to Sangamon County.

Mr. Dunlap was married in Springfield, August 8, 1862, to Minerva McDaniels, born in Sangamon County, her parents having moved there before her birth, from the southern part of the State, to engage in farming, and there continued the remainder of their lives. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap, Cassius, a resident of Springfield, also a contractor and carpenter, who controls a large business, and Carrie, wife of Walter McDale, now deceased. The Democratic party has always held Mr. Dunlap's loyalty and he has supported its candidates with the same fidelity which has characterized his actions in every walk of life. Shrewd, keen, enterprising, he has been able to control a large business and produce work that reflects credit on himself and the city at large.

DUNLAP, James R., M. D., a physician and surgeon who owns and occupies a farm in Section 7, Lanesville Township, Sangamon County, is a native of the county, born near Sherman, April 3, 1847. He is a son of John R. and Emily A. (Brown) Dunlap, the former a native of Tennessee and the latter of Kentucky. The father was one of the early settlers of Sangamon County, having come to Fancy Creek Township in 1828, and purchased land from time to time until he became the owner of 600 acres. He carried on farming until his death, in 1890, and his widow survived him six years. They were parents of six sons and four daughters, and five sons and one daughter now survive: James R., the eldest; Rev. Robert E., of the Christian Church, residing in Seattle, Wash., now a candidate for Congress on the Prohibition ticket, was twice a candidate for Governor of the State; Frank, of Springfield; John R., of New Mexico, is a farmer; Clarence, a farmer living on the old home place near Sherman; Adelaide, wife of Theodore Allen, lives on a farm in Sullivan County, Mo.; Jennie, widow of George Powers of Athens, died May 5, 1911.

In boyhood James R. Dunlap worked on his father's farm and attended the district school near home. He remained with his parents until he was twenty-five years old, then entered Hahnemann College of Chicago, completing his medical course and graduating from that Institution in February, 1878, then located in Sullivan, Ill., and for twenty-five years practiced his profession in that vicinity. At the end of that time he made a trip to California, where he remained a short time, and, returning to Sullivan, resumed his practice, but soon afterwards removed to Platt County, where he spent some time. He has lived on his present farm for the past four years and for three years has devoted his time wholly to the cultivation of his land, having retired from active practice. He owns 150 acres of excellent land. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order, and he belongs to the Baptist Church.

Dr. Dunlap married (first) Zereida Richards, of Kentucky. She died, leaving two children: Edwin A. Dunlap, of Springfield, and Zereida R., who married Chas. Sheppard. They reside at Paris, Ill. Dr. Dunlap was married near Springfield, on Christmas Day, 1872, to Dr. Sarah E. Elliott, daughter of John W. Elliott. Mr. Elliott was born in Springfield, in 1822, and his father, Andrew Elliott, who came from North Carolina to Illinois in a very early day, was one of the founders of the city of Springfield, conducted the first hotel there (known as the Elk horn House, on the corner of Second and Jefferson Streets), and died in the city. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk War. John W. Elliott's wife was born a little distance west of Springfield and was a daughter of Johnson Baldwin, grandfather of Dr. Baldwin, of Springfield. John Johnson Baldwin came to Sangamon County from Kentucky in an early day and spent the remainder of his life on a farm near Springfield. John W. Elliott and his wife had six sons and four daughters, and the following seven children now survive: Robert, a veteran of the Civil War, living in Springfield; James H., also of Springfield; Andrew on a farm in Missouri; C. L. of Springfield; John L., a farmer living in Missouri; Mrs. Hatfield Langford, wife of A. M. Langford, is a teacher in the Iles School, and has been engaged in this profession thirty-nine years; Mrs. Dunlap. Mrs. Dunlap was born in Springfield, January 3, 1848, and graduated from Hahnemann College in 1884, since which time she practiced with her husband until both retired three years since. She was for several years a teacher in Sangamon County before taking her medical course, and taught her first school under the supervision of Mr. Webster, then Superintendent of Schools in Sangamon County. She as well as her husband, practiced many years in Sullivan, and both practiced in Springfield and vicinity. They have been an inspiration and help to each other in their chosen field. They have been enthusiastic students of the discoveries and current literature of the science of medicine and surgery, and have given the best part of their lives to the amelioration of human suffering.

Two children were born to Dr. Dunlap and his wife: Emily A., wife of Adelbert Lyman, of Montana, who is in the employ of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company; Myrtle, wife of Charles Dalldien, employed in a large dye house in Chicago. Dr. Dunlap's paternal ancestors were from Scotland and his great-grandfather, who was a printer by trade, printed the Declaration of Independence, and later served as Captain in the Continental Army.

DUNLAP, Stephen Douglas.—Fifty years ago the name of Stephen A. Douglas was known in every household in Illinois, and the man and his deeds were subjects of conversation in every gathering. He was second only to Abraham Lincoln, and there were some of his own political faith who placed him first. A resident of Springfield has the honor of bearing his name, and is proud of the fact. Stephen Douglas Dunlap, an efficient employee of the Elevator Milling Company, comes of a family who honored the great Illinois statesman. He was born near Leroy, Ill., October 1, 1864, a son of John and Elizabeth (Rice) Dunlap, the former born on April 22, 1828, and the latter on May 18, 1831. Mr. Dunlap's grandfather homesteaded a farm at a time when the land was thickly settled with Indians, but he conquered all obstacles and developed a splendid farm. The father settled in McLean County in 1830 and became very prominent holding many of the local offices.

Stephen Douglas Dunlap was educated at Pekin, Ill., and worked on the farm for his father, growing up like any ordinary boy. He was very fond of hunting, fishing and base ball, and indulged in these sports whenever opportunity arose. He began farming for himself, thus continuing until he moved to Springfield, October 1, 1903, when he entered the employ of the Elevator Milling Company as an elevator man.

On November 11, 1886, Mr. Dunlap married, at Leroy, Ill., Jennie Hall, born in Davidson County, N. C., April 27, 1862. Her father was a soldier during the Civil War, and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap: Eugene Rice, born July 22, 1887, and Charlotte Iris, born August 12, 1888. During his residence in McLean County, Mr. Dunlap served as County School Director from 1896 to 1899, and helped organize the first fire brigade at Leroy, Ill. He is a member of the order of Red Men, and belonged to the Universalist Church. In political faith Mr. Dunlap is a Republican. He is a man of high moral character, who loves his home and family and has ever striven to do his duty as a loving father and dutiful husband.

DUNN, Ivan Stephen, publisher of the "Diver don News," and one of the representative newspaper men of Sangamon County, is a public-spirited citizen of Divernon, who has borne an important part in shaping public opinion and supporting the candidates of the Republican party. He was born in Prairie du Sac, Wis., April 8, 1860, a son of Thaddeus K. and Sarah Ann (Bennett) Dunn. The father was also a publisher, so that the son inherits his literary aspirations. Thaddeus K. Dunn and his wife were of Scotch descent, born in Groton, Vt., whence they moved to Wisconsin in the fifties, and were married there. They had eight children. Early in life Thaddeus K. Dunn was a well digger, then a farm hand, later a high school principal, and finally was sent to the Wisconsin State Assembly. He became Grand Master of the Wisconsin Odd Fellows, Grand Master Workman of the A. O. U. W., of that State, and publisher of the "Elroy Tribune."

When Ivan Stephen Dunn was only ten years old he entered his father's office at Woonsocket as a compositor, and at the age of fourteen years entered the high school there, graduating therefrom at the age of fifteen years. Removal was then made to Elroy, Wis., where he worked as compositor, becoming editor and manager when only seventeen years old. In 1888 he went to Madison and worked as a compositor for a short time, going from there to Eau Claire, Wis., where he became foreman on the "Daily Free Press," and in 1890 accepted the same position with the La Crosse "Daily Republican and Leader." During 1892-97 he was the publisher of the "Elroy Tribune," and from 1897 to 1901 published the "Warren Index." He then became manager of the Appleton Printing Company, continuing thus until 1904, when he began publishing the "Davenport News," since which time he has been connected with that organ.

On February 7, 1888, Mr. Dunn was married in Elroy, Wis., to Maude Elizabeth Tramble, daughter of Philip and Anna (Andrus) Tramble. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Dunn are: Irene, born August 23, 1889; Thaddeus Philip, September 29, 1893; Paul McKinley, November 4, 1896, and Karl Tramble, September 28, 1902. Mr. Dunn has always been a Republican, but aside from serving as Clerk in the State Senate in Wisconsin, during 1897 and 1899, he has not held any office connected with politics. Very important fraternally, he is a Modern Woodman of America, serving as Clerk in 1907-08, and is now Captain of the Foresters and a Trustee. He was a delegate to the early Vice Head Camp, M. W. A., which was convened in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1911. He belongs to the I. O. O. F., of which he is Past Grand, Past Grand Representative and Financial Secretary at present. The Presbyterian Church holds his membership, and he is teacher of a boys' class, and is President of the Brotherhood. Mr. Dunn owns his home at Davenport and the Davenport News office, valued at $3,000. His success in life has come to him because of unremitting industry and untiring ambition that urged him onward. There are few men who commenced their business career at ten years of age, as did Mr. Dunn, but then not all have reached his present position before being much more than out of the forties. He is an energetic, aggressive man, who knows how to make the most of opportunities, and his paper is a bright snappy organ and one which has a large following throughout Sangamon and surrounding counties.

DWYER, William (deceased), for many years a valued citizen of Riverton, Ill., was an industrious, conscientious man and left a reputation for integrity and reliability that has been gratifying to his family. He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1833, son of Edward and Ellen Dwyer, who spent their entire lives in Ireland, and both died on their farm. Mr. Dwyer was educated in his native country and worked on his father's farm several years. When about thirty years of age he came to America, landing in New York. He had previously spent ten years working in the mines in England, and upon reaching New York set out for Riverton, where he purchased land and also worked in the mines, being employed at the old Howlett mine, the first to be established in the vicinity. He spent the remainder of his life in Riverton and there won many friends. He was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and in politics was a Democrat.

Mr. Dwyer was married in Springfield, in March, 1872, to Mary Couren, a native of County Wexford, Ireland, whose parents spent their entire lives in Ireland. One child was born of this union, who is now deceased. Mr. Dwyer died in 1880, at his home in Riverton, where his widow now owns a house and other property.

EASLEY, James Ambrose.—The great financial institutions of Sangamon County enjoy a well-earned reputation for stability and reliability owing to the sagacity, conservative acumen and shrewd financial instincts of their officials. None is more representative of this class than the First National Bank of Springfield, of which James Ambrose Easley is Vice President and one of the controlling factors. Mr. Easley is an energetic business man, well equipped to conduct the affairs of a bank of the magnitude of the First National, and the material success which he has fairly earned is alike beneficial to himself and to the place in which he has labored.

Mr. Easley is a native son of the county, born on his father's farm, October 3, 1870, and there grew up to young manhood. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Easley, whose history is more fully given elsewhere in this volume, are excellent representatives of the best class of Springfield's retired farming people. Robert H. Easley, gave three of the best years of his life to the service of his country, and since his return from the battle field has continued to labor for the good of his community.

Like many country boys, after finishing the district school course, James A. Easley came to Springfield and studied at the business college, from which he graduated. He then accepted a position in the First National Bank and has worked his way up to his present responsible office. Mr. Easley is also serving as President of the Chamber of Commerce of the city, and is a member of the Park Board, as well as the minority member of the City Civil Service Commission. Mr. Easley is not only a Vice President of the bank, but is a heavy stockholder, and is Vice President of the First Trust and Savings Bank.

On October 24, 1897, Mr. Easley was married in Springfield to Ada Payne, daughter of F. E. Payne, formerly one of Springfield's leading hardware merchants. Both Mrs. Easley's parents are deceased. Two children have blessed their union: Frances Mariette and Edward Payne. Mrs. Easley was born in Springfield and has long been a member of Christ Church there. Mr. Easley is a Republican. He belongs to the A. F. and A. M., and is a member of Elwood Commandery, K. T., in which he is very prominent, and he enjoys his Masonic associations. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P. and M. W. of A. Mere words cannot do justice to a man of Mr. Easley's caliber. When one has accomplished what he has done, that is self-evident, and its wording sounds fulsome to those who know and appreciate the man, but this record is written for those who came after the present generation, so it is only fitting that a true account be given of the life and work of those who are prominent in the history of Springfield today.

EASLEY, Robert Henry.—Too much credit cannot to be given the veterans of the Civil War, for it is to them and their comrades that we owe the preservation of the Union. Springfield still has some of the old soldiers, although many have answered to the last roll call and gone where neither censure nor praise can reach them. One of those who stand high in the estimate of the people there, is Robert Henry Easley. He was born September 19, 1841, in Sangamon County, and has been one of its most valuable citizens all his life. He is a son of James B. and Margaret (Dodd) Easley, the former a farmer by occupation, who in 1830 came from Kentucky to Sangamon County, where he met and married his wife. The latter was born in what became Sangamon County, in 1829, before the organization of the county. The father became prosperous, served as Constable and Justice of the Peace, and was very useful in the development of the county during its early history. He was popular among the first settlers, as well as among those who came later, and died greatly respected.

After a boyhood spent in working on the farm and attending the schools of the period, Robert H. Easley went to Illinois State University, and was barely beyond his majority when he enlisted, in March, 1862, in the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, serving until his honorable discharge, in April, 1865.

Mr. Easley now owns nearly 600 acres of rich farming land in Sangamon County, and several of his children operate a portion of it for him. He is a Justice of the Peace and for five terms has been elected Supervisor, on the Republican ticket, being one of the strongest supporters of that party in his locality. Fraternally he is a Mason, belonging to Elwood Commandery, of Springfield. His religious affiliations are with the West Side Christian Church, of which he is a consistent member.

On October 26, 1865, Mr. Easley was married to Mary F. Easley, whose parents also came from Kentucky to Sangamon County at a very early day. Five children have been born to them: Laura E. Engle, who lives at Chatham; Henrietta F. Berridon, who lives on a farm in Sangamon County; James A., of Springfield, Vice President of the First National Bank; Arthur K., who lives on a farm in Sangamon County, and Herbert L., who lives at home. Mr. Easley is an excellent example of the solid, reliable man, whose interests are centered on the welfare of Springfield, and enjoys in marked degree the confidence of all who know him.

EBE, Sofer, who has recently purchased a handsome residence at Divernon, III., has lived in Sangamon County since 1871 and during most of that time has carried on a farm in Divernon Township. Mr. Ebe was born at Walshud, Germany, March 5, 1846, a son of Joseph and Agnes (Flug) Ebe, natives of the same place. He was born September 17, 1800, and she March 6, 1804. The father was a farmer at the place mentioned and there spent his entire life, dying on his farm November 17, 1877, and his widow surviving him until March 20, 1871. They were parents of two daughters and four sons, and the following four children still survive: Mary, wife of Paul Druffinger, resides on the home formerly owned by her father at Walshud, Germany; Carrie, married and living in Germany; Sofer, of this sketch; Bernhardt, a farmer of Macoupin County, III.

Until he reached the age of twenty years Sofer Ebe worked on his father's farm, receiving his education in his native place. November 20, 1866, he was drafted for service in the German Army, serving eighteen months. He came to the United States in 1868 and for three years carried on farming in Sangamon III. In 1871 he moved to Springfield, where he lived but a short time, then engaged in farming in Pawnee Township, Sangamon County, and two years later located on a farm in Divernon Township, which he successfully operated until retiring from active life and coming to his present home, which he has occupied since December 26, 1910. He has been prominent in local affairs and served two years on the school board while living on his farm. Both he and his wife are well known in social circles and have many friends in the community. He is a member of the Catholic Church and politically is a Democrat. Mr. Ebe endeavors to deal fairly with all who do business with him, and has the respect of his neighbors and associates.

Mr. Ebe's marriage occurred in 1871, at Springfield, when he was united with Ellen Carter, born in Putnam County, Mo., in 1856, daughter of William and Mary Jane (Schumate) Carter, both natives of Gallia County, Ohio. He was a farmer by occupation and removed to Missouri in 1866, remaining there until 1861, when he came to Adams County, Ill., where he lived about twenty-two years. In 1883 he located in Schuyler County, Ill., where he carried on farming until his death, October 23, 1891, his wife surviving and living on the home farm. Six sons and six daughters were born to Mr. Carter and wife, and six children now survive, namely: Mahala Jane, widow of James Utter, who was a farmer and lived in Pickaway County, Ohio, whose death occurred recently; Mary Margaret married David Miller, a farmer of Illinois; Sarah Frances married James Belf, a farmer, and resides in Missouri; Eliza Ann married George Bowen, a farmer of Nebraska; Elizabeth, wife of George Mason, a farmer living near Jacksonville; Ellen Mrs. Ebe. Seven children were born to Mr. Ebe and wife, as follows: Mary, born March 19, 1872, married Edward Mark, a farmer of Divernon Township; Joseph, born March 1, 1873, married Mary Rical and lives on a farm in Divernon Township; John, born April 10, 1875, carries on farming in Auburn Township and married Cora Mertz; Libble, born July 22, 1886, married Edward Jennings, a rural mail carrier living at Divernon; William, born January 9, 1885, lives with his parents; Ella, born March 7, 1889, married William Moose, a farmer of Divernon Township; Netta, born February 9, 1896, lives with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Ebe have eleven grand-children, of whom they are very fond and proud, as they have reason to be.

EDSALL, James Kirkland. (Vol. I, p. 147.)

EDWARDS, Benjamin Stephenson (deceased), who was born in Madison County, Ill., June 3, 1818, and died at his home in Springfield, Ill., February 4, 1886, was the youngest son of Nulian Edwards, Governor of Illinois during nearly its whole existence as a Territory, and the third Governor of the State. Nulian Edwards was born in Montgomery County, Md., March 17, 1775, and at the age of nineteen years emigrated to Kentucky, where he rose to the position of Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals. He was appointed Territorial Governor under President Madison, in 1809, and at the time of the admission of Illinois as a State was elected to the United States Senate, being reelected at the expiration of his first term (a short one), and in 1826 was elected Governor of the State of Illinois, serving until 1830. He died at his home in Belleville, July 20, 1833, of cholera, having contracted that dread disease through his efforts to assist the sufferers from the epidemic. His son, Honorable Nulian Wirt Edwards, married Elizabeth P. Todd, sister of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, and in 1834 was appointed by Governor Reynolds Attorney General of Illinois, but resigned this office the following year, moving to Springfield.

Benjamin Stephenson Edwards graduated from Yale College in 1838 and the following year was admitted to the Bar. He studied under the supervision of Stephen T. Logan, of Springfield, and in March, 1841, commenced the practice of his profession, being contemporary with such eminent jurists as Stephen A. Douglas, Abraham Lincoln, Stephen T. Logan, Colonel E. D. Baker, Jesse B. Thomas, Josiah Lamborn and James A. McDougall, and the fact that he was able to attain and maintain an honorable position among such men attests his ability in his profession and his energy and integrity as a man. At the time of his death he was President of the Illinois State Bar Association.

In early life Benjamin S. Edwards was a Whig and later became a Democrat. He served as a Delegate to the Constitutional Convention of 1852 and in 1868 was an unsuccessful candidate for Congress, against Shelby M. Cullom. In 1869 he was elected Circuit Judge of the Springfield Circuit, but within a year and a half resigned this position, preferring the practice of his profession to the dignity of the bench. He had the universal respect of all as a citizen and as a lawyer fulfilled his duties ably in both capacities.

Mr. Edwards was married, August 13, 1830, to Miss Helen Kissam Dodge, daughter of Colonel Henry Augustus Dodge, grand-daughter of Dr. Richard Varick, of New York City, and great-grand-daughter of Theodore Van Wyck, a native of Holland, being thus related to the "Kneelerboakers" families of Van Wyck, Van Courtlandt and Van Resselaer. Mrs. Edwards died March 18, 1909, at the age of eighty-nine years and is survived by three daughters, namely: Helen M. married Moses Coudell; Alice E. married Benjamin Hamilton Ferguson, a sketch of whom appears in this work; and Mary S. married James Henry Raymond.

EDWARDS, Benjamin Stephenson. (Vol. I, p. 153.)

EDWARDS, James B., of Springfield, Ill., is a machinist of more than ordinary ability and skill, and has been for more than thirty years a valued employee of the Illinois Watch Company. Mr. Edwards was born in Bury, Lancastershire, England, January 8, 1847, a son of John and Margaret (Butterworth) Edwards, the former a native of Wales and the latter of Bury, England. The father's people were born in Wales and the mother's ancestors were natives of England. John Edwards was a blacksmith and he and his wife both died in England. They were parents of six sons and three daughters, of whom all are deceased except two sons, one living in England and James B.

The education of James B. Edwards was acquired in the public schools of his native place and he learned the trade of machinist in England. He was married in his native country and continued to work there at his trade until 1883, when he embarked for America, landing in Philadelphia. He came direct to Springfield and for a time worked at his trade in the shops of the Wabash Railroad, then, three years later, accepted a position with the Ile Engine Company, fourteen years later began working for the company where he is now employed. He has won the confidence of his employers by his careful and skilful work and has there had an opportunity of using his ability and knowledge of his trade to considerable extent.

Mr. Edwards was married, in St. John's Episcopal Church, in Bury, England, February, 8, 1888, to Elizabeth A. Chadwick, born in Bury, March 1, 1841. Her parents spent their entire lives in England, and were parents of six sons and one daughter. Four sons were born to Mr. Edwards and his wife, all of whom are living, namely: John, an employe of the Illinois Watch Company, as tool maker; James B., Jr. is a forearm in the employ of the San-Edward Francis Egan was born in County Waterford, Ireland, April 25, 1874, a son of Thomas and Mary (Merinn) Egan, natives of the same place.

Thomas Egan was reared and educated in his native country and was there married. In 1888 he emigrated with his family to the United States, locating in Springfield, where the remainder of his life was spent. They had lost eight children in Ireland, and brought four with them, those surviving being: Mary, wife of B. Kirlin, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work; Richard, a contractor, unmarried; Nellie, unmarried, residing in Springfield; and Edward F. Thomas Egan was politically a Democrat. He was a member of the Catholic Church, as are the members of his family. He died March 20, 1907, and his widow, who survives him, still resides in Springfield. He was highly respected by all who knew him and made his presence felt among his fellow-citizens. The family residence is 131 Mason Street.

Edward F. Egan received his early education in the public schools of his native country and was fifteen years of age when brought by his parents to America. He was a wide-awake, ambitious youth, and soon adapted himself to his surroundings in the new country. After taking a commercial course in Springfield Business College, he entered the employ of the Springfield Iron Company, where he remained until 1895, when he formed the partnership with B. M. Kirlin, which still exists. In anticipation of this step he had begun to study along the line of embalming and kindred subjects, and is a graduate of the Barnes School of Embalming. The firm operates under the name of Kirlin & Egan. Mr. Egan is a man of modern methods and ideas, and much of the success of the business is due to his able judgment. He is thorough master of his art, and his manner of carrying on his work commands itself to every person of knowledge and discernment. The establishment is located on East Adams Street in pleasant rooms, equipped with the most modern fixtures and appliances, and they have facilities for carrying on their business in the most approved manner.

Mr. Egan is a good example of the men who have risen to prominence and financial success solely through their own efforts, being actuated by a high order of energy and acumen. He is popular in social, as well as business circles, where his high character and straightforward manner have been duly appreciated. Honest in his dealings, he enjoys a good reputation, and his business prospects are bright. He is a member of the Illinois Undertakers' Association and is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and St. Joseph's Court of Foresters. He is actively interested in public affairs, is a strong Democrat and a member of St. Agnes Catholic Church. He is unmarried.

Eifert, David, an old and well-known resident of Springfield, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and has lived in the city since 1859. He was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, May 24, 1837, and is a son of David and Catherine (Kimball) Eifert, both also natives of Germany. The father served in the German Army three years and the Grandfather Kimball served in the Russian War. Further than the fact that the Grandfather Eifert was a native of Germany, little is known of the ancestry of the family by the present generation. David Eifert Sr. was a shoemaker and musician, and the childhood of his son David was spent in a city, where he received his education. After leaving school the young man worked on a farm. He has always been fond of outdoor amusements and sports.
In 1859 Mr. Eifert, subject of this sketch, emigrated to the United States and proceeded direct to Springfield, where he enlisted, in June, 1861, in Company C, Twenty-fourth Illinois Infantry, under Captain W. Eden, and served three years, being discharged at the end of this time. He was mustered out at Chicago, in August, 1864, having never been wounded or taken prisoner, although he had encountered many hardships and had many narrow escapes. He participated in the Battles of Chickamauga, Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge, and many skirmishes. He was member of an expedition from Nashville, Tenn., to Huntsville, Ala., and their force captured many prisoners. He was also among a force that captured many prisoners. He was also among a force that fought bushwhackers in the hills of Missouri. He is proud of his record, as he has reason to be, and is a prominent member of the G. A. R. in Springfield.

Mr. Eifert was married, in Springfield, November 9, 1866, to Miss Catharine Doerfler, who was born in Germany, February 18, 1846, daughter of John A. Doerfler, a native of Germany, as were his parents. Ten children were born of this union: Anule, John D., Fred, Margaret, Amelia, Carrie, Paul, Atwood; Emma and Katie, both deceased.

After the war Mr. Eifert engaged in shoe making, which he learned both in Germany and America and is now engaged in business at 1156 North Sixth Street. Daniel Eilenberger had one brother and two sisters who came to Illinois and settled at Monmouth. He became a very important man in that section, for twenty-two years was a Constable in Warren County, and served one term as Sheriff. During the Civil War he was a capable soldier and a member of the Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. His death occurred from dysentery before the end of his military service. He was married before coming to Illinois, to Elizabeth Hull, who died at Monmouth. They had the following children: Milton, of Monmouth; Benjamin. Constable at Monmouth for the past twenty-seven years; William; Charles, of Monmouth; Jennie, Mrs. James Borwick, of Monmouth; and Daniel, of Montana.

William Eilenberger had school advantages at Monmouth until he was seventeen years of age, when he learned the cigar maker's trade and followed the same for thirty-four years, remaining all this time with one employer. He was then appointed to an official position under Secretary Rose and came to Springfield. He continued in that office for nine years. Since then he has been in his present office. He is well known and is very popular with public men and private individuals who have business at the Supreme Court Building, and is well acquainted with many prominent men of the State. He has not invested in property at Springfield but owns several pieces of real estate at Monmouth.

Mr. Eilenberger was married at Monmouth to Miss Leina Opitz, who was born in Germany and came to America in girlhood, with her mother and brother, who settled in Illinois. They have five sons. Mr. and Mrs. Eilenberger are members of the First Presbyterian Church and he is a stanch Republican. He is a member of the Sons of Veterans, the Odd Fellows and the Court of Honor.

ELKIN, Charles N.—During the strenuous days of the early sixties the country learned to depend upon the stalwart country boys whose muscles had been trained in the open air, and to whom love of the Union was taught from earliest childhood. One of the men who belonged to this class of brave defenders of the flag when it was in danger, is Charles N. Elkin, of Springfield. He was born on a farm eight miles north of Springfield, April 12, 1846, being a son of Garret and Martha Elkin, natives of Zanesville, O., and Frankfort, Ky. The parents came to Illinois at an early day, locating on the farm where their son was later born.

Until he was six or seven years old Mr. Elkin lived on the farm, then the family moved to Decatur. Still later removal was made to Jeffersonville and finally to Springfield. The lad attended school in this city until 1860, and was only sixteen years old when he enlisted in May, 1864, in Company K, One Hundred and Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He re-enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Fifty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which was mustered into service for one year, and mustered out January 22, 1866, receiving final discharge at Springfield February 4. Mr. Elkin served bravely until the close of the war, and at this time, his services being dispensed with, returned to Springfield. He then learned the carpenter's trade, which during the many years which have followed has afforded him a comfortable living. His work has been characterized all through with the honest quality which is representative of the man.

On May 16, 1887, Mr. Elkin married Maria Regan of Springfield, where her death later occurred. Mr. Elkin married (second) Mary Ellen Welch, also of Springfield. No issue. Mr. Elk

in is a consistent member of the G. A. R. and greatly enjoys reunion with his old comrades. In politics he is a Republican. While yet a mere boy he took upon himself the duties of a soldier and his record shows that he never failed to discharge these faithfully and bravely. Many of those who fought by his side have joined the Army of the Eternal, but he has lived to wage battle after battle against physical disabilities incurred during his youth because of the terrible exposure and exacting demands made upon his immature body; cheerfully offered up for his country's defense.

ELKIN, William F. J. (deceased).—Of the men who are responsible for the present prosperity of Springfield, many have passed away from earthly cares, and among them none was better known or more highly respected than the late William F. Elklin, born near Springfield, Sangamon County, February 29, 1836, a son of William E. and Elizabeth (Constant) Elklin. The father was for some years a farmer in Sangamon County, but later held a government position, and was Sheriff of the county several terms.

William F. Elklin, Jr., attended the country and Springfield schools, and lived on a farm until his parents moved to Springfield. When a young man he conducted a large grocery business, but later in life also held government offices, and at the time of his death was Bailiff at the Court House. His demise occurred July 20, 1890, and his remains are interred in Oak Ridge Cemetery. He was a Mason, a member of the Christian Church, and a Republican.

Mr. Elklin was married in Springfield, on October 16, 1860, to Maria Louisa Harvey, born in Springfield October 13, 1839, daughter of William and Eliza (Rice) Harvey, who came from Maryland to Sangamon County, overland, at an early day. The father passed away in 1855, his widow surviving him until 1870. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Elklin, of whom the following grew to maturity: Emma Clark, at home; Charles F., Robert R., Louis C., Zach C., Lawton L., Hazel L. Mrs. Elklin resides in a beautiful home at No. 1214 South Fourth Street. She is a delightful conversationist and her recollections of the days when Springfield was a village are very interesting. Her father could not find a place for his business, so built an addition to his house for an office. This house stood in the center of the present business district. They were neighbors of Abraham Lincoln and Mrs. Elklin is proud of her memories of the great man.

ELLIOTT, Alexander.—Agricultural life draws very heavily upon the strength and resources of a farmer, so that after years devoted to it he feels the necessity of taking life more easily. For this reason many of the most responsible citizens of Springfield belong to the retired farmer class, and the city benefits from their residence there. One of these reliable and honorable men is Alexander Elliott, whose residence on the northwest corner of Maple and South Fourteenth Streets is one of the most comfortable in the city. Mr. Elliott was born in Clay County, Ill., March 2, 1822, a son of William and Rebecca (Coates) Elliott, the former a native of North Carolina, where his wife was also born. At a very early day William Elliott came to Clay County, where he engaged in farming, remaining there until his death. He and his wife had five sons and two daughters. Mr. Elliott and one brother, William W., a retired farmer of Taylorville, are the only survivors.

After a boyhood spent in Clay County, where he alternated attending school with working for his father, Mr. Elliott came to Springfield upon attaining his majority, and at Pawnee farmed for seven years. He operated several farms in the county, until his removal to Springfield in 1894.

On August 7, 1854, Mr. Elliott was married, in Christian County, Ill., to Tabitha Jones, born in Wayne County, daughter of William and Martha (Lillard) Jones, natives of Kentucky and Tennessee. They came to Illinois at a very early day, locating in Wayne County, where the father farmed, but later came to Sangamon County to engage in farming, but the father died in Christian County, after his wife had passed away in Sangamon County. Mr. and Mrs. Jones had three sons and four daughters, two sisters of Mrs. Elliott now surviving: Mrs. Temperance Campbell, and Mrs. Nancy Jane Lawley, of Glenarm. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott became the parents of children as follows: Isaac and Jacob, of Springfield; James, of Wyoming; Addie, wife of Fred Hart, of Springfield; Ollie, wife of John Jones, of Chicago; Eugene in the employ of the Johnston-Hatcher Company, of Springfield; and six who died young. The five grandchildren of the family are: Melvin R. Elliott; Lesta M., William H., and Helen Jones, and William Hart.

Mr. Elliott is a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church. In political faith he is a Democrat. He is a man of means and his money has been accumulated through hard work, careful thrift and wise investments. When he located in Springfield he sold a valuable Morgan County farm and bought city realty. He has a high standing in his community, and is able to look back over his long and useful life with pride.

ELLIS, Joel H.—The Ellis family described below is of Welsh extraction and has been represented in Sangamon County, Ill., since 1825. They have since been identified with the best interests of the county, and have always done their share to organize and maintain churches and schools. Joel H. Ellis, subject of this review, was born in Island Grove Township, near the present site of old Berlino, January 16, 1828, a son of Henry and Martha (Yates) Ellis. Henry Ellis was born near Lexington, Ky., November 17, 1786, a son of John Ellis, born January 29, 1749, and October 2, 1770, married to Sarah Parrish, who was born April 20, 1757. John Ellis and his wife removed from Virginia to Kentucky. The father of John Ellis is said to have come from England to America with the second supply of emigrants. The wife of Henry Ellis was Martha Marshall Yates, born after the death of her father, in Woodford County, Ky., September 13, 1791, daughter of Abner and Mollie (Haves) Yates. Abner Yates was a son of Dr. Michael Yates, a native of England, who married Martha Marshall, sister of John Marshall, who afterwards became Chief Justice of the United States. Mrs. Henry Ellis was a sister of Henry Yates, Sr., and aunt of the famous War Governor of Illinois, Henry Ellis, Henry Yates and Colonel Robert Johnson together laid out the town of Fredericksburg, afterward called Warsaw, in the county seat of Knox County, Ky. Henry Ellis and Martha Yates were married January 29, 1807, at Warsaw, and had ten children there, two of whom died in infancy. They removed to Illinois in 1825, reaching Island Grove, two miles northeast of Berlin, Sangamon County, in September of that year, and there were born nine more children there. Henry Ellis died in Berlin, June 13, 1854, and his widow survived him many years. He had learned the trade of hatter in his native State. Upon coming to Illinois he bought government land and erected a log cabin, with a fireplace and a stick and mud chimney. He eventually erected a more comfortable home for his family. All of their children are now deceased except Joel H. They were: Abner Y., lived many years in Sangamon County, finally removed to Madison County, and there he and his wife both died; Lavina, born in Warsaw, Ky., was there married to Talbot Leonard, and died in Kentucky; William H. H., died near Berlin, in 1873; Molly, married (first) Ellis Maxwell and (second) Andrew Scott, and all are now deceased; Louisa, married Thomas Foster, of Berlin; Ormasinda, born in Kentucky, died in Illinois; Martha born in 1822 in Kentucky, married Oliver H. Rush, and both are now deceased; Millicent A., born in 1824 in Kentucky, died in young womanhood in Illinois; Joel H.; Robert married Delia Pease and both are deceased; Richard Y., born at Island Grove, in 1832, enlisted August 11, 1861, in Company D Twenty-sixth Illinois, for three years, and was killed in a rifle pit at Atlanta, Ga., August 8, 1864, within three days of the expiration of his term of service. Mrs. Ellis, the mother, could neither forget his tragic death and the fact that he was buried in an unknown grave, so far from his home, and each year at the anniversary of his death grief would seze her anew.

Henry Ellis and his wife were both devout Christians and reared their children to strict observance of the principles of their faith. They were all active members of the Christian Church with the exception of the youngest child. Mr. Ellis was always ready to perform his duty as a Christian and as a citizen, and helped those in distress and gave encouragement to those who needed it. In politics he was a Whig and prominent in public affairs. He was one of the honored pionners of Illinois, as his ancestors had been in Kentucky, and was descended from one of Virginia's first families.

In boyhood Joel H. Ellis began his education in a log school house where slabs furnished the seats and there was a puncheon floor. This was a subscription school, the parents paying a fixed sum for each child sent, and as the boy often had to remain at home to get up wood, gather corn, or to do some other of the many tasks which could be performed by a child of his age and size, his education was necessarily meager. He remained at home until eighteen years of age, when he began learning the blacksmith trade with his brother-in-law, O. H. Rush, making an agreement that during the three years of his apprenticeship he was to receive his board and clothing and at the end of that term be paid $40 in money. He faithfully fulfilled his part of the bargain and at the end of three years invested three dollars in hundles and an anvil and became a partner of his former employer, which arrangement continued two years, when Mr. Rush died and Mr. Ellis, feeling this loss keenly, decided he would have to close the shop, but first went to seek the advice of his old friend, Edward Pease, a hardware dealer of Springfield, who advised him to return and reopen the business, promising to stand by him with credit for any amount from one to one thousand dollars. The young man told his mother of his good fortune and she rejoiced with him, telling him to go ahead and do his best.

May 8, 1852, Mr. Ellis married Caroline Harmon, a native of Sangamon County, and they became the parents of one son, but death visited the home and claimed the young mother, in 1854. Mr. Ellis took his little son and went to live with his sister, Mrs. Polly Scott, but five months after the death of his wife his child also passed away. Mr. Ellis then lived with his mother until May 8, 1853, when he was united in marriage with Martha Ann Simpson, and by this marriage had two daughters, Florence May, at home, and Dora B., widow of Charles Scott, who met his death by accident in 1900. Mrs. Scott has made her home with her parents since the death of her husband.

In 1878 Mr. Ellis drove hogs to St. Louis and sold them for $1.37½ per hundred, but is now able to sell them at home for about $9.50 per hundred. In 1897 his father hauled corn to Berlin and sold it for 6½ cents per bushel, while Mr. Ellis is now able to get 60 cents per bushel for the same grain. As a young man Mr. Ellis used to sharpen the old plow blades, getting 40 to 50 cents each for the 16 and 24 inch cut, the latter of which weighed about 100 pounds. In 1851 Mr. Ellis was employed by Jacob Flower to drive 92 mules to Philadelphia, and mounting his mule started on his way, having to swim the Vermillion, Wabash, White, Muskingum and Scioto Rivers, and ganging the mules at Wheeling. He stopped one week at Loudon, Ohio, and at Cadiz stopped to shoehis front feet of the mules, having to make his nails and shoes. He took them to within sixty miles of Philadelphia, then returned home, having spent five months on the trip. He resumed work at his trade, and for thirty-five years was the village blacksmith at Berlin. He was very successful at his trade, being energetic and industrious, and when work had been promised made it his business to complete it by the appointed time. He was thorough in his work and his patrons were confident he would give them the best service to be obtained. He still has in his possession a whip and crop, etc., of 1846, the full size race horse of fine Kentucky breed, which is an example of neatness and good workmanship.

Mr. Ellis has witnessed with pleasure the remarkable development that has taken place in Sangamon County during the many years he has made it his home. He well remembers the first blacksmith shop and the oil lamp. He recalls the trip when the old flint-lock and tow were used in starting a fire, and one neighbor often used to borrow coals from another to start a fire. The advent of the oil lamp to replace the tallow candles was an event to be long wondered at, but Mr. Ellis has seen these replaced by gas and electric lights. He was well and favorably known in his business days, the community is the envy of the avul was music in his ears, but he finally left his work and retired from business life. He has taken great pleasure in witnessing the favorable changes that have taken place during his lifetime and has always been the friend of progress and improvement. At the age of eighty-three he is in excellent health and attributes his fine physical condition to the fact that he has always been temperate in his habits, has never chewed or smoked tobacco and has never been intoxicated. He has always revered the memory of his mother for her loving care and teaching in early life, and has never forgotten her good advice to him as a boy. After leaving his trade he moved on his farm, living there until 1887, and then, having accumulated a comfortable competency, retired to live in Berlin, where he is surrounded with every comfort.

Mr. Ellis has always been active in church and Sunday School work and can look back with pleasure to the many years he has spent in the good cause. He has been a liberal supporter of various public enterprises and has always been interested in the issues of the day. His eyesight has been failing of late, but he still delights in hearing the news of the day read to him and takes an active interest in all public affairs. He is a Republican in principle and has had the pleasure and honor of shaking the hands of Martin Van Buren, Generals Sherman and Grant and Mr. Roosevelt. He has visited eleven States of the Union and has always taken a keen pleasure in the different scenes, but has been glad to return home. He is devoted to his family and has many warm friends in the county, who greatly enjoy his society and his stories of early days.

ELSHOFF, Anton, of Springfield, one of the leading grocers of this part of the State, was born in that city, May 27, 1857, a son of Henry and Frances Elshoff. In 1894 Henry Elshoff came to Springfield, where his death occurred in January 1900. His wife died in June, 1896, during a pleasure trip in Germany.

Anton Elshoff was educated in the parish school and later graduated from Springfield Business College. After leaving school he entered his father's grocery store, in 1879, and has continued in business ever since. He has built up his present business house, located at the corner of Eleventh and Cook Streets, where for thirty-one years he has met the demands of his customers.

On May 25, 1892, Mr. Elshoff was married to Katie E. Morrison, at St. Mauritius Church, Chicago. In Chicago, Ill. Mrs. Elshoff is the daughter of Stephen B. and Margaret (Crowe) Morrison.

In 1893 Mr. Elshoff was elected a member of the Sangamon County Board of Supervisors, serving two years. In 1903 he was appointed a member of the Springfield Board of Education, serving three years, and in 1906 was re-appointed, serving three more years, and in 1911 he was elected by the people to serve again on the Board of Education.

Mr. Elshoff is a member of the Business Men's Association. He also belongs to the Western Catholic Union, of which organization he was a Supreme Director for several years. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Loyal Americans, Lincoln Centennial Association, and is a popular member of the Knights of Columbus. All his life he has been a consistent member of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception.

ENGLISH, Benajah R.—An old and highly esteemed farmer of Sangamon County, who is now operating on his fine farm of eighty acres on Section 16, Cooper Township, has been a resident of Buckhart Station for more than forty years. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, July 31, 1837, a son of Benajah and Nancy (Ross) English. Benajah English, the father, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., in 1790, served in the War of 1812, and after its close moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he learned the trades of tailoring and bookbinding, and followed these occupations in Cincinnati until his death in ENOS, Pascal Pauli. (Vol. I, p. 158.)

ERMANN, Anton.—No man who spends his days working in the mines can stay in active life as long as one whose energies are better conserved. Laboring beneath the earth's surface, these sturdy miners give to their work the best of their beings and finally retire to spend the rest of their years in the comfort they have so faithfully earned. One of those who is an excellent example of the best class of mining people, is Anton Ermann, of No. 1734 East Carpenter street, Springfield. He was born in Gratz, Austria, January 17, 1852, a son of Joseph and Anna Ermann, both of Austria. The father was a farmer, who operated a big estate in Austria, and there he and his wife lived until their respective deaths. There were six children in the family, represented in Springfield by Anton and Joseph, the latter being still engaged in mining.

Anton Ermann was educated in Austria, and during his boyhood he learned the trade of a baker, following this until he came to America. He was in the Austrian Army for twelve years, being a member of the Hunters' Regiment, which had charge of the preservation of the forests. He was also engaged in bridge building, but never abandoned his trade. On April 4, 1891, he set sail for America, from Bremen, arriving in New York City, from whence he came to Chicago, but after a short stay, went to Green Bay, Wis. There he worked as a forester, but soon went into the iron mines in northern Michigan. He traveled through sixteen different States, engaging in mining, before coming to Pana, Ill., where he arrived in 1902. After sixteen months there, he came to Springfield, and mined until December 1, 1905, when he retired.

On February 10, 1883, he was married in Hungary, to Mary Retter, born in that country, July 10, 1863, a daughter of Frank and Josephine (Leinstein) Retter, both of Hungary. The grandfather was a German, but went to Hungary as a teamster. Later he moved to the portion of Hungary in which Mrs. Ermann was born, making the trip with oxen, a distance of 800 miles. These parents never came to America. They had a remarkable family, there being fifteen children among whom were four pairs of twins, and four survive: Mrs. Ermann; Stephen of Sigmund, Hungary; Mrs. Christina Soupuah of Lugash, Hungary, and Mrs. Agnes Babik of Berlin, Germany.

Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ermann, four of whom are now living: Amelia, wife of Albert Babik of Milwaukee, a machinist; Josephine, John and Paul, at home. In 1904, Mrs. Ermann attended the Chicago College of Midwifery, from which she was graduated July 18, 1904. For eighteen years, prior to coming to America, she practiced her profession in Europe, and since coming to Springfield, she has built up a large practice. Since locating in this city she has been called upon in 530 cases of child birth, and has never lost a patient, a most remarkable record. Mr. Ermann is a Roman Catholic, belonging to SS. Peter and Paul Church, and to the Catholic Order of Foresters. He is a Democrat in political faith. The pleasant home at No. 1734 East Carpenter street, is owned by Mr. Ermann, in addition to other property, for he is in comfortable circumstances.
ERNST, John Alexander, a lifelong resident of Sangamon County, was born near Farmingdale, Gardner Township, July 19, 1862, a son of Frank and Sarah Jane (Ross) Ernst, the former a native of Bremen, Germany, and the latter of Adair County, Ky. Frank Ernst, in early youth a cabinet-maker, came to America when about twenty years of age, worked for a time at his trade in the East, and came to Gardner Township a few years later, there engaging in farming. In politics he was a Republican and later a Prohibitionist, and at the time of his death was an elder in the Farmingdale Presbyterian Church. He and his wife, soon after their marriage, located on the farm where she now resides. He passed away March 21, 1898, at the age of sixty-four years. Mrs. Ernst was twice married, her first husband being James Short, by whom she had two children, Addie and Willia. She is a daughter of William and Maria (Willis) Ross, the former of whom was born January 9, 1801, in North Carolina, and was a son of John Ross. John Ross was born in Ireland and came to America before the Revolution, and served from North Carolina in that struggle for five years, being then wounded and disabled for further service. He was married in North Carolina and moved to Adair County, Ky., when his son William was a child. William Ross there married Maria Willis, in 1827. They were the parents of four children were born to them in Adair County. They came to Sangamon County, Ill., arriving there in November, 1836, and three children were born to them in Gardner Township. Their second child, Sarah Jane, was born February 14, 1831. Frank Ernst and wife had the following children: John Alexander, whose name stands at the head of this sketch; Rev. Albert F., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Grand Island, Neb., married Mabel Gamble; Julia and Jennie, twins, the former wife of W. R. Morris, deceased, and the latter residing with her mother; Emma, wife of W. H. Eckel, and William F., who married Gertrude Sims and resides on the home farm.

After completing the course in the district school in Gardner Township and Farmingdale School, John A. Ernst took a course in Blackburn University at Carlinville, Ill. He has passed his entire active life in agricultural pursuits. He resided with his parents until the death of his father, then locating on his present farm. He owns a well improved and productive farm of 160 acres on Section 14, Island Grove Township, Sangamon County. He has been a member of the Presbyterian Church since attaining his majority, first joining the Farmingdale Church and later transferring his membership to the church at Bates. He served several years in both churches as Superintendent of the Sunday Schools, and has also been active in forwarding the interests of the Y. P. S. C. E. In political belief he is a Prohibitionist, but in voting is independent of party rule, voting for the men he considers best fitted to serve the highest interests of the public.

Mr. Ernst was married at the Corson home near Pleasant Plains, Ill., October 13, 1897, to Ida May, daughter of Richard S. and Mary Corson, both natives of Cape May County, N. J. Mr. Corson followed the sea for nearly twelve years, but not wishing his sons to become sailors, came to Illinois and spent one summer, looking for a desirable location. He then returned to New Jersey on horse-back, sold his farm, and brought his family back to Illinois, locating near Pleasant Plains in 1846. He and his wife celebrated their sixty-fifth wedding anniversary October 16, 1901. He died in December, 1901, aged eighty-seven years, and his widow died in August, 1909, at the age of eighty-eight years, having spent fifty years on the old home farm in Sangamon County. Both were members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs. Ernst was born on the farm near Pleasant Plains October 25, 1866, the youngest of a large family of children. She attended Franklin District School in Cartwright Township. The family had lived in Sangamon County for several years. Mrs. Ernst is a member of the Sunday school and Missionary Society of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Ernst are identified with the best interests of their community and are ready to advance any movement for the general welfare and advancement. They have no children.

ERNST, William Franklin, farmer and stock feeder of Section 7, Gardner Township, was born on the farm he now occupies, December 21, 1870, a son of Frank and Sarah Jane (Ross) Ernst, who were married July 25, 1801. The father was a native of Bremen, Germany, being born there March, 1834, but came to America in 1854, settling in Gardner Township. There he married and became one of the leading men of his times. There, too, his death occurred, March 21, 1898. In politics he was a strong Republican but never desired office. His wife was born in Adair County, Ky., February 14, 1831, and was brought to Sangamon County about 1835, by her parents. Her father, William Ross, became one of the influential men of the township and made it his home until his death. Mr. and Mrs. Ernst were the parents of children as follows: John A., a farmer of Island Grove Township; Rev. Albert F., now in charge of the First Presbyterian Church of Grand Island, Neb., married Mabel Gamble and they have two children, Edgar L. and Albert F. J.; Julia and Jennie, twins, born March 13, 1896, the former, widow of W. R. Morris, having two children, Albert and Helen, while Jennie is at home; Emma, born June 24, 1898, married W. H. Eckel, a farmer near Berry, Ill., and William F. Mrs. Ernst was the widow of James Short at the time of her marriage to Mr. Ernst, and by her first marriage had two children, Mary A. and Millie. Mrs. Ernst still survives and makes her home with her son, William F. She possesses a remarkable memory of times as they were years ago, and is a most intelligent lady. Since childhood she has been a member of the Methodist Church, and tenderly cherishes her associations with this denomination. The remainder of her family are Presbyterians.

William F. Ernst grew up at home and early became a farmer. The homestead is one of the many comfortable ones to be found in Gardner Township, and since the death of the father in 1898 Mr. Ernst has had charge of the 129 acres composing it. He has put it into a high state of cultivation. For some years he has been specializing on hogs and cattle, shipping three carloads of each annually. He believes in high-grade stock and pays big prices for what he buys so as to obtain quality.

On February 4, 1908, Mr. Ernst married Gertrude Sims, born in Curran Township, March 19, 1882, daughter of James B. Sims, also born in Curran Township, in 1838. Mr. Sims became one of the prosperous farmers of the locality, where he and his wife reside, and where he is quite active as a Republican. Mr. Ernst is also a stockholder and has represented his party three times as County Commissioner. His advocacy of progressive movements has gained him many friends and he is justly recognized as one of the rising young farmers of the county, as well as a live, representative citizen, always looking to secure the best for the people he represents.

ESTILL, Capt. William John (deceased), whose military experience was gained in two wars, in both of which he bore an honorable part, had been resident of Petersburg, Ill., since the memorable Battle of Shiloh, that turning point in the great civil war struggle in which he served. Capt. Estill was born in Menard County, Ill., October 18, 1826, a son of William and Mary (Williams) Estill. Both parents were of Southern birth, the father being a native of old Virginia, while the mother belonged to one of the proud old families of Kentucky, of remote English extraction. The Estills came originally from France. The parents of Capt. Estill were among the earliest settlers of Menard County, and when, in 1800, they came to this section, they had penetrated to the borders of civilization. They spent the remaining years of their lives on their lands in Menard County.

William John Estill attended the early schools near his father's farm, but educational opportunities were exceedingly meager at that time. His first work away from home was when he became an employe in the lead mines at Galena, and he was working there when he went out with the regiment for service in the Mexican War, from which he returned safely and resumed farming for a time, but subsequently went into mercantile business. Although he had already proven his patriotism and love of country, when the Civil War was precipitated he was willing again to endanger his life in behalf of the Union cause, and entered the service, becoming Captain of the Twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He saw a long period of hard service, which culminated in his injuries at the Battle of Shiloh, from which he was sent home to Col. John Williams. As soon as he had sufficiently recuperated he resumed mercantile pursuits, in which he continued until he was elected Circuit Clerk of Menard County, and served in that office for eight years. He then became interested in the coal industry, and it is a matter of record that the first mine strike in Menard County originated in his mine, and also a matter of record that through his wisdom, tact and good judgment the whole matter was amicably settled in a week's time. He had been interested to some degree in other business enterprises and was a Director of the Chicago & Alton Railway.

Capt. Estill was twice married: (first) in 1849, to Mina Walker, who died in 1874. On May 11, 1876, he married Hannah J. Collins, then of Peters burg, who was born in Cass County, Ill., seven miles from Beardstown, October 7, 1855. She was the daughter of Henry and Mary Jane (Sutton) Collins, the former of whom was born in Ohio and the latter in Indiana. They were early settlers in Cass County, in the vicinity of Beardstown. To Capt. and Mrs. Estill seven children were born, namely: Emma P., who was born March 13, 1877; Blucher W., born August 17, 1880, served in Springfield, married Sarah Gorey, of Chatham, Ill., and they have two children, Margaret E. and William P.; William J. and Mary J., twins, born September 14, 1881, the former of whom died July 4, 1886; Nellie born September 11, 1885, died July 2, 1886; Frances, born May 28, 1888, married J. O. Ellington of Springfield; and Hannah, who was born August 22, 1889.

In his political views Capt. Estill was always in sympathy with the Democratic party and at one time was his party's choice for the Legislature, but sickness prevented his serving. He has been identified with the Masonic fraternity for many years, uniting with the same at Springfield. With his family, he belonged to the Episcopal Church, in which he had served as Vestryman. Capt. Estill's long life was one of helpful endeavor, both in example and precept, and those who loved, admired and esteemed him are by no means confined to his own home circle. He was a valued comrade in the local Grand Army Post. He died December 10, 1891, two and one-half miles west of Chatham, La., and is buried in the Episcopal Church cemetery at Pinville, La.

ESTROP, Richard.—Owing to the large mining interests of Great Britain, many persons born within the confines of the kingdom turn their attention towards that line of endeavor and learn the work thoroughly under competent supervision. One of the men of this class who later came to Sangamon County is Richard Estrop, now retired and living at Dawson. He was born in Lincolnshire, England, April 17, 1845, being a son of Richard and Anna Estrop, both natives of England, who never left that country, where they died. They had three sons, of whom two, Richard and a brother, Jarvis, of North Dakota, survive.

During boyhood Richard Estrop worked for his father on the farm, securing what education he could, but when he reached the age of fourteen began mining. Eventually he became dissatisfied with conditions in England and on April 9, 1872, sailed for America from Liverpool, landing in New York City. From that city he went to Schuykill, Pa., but remained there only a short time and came on to River- ton, Ill. Until 1876 he mined there, but in that year returned to England. This was but a flying visit, however, and upon his return he resumed his mining operations in Riverton and later moved to Barclay, Minn., where he continued until 1881. He then retired to Dawson and for the past two years has found in that city the requirements for a good home. Nearly all his life in the United States has been spent in mining operations in Sangamon County. He was also for a short time interested in mines at Petersburg.

Mr. Estrop is a member of Barclay Lodge No. 555, I. O. O. F. For a number of years he has been a member of the Methodist Church.

On July 29, 1866, Mr. Estrop was married in England to Mary A. Dinsdale, also a native of England, having been born in Yorkshire, January 15, 1840, a daughter of William Dinsdale, a blacksmith. He and his excellent wife were the parents of nine children, four of whom survive, Mrs. Estrop being the eldest living, and the others being: Mrs. Ellen Windrass, of England; William and Mrs. Alice Lynch, both of Darlington, Eng; Mr. and Mrs. Estrop are the parents of nine children, six of whom survive: Mrs. David Smith, of Dawson; Thomas, of Spaulding; Stephen, residing near Barclay; Walter of Barclay, and Albert, of Dawson, as well as Miss Ellen, who resides with her parents. Mr. Estrop owns his residence in Dawson, as well as other property in the vicinity, and is numbered among the responsible men of his community. During a long and active life he has proven what can be accomplished through hard work and earnest purpose, and he and his family are proud of what he has achieved.

EVANS, John T., an industrious farmer living at Spaulding, Ill., was born in Wales, August 5, 1840, son of Thomas and Ann (Morgan) Evans, both natives of Wales, the former born in 1795 and the latter in 1798. They were farmers and spent their entire lives in their native country, where the father died in 1863 and the mother ten years later. Ten children were born to Thomas Evans and his wife, five sons and five daughters, and eight of these children are now living: Thomas, William, Morgan, Evan, Margaret, Jane, Elizabeth, all living in Wales, and John T., the subject of this sketch.

John T. Evans spent his boyhood on his father's farm and received his education in his native country. He remained with his father until he was fifteen years of age, then spent four years at railroad work. He followed mining for five years in Wales, and in 1869 came to America, landed in New York, and went from there to Morris Run, Pa., where for a time he followed mining. Later in the same year he came to Bloomington, Ill., worked there a few months, and in the spring moved to Lincoln. He afterwards went to Curhondale, Kan., and spent a few months in the mines there, but returned to Lincoln and spent some time there, after which he spent two years in the mines at Churchill, Ohio. He came to Spaulding and secured some land in the vicinity. He has been fairly successful financially and has won many friends.

Mr. Evans was married, at Churchill, Ohio, August 30, 1876, to Margaret Jenkins, who was born July 5, 1851, daughter of John and Rachel Jenkins, both of whom are now deceased. Mrs. Jenkins came to America forty years ago and located at Churchill. Nine children were born to Mr. Evans and his wife, five sons and four daughters: Thomas, a member of the I. O. O. F., living at Dawson, Ill.; Sarah, wife of Joseph Runkles, a carpenter and miner; David, lives at Riverton; Margaret, wife of John Raylets, a farmer; John and Williams, lives at home; Elizabeth, wife of Frank Esper, a mine examiner and village clerk of Riverton; Emma, at home. There are six grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Evans is a member of the Christian Church and in politics is a Republican. Fraternally he belongs to the American Home Circle. He is considered one of the representative citizens of Spaulding and has established a reputation for integrity and reliability. During 1906 he served as City Alderman.

EVERHART, George William.—Prominent among the representative citizens of Sangamon County is George William Everhart, who has been identified with public life since the Civil War, during which he fought both as a Confederate and a Union soldier. He was a Justice of the Peace for forty years and Collector of Rochester, Ill., for a period covering forty-four years. He was born in Hamilton, Loudon County, Va., May 1, 1845, a son of Nathaniel W. and Dorcas Fritz Everhart. George William Everhart was a native of Baden-Baden, Germany, and came to the United States prior to the Revolutionary War. He served as a Captain during that struggle, his home being in Virginia, where he died. The great-grandmother was the only daughter of Prince Gar, of Germany. The great-grandfather Fritz came from Germany and his son (George M. Everhart's paternal grandfather) was born in Virginia. William Fritz, the uncle of George W. Everhart, is still living, and is actively practicing the profession of medicine at Hagerstown, Md., although he has reached the remarkable age of 101 years. Nathaniel W. Everhart was born in Loudoun County, Va., spent his whole life there and died at the age of ninety-eight years and six months, while his wife, also a native of that county attained the advanced age of ninety-six years. By occupation he was a harness and saddle maker.

George William Everhart secured his education in a private school at Leesburg, Va., which he attended until sixteen years of age, and immediately after leaving school enlisted in the army. As a boy he had always been remarkably fond of horses, so it was only natural that he should enlist in a cavalry regiment, becoming a member of the Thirty-fifth Virginia Regiment, Confederate Army, under Captain Frank Myers and Colonel White, April 30, 1861, and John Myers in the greater part of the same company. Mr. Everhart still carries an ounce ball in his leg that he received in the battle of Brandy Station, Va., as well as several saber wounds. He was captured by the Unionists near Hillsboro, Va., and taken to Rock Island, Ill., where he enlisted in the United States Volunteers under Col. Hines. He was in the Indian Campaign in Kansas and Colorado, served thirteen months, and was mustered out of the service, March 30, 1865. While in the Confederate Army his battles included Bull Run, first and second, Manassas Gap, Bluffs, Winchester, Brandy Station and seven days at Richmond, not to mention numerous skirmishes. While in the United States Army he fought at Fort Dodge and also took part in many other Indian fights.

After the war Mr. Everhart returned to his Virginia home, but shortly thereafter came to Illinois, where he has resided ever since, erecting many houses and carrying on an extensive business. He has been identified with some public office most of the time since coming to Rochester. He was Deputy United States Marshall under President Cleveland for four years, Clerk of the Federal Court for five years, has been Justice of the Peace, for the past forty years, (an office which he still holds), Collector for forty-four years. His politics were those of the Democratic party, until he voted for President McKinley when he ran in opposition to William J. Bryan. Locally he votes the Democratic ticket. Although connected with no religious denomination, Mr. Everhart is a firm believer in the benefits of church work and gives his support to all movements of a religious nature. He has been successful in business ventures and is now the owner of several pieces of city property.

On June 1, 1869, Mr. Everhart was united in marriage in Rochester, Ill., by the Rev. Carter Tracy, to Lucy West, who was born in Rochester, August 25, 1846, a daughter of Samuel and Rosetta (Putnam) West, the latter a granddaughter of General Putnam, of Revolutionary fame. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Everhart, namely: Lucy, who died in Sangamon County; Fred, born May 2, 1871, editor of a Rochester paper, married Lulu Renfrow and had one child who died in infancy; and Nora, born August 25, 1873, married William Greer, of Springfield, and has a sixteen-year-old child, Olin.

FAGAN, James K., a retired farmer of Sangamon County, now living on North Jefferson Street, just outside the City of Springfield, was born in Germantown, N. J., June 8, 1842, son of Thomas and Bridget (Murry) Fagan, both natives of Dublin, Ireland, the father born in 1812 and the mother in 1811. Thomas Fagan was a stone-cutter by trade. He and his wife located in New Jersey in 1822 and there she died in 1863, and Mr. Fagan married in Maryland. He and his wife had been in Sangamon County for about ten years. He lived a few years in Sangamon County, Ill., Mr. Fagan went East and remained a year and a half, then returned to Sangamon County, where he owned a farm and followed his trade. The education of James K. Fagan was acquired in the public schools of his native State and he worked on his father's farm until he was twenty-four years old, then worked in a brick yard in Springfield for Mr. H. Westlake. Later he became employed in the same business by Mr. Fairchild, and helped make brick for the State House. He worked three years for Mr. Fairchild, then was seriously hurt by being accidentally buried in a pit at the yards and was some time recovering. Upon becoming able to resume work, he purchased a team and for two years hauled brick and coal for Mr. Fairchild. Following this he located on a farm at Bissell, Ill., where he carried on agricultural pursuits with success for thirty-three years. About 1903 he left his farm and located in his present comfortable residence in the outskirts of Springfield, but still owns seventy-two acres of good farming land at Bissell. He has always been industrious, and although not always enjoying good health, has accomplished a great deal of work, by reason of his energy and ambition. At the time of the Civil War he applied for admission to the army, but as he could not pass the required physical examination, was rejected. He is a man of honesty and reliability and has a large number of friends.

Mr. Fagan was married, in New Jersey, October 24, 1864, to Margaret Havey, daughter of Michael and Eliza Havey, who was born August 19, 1840. His paternal ancestors were from Kentucky, and he is a son of George and Ruth (Smith) Fagan, both natives of Bourbon County, Ky. The parents moved from Kentucky and settled in Buffalo, Hart Township, Sangamon County, in 1818, at which time the Indians were the only residents there. Mr. Fagan lived four years on that place, then moved to Springfield and came to the farm now occupied by his son William. He was educated carefully, attending public school in both Indiana and Illinois, after which he took the scientific course at Westfield College with class of 1885, graduating therefrom. Still later he took the classical course at Otterbein University, Columbus, Ohio, completing with ability and thoroughly preparing himself for a life of teaching, he went to Harvard and the University of Chicago for special studies. Having fully equipped himself, he began teaching district school and afterward at Taylorville, Ill., and so completely did he prove his ability, that he was offered and accepted the principalship of schools at Morrisonville, and later at Rockton and other cities, from which he was called in 1910, to take charge of the Stuart school of Springfield.

On August 22, 1890, Prof. Fawcett was married at Jacksonville, to Lilie W. Griffith, born three miles east of Mechanicsburg, Sangamon County, Ill. Two children have been born to Prof. and Mrs. Fawcett, one now living. Harriet Pleasant Fawcett. She was born August 6, 1900.

Prof. Fawcett is a Mason and a member of the Eastern Star. While he is a member of the United Brethren Church, his wife is a Methodist. In politics, Prof. Fawcett is a Repub-lican. Having spent all his life preparing for and carrying out the work he felt he was destined for, Prof. Fawcett is fitted for it by inclination and careful training and brings to it the powers of a sagacious, cultivated and highly receptive mind. The pupils under his fostering care show the effect of his methods and stand among the best trained in this part of the State. (Since this sketch was written Prof. Fawcett has removed to Seattle, Wash.)

Fawcett, J. W. (deceased), was a leading farmer in his part of Sangamon county, and late in life was for some years an influential resident of Buffalo. He was born in Clay County, Indiana, December 12, 1846, and died April 3, 1899. His parents were John and Minerva (Jenkins) Fawcett, natives respectively of Virginia and Indiana. Their marriage was in their native State to Indiana, where he lived till 1858, when he came to Illinois, locating in Jasper County. There he farmed ten years, then moved to Sangamon County and located on a farm near Buffalo Hart, on which he lived out the remainder of his life and where his wife also passed away. They have five sons and three daughters, of whom the following survive: Frank is a school teacher at Springfield; John is in the real estate business at Des Moines, Iowa; Walter is a farmer in Shelby County, Ill., J. W. Fawcett was educated in country schools in Indiana and passed his boyhood and youth in assisting his father in the operation of the home farm. He gave his life to agriculture with considerable business success. He was a member of the Christian Church, with which his widow has long been identified. In political affiliations he was a stanch Republican. He married, at Taylorville, Ill., August 6, 1868, Miss Margaret Burch. Ferguson, Benjamin Hamilton (deceased), long one of the most prominent business men of Springfield, was born in 1835, and has been for thirty-five years connected with the Marine Bank and for many years its President. He was the lifelong resident of Springfield, his birthplace, and was active in public affairs. He was one of the most highly respected citizens and well known men of the city and his loss was genuinely mourned in many circles. Mr. Ferguson was born December 5, 1835, in Montgomery County, Ohio, to Dr. Benjamin and Sarah (Irwin) Ferguson, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former born in Monongahela City. Benjamin Ferguson was a contractor and builder and died in Springfield in 1842. He was a member of the Washingtonian Society, a temperance organization, to which Asahel Hamilton belonged, and was Popular in the time of the death of Mr. Ferguson Mr. Lincoln made an address on the subject of temperance in the Second Presbyterian Church of Springfield, the date of this occasion being February 22, 1842. Mr. Ferguson was married in Pennsylvania and came to Springfield in 1851, and his and family home was there. They were: William, a prominent lawyer, who died in California; Elizabeth, married Jacob Bunn, of Springfield; Robert, died in Springfield, though his home was in Auburn, Ill.

Benjamin H. Ferguson received his early education in the schools of Springfield. He left school at the age of sixteen years, and was then clerk and bookkeeper in the store of Jacob Bunn. After his return from the war he entered the Marine Bank, being Cashier for several years, and advancing to the office of President of that sound, substantial, conservative institution, one of the oldest banks in the State. Mr. Ferguson carried out the widest policies of the bank in every way and under his careful and able administration it prospered and maintained the position of trust and confidence it had held so many years.

Mr. Ferguson was a stanch Republican all his life and active in the interests of the party. He was united in 1865 with the First Presbyterian Church of Springfield, and his widow is also a member of that church. In August, 1862, Mr. Ferguson recruited Company B, One Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, and was elected its Captain, serving as such two years. He participated in the Siege of Vicksburg, the battle at Jackson, and in many lesser engagements. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being affiliated with Stephen Post, of Springfield.

Besides being prominent as a banker Mr. Ferguson was for many years a successful merchant, having established a crockery and glassware store at the corner of Monroe and Sixth Streets, Springfield, in 1808, where he conducted one of the largest establishments of its kind in the city and did an immense business. He was one of the most upright and honorable men and possessed the full confidence of all who came in contact with him in business or social life. He was interested in any measure calculated to be of public benefit and promoted the welfare and progress of the community in many ways.

Ira W. Fero was married in many years the leading exponent of terpsichorean art in Springfield, and from him the youths and maidens learned the latest ideas with regard to dancing. Mr. Fero was born in New York State, March 9, 1855. His father was a farmer and merchant, and after Ira W. Fero finished his school course, he clerked in a store until he reached his majority. However, his inclinations ran in another direction, and he did not purpose to spend his life behind the counter. Finally, he moved to Decatur, Ill., about 1875, there to open a dancing academy, where he taught some of the best people of the city. After two years at Decatur he came to Springfield, where he conducted his business until his demise, in July, 1896. His remains were interred at beautiful Oak Ridge Cemetery at Springfield.

Mr. Fero was a Methodist in religious faith, but his wife and daughter are Episcopalians. Absorbed as he was in his business, he had little time for politics, and did not actively espouse any party, voting independently. On November 17, 1866, Mr. Fero was married, in New York, to Mary Jane Dickerson, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Miller) Dickerson, natives of Virginia and Kentucky, respectively. They were farming people who came to Sangamon County at an early day, and became identified with its agricultural interests. Mr. and Mrs. Fero had two children: Evas, born April 27, 1885, resides with her mother, and a son who died at birth. The family residence is at No. 419½ East Monroe Street, and there the ladies warmly welcome their friends. They are carrying on the dancing academy, whose excellence is fully maintained, and both take a strong interest in their work. They are charming ladies, cultured and refined, and have the respect and confidence of all with whom they are associated in either a professional or social way.

Ferreira, Isaac, one of the essentially self-made men of his community and generation, has risen through his own unaided efforts to a position of importance, and is now proprietor of a large store, dealing in groceries, fruits, vegetables, fish and poultry at No. 624 Grand Boulevard, Springfield. He was born August 24, 1861, in the Second Ward of that city, where he has spent his life. He is a son of James Ferreira, born on the Island of Madeira, July 5, 1836, son of Joseph Ferreira, also of Madeira, where he died. When only sixteen years old, James Ferreira, with his mother and five other children, came from New York City, where they had landed, to Springfield to join relatives. The lad learned the harness-making trade and carried it on for many years. At present he resides at the corner of First and Carpenter Streets. In 1860 he was married in Springfield, to Charlotte Vieira, born on the Island of Madeira, in September, 1844, a daughter of Joaquin and Mary Vieira. Mr. Vieira came to America with his family in 1846, and after landing in New York came to Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Ferreira had children as follows: Isaac, Charlotte, Sarah, Mary, Jeune; Roddie, deceased; James, deceased; Effie, Lucy, John, Albert, Louise and Marguerite.

Isaac Ferreira attended what is now the Trapp School, and studied under several well-known teachers, including Miss Hughes, Miss Mary Selig and Thomas Catlin, whom he gratefully remembers. When he was sixteen years old he began learning the blacksmith trade, with Booth & McCoker, at the corner of Eighth and Washington Streets. Later he went with Henry Marks, at the corner of Eleventh and Madison Streets, where for three years he worked in the grocery business. Following this he was clerk and book-keeper with several concerns, then entered the establishment of R. C. Steele, with whom he remained twelve years, and for ten years was head clerk. At this time he began business for himself on Monroe, between Fourth and Fifth Streets, remaining on that block for twenty-four years. In December, 1909, he moved into his present store, which is 63x23 and has a double frontage. The building, is of pressed brick, with flats above. It is fitted with electric and gas lights, hot and cold water, cemented cellar, and all modern improvements. In addition to erecting this building Mr. Ferreira has built twenty-five residences in different parts of the city, and is now one of the most prosperous merchants of Springfield. He is a stanch Republican in politics. Formerly he attended the First Presbyterian Church, which is Portuguese, but his family are members of the West Side Christian Church. Fraternally he is a member of the Odd Fellows, Maccabees and Modern Woodmen.

On January 22, 1895, he married Molly Mel- line, of Jacksonville. They have children as follows: Lucille, aged fifteen years; Leon, aged fourteen years; James, aged twelve years; Joseph, aged ten years, and Robert, aged eight years.

Hard-working, eager to seize upon opportunities as offered, Mr. Ferreira presents a striking example of what can be accomplished through sturdy endeavor, backed by strict honesty and thrifty habits.

Ferreira, John H.—A general blacksmith whose business is located at No. 214 North Second Street, Springfield, is a man who has succeeded well and now specializes on plow and wagon work and horse-shoeing. He was born August 26, 1863, on the corner of Second and Carpenter Streets, Springfield, a son of John Ferreira and Mary (Vasconcellos) Ferreira, the former born on the Island of Madeira, in June, 1858, and the latter in the same place in May, 1841. She was a daughter of Joseph Vasconcellos, a Portuguese Republican, who came to the United States in young manhood with his widowed mother and her six other children. He learned wagon making in Springfield and followed that trade for some time, then located on his farm of fifty acres, where he and his wife are both living. They had children as follows: John H., Harvey, Lewis; Lizzie, married Jess Neef, of Island Grove Township; William, of Sun Prairie; Mary, Mrs. Harry Shoemaker, of Springfield.

John H. Ferreira attended the Trapp School in Springfield until he was twelve years old, then the family moved to the farm his father had bought in Island Grove Township. For three years the lad worked on the farm, then learned the blacksmith trade. Following this he worked with a number of well-known men in this line, finishing his apprenticeship by the time he was eighteen years old. He then went to Grand Rapids, where he spent eight years. Coming back to Springfield, he started in business for himself. While a Republican on national questions, he is liberal about matters pertaining to local government. Fraternally he belongs to the Masons, Modern Woodmen, and Royal Neighbors, and is popular in all.

Mr. Ferreira was married in Grand Rapids, December 28, 1891, to Miss Ella Benson, of Jan's city, daughter of the late Isaac Benson. Their children are: Arthur W. and Emma Rosette. Mr. Ferreira belongs to a class of men who are steadily working towards better government and general advancement. Industrious and hard-working, strict in business probity, Mr. Ferreira believes in uprightness in public office and casts his vote for the man he deems will best carry out its obligations.

Ferris, George D.—It is considered a distinc- tion to come of families whose forebears fought for the independence of this country. There are a number of men in Springfield who can lay claim to this distinguished honor, and among them is George D. Ferris, a retired brick mason, whose grandfather on the paternal side of the house was a soldier in the War of 1812. Mr. Ferris was born at Portage, Ohio, September 19, 1833, being a son of Joseph and Sevalla (Rounds) Ferris, natives of Portage, Ohio, and New York State. The father was a stone cutter by trade, who in 1840 went to California after gold, and died there. His widow died in Ohio.

George D. Ferris was educated in Portage, Ohio, going to school in a little log building, where the pupils sat on slat benches. These schoolhouses were very primitive, with punchen floors, greased paper windows, and a rude log door hung on homemade hinges. Yet these primitive affairs withstood the attacks of wind and weather better than many of our modern structures which are old when but a decade has passed. He learned the stone cutting trade with his father, later adding that of brick mason, and worked at the latter for forty years. In 1854 he came to Springfield, having great faith in its future, and soon branched out into contracting. He worked on the gubernatorial mansion from the foundation up, as well as on other important buildings during the many years he was in business. For the past fourteen years, he has been retired, residing in his present residence No. 731 North Seventh street, where he has resided twenty-eight years.

Mr. Ferris has an excellent war record, enlisting in Company E, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served for three years, being mustered out at Camp Butler. He served under General Sherman, participating in many battles that left their trail of blood over both north and south, and, after forty-five years of peace, still raise painful memories including those of the Pittsburg campaign, and Mrs. Ferris is a member of the National Union veterans, Vicksburg (Miss.). Naturally Mr. Ferris is very prominent in Stephensons Post, No. 30, G. A. R., of Springfield. He attends the English Lutheran Church, and in politics he has always been a Republican.

Mr. Ferris was married in Springfield, December 3, 1861, to Matilda Soumon, born in Lewis County, New York, on January 4, 1845. Her parents came to Springfield at an early day, first stopping in Milwaukee, Wis., but not liking it there they pressed on to Springfield, which became their home, and continued so until their deaths. The father was a brick layer, mason and contractor. Mr. and Mrs. Ferris have no issue.

Mr. Ferris is well known in Sangamon County for his good, reliable government and is always willing to do a fair share in this connection.

FERRY, George P.—The land of Sangamon County, Ill., being peculiarly adapted for grazing purposes, it is only natural that there should be many farmers in the county giving much of their attention to the breeding of fine cattle and horses, and some of the finest stock to be found at the livestock fairs held all over the country comes from this section of Illinois. One of Sangamon County’s farmers is George P. Ferry, who conducts a general farm on Section 5, Cartwright Township. Mr. Ferry was born on Section 13, in this township, May 15, 1834, and is a son of Thomas H. and Loretta (Per- rin) Ferry, natives of St. Lawrence County, N. Y.

Thomas H. Ferry, who was reared in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., made a trip to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1846, and there bought land. He had first married and had, a decade later, a wife by whom he had one son, O. E. Ferry, now a prominent retired farmer of Eldorado, Kan., and after the death of his first wife he returned to New York, where he was again married and returned to Sangamon County in 1858. He located on his farm in Cartwright Township, turned his attention to the cultivation of his land, and became one of the leading agriculturalists of his day. Mr. Ferry was a man loved for his integrity of character and his many sterling qualities, and was a devout church member, giving liberally of his means for the support of the Presbyterian Church. He was called to his reward January 4, 1909, his wife surviving him until June 25, 1909. To them there were born four children, of whom two died in infancy, the other two being George P. and John T., the latter a farmer in Cartwright Township.

George P. Ferry obtained his education in the district schools of Cartwright Township and at the age of sixteen years was given charge of the home farm, on account of the serious illness of his father. At the time of the latter’s death, the home farm was divided, and George P. remained on his share of the property until March, 1902, when he sold this share and invested in Sections 3 and 10, Cartwright Township. Mr. Ferry has given particular attention to the breeding of fine horses, of which he has a large number on his farm. He is a lover of an acknowledged judge of horses, being always willing and ready to pay a fair and honest price for a good horse. A man of honesty and integrity, his customers are always sure of a fair and square deal, and as a result his dealings have been far above the ordinary.

On December 22, 1887, Mr. Ferry was married to Miss Lonella Durand, who died September 20, 1889, without issue. On February 20, 1907, he was married to Miss Mary A. Smith, and to this union there have been born two children: Lena L., born December 7, 1907, and Mary Frances, born July 10, 1909.

Mr. Ferry has always taken a prominent part in all public enterprises and has been a leader in every movement that has promised to be of benefit to his community. He has been a supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but has steadily refused to accept public office. Although a member of no religious denomination, he is a liberal supporter of all creeds. Mrs. Ferry is a member of the Baptist Church. In his fraternal affiliations Mr. Ferry is connected with the Masonic Lodge No. 700 and the Modern Woodmen of America, both of Pleasant Plains. His business interests have taken him all over the county, and he enjoys the respect and esteem of all who have come into contact with him, whether in a business or a social way.

FERRY, John T.—A representative citizen and successful agriculturist of Sangamon County, Ill., who is cultivating on excellent property of 136 acres on Section 33, Cartwright Township, was born just south of Pleasant Plains, Ill.,
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

September 29, 1864, a son of Thomas H. and Loretta (Perrin) Ferry, natives of St. Lawrence County, N. Y.

The first wife of Thomas H. Ferry was a Miss Maria Lamphier, who died leaving him one son, O. E. Ferry, of Eldorado, Ill., and he was married, February 1st, 1859, to Loretta Perrin, who bore him four children, of whom two died in infancy, the survivors being: John T. and George P., the latter a prominent farmer and stock-raiser of Cartwright Township. Thomas H. Ferry first came to Sangamon County in 1846 and purchased land, but after the death of his first wife returned to New York, whence he again came to Illinois in 1858, and spent the remainder of his life on his farm, becoming one of the leading men of his township, and a man admired and esteemed for his honesty, integrity and many charities. He died January 4, 1890, and his wife followed him to the grave June 25, 1905.

The boyhood of John T. Ferry was passed much the same as that of other farmers' boys of his day, his education being secured in the district schools during the time that he could spare from his duties on the home farm. Drilled to the life of a farmer and stock-raiser, he has made this his life work, and at the age of twenty-two years he rented a part of the home farm, successfully operating sixty acres for a period of two years. On November 13, 1890, he was united in marriage with Miss Viola Purvines, who was born near their present home in Cartwright Township, February 10, 1865, the daughter of William G. and Emily (Purvine) Purvines, both of whom were born in Cartwright Township. Mr. Purvines dates the coming of his family to Sangamon County as far back as 1822 or 1823, and he now resides in the village of Pleasant Plains, being one of the extensive landowners of the township. Mr. and Mrs. Purvines are still living, as are all the other children of there having never been a death in the family. Their children are as follows: Mrs. Ferry; Loran, a farmer of Cartwright Township; Alice, the wife of Augustus H. Atherton, a farmer of Cartwright Township; Carroll, a rancher of Panhandle, Carson County, Tex.; Beulah, the wife of Homer G. Doughitt, who farms in Cartwright Township; Walter, a large landowner in the Panhandle district, Tex.; and Edith, who resides with her parents.

After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Ferry located on a farm in Auburn Township, and here he successfully continued in agricultural pursuits until 1890, when he purchased the present property and moved there and has cultivated to a high state. His property can boast of well-kept fences, graded pastures, excellent barn and outbuildings and a comfortable dwelling. He uses the latest and most highly improved farm machinery in his work, and breeds a high grade of cattle.

Mr. Ferry has always acted with the Republican party and his services to this organization have prompted his fellow citizens to tender him places of public preferment, but he has always declined to hold public office, preferring to give his time and attention to his agricultural interests. Although a member of no religious body, he is always ready to give liberally to churches and charitable movements, and is a firm believer in education. Mrs. Ferry has long been an active member of the Methodist Church.

FETZER, John P., a prominent and thrifty young farmer of Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, was born near Richland, that township, March 2, 1878, a son of Frederick and Margaret (Raps) Fetzer. Frederick Fetzer was a native of Prussia, whose father died in that country, and when about seventeen years of age the young man, with three brothers, came to America. They emigrated about 1855 and came direct to Illinois, spent a short time at Kankakee, then came to Springfield. Frederick Fetzer there followed his trade of carpenter and was married in January, 1862. He bought land on Section 15, Cartwright Township, about 1874, there reclaimed wild land and put it under cultivation, and erected a home. In the spring of 1910 he retired from his farm and now resides on College Street and Capital Avenue, Springfield, where he and his wife are enjoying the fruits of a well-spent, busy life. His first purchase of land was 147 acres, to which he added from time to time, until he owned 410 acres in that township. He built the house and in other ways greatly improved the place where he made his home, and both farms are now in a high state of cultivation. He has always been ready to help forward any enterprise for the public good. He and his wife are members of the German Lutheran Church of Springfield, and to them were born seven children, five of whom are living. They are: Miss Anna, wife of Rev. F. Engelsbet; Miss Alice, in charge of the German Lutheran Church at Braddock, Pa.; Katherine, wife of William C. Vogt, a dry-goods merchant of Springfield; George, a machinist of Des Moines and interested in the traction company at that city; John P.; Edward J. F., on the old home farm on Section 15. When Frederick Fetzer came to America he had no money with which to make his start in life, but went to work with a will to earn some, and by economy and industry was able to attain gratifying success.

John P. Fetzer spent his boyhood on a farm, as did many another farmer's son, attending school as he could be spared from the farm work and before he reached his majority. He remained at home until about twenty-one years of age, then rented his father's farm in Section 2, and on August 15, 1900, married Miss Nellie Mitchell, a native of Campbellsville, Ky. She was born January 12, 1882, and is a daughter of James D. and Edith (Schofner) Mitchell, who came to Sangamon County in 1854. After his mar-rionshe Mr. Fetzer took charge of his father's farm on Section 2 and has since operated this tract of 163 acres, being at present in charge of 213 acres altogether, and successful in his enterprise. He keeps a variety of good stock but does not raise hogs for the market. He is an energetic and enterprising business manager and has well earned his present success.

Four children have been born to Mr. Fetzer and wife: Marguerite, born November 9, 1901; Edith, June 10, 1903; Catherine, February 23, 1908; Ruth Olive, August 25, 1910. Mr. Fetzer owns stock in the Farmers Elevator Company and is a close student of modern methods of farming. In politics he is a Democrat. His wife belongs to the Methodist Church and he to the Lutheran Church. Both have many friends and have a good standing in the community.

FEUERBACH, John (deceased).—The older residents of Springfield, Ill., will remember John Feuerbach, a prominent German-American citizen, who after many years of laborious and active pursuits, retired from active life and spent his last years living in the Capital City. Mr. Feuerbach was born in Germany in 1844, a son of Jacob and Lena Feuerbach, natives of the Fatherland, who came to the United States in early days and located near Evansville, Ind., where they spent their lives in farming. They had a family of four children, and the others beside John, were Jacob and Michael Feuerbach and Mrs. Lena Schimmelmann, now residents of Evansville.

John Feuerbach started his education in the schools of Germany, and completed it in Evansville, Ind., as soon as he was old enough beginning work on the home farm. On reaching his majority, he engaged in farming on his own account in Indiana, and in 1884, came to Sangamon County, Ill., where he commenced farming, but after two years sold his land locating in Springfield, purchased the home on South Eleventh Street, where Mrs. Feuerbach now resides. Here he was living at the time of his death, in 1896. Mrs. Feuerbach has five acres and the house is located at No. 1902 South Eleventh Street, the old family home. Mr. Feuerbach was a Republican in politics, and an upright, exemplary citizen.

On August 18, 1868, Mr. Feuerbach was married at Evansville, Ind., to Elizabeth Lohman, who was born in Evansville, July 1, 1852, the daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (Kaufmanner) Lohman, natives of Germany, who came to America at an early date and settled near Evansville, where they followed agricultural pursuits until their death. There were six children in their family, of whom Elizabeth became the wife of Mr. Feuerbach; Mrs. Lena Schimmelmann is living in Rockwell, Tex.; George Lohman is a resident of Springfield, and three are deceased. One of Mrs. Feuerbach's brothers, John, who is now deceased, served as a soldier in the Union army during the Civil War.

There were sixteen children in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Feuerbach, of whom seven are now living, as follows: John L., a farmer of Sangamon County; Elizabeth, who is the widow of Oscar Bowman, residing in Divernon, Ill.; Lulu, who married George Cantrell, of Springfield; Henry, who is a resident of Hannibal, Mo.; Christopher, who lives at home with his mother; Frank, who is in the employ of Schnupp & Barues, of Springfield, and Mary who married William H. Kuder, has six children, and they all reside with Mrs. Feuerbach. Mr. Kuder being the proprietor of a dairy. Mrs. Feuerbach has sixteen grandchildren.

FEUERBACHER, Frederick (deceased).—The sturdy qualities of the Germans make them desiré wherever advanced civilization has taken hold, for they are industrious, intelligent and thrifty. They do not move from place to place, but settle down and work for their posterity, founding homes and taking an interest in those matters which will insure good schools and a prosperous community. The late Frederick Feuerbacher was one of the bondholders of German-Americans Springfield has ever known. Born in Germany, in July, 1814, he was brought up under the fostering care of an unusually intelligent father, whose profession was that of school teaching. Neither of the parents came to America, but lived and died in Germany.

As he grew to manhood, and Feuerbacher learned the cabinetmaking trade and, realizing the better opportunities offered here, came to America in 1847, first locating at Louisville, but coming to Springfield in 1848. In the Capital City he found ready employment for his skill as a cabinetmaker, and worked at his trade the rest of his life. During this time, he produced some beautiful work, which still exists as proof of his skill, that knew nothing of the cheap, machinemade articles of this generation. Mr. Feuerbacher was a Republican and a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, in the faith of which he died in 1882, honored and respected by a wide circle of friends. His marriage occurred in Germany in 1846, when he was united with Regina Dittus, born in Wurtenburg, Germany, July 27, 1817. Her parents lived and died in Germany. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Feuerbacher: Mary married John Gottschalk; Christina, wife of Jacob Baumann, deceased; Jacob married Caroline Paul, a resident of Springfield, and they have two daughters, Emma Marie and Caroline; Magdelene; Lena, wife of William F. Schmidt, a carpenter and contractor, living with Mrs. Feuerbacher, and they have one son, Walter G., a florist in the employ of Mr. Vanhorn. There are seven grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren, all living in the family belonging to Mrs. Feuerbacher. She is a venerable lady, having attained the advanced age of ninety-two years. The family have all been prominent in church work and are known throughout the county as reliable, substantial people. Mr. Fenerbacher's life was one of hard work and thrifty investment, and he left behind him a comfortable competence to provide for his widow in her old age and to give his children a start in life.

FIELD, Alexander Pope: (Vol. I, pp. 164-165.)

FIELDS, James H., a well-known citizen of Springfield, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, has spent most of his life in the vicinity where he now lives. He was born in Sangamon County, July 4, 1847, a son of Earl and Paulina (Southwick) Fields, the former born in Connecticut, in 1796, and the latter born in New York. The father was a drummer in the Mexican War and later located in Sangamon County. As he died when his son James H. was a small child, the latter knows little of his ancestors. Paulina Southwick's parents came to Illinois from New York at an early day, her father being Jesse Southwick, the grandfather of Major Southwick, now a prominent citizen of Springfield, and who served as Major of the One Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Infantry during the Civil War.

When nine years of age James H. Fields began working on a farm and has followed that occupation all his life. He had practically no educational advantages, as at the time he was able and ready to enter school he enlisted in the Civil War. He has lived in Sangamon County all his life except for four short years spent in the West and during his service in the army. He enlisted, in June, 1862, at Springfield, in Company A, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, under Captain Elkins, and served until June, 1863, when he was discharged from the hospital. He remained at home until December, 1863, when he reenlisted at Springfield in the same company, and served until the end of the war. He was discharged from the military hospital at New Orleans, La., and returned to Sangamon County, where he again engaged in farming. He participated in the Battle of Sabine River, where General Steele destroyed many wagons and threw them into the river to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy. Mr. Fields served as orderly for General Ross in the Yazoo Pass expedition, and took part in skirmishes at Little Rock, Helena, and numerous other engagements, also participated in many foraging expeditions and had many narrow escapes. He endured countless hardships and, while on the road to Camden, Miss., spent two days under fire and for several days was without food. He took part in the Camden expedition, and helped to recapture a cannon that had been taken by the enemy at Prairie Grove, Mo. Mr. Fields was one of the members of the notably brave and well-trained Western Department that accomplished so much in defense of the Union cause, and who endured so much in the way of danger and hardship without complaint. He won a very good record and acquitted himself most creditably.

Mr. Fields was married, in Springfield, in 1885, to Miss Katie Hayes, a native of Springfield, whose parents were prominent in Sangamon County. One child was born of this marriage, William C., now living on a farm in Kansas. Mr. Fields denies quite extensively in real estate and has met with fair success in all his enterprises. A member of one of the old families in Sangamon County, he enjoys the good-will and esteem of all who know him, and performs his duty as a citizen in as worthy a manner as he did when a soldier. He is a member of the Christian Church, and has been a Republican in politics since old enough to vote, and is also a prominent member of the G. A. R.

FINK, Edward A.—It has often been truly said that the newspapers of any community serve in a large degree to mold public opinion, and it is, therefore, to those who have the newspapers in charge, and more especially those who write the editorials, that the public must look for the welfare of their interests. One of the most prominent and, at the same time, conservative sheets of Sangamon County, is the Pleasant Plains “Weekly Press,” whose owner and editor, Edward A. Fink, bears a high reputation in the Illinois newspaper field. Mr. Fink is a native of Pleasant Plains, born September 14, 1879, a son of George W. and Rebecca (Hayes) Fink. Mr. George W. Fink was a native of Muskingum County, Ohio, February 2, 1825, son of George and Mary (Way) Fink, the former was born in Maryland in 1796 and the latter in Loudon County, Va. About 1824 George Fink removed to Muskingum County, Ohio, during the early days of that State, and engaged in the merchandising business, in which he was interested up to the time of his death in 1833, as the result of an accident. After his death his widow brought her children farther West, locating in Pleasant Plains, Ill., where her death occurred in 1855, when she had reached the ripe old age of eighty-eight years. George W. Fink was reared in Ohio, and even as a youth showed marked ability as a business man, although he was given little time to acquire educational advantages. After learning the trade of carriage-maker in Circleville, Ohio, he went to Lexington, Ky., and later to St. Louis, Mo., at both of which places he followed his chosen occupation and he subsequently located in Pleasant Plains, Ill., where he established a home and a factory for the manufacture of carriages, buggies and vehicles of all kinds. During the thirty-five years that he followed this business he built up one of the largest trades in the State, the excellence of his workmanship, the durability of his vehicles and farm implements, and his honorable business methods securing for him a reputation that insured a large patronage. He also invested in farm property and finally became the owner of a farm of 333 acres.
FINK, Dr. Frank C., of Pleasant Plains, Ill., is rated as one of the leading medical and surgical practitioners of Sangamon County. He was born at Pleasant Plains June 25, 1880, a son of George W. Fink, a pioneer and honored citizen whose biography is given at some length in this work. He was duly graduated from the high school with the class of 1897, and in the fall of that year entered the college at Dixon, Ill., where he took a year's preparatory course in medicine. He then returned to his home and entered college, took the bachelor's degree in English, after which for two years applied himself to studies and was given the B. E. degree, finishing that course in 1899. In the fall of 1900 he entered the medical department of the Washington University, in St. Louis, Mo., where he took a four years' course and was awarded a diploma in 1904. In the summer of that year he began a post-graduate course in diseases of women at the Philadelphia Polyclinic College, later taking a post-graduate course at the Chicago Polyclinic College. His professional studies having been completed, he returned home in December, 1904, to enter the school of practice which he made an active field of investigation. He established himself in Springfield, in an office with Dr. Langdon, soon advanced to high rank in his profession and was appointed medical examiner for several life insurance companies, for the Modern Woodmen of America, the Modern Fraternity, the American Patriots, the Home Defenders, the Knights and Ladies of Security and other beneficiary organizations. His duties both as physician and surgeon became so strenuous and so exacting that, after two years' falling health he was compelled to discontinue his practice and return home for a time. In June, 1907, he located at Waverly, Ill., and there, as at Springfield, he soon built up a large and increasing practice. In 1909 he went to Colorado Springs, Colo., where he practiced his profession eight months, when he returned home at the request of his aged parents to look after their business interests. He then opened an office at Pleasant Plains, where his successful experience at Springfield and at Waverly have been repeated, and he has his full share of the professional patronage. He has never ceased to be a student and keeps abreast of the times by diligent reading and personal investigation along professional lines. He has a fine medical library and his office is well equipped with modern apparatus. He is careful in diagnosis and insures the proper action of remedies by compounding his own prescriptions.

FISHERKELLER, Lewis.—Owing to the many advantages offered in Springfield it has been selected by a number of men of means as their permanent home, after retiring from active life. One of those who belongs to this large and representative class in Lewis Fisherkeller, a substantial German-American citizen, residing at No. 1420 East Edwards Street. He was born in Baden, Germany, October 5, 1825, a son of Lewis and Mary (Angers) Fisherkeller, natives of Germany. The father was a baker and merchant who, with his wife, rounded out a useful life in Germany. There were four daughters and two sons in this family, but Lewis, of this sketch, and Joseph, of Germany, are the only survivors.

Like all German boys, Mr. Fisherkeller was brought up to work and given a substantial education, which included the learning of the saddlery and harness-making trade. After completing his apprenticeship he worked at his trade in Germany before coming to America in 1850. He took passage on a sailing vessel at Strasburg, landing in New Orleans, whence he came north as far as Cincinnati. After a short stay in that city he went to Hamilton, Ohio, where he worked at harness making, but remained only two years. Following this, he worked in various cities until he arrived at St. Louis, Mo., but remained there only a short time, when he came via stage coach to Jacksonville. Until 1854 he remained in that city, then became a resident of Sangamon County, locating in Pleasant Plains, where he lived until 1900. In that year he came to Springfield and retired from the saddlery and harness-making business.

While residing in Jacksonville, in 1853, Mr. Fisherkeller was united in marriage with Mary Dunsin, born in Westphalia, Germany. Her parents came to Salisbury Township, Sangamon County, where they farmed until they died. Mrs. Fisherkeller died in 1894, having borne her husband four daughters and two sons, five of whom survive: Henry, of Bloomington; J. Lewis, in the employ of the Springfield City Railroad Company; Mrs. Mary Warner, of Dakota; Dena, Mrs. Hagerdon, of Idaho; Anna, wife of Matthew Young, of Springfield. There are twenty-eight grandchildren in the family. Mr. Fisherkeller is a Democrat. He belongs to Sacred Heart Parish, being a devout Roman Catholic.

FITZGERALD, John J.—The coal interests centered at Springfield are Important, and have brought about an increase of wealth not obtainable in any other way. The mines in the vicinity of the city are very productive and the coal is marketed at distant points, so that the entire process affords employment to both labor and capital. One of those for many years actively identified with this branch of industrial commerce is John J. Fitzgerald, now retired. He is a native of Ireland, having been born in County Limerick, March 21, 1844, a son of Patrick and Mary L. (Leonard) Fitzgerald, both of County Limerick. The father was a blacksmith, and he and his family were brought to the United States by their son John J., who sent them money to pay for their passage. They landed at New York in 1866, thence coming directly to Springfield, where the father died in 1869 and the mother in 1899.

John J. Fitzgerald received his education in Ireland, and early commenced working in his father's smithy and in other lines of industry. Upon coming to the United States, he first worked on the Lehigh Valley Railroad in Pennsylvania for a year, later going to Washington, D. C., where he was employed by the government in caring for horses and mules. In 1862, he enlisted in Company E, Eighth New Work Cavalry, under Colonel Pope, participating in the hardly contested battle of Winchester Heights, and was a picket on duty at Appomattox about the time of Lee's surrender. He was honorably discharged and mustered out June 27, 1865, when he came to Springfield, Ill., and soon thereafter engaged in coal mining at the old North Shaft, where he remained ten years. Later he became connected with other mines in which he proved successful, continuing thus employed until 1907, when he retired. Mr. Fitzgerald belongs to the Western Catholic Union, and the Coal Miners' Union, as well as to Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R. In religious faith he is a Catholic, belonging to the St. Joseph's Catholic Church of Springfield. Politically he is a Democrat.

Mr. Fitzgerald was married in Springfield, April 22, 1870, to Catherine Ryan, daughter of Patrick and Anna Ryan, who died in Ireland, of which they were natives. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald have had one daughter, Faye, wife of Edward McCann, boiler-maker employed by the Springfield boiler works. Mr. and Mrs. McCann have had five children: Geraldine, Edward, Marie, Francis and Ursula. Mr. Fitzgerald owns his pleasant home at No. 1162 North Fourth Street, as well as other property yielding him a good income. He is a man who has proven his worth in both war and peace, and now is entitled to the comforts his own industry has provided for him and his excellent wife, who has borne her part in his successful enterprises.

FITZGERALD, Maurice (deceased).—It is a pleasure for the biographer to write of the life of a man whose work in any community was known and appreciated, and who had the entire confidence and esteem of his fellow townsman. Such a man was the late Maurice Fitzgerald, of Springfield, Ill., who will be well remembered by many of the Capital City's older residents. Mr. Fitzgerald was born April 13, 1837, in County Limerick, Ireland, a son of Edmond and Mary (Scott) Fitzgerald, and a descendant of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, an Irish peer.

Maurice Fitzgerald was but eight years of age when the entire family of three sisters and four brothers came to America and settled in New York, where he secured his early education. He came to Springfield in April, 1854, and here completed his education, one of his fellow students at night school being Robert Lincoln. He took up the trade of blacksmith as a youth, and this work he followed during most of his life, although for a short period previous to his death he was engaged in agricultural ventures. In 1880 Mr. Fitzgerald purchased a tract of farming land in Clear Lake township, half mile from Camp Butler, which he managed up to the time of his death, on September 8th of that year. The family lived on this farm about nine years. Mr. Fitzgerald was enterprising and energetic, and was always active in connection with those movements which he thought would promote the prosperity of his city. His home, which he purchased in 1856,

The parents came to America in 1851 and lived several years at Hazel Green, later moving to St. Louis, where Mr. Fitzpatrick died. He was educated in Macoupin County and in boyhood worked on a farm there. He was finally taken into the family of James Childs, of Chesterville, with whom he remained until reaching his majority, when he came to Springfield. He there learned the trade of brick mason and worked on the State House and many other public and private buildings there. He engaged in his present enterprise about 1866 and has built up a large and lucrative business. Both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Church. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Fitzpatrick was married in Springfield December 24, 1881, to Margaret Ann Chittick, who was born at Virginia, Ill., June 9, 1862, a daughter of John and Rachel (Price) Chittick, the father a native of Tyrone, Ireland, and the mother of Laryhope, England. died in Springfield, December 14, 1897; Thomas, married in Springfield, Mary Smith.

As a boy Patrick Fitzpatrick had few educational advantages, attending school only at odd times until he was seventeen years of age, when he left his native country, crossing to England. There he worked for two years on the docks at Liverpool, when he sailed for what he believed to be the "Land of Promise." He had but little money when he landed at New York City, but made his way to Williamsburg, N. Y., where he was employed by a firm in manufacturing soap and candles, remaining two and a half years in that city, during which time his first marriage took place. He was married at the Church of St. Peter and Paul, Brooklyn, by Rev. Sylvester Maloue, to Mary Hopkins, a native of Tuam, County Galway, Ireland. They had no children.

Leaving Williamsburg, Mr. Fitzpatrick went to Philadelphia, where for three years he was employed in the street-car stables. He then located in Springfield, Ill., arriving in that city in May, 1855, and soon after began working for Post Brothers, grain dealers. He was later employed in the hardware store of B. L. Fox, and still later in the general store of John Williams & Company, remaining with the latter firm eighteen years and leaving to go into business for himself.

Mrs. Fitzpatrick died May 6, 1891, and Mr. Fitzpatrick married (second) October 4, 1892, Miss Margaret A. Walsh, the marriage taking place at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Yonkers, N. Y., the ceremony being performed by Rev. Charles R. Corley. One child was born of this second marriage—Florence Marie. The first Mrs. Fitzpatrick was a devout member of St. Agnes Roman Catholic Church, of which Mr. Fitzpatrick was trustee for eighteen years.

Mr. Fitzpatrick was engaged fifteen years in the grocery business on his own account, at the corner of Spring and Cook Streets, but retired from active business in 1900. He purchased a lot at 113 West Cook Street on which he erected a residence in 1896. His death occurred February 11, 1908, at eighty-one years of age. A man of fine physique and of high mental ability, he was well fitted for business life, being naturally energetic and possessed of excellent health. He was the founder of his own fortune, having made his own way in life from the age of seventeen years, and by availing himself of his opportunities, became the owner of considerable real estate.

FLATT, Charles Samuel.—When an institution can obtain the services of a reliable man for a responsible position, it is not likely to dispense with him unless forced to do so because of his own desire. The fact that Charles Samuel Flatt has been chief engineer of the St. Nicholas Hotel for the past twenty years, speaks well for both him and the concern employing him. Mr. Flatt was born in Westfield, Union County, N. Y., in October, 1857, a son of John A. Flatt, born in Ipswich, Decoushire, England, about 1821, and grandson of Samuel Flatt, a farmer. John A. Flatt had no educational advantages, but was a keen, shrewd man, who, recognizing the better opportunities offered in the United States, came here with his wife and the two children then born to them. They landed in New York about 1852, locating on a farm, but came to Jersey County, Ill., in 1863, where the father continued farming, until his death in 1891. His wife died at the age of seventy-seven years. In religious faith, they were Baptists. The children born to them were: Mary, deceased; James, deceased; George of Springfield; Charles S. John A. of Taliula, Ill., married Jeannie Rice, and Lilie, married Richard Ryan of Jersey County.

Charles Samuel Flatt was seven years old when his parents located in Jersey County, Ill., and there he attended school until fifteen years of age. A natural mechanic, his boyish fingers were constantly at work fashioning appliances for use on the farm. When he was fifteen, he left home, and worked among the farmers in his native county until his marriage, when he moved to the southern part of Sangamon County, to farm until his engagement with John McCrea, proprietor of the St. Nicholas Hotel, as superintendent of his dairy farm, but in 1868 came to Springfield to assume the duties of chief engineer of the hotel.

On August 13, 1828, Mr. Flatt was married to Miss Mary Francis Boyant of Jersey County, Ill., daughter of Aaron and Ellin (Bartlett) Boyant. Mrs. Flatt died June 24, 1909, after a long illness. A consistent member of the West Side Christian Church, in his funeral sermon her pastor referred touchingly to her patience and tenderness. There were four children born to her and her husband; Charles Royal, on a ranch in South Dakota, married Pearl Brownung; Carlou G., of Springfield; Truman, also of Springfield, and Jessle B. of Nashville, Tenn. Mr. Flatt also belongs to the same church as his wife. A strong Republican, he served one term on the Board of Education, and has been a member of the County Central Committee. Fraternally he is a Knight of Pythias, being Past Chancellor of Capital Lodge No. 14, and is also a member of the Red Men, being Sachem of Luna Lodge No. 117.

FLEMIN, Matthew (deceased).—Ireland sends many of its best sons to America, where they develop into our best citizens under more favorable conditions than they are given in their native land. Sangamon County has always welcomed this class realizing how much the country owes to the brilliant minds and keen wits of the sons of the Emerald Isle. One of the men who ably represented all that is best in his fellow country-men, was the late Matthew Fleming, who for years was a farmer of Riverton, Ill. He was born in County Kilkelly, Ireland, in March, 1830, a son of Patrick and Bridget (Feiling) Fleming, both of Ireland. The father was a weaver, who never came to this country, and he, his wife and their five sons and two daughters have now all passed away.

Growing up in his native land, Matthew Fleming attended the local school and worked for his father until 1857, when he came to America, landing in New York, from there going to Vermont, where he spent six years farming. He then came to Springfield, Ill., where he lived for a few months when he removed to Chatham and there spent a year farming. Then returning to Springfield, he spent a year in the city, when he again engaged in farming in Clear Lake Township. In 1869, he located at Riverton and there worked in the Howlett distillery for a number of years. His death occurred July 16, 1894, his family losing a beloved member and the community a reliable citizen. He was a consistent member of the St. James Catholic Church, and in politics a Democrat.

On January 20, 1854, Mr. Fleming was married to Johanna O'Shaughnessy, born in County Carlo, W. Ireland, in December, 1828, a daughter of Patrick O'Shaughnessy, a native of Ireland who came to America, joining his sons at Springfield, who had come before him but died soon after his arrival. His wife died before the family came to America, where were two sons and two daughters in the family, two of the sons remaining in Ireland. Those surviving are: John; Mrs. Margaret Daley and Mrs. Fleming. Mr. and Mrs. Fleming became the parents of ten children, eight now living: Bridget, wife of William Smith, Superintendent of mines at Springfield; Patrick, janitor of the Franklin Life building, Springfield; Elizabeth, wife of Leon Bosquet, a carriage maker of St. Louis; William, a blacksmith, died November 6, 1905; James, living in Springfield, is a mine manager; Elizabeth married Millard Mitchell, a master mechanic of a large brewery in Brooklyn, and her twin, Marie, wife of William Gragg, a manufacturer of ladies' garments at Decatur; Johanna, wife of Michael Layden, a farmer of Riverton; Lawrence, with the Illinois Hotel Company, Springfield. There are thirty-eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren in the family. Mrs. Fleming owns her comfortable home in Riverton, in addition to other property. She is a pleasant lady, devout in her religious views, and devoted to her large family. She was a worthy helpmate for her husband, always encouraging him and supporting him in his endeavors to lay aside something that would provide for them in their old age.

FLETCHER, Benjamin F., a retired farmer of Springfield, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and belongs to one of the pioneer families of Sangamon County, being of the third generation of Fletchers who have lived there. He was born in Ball Township, Sangamon County, December 13, 1839, and is of Scotch-Irish ancestry through his grandfather, John Fletcher, who was born in Rockbridge County, Va., in 1774, and married Elizabeth McElvalve. He and Francis Brown brought their families to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1830. Mr. Fletcher entered eighty acres of land in what is now Ball Township, but died a few months later, his widow surviving him twenty-eight years and dying in 1858. He had come to the new home in the hope of bettering his financial condition. He and his wife were buried side by side in the West Graveyard.

Job Fletcher, son of John Fletcher, was born in Virginia in 1801, and served as Captain of a military company in Kentucky, where he married Frances Brown, who was of German lineage, and following his return in that State until he came with other members of the family to Sangamon County. He opened up a farm on Panther Creek and was much interested in the progress and improvement of the community until his death, in 1884. His wife died in 1882, in her eightieth year. He had divided 320 acres of land among his children and was known as one of the successful and practical farmers of the neighborhood. He was a man of large frame, six feet in height, but thin and wiry, and was well able to cope with pioneer conditions, making a good home for his wife and children. There were eight children in the family: Elizabeth, who died after her marriage; William and Frances, who died in childhood; John S., died at the age of twenty-three years; Preston lives in Montgomery County, Ill.; Paulina, widow of Francis E. Dodds, of Springfield; Benjamin F.; Virginia, wife of C. G. Brown, of Divernon, Ill. All were born upon the home farm adjoining that of R. H. Easley, except the two residing in Divernon, where early subscription schools of their neighborhood, remaining at home until their marriages except those who died young. The father of this family was a large landholder and became highly respected by all who knew him. He was a public-spirited and useful citizen and in religious faith was a Presbyterian, contributing generously to the support of the church and assisting in organizing Pleasant Grove Church in an early day, and later helped organize one at Divernon, where two of his daughters were then residing. His interest was deeply centered in his family and he put forth every effort to provide for the future of his children and for their comfort while they lived under his roof.

Benjamin F. Fletcher attended the subscription schools and later the public schools, and grew to manhood on the home farm. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and took part in the Battle of Jackson, Miss.; the Siege of Vicksburg and Guntown, and at the latter place was captured and held prisoner from June, 1864, until April 28, 1865, spending some time in Andersonville Prison. After the fall of Atlanta he was transferred to Millen, but later was returned to Andersonville, where he remained until about the close of the war. He had been wounded in the head at Vicksburg, but his injury was without serious results. In May, 1865, at Camp Butler, Ill., he was honorably discharged from service.

At the close of the war Mr. Fletcher returned home and in 1867 was married to Miss Mary Drennan, who was born in Ball Township, in 1847, and they became parents of four children, all born on the old home farm in Ball Township. One died in infancy and the others are: Cyrus O., on the home farm; Myra F., wife of Dr. J. T. Woodward; Dr. F. D., a graduate of Rush Medical College, now practicing his profession at Chatham, Ill., Mrs. Woodward graduated from Lincoln University and Cyrus took a three-year course at that institution.

Upon the death of his father Benjamin F. Fletcher took charge of the old home place and received as his share of the estate 200 acres of land. He purchased the interest of his brother and sister, and has added to his original holding from time to time, so that he now owns 500 acres of well improved land. He made many improvements on the farm and made his home there until November, 1901, when he purchased a handsome residence at 326 West Jackson Street, Springfield. He is a stockholder in the Bank of Auburn, of which he was one of the organizers and, for many years Vice President. He served as a member of the Board of Supervisors from Ball Township and also held various other offices in the township. In politics he has always been a Republican, and though never an office seeker, has done his duty when called upon for public service. He became a member of the Masonic Order in 1853, at Auburn, Ill.; became a charter member of Chatham Lodge, and now belongs to Lodge No. 4, Springfield. He also belongs to Stephenson Post No. 30 G. A. R., and to Abraham Lincoln Regiment of Union Veterans. For most of his life he has belonged to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and he and his wife have been active in church and Sunday School work. He has always tried to do all he could to help in the uplifting of his fellow-men, and by the example of a noble life has given help and inspiration to many. He has won the confidence and esteem of all who have been associated with him, and now, retired from active life, surrounded by comforts and friends is enjoying a well-earned rest.

FLETCHER, Francis D., M. D., a prominent physician located in the village of Auburn, Ill., is well known in that vicinity, where his entire life has been spent, with the exception of a few years spent at college. He belongs to a family that has been well known in Sangamon County since 1830, when his great-grandfather, John Fletcher, settled on a farm in Ball Township. Dr. Fletcher is a son of Benjamin F. and Mary (Drennan) Fletcher, natives of Ball Township. The family history is given further in the sketch of B. F. Fletcher, appearing in a previous section of this work.

Dr. Fletcher is a native of Ball Township, born March 7, 1879, and was reared on his father's farm, attending the district school until he was sixteen years of age, when he entered Lincoln University, taking a three-year course in literature. In 1898 he entered Indiana Medical College at Indianapolis, where he spent one year, in 1899, he entered Rush Medical College at Chicago, graduating with the class of 1902, and in the fall of that year engaged in practice at Chatham. He was well fitted for his work and soon built up a gratifying practice. He was already known to most of his patients and they have a retired and honored citizen of Auburn. Dr. Fletcher is a member of a pioneer family in Sangamon County and formerly carried on farming but is now a member of the M. W. A., and his wife is a member of the O. E. S. He casts his ballot with the Republican party and takes a commendable interest in public affairs.

FLETCHER, Preston B., one of the oldest native-born residents of Sangamon County, Ill., now retired from active life, has been a business man of keen judgment and energy. He was born March 4, 1834, a son of Job and Frances (Brown) Fletcher, the former a native of the Shenandoah Valley, Va. The parents were married in Kentucky, to which State the father was taken at the age of six years, and they lived on a farm there until 1830, then moved to Ball Township, Sangamon County, and located on the farm where Job Fletcher died in 1883, his wife having died in the same house in 1877. Job was a son of John Fletcher, a native of Virginia, who settled in Sangamon County in 1830 and died there the same year. The father of Frances Brown was also a native of Virginia, and died in Maceoupin County, Ill., in October, 1834, at the age of seventy-five years, his widow passing away eight years later at the age of eighty-six. Job Fletcher, the father of Preston B., was one of the historic characters of Sangamon, having served in five sessions of the General Assembly—two in the House and three in the Senate, in the latter being one of the celebrated "Long Nine" with Abraham Lincoln in 1837, which secured the removal of the State Capital from Vandalia to Springfield.

Preston B. Fletcher received his education in the public schools of Ball Township, lived at home until he was twenty-one years old, and worked hard on his father's farm. He then moved to land on which the town of Divernon now stands, living there from 1855 until 1868, and in the latter year moved to Bates County, Mo., where he was engaged for twenty years in farming and dealing in stock. In September, 1888, he returned to Divermon Township, and in 1902 moved to Montgomery County, where he continued farming until 1908, then again returned to Divermon Township and lives with his daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Elswick. She owns 120 acres of land in Section 16, Divermon Township.

Mr. Fletcher was married (first) in Sangamon County, in 1855, to Sarah Wright, a native of the county, born in 1831 and died in 1867; married, September 7, 1877, to John R. Elswick, of Iowa, who died May 19, 1897; Lloyd F., born in Bates County, Mo., July 22, 1870, married Pearl Elger, in Kansas, and they now live in Kansas City, Mo. John R. and Lizzie (Fletcher) Elswick had children as follows: Clifford, born August 15, 1878, in Bates County, Mo., lives on the farm with his mother, married, in April, 1902, Minna Commons, of Iowa, and they have one child, Vernon E., born in Sangamon County, November 13, 1908; Lulu, born March 3, 1880, in Bates County, married Edgar Whitemarsh of Wisconsin, and they live now in the State of Washington, and have one child, Mildred, born in Washington, in 1907; Nellie, born January 20, 1883, in Barry County, Mo., married Louis Flamondon, a native of Washington, in August, 1902, and they had one child, deceased.

Mr. Fletcher was married (second) March 16, 1892, to Comfort Lyman (nee Mitchell), whose father was a miller in Springfield, having come to Sangamon County in 1844, but eventually returned to Ohio, where he died. Mrs. Fletcher died in Montgomery County, October 20, 1908, having borne no children. Mr. Fletcher has two great-grandchildren who reside in Sangamon County at the time Mr. Fletcher was born. He attended the first State Fair in 1853 and the next year took a prize for the best yoke of oxen exhibited. He took premiums for hogs in other years, and had four that averaged 840 pounds in weight at the Fair at Jacksonville in 1850. He also had hogs that took premiums at the Fair held in St. Louis in 1861. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and, in political views, has been a Republican since the organization of that party. His first presidential vote was cast for Fillmore and later he voted for Abraham Lincoln. The Fletcher family have always been prominent in forwarding every movement calculated to be of benefit to the community and one respected wherever its members have resided.

FLETCHER, Rufin D., superintendent of the plant of the Chicago, Wilmington & Vermillion Coal Company at Thayer, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and is highly esteemed in his community. He was born near Clarksville, Tenn., December 2, 1840, son of John H. and Alice (Beattyworth) Fletcher, the former of Scotch descent and the latter a native of Lincolnshire, England. The Fletcher family emigrated to America and settled in what was known as Scotch Neck, N. C., and the grand-father of Rufin D. Fletcher married a Miss Winnifred Hunter, afterwards bringing his family to Montgomery County, Tenn., locating on the farm which was the home of his son John H. and the birthplace of the subject of this sketch. In the spring of 1851, the Fletcher family left Tennessee and came to Illinois, locating at Fayette, Greene County, where John Fletcher purchased a farm, which he sold in 1855, and moved to Macoupin County, where his death occurred in 1878. His widow survived him many years, dying in 1906, at the age of eighty-four years. She were buried in what is called Charity Churchyard, six miles west of Carlinville. Mr. Fletcher was born in 1802, and his wife was a daughter of Joseph Bennyworth, born near Boston, Lincolnshire, England, who emigrated to the United States about 1831. They located at Philadelphia, spent about one year at that city, then moved west to Chesterfield, Ill. While on the road from Alton to Chesterfield, Mrs. Bennyworth was taken with cholera and died, and her remains are buried at Chesterfield. Mr. Bennyworth and the rest of the family located on a farm near Chesterfield but he survived only a short time after the death of his wife, and after her death, his daughter Alice was left in charge of the family as their housekeeper, there being two of her brothers at home and one in Philadelphia.

Nine children were born to John H. Fletcher and wife, of whom eight reached maturity and one, Johnnie, died at the age of four years. The oldest child was Rufin D., and the others were: Renhaen Ross, born in Tennessee, served in Company F, One Hundred Twenty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and fell in the Battle of Parker's Cross Roads, Tenn., December 31, 1862, was buried on the battle field, in 1806, removed to the National Cemetery at Corinth, Miss., his grave being No. 2043, and on Decoration Day in 1908 his brother Rufin decorated his grave; Narcissa married Jesse Graham and both are deceased, having had three children,—Lula, Renhaen and Fanny; Sarah W., married Jesse Rhodees, who served for many years as County Clerk of Jasper County, Mo., and lived at Carthage, dying in office, had twelve children, four of whom now survive, and his widow still resides at Carthage; Choron is married the second time, has twelve children, and resides on a farm in Mason County, Ill.; Alice, wife of John Corder, a farmer near Nilwood, Ill., and they have seven children; Mary, widow of George R. Moore, her husband having died in January, 1910, and she now resides on the old home near Neutra, having had six children; Johnnie B., above named; Martha, born in 1863, married Samuel McPherson, a farmer near Wichita, Kan. The father and mother of these children were both of the Baptist faith and active workers in the cause. In early life, he was a Whig and later became a Democrat, and while strong in his beliefs, yet accorded others the right to their own opinions and was liberal in his benefactions, never turning from his door an applicant for help, being most kind and sympathetic by nature. He united with the Baptist church at the age of twelve years and always held his relations with that denomination, being loved and honored for his upright life. He served as Justice of the Peace and his decisions were always just and fair, for he believed the laws were founded on justice to all.

Ruffin D. Fletcher was reared in his native place to the age of twelve years, and there began his education. His father was his first teacher and school was held in a log cabin. The boy was often chastised by the father for his pranks in school, being active and mischievous, but his mind was as active as his body and he always kept a good standing in his class. In 1852, he accompanied his parents and their other children to Fayette, Ill., three years later went with them to Nlwood, and after spending a few years on his father's farm there, became clerk in a store, which position he held until 1862, enlisting July 15th of that year in Company F, One Hundred Twenty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three years, the company being organized at Camp Palmer, Carlinville. In September of that year, the regiment was sent to Trenton, Tenn., and in December, they participated in the battle at Parker's Cross Roads, where Mr. Fletcher's brother was killed. July 14, 1864, they participated in the Battle of Tupelo, Miss. He served as clerk to Post Quartermaster of the Freedman's Bureau, at Cairo, Ill. Mr. Fletcher was mustered out at Mobile and was honorably discharged at Camp Butler, Ill., July 15, 1865, having spent three years in faithful service. While he was a native of Tennessee his complete sympathy was with the Union cause.

At the close of the war, Mr. Fletcher began working for the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company as brakeman, studied telegraphy and continued in the employ of the road at Mason City and Streator, as operator and ticket agent. June 15, 1875, he entered the employ of the company with which he is now connected, at their Streator plant, as shipping clerk and telegraph operator. In March, 1890, he became General Manager of the River Bank Coal Company, at Streator, resigning three months later to accept the position of Superintendent of the Chicago, Wilmington & Vermilion Coal Company, at Streator. In 1900, the latter company bought mining lands in the southern part of Sangamon County and Mr. Fletcher was sent to what is now Thayer and opened up mines at that place. He platted the town, got the mines into running order, built eighty-six houses and a twenty-six room hotel. He also erected a large store building and a handsome residence for himself, locating permanently in the town July 17, 1900. He has been one of the most successful superintendents of central Illinois and is the second oldest employe of the company, the oldest being A. L. Sweet, its President, who has been with it since its organization, about 1867. Mr. Fletcher and his secretary, R. H. Haynes, were the original settlers of the village of Thayer, and Mr. Fletcher has made it possible for the miners to own the homes they occupy, only two residents of the town being renters.

Mr. Fletcher was married January 12, 1872, to Miss Rachel S. Proctor, born July 5, 1835, on a farm near New Berlin but in Morgan County, Ill., a daughter of Richard and Rachel (Harris) Proctor, natives also of Eastern Tennessee. The Proctors moved to Tennessee from South Carolina and they also were loyal to their country's flag at the time of the Civil War. Mr. Proctor came to Illinois in 1846. He was a stanch member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and strong in his convictions. No resident of Morgan County was more highly honored for his many good qualities. He had a limited education but became well-to-do, having great business ability. He died at the age of eighty-eight years, his mother having lived to the age of one hundred and four years. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher became parents of two children, Edna M., at home, a clerk in her father's office, was born May 4, 1875, was graduated from Streator High School with a standing of 100 per cent in mathematics and has a business education, and Ralph P., born January 12, 1877, died April 11, 1889.

Mr. Fletcher has for many years been a member of the Masonic Order, which he joined in July, 1867, and he now belongs to Virden Lodge No. 161, A. F. and A. M., to Auburn Chapter No. 92, R. A. M., and to Elwood Commandery No. 6 of Springfield. His wife is a useful member of the Presbyterian Church. He is one of the successful self-made men of central Illinois, and at the age of seventy years, is in splendid health, being of a long-lived race through both his mother and father. He is pleasant and cheerful of manner and readily makes and retains friends. About 450 men are in his employ, and the mines have a capacity of 2400 tons of coal each day.

In 1892, Mr. Fletcher made a visit to his birthplace and engaged an artist to take pictures of the scenes of his boyhood. Though the old home was in the possession of strangers, he visited at the home of an uncle, Drew S. Fletcher, and also with a cousin, Philander Conger. He drank from the old spring, he had left in 1852, and saw the cabin in which he was born, built about 1800. He has made several other trips to this and other places, and greatly enjoys this form of recreation. In politics he is a Republican.
FLEURY, Frank, M. D. (deceased), who had been identified with various business enterprises in Springfield, III., and had held various offices of public honor and trust in the city, located there June 3, 1867, and established himself in a drug business, which he conducted some years. He served as City Clerk from 1868 to 1872 and served two years as Alderman of the Fifth Ward. Dr. Fleury was born in Meadville, Pa., September 28, 1841, son of Jacob and Margaret (Hamilton) Fleury, also natives of Pennsylvania. At the age of twelve years Frank Fleury left Meadville and entered a drug store in Erie, Pa. In 1859 he came to Alton, Ill., later moved to Bloomington, and conducted a drug store there from 1862 to 1865. He received his medical training and practiced medicine in Springfield, III. He served from 1880 until 1890 as Secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy, and during 1880-81 was Secretary of the Illinois Pharmaceutical Association.

In 1881 Dr. Fleury began the manufacture of the "Wa-Hoo Tonic," and won a wide reputation for this medicine, which met with a large sale. It was handled for him by jobbers and he reaped good results in the way of profits. He was able to continue the active practice of his profession until shortly before his death. He was well known in business and professional circles and had been successful in various lines of business. He had received thirty-two degrees in the Masonic Order, being affiliated with the Chapter, Council and Shrine, and was also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

Dr. Fleury was married, June 25, 1863, to Miss Annie M. Herndon, of Springfield, and they became parents of one daughter, A. May, now Mrs. McPherson, wife of Augustus W. McPherson, of Springfield. The family attend the Episcopal Church. Dr. Fleury died August 28, 1910, and is buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery, Springfield.

FLOYD, Isaac (deceased), an industrious farmer and well-known citizen of Pawnee Township, Sangamon County, Ill., located on the farm now occupied by his widow, about 1874, and there spent the remainder of his life. In his passing away his loss was keenly felt in many circles, as he was a man of high principle and good habits, a true Christian, and always ready to befriend those in need or distress. He was a devout member of the Roman Catholic Church, and always faithful to its teachings, bringing his religion into his daily life. Mr. Floyd was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, May 5, 1838, a son of Michael and Eliza (Odel) Floyd, both natives of Ireland, the former born in County Tipperary in 1801, and the latter in the city of Limerick in 1803. The father held the office of County Surveyor in his native country. In 1855 he brought his family to America and for thirteen years lived in New York City, then moving to Concord, Morgan County, Ill.

The education of Isaac Floyd was received principally in Landsdown College, New York, and after leaving school he worked on a farm. He was of a quiet disposition and devoted to his home and family, never affiliated with any fraternal organizations, but much interested in church work. He was a Democrat in political principle, but in local affairs voted for the man rather than the party, being active in the cause of progress and education in his community. He served some time as School Director of his district. He was an energetic and successful farmer and became owner of an excellent farm in Section 29, Pawnee Township.

The marriage of Mr. Floyd occurred at Jacksonville, Ill., in 1868, when he was united with Sarah Kerr, born January 18, 1832, a daughter of John and Marian (Stuart) Kerr, the former born in County Down, Ireland, and the latter, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and related to the famous Queen Mary Stuart. Mr. Floyd and his wife had six children, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: Lillian B., born in Morgan County, September 22, 1872, became a successful school teacher, and was married, April 5, 1892, to Otis D. Shaw; Eugene, born August 6, 1876, is a farmer living near Harvel, Montgomery County, married Mildred Leonard March 6, 1905, and they have two children—Alleen and Glenn; Gilbert Alexander, born September 30, 1880, in Sangamon County, married Agnes Gallon and is a farmer by occupation; Charles E., born in Sangamon County, February 10, 1882, for many years held a good position with a wholesale house, married Jennie Howard, November 25, 1906, in Christian County, and they had one child, Wanita Janetta—his wife having died he returned to farming; Pearl Alleen, born in Sangamon County, August 12, 1886, was for two years a pupil in Ursuline Convent in Springfield, and March 2, 1910, married Benjamin H. Wangelof, and they now reside in Montgomery County. Mr. Floyd has lived in her present home for thirty-five years and is now the owner of the home farm. She has been a devoted wife and mother and is regarded with great respect and love by all her children. Mr. Floyd died May 9, 1909, and rests in Divernon Cemetery.

FOLEY, Enoch, an enterprising business man of Illiopolis, Ill., conducts a grist mill at that village and has a comfortable home and a farm there. He is a native of Bath County, Ky., born April 30, 1838, son of John and Hulda Foley, both natives of Virginia. The father was a farmer and moved to Kentucky at an early age, settling in Bath County, where he carried on farming until his death, at the age of eighty-four years, his wife having died some time previous. There were three children in the family, all deceased except Enoch, who was the youngest.

The boyhood of Enoch Foley was spent on a farm and he was educated in his native county. Upon reaching manhood he began farming on his own account, secured land and raised wheat and tobacco. In 1866 he moved to Rockville,
Ind., and worked in a woolen mill and carried on farming in that locality. He remained there five years, then moved to Harrison County, Ky., where for sixteen years he carried on farming, and at the end of that period settled on a farm in Coles County, Ill., where he lived ten years. From there he moved to Lewis County, Mo., and operated a farm for five years. In 1900 he came to Illiopolis, and for some time conducted a dairy, but now devotes most of his attention to his mill. He is energetic and prosperous, and has the respect and confidence of the community.

Mr. Foley enlisted in 1862, from Mt. Sterling, Ky., in Company B, Fourteenth Kentucky Cavalry, and served twelve months, then worked a year for the Government, after which he re-enlisted in Company C. Fifty-third Mounted Infantry, being Commissary Sergeant. He served creditably and was mustered out at Louisville, Ky., September 15, 1865, having taken part in many battles and minor skirmishes. He is a member of Morgan Post No. 208, G. A. R., of Illiopolis.

Mr. Foley was married in Kentucky, November 5, 1857, to Eliza Ingram, born in Kentucky, of which State her parents were also natives. Mrs. Ingram was killed in the Civil War and his widow died in Kentucky. Fourteen of their children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Foley, of whom the following survive: Thomas, James, living in Sullivan, Ill.; Philip, of St. Louis; William is in business in the Philippine Islands; John, of Kewanee, Ill.; Joseph, of Lewiston, Mo.; Mary, wife of Frank Digbee, of Oakland, Ill.; Harriet, wife of Chink Martin, lives near Redman, Ill.; Josephine, wife of Frank Jacobs, of Kewanee; Maude, wife of Charles Huff, living at Taylorville, Ill. Mr. Foley has thirty grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. He cast his first Presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln and has always been a Republican in political views. He belongs to the Christian Church. He has a good trade and enjoys the confidence and esteem of his community.

FOLEY, John, who has for nearly thirty years lived in his present comfortable home on West Elliott Avenue, Springfield, is now living retired from business life. He is a representative of the best type of Irish-American citizen and has the respect of those who know him. He was born in County Waterford, Ireland, in 1844, and lived in his native country until he finished his education. He is a son of William and Margaret (McGrath) Foley, also natives of Ireland, who spent their entire lives there, and was one of six children, four sons and two daughters. Besides John there are two other sons now living, Thomas, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Jerry, still in Ireland.

At the age of sixteen years John Foley emigrated to the United States. He landed in New York and spent seventeen years at Yonkers, that State. He then came to Sangamon County, located in Springfield in 1876, and for some six years was employed in Lamb's foundry. He spent several years in farming, but for some time past has been retired. He belongs to St. Joseph's Parish Roman Catholic Church and is active in its cause. In politics he is a Democrat.

August 9, 1883, Mr. Foley was married, in the State of New York, to Mary Powers, also a native of County Waterford, born May 1, 1846, of Irish parentage. Her father was a blacksmith and spent his entire life in Ireland, and he and his wife had three sons and three daughters, all still surviving: Maurice and John live in Ireland; Edward Powers, of East St. Louis, Ill.; Mrs. Grace McGraw, of New York; Mrs. Margaret Ryan, of Ireland; Mrs. Foley. To Mr. Foley and wife five daughters and two sons were born, all living: William; Mary, of Los Angeles, Cal.; John, living in the West; Catherine, wife of John Barr, of Springfield; Margaret, wife of Abe Adams, of Oakland, Cal.; Alice, wife of William Fisher, also of Oakland; and Grace, of Oakland. There are three grandchildren in the family.

FORD, Edward.—The English contingent in Springfield, while not so large as in some other cities, has produced some of the best business men of Sangamon County. A notable example of this class is Edward Ford, a native of America, but born of an English father. Mr. Ford was born in Ducktown, Tenn., February 23, 1864, a son of Thomas and Catherine Ford, natives of Cornwall, England, and Ireland, respectively. The father was a worker in coal, lead and silver mines in his native land, but believing that better opportunities were afforded in this country, came to America, and for twenty years prospected in California and Colorado. Finally, in 1869, he came to Springfield, where he still carried on his mining operations and conducted a boarding house. He was one of the most solid and reliable men in his line of business, and when he died, in 1898, the community mourned his loss. His wife passed away two years before him. Thomas Ford was a member of the A. O. U. W. While a Democrat in political belief, he never aspired to office, and was a man of a retiring disposition. Liberal in religious views, he gave to others the freedom of thought and action he asked for himself. Six children were born to him and his wife, four sons and two daughters, but one of the sons is now deceased.

Edward Ford attended the Converse School in Springfield until he was sixteen years old, when he left to work in a coal mine. He also farmed and did teaming, until he was able, in business to stand on his own feet. In 1888, the family moved to a farm, which he and his sons then he has been engaged in the same line and has been very successful in what he has undertaken. For four years prior to his death Thomas Ford was a partner with his son in the present enterprise.

On April 28, 1886, Mr. Ford was married, in Springfield, to Ellen Brennan, born in County
Mayo, Ireland, daughter of Patrick Brennan, who is deceased, but whose widow survives him and resides in Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Ford have had nine children, seven of whom survive: May, wife of William Greth, of Springfield, one child, Eddie; Annie, Nettie and Edward H., at home; Thomas, with the Illinois Watch Co.; Harry and George, at home. Mr. Ford is a Republican with regard to national matters, but locally is an Independent. Like his father, he has never desired office. Fraternally he is a member of the American Order of Eagles and the Order of Owls. He is liberal in his religious views, and is connected with no religious denomination. He is an excellent business man, whose honesty and integrity have won the confidence of his associates.

FORQUER, George. (Vol. I, p. 168.)

FORSTER, Thomas.—It is a noteworthy fact that the peoples of the Old World give to their children and young people a more thorough training than ours receive here. A trade or profession is selected for the child, and he is carefully taught every detail of it, rising from one position to another as his progress warrants. For this reason, those thus taught are eagerly welcomed in this country and some of the most responsible positions are held by just such men. One of the best representatives of the good, solid English training is Thomas Forster, foreman of the Leland Hotel farm, who had this property in charge for seventeen years. He was born in Cheshire, England, November 13, 1858, a son of William and Elizabeth Forster, natives of England, as were their parents. The father was a farmer and brought up his son Thomas in the same line of work. At the same time the lad was attending the National school of England and becoming well versed in the rudiments of an education. Thomas Forster studied dairy farming, working on a dairy farm until he came to America in March, 1883, finding immediate employment, with Enoch Snider, a farmer east of Springfield. For three years more, he was in the employ of C. C. Brown, who owned the farm on which the White City now stands, and later worked for Stericker Brothers. In October, 1883, he entered the employ of the Leland Hotel farm as foreman, and conducted the property in an eminently satisfactory manner.

On May 12, 1880, Mr. Forster married Emma Parry, a native of England, daughter of James and Elizabeth Parry, farmers of England and both now deceased. Mrs. Forster passed away in January, 1884, and is buried in beautiful Oakridge Cemetery. She and her husband had the following children: William is farming at St. Charles, III.; Elizabeth married George Young; a farmer of Fancy Creek Township; Emma is the housekeeper for the family; Jane acts as her father's bookkeeper, and Fred, who is at home. The Forsters are all Episcopalians, and have been confirmed. Mr. Forster is a self-made man, who has worked hard and faithfully, and deserves his success. The fact that he has held this present responsible position for seventeen years, is the best proof of his ability and conscientiousness that could be offered.

FORTH, Charles J.—The building trades prosper in Springfield, for the city offers excellent opportunities for building operations. The men connected with these trades have all they can do to keep with the demands made on their time and skill, and one who has attained prominence as a carpenter and builder is Charles J. Firth. He was born in Kentucky, September 6, 1859, a son of Ewing Dixon and Mahalia (Wade) Firth, both natives of Kentucky. The father was a farmer, who moved from Kentucky to Illinois in 1860, locating at Chesterfield. He then returned to Kentucky, but returned in 1876. The Firth family was established in Kentucky in early days, when isolated log forts along the rivers represented its civilization.

Charles J. Firth was educated in both Kentucky and Illinois and grew up on a farm, working for his father. Like other country boys, he enjoyed out-door sports. After leaving school he learned the carpenter trade, and that has since been his calling. He has built and assisted in building many of the beautiful residences and substantial business and public buildings of Springfield, and is noted for his skill and careful attention to detail.

Mr. Firth was married at Palmyra, Ill., in 1881, to Ida Hunt, born in Palmyra, November 9, 1865. She died and Mr. Firth married (second) Emma Battershell, born in Pike County, Ill., November 26, 1858, whose father was a farmer all his life. Mr. Firth had four children by his first marriage: Mand, born in 1852, in Chesterfield; Ethel, born in 1855; Clyde, born in 182, and George, born in 1894. The last three were born in Palmyra. Mr. Firth has held local offices, being elected on the Democratic ticket, but is now a Republican from principle. He belongs to the Christian Church and is earnest in support of its good work. Faithful in everything, Mr. Ford has made and retained friends, and is rightly regarded as a substantial, reliable man, who can be trusted upon any occasion.

FORTHMAN, William H., chief engineer in the employ of the Reisch Brewing Company, of Springfield, was born in Waynesboro, Franklin County, Pa., December 5, 1806, son of John and Amanda (Crowe) Forthman, and grandson of George and Susan (Peters) Forthman. The grandfather was a brewer in early life, and later became a farmer in Indiana, living in Spencer County, that State, at the time of his death. John Forthman and his wife were both born in Franklin County, Pa., and he learned the trade of brewer with his father. At the time of the Civil War, he was running a small brewery in Waynesboro, and after he withdrew from the business his place was taken by a Mr. Little.
For the past thirty-eight years, he has been employed in the machine department of the Geiser Manufacturing Company, at Waynesboro, and in that time, has lost but thirty-eight days from his work. He and his wife had children as follows: William H., Frederick, and Lucy, wife of Rev. H. Blessing.

William H. Fortman received his education in the Waynesboro public schools, and after he was thirteen years old, he was employed during vacations for five years in the boiler department of the Frick Company’s plant in Waynesboro. Until coming West in 1904, he filled various positions in the boiler department of this same company, as salesman on the road and installing ice and refrigerating machinery, etc. He is a conscientious and faithful worker and has been able to secure a good position by reason of his ability and industry. He owns his pretty home at 212 West Miller Street. He is a member of the Eagles and the J. O. U. A. M., and in politics, is a staunch Democrat. He is social and kindly in disposition, and is popular with his friends. Mr. Fortman was married in Fayetteville, Franklin County, Pa., September 2, 1886, to Miss Daisy Honey, daughter of Daniel and Catherine (Ritten) Honey and they became parents of two children: Earl H. and John V.

FORTMAN, John.—Many retired business men of Springfield formerly gained their living from the soil, and are now enjoying the fruits of their labor there. One deserving of special mention, owing to his industry and thrifty habits, is John Fortman, who was born in Germany, September 20, 1833, a son of Henry Fortman, also a native of Germany, who was a carpenter by trade.

Mr. Fortman was educated in his native land and there learned the carpenter trade, at which he worked and on a farm. Believing that in the United States he would find better opportunities, he left his native land, and landed at New Orleans in 1858. After a two-years’ residence there he came to St. Louis, and a year later to Springfield, arriving there in 1861. He then bought a tract of six acres adjoining Springfield, and on it raised vegetables, which he hauled to the city, selling them to dealers. This business increased until he was able to accumulate a competency, upon which he retired about 1892. The frugality and industry which are so characteristic of the German, were present with Mr. Fortman, who, although now retired, occupies himself with work about his pleasant home.

Mr. Fortman was married in Springfield, March 17, 1874, to Minnie Shoults, born in McMenigum, Germany, January 1, 1833. Her parents lived and died in Germany. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fortman of whom two survive: Fred, of Christian County; Minnie Price, whose husband is a brass molder for the Wabash Railroad. The family belong to Trinity Lutheran Church. Mr. Fortman is a Republican but has never came before the people as a candidate for political office. He is sober and reliable, and is well known in the community in which he has made his home for so many years.

Fossett, Jonathan E. (deceased), for many years a resident of Illiopolis, Ill., was a veteran of the Civil War and highly respected as a man of integrity and reliability. He was born near Chillicothe, Ohio, May 3, 1844, son of John and Catherine (Erwin) Fossett, both natives of that State. The father carried on farming in Ohio many years and later came to Sangamon County, where he carried on the same occupation some years, then removed to Missouri, where he lived on a farm and was killed by a falling tree. The grandfather had been killed by being thrown from a horse. Four daughters and two sons were born to John and Catherine Fossett, namely: Jesse and Mrs. Margaret Moorehead, of Lincoln; Mrs. Hattie Riley, of Kansas; Mrs. Hannah Stevenson, of Taylorville; Jonathan and Jesse.

As a boy Jonathan E. Fossett worked on his father’s farm and after the beginning of the Civil War enlisted from McLean County, Ill., in Company A Fifth United States Cavalry, serving three years and participating in many battles. He was mustered out at Springfield at the close of the war, having proved himself a valiant and able soldier. He then engaged in farming in McLean County and later moved to Kenney, Ill., where he bought and sold stock and conducted a butcher shop three years, then spent six months at Buffalo, whence he moved to Illiopolis and established himself in the meat market business and conducted same until his death. He also served as policeman at Kenney and Illiopolis. He was an enterprising and successful business man and enjoyed the confidence of his community. He and his wife became devout members of the Methodist Church and he belonged to Morgan Post G. A. R.

Mr. Fossett was married in Lincoln, Ill., January 20, 1866, to Miss Mary A. Ellis, a native of Kentucky, born June 8, 1844, daughter of William K. Ellis and wife, of that State. The father was formerly a slave holder, but left his old home and traveled with an ox-team to Illinois in 1852, purchasing a farm in Logan County, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. They were parents of four daughters and one son, of whom those surviving are: Mrs. Fossett; Mrs. Magdle Macon, of Lincoln, and Mrs. Amanda Bartlett, of Nebraska. Nine children were born to Mr. Fossett and wife, eight sons and one daughter, of whom five survive: William T., United States Deputy Game Warden, living in Illiopolis; J. Edward, of Springfield; Elmer, meat inspector at the State Hospital for the Insane, at Jacksonville; John V., of Illiopolis, a stock-buyer by occupation; Maude, wife of Charles A. Higgins, of Illiopolis, who is an insurance broker. Mrs. Fossett owns a very pleasant home at Illiopolis.
and other property in the vicinity. She is an earnest worker for the church and has many warm personal friends. Mr. Fossett's death occurred in February, 1905, and he has been sadly missed in many circles.

FOSTER, George W., who has resided for the last ten years at 146 North State Street, Springfield, III., as a retired farmer, was born in Woodford County, Ky., December 28, 1834, son of William O. and Nancy (Bevis) Foster. The father, who was a farmer, was born in Virginia, in 1800, and died in Kentucky in 1840. The mother, who was born in Kentucky in 1796, spent her entire life there and died in April, 1890. The grandmother of Mr. Foster Juliam (Kraft) Bevis was very wealthy for those times and owned stock in several ship companies. When the assessor called at her house she carried out her gold to him in her apron. William O. Foster and his wife had four children, of whom two died in infancy and two grew to maturity.

George Foster received his education in the public schools of his native State, attending school in a log building. After leaving school he worked on a farm for his parents, until taking up farming on his own account. He remained in Kentucky until 1876, then moved to Illinois and there spent one year, after which he returned to his former home. In 1880 he moved to Salisbury, Sangamon County, III., where he lived eight years, then locating at his present home in Springfield. He owns the house he occupies and formerly owned sixty acres of land in Kentucky, which he sold and then bought property in Springfield. He is a member of the Christian Church and in politics is a Democrat. Mr. Foster has won many friends in Springfield and is respected by all who have had dealings with him. He is interested in public affairs in the community, although taking no active part in them himself.

The marriage of Mr. Foster occurred in Woodford County, Ky., April 7, 1867, when he was united with Melvina Gaines, who was born January 12, 1849, a daughter of Robinson and Frances Jane (Ellis) Gaines. Mr. Gaines was born in Virginia and his wife in Kentucky, and neither lived to middle age. The grandfather of Mrs. Foster, John Robinson Gaines, was wealthy, owning land and plantations in Woodford and Franklin Counties, Kentucky. He died in 1853 and his wife in 1859. Six children were born to Mr. Foster and wife: William R., born March 6, 1830, now a farmer; Anna L., wife of R. E. Parkes, of Pawnee, Ill.; Mhnelle, married Edward Lacy, a farmer living near Salisbury, Ill.; Oliver J., living at home, has been employed for the past seven years at Fossett's shoe-store in Springfield; Hatte and Thomas, died in infancy. Four children were born to Edward Lacy and his wife, namely: Gale, Linn E., Keith F., and Lloyd M., all living with their parents.

FOSTER, Hubbard C., member of a family that has been prominent in Sangamon County, Ill., for more than seventy years, is known as a public-spirited and useful citizen and has filled many local offices with credit and satisfaction. Mr. Foster, born about one mile from the village of Loomi, Sangamon County, March 29, 1855, is a son of James L. and Martha (Jacobs) Foster, the former born in Boone County, Ky., January 8, 1822. Jacob L. was a son of Samuel Foster, also a native of Boone County, Samuel Foster married Miss Susan Cutter, a native of Massachusetts and a Mayflower descendant. They were married in Cincinnati, Ohio, and after their marriage moved to Petersburg, Ky. A street in Cincinnati is named for the Cutter family, and a brother of Mrs. Foster, Seth R. Cutter, came to what is now Loomi Township, Sangamon County, in 1828, settling on Section 4, the land where he located now being the property of H. C. and Gottlieb Meyer. Samuel Foster died in Petersburg, Ky., at a venerable age, while his wife survived him, living a happy and contented life. Her grandson, Hubbard C. Foster, visited her in Kentucky in 1878, and she died in the fall while he was there. She and her husband had a large family, of whom one survives, Seth Cutter Foster, of Cincinnati.

James L. Foster came to Illinois in the early forties, his brother Franklin having come to Sangamon County some years prior and purchased land in Loomi Township. Here they kept house together several years, on eighty acres of land in Section 9 of that township. James L. Foster purchased eighty acres and put up a log cabin, added to his possessions from time to time as he was able, though his brother Franklin was content with his first eighty acres. The land purchased by James L. Foster was raw prairie and he began improving it, developing a fine farm. He finally owned 220 acres of good prairie land in Loomi Township. His brother never married but made his home with James and his family. The former died in July, 1869, having deeded his real estate to his brother's wife, as a remembrance to her for her kindness to him in his last illness. James L. Foster married Miss Martha Jacobs July 16, 1850. She was a native of Loomi Township, born April 2, 1827, a daughter of Daniel Jacobs, who was born in Winchester, Ky., May 27, 1795, and his wife, Charlotte (Webb) Jacobs, also a native of Clark County, Ky. The parents were married January 30, 1810, and came to Illinois in 1825, bringing their household goods in a wagon, while Mrs. Jacobs rode on horseback carrying one of their children in her arms. Mr. Jacobs entered land in Section 25, Loomi Township, now owned by his son, James A. Jacobs, who was born on that farm in 1826. The former developed a fine farm and erected a handsome residence with comfortable outbuildings, at the time of his death, October 5, 1853, being the owner of several hundred acres. His wife died at the age of eighty-four years. Eleven children were born to Mr. Jacobs and wife, of whom but two survive: James A., on the old home farm, and a daughter, Annis, wife of James E. Dodds, a farmer of Talkington Township, Sangamon County. The entire family of children, nine daughters and two sons, reached maturity.

Eight children were born to James L. Foster and his wife: Ella, married James L. Riggs, and moved to Colchester, Ill., where her death occurred, in 1886; George W., makes his home with his brother, Hubbard C.; James A., retired, living at Loami, married Miss Dora M. Morris in 1801, and they have one son, Ralph, a graduate of the Springfield High School in the class of 1911; Hubbard C.; Susan, was wife of Lewis Crabtree and died December 30, 1900; Charles B., a resident of Cisloosa, Lee County, Fla., married Era Blount, in 1906; Lizzie and Martha, died in infancy. James L. Foster was reared in the Baptist faith, but after locating in Illinois united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. He and his four sons joined the A. F. & A. M., being affiliated with Lodge No. 450, of Loami. He was first a Whig and later a Republican in politics, though a man of quiet, domestic tastes, and never an aspirant for public office.

The boyhood days of Hubbard C. Foster were spent on his farm, where he attended Maple Grove District School, and where he remained until forty years of age. Mr. Foster was married, in the St. Nicholas Hotel, Springfield, April 12, 1892, to Miss Lethe Evans, and they began housekeeping on the farm where he was born. They remained two years there and on that place their son, Benjamin Harrison, was born, August 4, 1895. He graduated from the grammar school in 1908 and was second in the class of 1910 in the Loami High School, which has a two year course.

In 1895 Mr. Foster erected a very comfortable and convenient residence on South Main Street, Loami, and they began occupying this home October 4, 1896. They are surrounded by every comfort and have one of the best houses in the village. Mr. Foster has always been active in the interests of the Republican party since attaining his majority. He filled the office of Town Clerk one year, has for eight years been Justice of the Peace of Loami, has served as Police Magistrate, as President of the Board of Village Trustees 1907-08, and in 1910 was appointed United States census enumerator. In January, 1909, he was appointed by Gov. Charles S. Deneen as Notary Public for four years. He is Social Secretary of Lodge No. 450 A. F. & A. M. of Loami, and belongs to Camp No. 845 M. W. A. He held the office of President of the Snipflur Springs Cemetery Association. For some twenty years he has been local correspondent of the Illinois State Journal, and for the same period has reported on the local changes and conditions of weather, to the United States Weather Bureau at Springfield. Mrs. Foster and her son are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Royal Neighbors, also of the Order of Eastern Star. She takes great interest in church and Sunday School work. Mr. Foster has the confidence of the entire community and is one of the best-known farmers of Sangamon County.

Mr. Foster and his wife are genuinely kind-hearted and generous. They adopted a child, Eva May Evans, who was born June 26, 1897, her mother having died July 7, 1897, when the child was a babe, and her father on May 2, 1899, when she was about two years old. Her parents were Samuel and Kittie (Collburn) Evans, who also had a son, Glenn, who was born March 22, 1894, and who lives with his grandparents. Mr. and Mrs. James Barbare, of Taylorville, Ill. Eva May has been given a good education, being a graduate of the common school of Loami, and has also been educated in music, for which she displays considerable talent. She is also a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Foster, Jacob F.—There are men in Sangamon County who have spent their lives in farming, having become convinced that in that calling there was more profit for them than in any other they might adopt. They have been successful through long years of persistent effort, and can point with pride to their well-tilled acres to show that they have not worked in vain. One of these practical farmers is Jacob F. Foster, of Section 34, Curran Township, where he was born March 11, 1854, being a son of William and Elizabeth (Shutt) Foster, natives of Kentucky.

William Foster came to Illinois in boyhood, settling in Curran Township at a very early day. Later he bought a small piece of land, and still later bought the 100 acres his father had purchased, continuing to farm until his death, which occurred September 5, 1910, when he was eighty-seven years old. His wife had passed away in 1891, having borne him nine children, seven sons and two daughters; George is a farmer of Sangamon County; Peyton lives in Kirkville, Mo.; Sarah E., Mrs. Henry Bivins, resides in Springfield; Douglas is a farmer of Sangamon County; Leonard is also a farmer of the county; Marion is a blacksmith, of Woodside; Eva J. is the wife of Simpson Williams, and lives in Hopkins County, Ky.; Jacob F., and Charles, farmers in Sangamon County. During the Mexican War William Foster served his country, and he was a brave and good man.

Jacob F. Foster went to the district school and worked on his father's farm, as did so many of the sturdy farmer boys of Sangamon County who have since developed into prosperous men in almost every line of business or profession. After retaining his majority he began farming for himself, continuing his work with such success that he now owns 150 acres in the township which gave him birth.

The marriage of Mr. Foster occurred in Springfield, March 14, 1853, when he was united with Mary Nelson, a native of Illinois. Her parents, who were early settlers of Macoupin County, are both deceased. Six children, four sons and two daughters, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Foster: Frank, William, Louisa, Leola, Earl and Charles. Mr. Foster is a Democrat in political faith. Having lived all his life in Curran Township, he is deeply attached to the place and interested in everything looking towards the advancement of its best interests. He is a solid, substantial and practical farmer and a good business man, and stands well with his neighbors.

FOSTER, Samuel Lewis.—The Foster family has been prominent in Sangamon County, Ill., since the father of Samuel Lewis, Ivins Foster, came to Illinois from Kentucky, in 1829. Samuel Lewis Foster was born in Curran Township, Sangamon County, June 29, 1830, and was one of the oldest native-born residents of the county. He was a son of Ivins and Margaret (McKee) Foster, both born in Harrison County, Ky., the former November 25, 1794, and the latter January 20, 1796. The McKee family is of Scotch-Irish descent and came to Kentucky from Muddy Creek, Pa. Ivins Foster was a son of Samuel and Mary Mayhall (Vetch) Foster, who moved from Muddy Creek, Pa., to Harrison County, Ky. Ivins Foster located in Curran Township, Sangamon County, in 1829, and his death occurred there near the village of Curran, January 4, 1886, and that of his wife April 19, 1880.

Eight children were born to Ivins Foster and wife, as follows: William David, died in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1843; Mary Jane, married Samuel Dunn, who died about 1900, and his widow resides with her daughter, Mrs. Ackers, at 505 South College Street, Springfield; John Sanford, born in Harrison County, Ky., died December 9, 1847, in Curran Township, aged twenty-three years; Rebecca Ann, born in Kentucky, died August 15, 1837; Samuel Lewis; John Wesley, born in Curran Township, January 29, 1833, was married, in that Township, March 26, 1858, to Jerusha Dennis, and died in Sangamon County, October 4, 1898; James Thomas, born in Curran Township, March 29, 1836, died August 4, 1840; Martha Elizabeth, born March 23, 1838, died March 29, same year.

Samuel Lewis Foster reared on a farm one mile southeast of Curran, and received his early education in the country schools. In 1849 he entered McKendree College, at Lebanon, St. Clair County, Ill., where he graduated in 1853 and afterward taught school two years, after which he engaged in farming in Curran Township. In 1860 he sold his interests in Sangamon County and moved to Elk River, Sherburne County, Minn., lived there during the Indian troubles, and in 1863 returned to Curran Township, where he again engaged in farming and sheep-raising. He found good profit in producing wool, remaining on his farm until 1882, when he located in Springfield, buying a house on the corner of Edwards and New Street, which he later sold and moved to the village of Curran. He kept a grocery store for some four years, then moved to a farm southeast of Curran, where he was engaged in farming until 1894, when he moved to his present residence, 701 South English Avenue, Springfield, later selling his farm. For about five years he had been an invalid. He was energetic and industrious during his active career and was successful in whatever he undertook. He was a public-spirited citizen and always ready to contribute his share towards the welfare of his community.

Mr. Foster was married by Elder Crane, of Springfield, December 27, 1855, to Miss Lydia Lee, who was born in Dover, Del., February 8, 1834, and they became parents of the following children: Mary Alice, born in Curran Township, October 5, 1856, was married, July 12, 1881, to Archibald Maxwell; Charles, born in Curran Township, April 7, 1858, died September 18, same year; Louis Kossuth, born in Curran Township, July 12, 1859, was married in Springfield, in 1885, to Miss Lucy Ewell, and they now live in Denver, Col.; Robert Lee, born in Sherburne County, Minn., November 6, 1861, was married, in Menard County, Ill., May 10, 1883, to Miss Margaret Elsie Foster, and they now live in Springfield; Margaret May, born in Curran Township, July 3, 1870, was married December 25, 1888, to James Sims, who is Principal of the Iles School, Springfield.

Mr. Foster never cared for public office, though he had been an ardent Republican since the organization of that party. He was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and fraternally was affiliated with the Masonic Order, which he joined in 1851, in St. Clair County, Ill., when he became a member of Odd Fellows Lodge, No. 110. He was a member of Chatham Lodge, at Chatham, Ill. He was genial and kindly of disposition and enjoyed the society of his friends of whom he had a large number. He died in April, 1911.

FOUGHT, Hugh.—When the American Colonies separated from Great Britain and sought to establish their independence, families were divided, some members espousing the new cause, others adhering to the old order of things. Hugh Foutch, an esteemed retired farmer of New Berlin, traces his ancestry back to one of three brothers who came to Virginia at an early day. Of these Abraham Foutch enlisted with the Colonial Army and, in spite of the pleadings of his brothers, fought for seven years in defense of his adopted country. They remained faithful to King George, whom they regarded as their rightful ruler. At the close of the war, feeling unhappy in his old home, Abraham adventurously set forth for the raw land in the vicinity of Evansville, Ind., where he farmed for some years, going later to Kentucky. There his son John was born, as was

Thomas Foutch, the father of Hugh Foutch. All of the sons of Abraham Foutch have passed away, they having been: Abraham, Hugh, John, Thomas and William, all the last-named growing to maturity and rearing families of their own. There were also five daughters who grew up and married, but they are also deceased.

The Foutch family migrated to Sangamon County, Ill., about 1825, and John Foutch, a son of Abraham Foutch, passed his last days there, dying at Old Berlin about 1846. Thomas Foutch was born November 23, 1799, and lived to the advanced age of ninety-four years, dying February 14, 1893. His widow died in September of the same year, being then ninety-three years of age. She had borne the maiden name of Sarah Wherrett and she, like her husband, was also a native of Kentucky. Upon coming to Illinois the family made a short stop in what is now Pleasant Plains, then bought 160 acres in Island Grove Township. After improving this property and greatly increasing its value, John Foutch sold it, purchasing what is now the old Foutch homestead. This continued to be his home until death claimed him. Thomas Foutch was a typical Kentuckian, charitable and liberal, ready to think well of those he came in contact and help anyone who needed assistance without stopping to ask if it was merited. Long a prominent figure in the Baptist Church, he was instrumental in the erection of the first edifice for worship of this denomination in Old Berlin, and when an aged man took pleasure in walking to the church and building the fire so that the other members could be comfortable while listening to their Master's word. For a number of years he served faithfully as Deacon, and was always a very liberal supporter of the church. Long a Whig, upon the formation of the Republican party he adopted its principles, and gladly followed his warm personal friend, Abraham Lincoln, in his support of that party. All his life he steadfastly refused to accept political honors, preferring to aid his community as a private citizen, and he left behind him a record of a blameless life and countless kindly, charitable deeds.

Six children, three sons and three daughters, were born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Foutch: Elizabeth Ann married Thomas Pollock, both deceased; Nancy married John Bevan, both deceased, left four children; John, deceased; Caroline married Thomas Curran, both deceased, left one daughter; William was First Lieutenant of Company D, Twenty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, was taken sick at Quincy, coming home only to die; Hugh, the youngest and only survivor.

Hugh Foutch was born on the home farm in Island Grove Township, December 19, 1833, and grew to manhood's estate in his native county. He received a district school education and was reared in a religious atmosphere in his home. When he was twenty-one years of age he began farming for his father. On September 2, 1858, he was united in marriage with Mary Ann Wilkoff, born near Middletown, in Butler County, Ohio, November 14, 1836, a daughter of Samuel and Nancy Ann (Henderson) Wilkoff, natives of New Jersey. Later the family located in Ohio, where both parents passed away. Mrs. Foutch was a daughter by her father's second marriage. By his first marriage he had four children: Joseph, Louisa A., Sarah, and Allan, all deceased. By his second marriage he had seven children: Augustus, deceased; Gertrude, who married John Vall, both deceased; Peter, of Maroa, Ill.; Lemuel, of Maroa, Ill.; John, Henderson and Mrs. Foutch. She and her two brothers Peter and Lemuel are the only survivors.

For many years after their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Foutch lived on the homestead, caring for his aged parents. Eventually Mr. Foutch erected a beautiful farmhouse in which he was able to care for his parents more comfortably, and in it they died. He still owns this homestead of 380 acres, and his one son, William Wherrett, born January 31, 1841, owns ninety acres, operating the two farms as one. This son married Louisa A. Wilcox and they have two children, Grace and Halden, both at home.

Like his father, Mr. Foutch is an earnest member of the Baptist communion, and has been one of its Deacons for a number of years, holding his membership since 1825, and is a son of New Berlin. Mr. Foutch's first presidential vote was cast for Abraham Lincoln and he has continued to support the candidates of the Republican party ever since. As long as he remained on the farm Mr. Foutch served his district as School Director, but would accept no other office. Having accumulated a sufficient amount of this world's goods, in April, 1897, Mr. and Mrs. Foutch decided to leave the farm and take life more easily, so retired to the northern part of New Berlin, where they are very comfortably located, owning their present home. They are most excellent people, commanding universal respect and enjoying the friendship of all who have the honor of their acquaintance.

The name Foutch is of French origin, and was originally spelled Fouche, the change being made by the later generations.

FOWLER, Charles C. (deceased), late of Springfield, left behind him, the record of an honorable life and was highly respected as a citizen and an upright, industrious man. He was actuated by high principles in his relations with his fellow villagers and had a wide circle of sincere friends. His birth occurred in Pennsylvania, August 12, 1845, and he was a son of Caleb and Catherine (Ross) Fowler, both natives of Pennsylvania, the father born in 1824, and the mother in 1828. Caleb Fowler, a farmer of Pennsylvania, emigrated from that State to Kentucky, he and his brother-in-law, James Canedy, with their families, making the entire trip down the Ohio River on a flat-boat, which they had con-
FOX, Charles W., a veteran of the Civil War, and a prominent resident of Riverton, Ill., is now living retired from active duties, after having spent most of his life in agricultural operations in Sangamon County. Mr. Fox belongs to a family that has been well known in Sangamon County for half a century, and he was a boy of ten years of age when brought there by his parents. He was born in Crawford County, X. J., November 20, 1838, a son of Aaron and Phebe (Buck) Fox, both natives of New Jersey, and the father a farmer by occupation. In early life Aaron Fox became a sailor and followed that occupation many years on the Atlantic Ocean, before taking up farming. He brought his family to Illinois in 1848, settling at Pleasant Plains, where he lived thirty-seven years. Their first home was an old log house, which had been built by Samuel Purvines, and later they lived in a log house which had been erected by Rev. Peter Cartwright, a pioneer Methodist minister, for whom Cartwright Township was named. Later, Mr. Fox moved to Lanesville Township and spent several years in farming there, then lived several years in Buffalo, whence he moved to Clear Lake Township and there carried on farming. About 1859, Aaron Fox was accidentally killed. His widow died in Riverton, in 1897. Five sons and five daughters were born to Aaron Fox and wife, of whom the following survive: Charles W., of this biography; Smith and Coleman, also of Riverton; Somers, now of Nebraska; Frank, a retired farmer living in Springfield; Elaira, wife of George Sharp, a farmer living near Riverton; Melissa, wife of Sidney Branch, of Mason City, III. The Fox family originally came from England and the Buck family from Scotland.

Charles W. Fox was reared on a farm and educated in the public schools of Sangamon County. He enlisted in Company C, Thirty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for service in the Civil War, and served four years and five months, being promoted to rank of First Lieutenant of his company, participating in many important engagements, bearing himself creditably. He enlisted from Springfield, and was discharged March 12, 1865, in Tennessee, having never been wounded or taken prisoner.

At the close of the war, Mr. Fox returned to Sangamon County and he was married September 21, 1865, to Melinda Ridgeway, born in Buffalo Hart Grove, April 9, 1848, daughter of Enoch and Mary (Likens) Ridgeway. Enoch Ridgeway was a native of Kentucky and his wife, who was a cousin of Abraham Lincoln's mother, was a native of Indiana and lived just across the road from the latter. Mr. Ridgeway came to Buffalo Hart at an early day and there engaged in farming, making that place his homestead the remainder of his life. Mrs. Ridgeway died in 1908, at the age of eighty-nine years. In the family were three sons and one daughter, of whom the only one now living is Samuel Ridgeway, of Buffalo Hart Grove. After his marriage, Mr. Fox engaged in farming in Buffalo Hart Grove and met with considerable success. He has resided in Riverton since 1866 and owns a very comfortable home there, besides other property. To him and his wife, children were born as follows: six sons and six daughters, of whom six children are now living: Mary, wife of Elmer Wilson, of Springfield; Edward, a carpenter and brick mason, of Ashdown, Ark.; Alice, wife of Clarence Hamilton, of Riverton; Charles W., of Springfield; Clara, wife of Noah Hickman, an employee of the Chicago, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Company, living in Springfield; Gilbert, of Riverton. There are eleven grandchildren in the family. Mr. Fox is a prominent member of the local post of the G. A. R. and his wife belongs to John R. Tanner Circle of Springfield. He is a member of the Methodist Church and in politics is a Republican, and well known in Riverton and vicinity, as an upright, useful citizen, possessing many warm friends.

FOX, James R.—The vast interests involved in carrying on the coal industry in Sangamon County, necessitate the employment in official capacities of men of experience and ability, especially in the mechanical department, where they are expected not only to answer for the efficiency of the work turned out, but must also be able to handle large bodies of men. James R. Fox, of the well-known Woodside Coal Company, a man of wide experience and unlimited capability, was born March 5, 1856, in Iowa County, Wis., and is a son of James and Mary (Crebo) Fox, natives of England, who later became farming people of Iowa County, where both died.

James R. Fox was the fifth of his parents' eight children, and his youth was spent on his father's farm in Iowa County, in which location he secured his education in the common schools. In his youth, in addition to farming, he engaged in the livery business until going to Mitchell County, Kan., where he embarked in stock-raising, and so continued for four years, at the end of which time he returned to his Wis.

Cousin home. A short time later he came to Illinois, locating in LaSalle, where he became connected with the Twin City Electric Company, continuing in the capacity of chief engineer of this firm for six and one-half years, and then taking the management of the lighting plant at Spring Valley, a position which he held for the five years following. In 1900 he came to Springfield, for nine years was engineer and had charge of the electric work for the Jones & Adams Coal Company, and in March, 1909, became hoisting engineer for the Woodside Coal Company, a position to which he was eminently fitted after his long and varied experience.

On September 14, 1882, in Iowa County, Wis., Mr. Fox was united in marriage with Miss Mary L. Zimmer, a native of that county and daughter of Daniel and Amelia Zimmer. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fox, namely: Alice, Arthur, Clara, the wife of John Welgaud, of Springfield, and Ray.

Mr. Fox is well known in fraternal circles of Springfield, being a leading member of Sangamon Lodge No. 6, and of the State Encampment, of the Odd Fellows, in which he has passed through all the chairs. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. His present comfortable residence on North Sixth Street was erected by him after his former home had been destroyed by fire.

FOX, Samuel C., an enterprising business man of Riverton, Ill., has established himself in the confidence and respect of the people of his community and has built up a good trade through honest dealing and ability in his line of work. The family of which Mr. Fox is a member is one of the older ones in Sangamon County and has always had a good standing there. He was born at Pleasant Plains, Sangamon County, May 24, 1849, a son of Aaron and Phoebe (Buck) Fox, natives of New Jersey and the father a farmer by occupation. The parents came west and settled on the old Peter Cartwright farm, where they remained many years, moved thence to Lansville Township, and for many years carried on farming there, then moved to Buffalo, where for many years the father conducted a tavern. They finally located on the George Manu farm at Lake Fork, where the father carried on agricultural operations until his death. The mother died in Riverton in 1894. Ten children were born to Aaron Fox and wife, five sons and five daughters, of whom the following are now living: Samuel C., Charles W., and Smith, of Riverton; Frank, of Springfield; Sumner, of Nebraska; Elmer, wife of George Sharp, of Riverton; Mrs. Millicent Branch, of Mason City, Ill.

Samuel C. Fox spent his boyhood on his father's farm and received a common school education. As a young man he learned the trade of plasterer, which he followed several years, then began contracting in this line of his own account, carrying on this enterprise seventeen years, after which he engaged in
Mr. Fox was married, in Lincoln, Ill., to Miss Ada J. Freeman, born in Knox County, Mo., December 17, 1859, daughter of Edward Freeman and his wife, the former born in New York State May 4, 1818, and died December 18, 1885, and the mother born in Canada February 26, 1829, and died July 30, 1894. The parents came to Illinois before the time of the Civil War and settled on a farm near Dawson, where they lived many years. They had one son and five daughters, and three of these children are living: Mrs. Fox; her brother Silas, of Mt. Vernon, Mo., and Henrietta, wife of Charles Cantrall, of Springfield.

Three children were born to Mr. Fox and his wife, named: Mary, wife of Frank Hott, of Riverton; Edward married Miss Nellie Radigan, of Riverton, and they have three daughters—Ada E., Veda M. and Nellie M.; John W., of Riverton. Mr. and Mrs. Hott have one child, Charles H.

Mr. Fox has a nice home in Riverton and has many friends in the vicinity. In politics he is a Republican, and his wife are members of the Methodist Church, and both are interested in any worthy cause which comes to their notice. He is a member of Industrial Lodge No. 550, I. O. O. F., of Barclay, and his wife belongs to the Yeomen of America, being affiliated with Springfield Lodge No. 136.

FOX, Smith, a highly respected citizen of Riverton, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and has spent most of his life in Sangamon County, being reared by his parents when about four years old. He was born in Cape May County, N. J., June 3, 1844, a son of Aaron and Phebe (Buck) Fox, both also natives of New Jersey. The father was a sailor in early life and later took up the occupation of farming. Coming to Illinois in 1848, he immediately located in Pleasant Plains, where he lived many years, subsequently living in Lanesville Township, Buffalo and Clear Lake Township. He and his wife, together with a list of their children, are mentioned in this work in connection with the sketch of Charles W., a brother of Smith Fox, who is also a resident of Riverton.

As a boy, Smith Fox attended the country schools, and helped with the work on his father's farm as soon as he was old enough to do so. He followed farming as an occupation until a few years ago, when he retired from business life and located in Riverton. He enlisted from Springfield in Company D, Fifty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged at Mobile, Ala., New Year's Day, 1865. He had taken part in many serious engagements, among them being the battles of Bull Run and Mobile.

At the close of hostilities, Mr. Fox returned to Sangamon County and followed farming for many years in connection with his trade of plasterer. His marriage occurred July 6, 1866, when he was united with Louisa Flagg, a native of Saugamun County, who was born in 1817. Her father, Isaac Flagg, was a native of Delaware and an early settler of Sangamon County, where he entered land from the Government at $1.25 per acre, and there carried on farming the remainder of his life. He and his wife are both deceased and Mrs. Fox died August 27, 1907. Twelve children, six sons and six daughters, had been born to Mr. and Mrs. Fox, of whom but three now survive: Benjamin, of Wyoming; Charles E., of Riverton; Mrs. Margaret Peters, of Michigan City, Ind. There are six grandchildren in the family. Mrs. Fox was a devoted wife and mother, and had a host of friends by whom she is most kindly remembered and deeply mourned.

Mr. Fox is a member of the Methodist Church and in politics a Republican. He takes an active interest in local affairs and is identified with the best interests of his community. He owns a very comfortable home in Riverton, where he has lived since March 20, 1867. He was a member of Post 280 G. A. R., which has been disbanded. He is regarded as a man of strict integrity and honesty and is considered a representative citizen.

FRANCIS, James S., one of the oldest residents of Sangamon County, Ill., was born at Palmyra, N. Y., January 15, 1831, and was brought to Illinois by his parents when five years old. He is a son of Josiah and Fidelia (Clark) Francis, the former born in Pittsfield, Mass., in 1801, and married in the same place. Josiah Francis was a cabinet maker and in 1822 came to Palmyra, N. Y., from Massachusetts, removing thence to Sangamon County July 4, 1836, and at first lived with a brother, Charles B., who had come to Springfield the year previous, remaining with him until 1857, then moved to what was known as the Dairy Newsom farm, where he died in 1898, his wife having passed away in 1872. Mrs. Francis' sister, Esther Clark, lived with the family until she was ninety-eight years and four months old, and died in 1905. Esther Clark many times saw the Colonial soldiers under Gen. Washington when they stopped at her father's house. The father of Josiah Francis was a native of Massachusetts and died at Pittsfield, the father of Mrs. Francis also having spent his entire life in Massachusetts. Joseph Francis and his wife had four children, three sons and one daughter.

(Palmyra, N. Y., the birthplace of Mr. Francis, was for a time the home of Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, and where he started the scheme for the propagation of his new faith, and it was Josiah Francis, the father of James S., who made the box to receive the first Mormon bible.)

The boyhood of James S. Francis was spent in the city of Springfield, where he was educated, and after leaving school he was employed as clerk for Joseph Thayer & Co., where he worked two years. He has lived on the same farm since 1851, and has there been constantly engaged in agricultural pursuits. He has a fine tract of 200 acres which he has developed and improved in every way possible. Mr. Francis’ methods as a farmer are shown by the fact that, during the year 1910, a tract of five acres of the land which he had been cultivating for fifty-eight years, produced a crop of oats amounting, within a small fraction, to 90 bushels per acre. He is one of Sangamon County’s best-known citizens and is revered and respected by all who meet him. He has seen remarkable changes since locating in the county and has always been the friend of progress and education. His pleasant home is located on Section 16, Clear Lake Township. He was formerly a Whig and is now a Republican, and has always been interested in public affairs. He has served as School Director, but has not held other public office.

Mr. Francis was married in Missouri, in February 1858, to Abbie Barrows, a native of New York, and daughter of Franklin Barrows and wife, also natives of New York. Mrs. Francis died on the home farm, in 1906, and her memory is cherished by many friends. She and her husband had no children. Mr. Francis is a devout member of the Second Presbyterian Church of Springfield, and is always ready to advance the cause of any benevolent or charitable enterprise. He is a man of high character and kind heart, a true friend and a kind neighbor. He saw Lincoln and Douglas many times and was a personal friend of the former.

FRANCIS, Joseph (deceased), was born in Kentucky, in 1838, lived in his native State until he reached the age of ten years, then accompanied his parents to Illinois, his home for the remainder of his life. He was a son of Joseph and Margaret Francis, natives of Kentucky, and the father, a farmer by occupation, located in Illinois in 1848 and secured a farm in Adams County.

The early education of Joseph Francis was received in Kentucky, but being a small boy when the family came to Adams County, he attended the schools of that county for some time. His father’s farm was located near Clayton, and after reaching manhood he engaged in farming there. Later he moved to Sangamon County and located on a farm, but afterwards returned to the vicinity of Clayton, and there his death occurred. His widow subsequently brought her children to Springfield, where they are all living at the present time. Mr. Francis was a devout member of the United Brethren Church, of Clayton, and in politics was an earnest Republican. He was an industrious and able farmer and won a fair degree of success in this occupation. He was a man of innate honesty and high character, and when his death occurred, he left many warm friends to mourn his loss.

The marriage of Mr. Francis occurred in 1861, at Mt. Sterling, Ill., when he was united with Miss Mary Ann Farrell, born September 1, 1844, in Indiana. Mrs. Francis is a daughter of David and (Kattie) Catherine (Hall) Farrell, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Indiana. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Francis, namely: Harvey is married and has two children—Hazel and William; Frank, conductor on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Road, lives in Springfield, is married and has two children; Lucinda married Thomas Stitely, and has three children—Ruth, Esther and Tracy, all attending school in Springfield.

FRANCIS, Simeen. (Vol. I. p. 175.)

FRANCIS, Vincent (deceased).—Many of the valued and useful citizens of Springfield, Ill., were natives of the Island of Madeira. Of this number was Vincent Francis, who lived in the city for more than half a century. Mr. Francis was born on Madeira Island, June 15, 1826, a son of Frank and Anna (Dacunsta) Francis, who spent their entire lives on the island. The father was a gardener and owned a fine grape vineyard, also carrying on farming in a small way.

At the age of ten years Vincent Francis accompanied relatives who came from his native land to the State of Illinois, locating at Springfield. His education was begun in his birthplace and was completed in Springfield. After leaving school he learned the trade of painter and followed it the remainder of his life, eventually taking contracts on his own account. He was an expert in his trade and became quite successful. He enlisted for service in the Civil War, becoming a member of Company I, One Hundred and Thirtieth Illinois Volunteers, winning an excellent record as a soldier, and at the end of his term was honorably discharged.

At the close of the war Mr. Francis resumed work at his trade in Springfield and continued to build up a very good business. He was honest and reliable and fulfilled his contracts in a way to give entire satisfaction. He became a member of the G. A. R. and also joined the Mutual Aid Society, to which order Abraham Lincoln belonged, and in which he carried his membership some thirty years. His widow is a member of the Ladies of the G. A. R. Mr. Francis was an active member of the First Portuguese Presbyterian Church of Springfield. In politics he was a firm Republican and took the greatest interest in the cause of his party and especially in its success in national affairs. He was a public-spirited, highminded citizen, ready to promote the best interests of his communility and having very practical views along these lines.

Mr. Francis was married (first) in Springfield, Ill., to Miss Diniugus Goveria, a native of the Island of Madeira, and three children were born of this union: Vic, a mail carrier of Springfield; Lizzie, who married William Sylvester, a printer in Springfield; Sindle, married Albert Helme, and they reside in Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Francis was married (second) in 1889, to Miss Carrie De Freitas, daughter of Francis De Freitas, an old resident of Sangamon County, who was connected with a slaughter house at Springfield up to the time of his death, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. Children as follows were born to Mr. Francis by his second marriage: Fred, married and living in Racine, Wis.; Rose, married Ernest Fernandez and they have no children; Lawrence Bert. Mr. Francis died in Springfield, July 15, 1906, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. His widow now resides at 325 North Fourteenth Street, Springfield. She and her husband made many friends in the city and won universal respect. Mrs. Francis owns the pleasant home where she now lives.

FRANKS, John.—When a man decides to answer the call of his fellow citizens who wish to elect him to public office, he must, of necessity, neglect his own private interests and serve them to the best of his ability. Very few there are, especially in civic positions, whose business does not suffer from their acceptance of public life, and this unselfishness in behalf of the people should be appreciated. John Franks, one of Springfield's self-made men, who has been connected with official life in the Capital City for a number of years, was born there, January 8, 1850, a son of Emanuel and Clara (Verria) Franks, natives of Madeira. Emanuel Franks came to the United States in 1848 and was engaged in various occupations until the outbreak of the Civil War, when he enlisted in the Union army, under General John M. Palmer, and served three years, during which time he was wounded in the hand. For twenty years he was janitor of the Palmer School in Springfield, and after his retirement went to El Paso, Tex., where he is now residing. His wife died in December, 1900. Mr. Franks is a member of the Portuguese Presbyterian Church.

As a youth John Franks showed his enterprise by peddling apples to the soldiers of the Union army at Camps Butler and Yates. His education was secured in the Palmer School, which he left at the age of eighteen years, and worked at various occupations until obtaining a position with the wholesale house of Smith & Hay. In 1876 he became a member of the Springfield police force, with which he was connected for nine years, and in 1885 entered into his present business, in which he has continued to this time. He hauled the first load of sand to use in the construction of the State House, and the first load of dirt in excavating for the reservoir, and his was the last team to leave work thereon. He also hauled the first load of sand to use in building the Presbyterian Church. For a time he farmed on the land where the water company's plant is now located. He was Deputy Sheriff under Tamp Elliott, Sheriff of Sangamon County, and in 1889 was elected Alderman of the First Ward, serving until 1901, when he was re-elected for a term of two years, and it was during his term that the High School was erected. He has always been faithful in the performance of his official duties and constantly looked after the interests of his constituents. Mr. Franks' politics are those of the Democratic party. In religious views he is liberal. He is the owner of considerable property in Springfield.

On March 30, 1874, Mr. Franks was united in marriage with Kate Smith, who was born in Jacksonville, Ill., whose father is deceased and whose mother is living in Springfield. Seven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Franks: Melborn, who is Deputy Sheriff; Nellie, the wife of Patrick Ganahan, of Springfield; Leo, the wife of G. O. Watson, of Chicago; Iffie, the wife of Patrick Rourke, of Springfield; Grace, the wife of Albert Murry, connected with the Chicago & Alton Railroad; Ida, the wife of Arthur Burk, of Springfield; and John Palmer, who is in business with his father in Springfield.

FREEMAN, Norman L. (deceased), a prominent lawyer and for more than thirty years, Supreme Court Reporter of the State of Illinois, spent a large part of his life in Springfield. He was born in Caledonia, Livingston County, N. Y., May 9, 1823, the son of Truman and Hannah (Dow) Freeman, both natives of New Hampshire and residents of Concord in that State for many years. His maternal grandmother was a member of the Greeley family and his mother a cousin of Horace Greeley. Truman Freeman became a leather merchant at Albany, N. Y., where he died in 1824.

Norman L. was member of a family of eight children who reached maturity and of whom he was the last survivor. In 1831, his widowed mother, accompanied by her family, moved from New York to Ann Arbor, Mich., where they remained six years, when they removed to Detroit. After spending some three years as an employee in the store of David Cooper, a merchant of Detroit, in 1840 Norman L. went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he clerked for a few months in the store of an older brother. He then entered the University at Athens, Ohio, but on his retirement from that institution in 1843, engaged in teaching for a time in western Kentucky, while thus employed devoting his leisure time to reading law. In 1845, he went to Waterford, N. Y., where he prosecuted his preparatory law studies in the office of Kirtland & Seymour for a year, when in 1846 he returned to Kentucky, and at Morganfield, Union County, that State, was admitted to the bar. On December 20, 1849, he was there married to Miss Truquilla Richeson, a daughter of Alfred and Elizabeth Dabney (Williamson) Richeson, of that county. Mrs. Freeman was a native of Lynchburg, Va., and her father became an extensive land owner in Kentucky, while an uncle, William Richeson, was a wealthy merchant of Shawneetown, Ill.

In 1851, Mr. Freeman removed to Shawneetown, then a place of considerable importance, and the home of a number of prominent lawyers, was there admitted to the bar and for a time enjoyed a lucrative practice in the Local and Supreme Courts of Southern Illinois. For a part of this time he devoted his attention to authorship on legal topics, in 1856 issuing a "Digest of the Illinois Reports" in two large volumes. It was, no doubt, his success in this line which brought him to the attention of the Supreme Court, resulting in his appointment by that body as Supreme Court Reporter in April, 1863, on the retirement of his predecessor, Judge Ehlenzer Peck, of Chicago. In the meantime he had spent some three years (1850-1852) serving as President of his health on a farm in Marion County, Mo., returning in the latter year to Shawneetown. During this period the State was divided for judicial purposes into three Grand Divisions, the Supreme Court holding its sessions successively at Ottawa, Springfield and Mr. Vernon. Mr. Freeman, with his headquarters at Springfield, was accustomed to attend each session, issuing reports of proceedings for thirty-one years (1863-1894), amounting to 120 volumes. His death occurred after a protracted illness at his home in Springfield on the morning of August 25, 1894, the obsequies in his honor being of a specially impressive character. The decease of Mrs. Freeman took place in Springfield in 1905, and both are buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman were the parents of three daughters and one son, namely: Mary D., married John A. S. Miller, a fruit dealer of Spokane, Wash.; Elizabeth H., married Joseph P. Doyle, and they are residing in Chicago; William F. and Georgia L.—the latter, the wife of John H. Brinkerhoff, a real-estate dealer of Springfield, and they have two children, George Norman and John William. (See also Vol. 1, p. 176.)

FREIDINGER, Henry (deceased), formerly an enterprising German-American citizen of Springfield, who died January 11, 1911, was a resident of that city for nearly half a century. He was born in Bavaria, August 18, 1822, son of George and Mary (Bloomenauer) Freidinger, the former a well-to-do farmer of Germany. The family came to the United States in 1832, landing in New York City. They spent one year at Frederick, Md., moved thence to Funkstown, same State, and soon after located in Hagerstown, where both parents died. George Freidinger was a laborer and for some time he and his sons worked on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. Children as follows were born to him and his wife: George, Charles, Katy, Henry, and John, all of whom are now deceased.

Until he was ten years of age Henry Freidinger lived in Bavaria, where he attended school as soon as he was old enough. He also attended the public schools of Hagerstown, Md., for a time. The first work he did was on the old Riehetsfett, near Hagerstown, where he received $3 per month and board for his services. He then worked for a time as a butcher near his home, and worked with his father and brothers for a time on the canal. He then found employment in a brick yard, where he remained for a time, learning the trade of brick-making. He worked for some time at various kinds of work, and then moved to Pennsylvania, where he worked for some time in his brother George's brickyard. He began business on his own account in Hagerstown, manufacturing brick for the farmers in the surrounding country, and after moving to Springfield, Ill., in 1864, engaged in the same business there.

Mr. Freidinger was married (first) about 1852, to Miss Mary Esterday, who died one year later, and he married (second) Miss Frances Kuhn or Koon.

Upon locating in Springfield Mr. Freidinger bought property on Fifth Street, but soon afterwards traded this for a forty-acre farm in Cotton Hill. Owing to various complications, he disposed of this farm and returned to town. During the first year he spent in Springfield he made two kilns of brick, and upon returning to the city he formed a partnership with a Mr. Baker, and they began moving houses, which they continued several years. For four summers Mr. Freidinger worked on the State House, worked four years in the rolling mills, then worked ten years in the watch factory, after which time he was retired. He worked hard for many years and well earned the rest he later enjoyed. He was a man of good principles and habits and had the respect and good will of all who have had dealings with him.

Mr. Freidinger was reared in the faith of the German Reformed Church, was a staunch Democrat in political views, and took an active interest in public affairs. His second wife died in July, 1908. Mr. Freidinger had children as follows: Henry died in Muncie, Ind.; William, of Springfield; Katy, Mrs. Nicholas Trainor, of Springfield; John, of Colorado; Charles and Benjamin, deceased; and Frank, of Springfield.

FREISCHLAG, Joseph.—The men who displayed their faith in the future of Springfield have been richly rewarded, for land values have reached an astounding figure and those fortunate enough to own land, either in the city or its vicinity find their possessions materially increasing in value. One of the men thus fortunate is Joseph Freisclag, of No. 2501 Rochester Road, whose five acres are valued at $1,000 per acre. He was born in southern

Germany, November 9, 1848, a son of George and Eva (Voht) Freischlag, both of Germany, farming people, who never left their native land. Of their two sons and one daughter, Joseph is the only survivor.

Mr. Freischlag was educated in Germany, attending public school eight years and drawing school two years. He worked on the farm for his father until fifteen years old, then began learning the stone-cutter's trade. In 1880 he came to America, sailing from Antwerp to Liverpool, and thence to New York City, where he remained a week, then came on west to Chicago. From there he went to Ottumwa, Iowa, where he spent a year, working at his trade. His next location was at Gladstone, Henderson County, Ill., but after four years there, he went to Kansas City, Mo. After four years more there, he went to Ogden, Utah, where he spent 1889 and 1890, and then went to Burlington, Iowa. He then spent a short time in Alabama, finally coming to Springfield, where he worked at his trade until he retired, a short time since, after a long period of hard work.

On January 13, 1883, he was married at Gladstone, Ill., to Augusta Gade, born in Germany, June 17, 1863. Her parents also died in Germany, and when she was quite young, she was a daughter of Christian Gade. Mrs. Freischlag had two brothers and a sister, Mrs. Anna Morris, of Gladstone, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Freischlag have had eight children: two are deceased; Herman, a boiler maker in the Wabash shops; William, also in the Wabash shops; Oscar, clerk for Anton Elshoff, grocer; Gertrude, employed by the Herndon Dry Goods Company; Helen, with the John Bressmer Company; Joseph. Herman has two children,—Theresa and William A. Mr. Freischlag is a Roman Catholic and belongs to the Sacred Heart parish. He is a solid, reliable man and one whose word is as good as his bond.

FREITAG. Charles H.—Springfield has its full share of veterans of the Civil War, and is proud of them and of the fact that they have selected their Capital City as a place of residence during their declining years, as well as during those of their business activity. One of the men who have been of importance in peace as well as war, is Charles H. Freitag, now retired from active life, but who for years conducted a thriving transfer and coal business, being prepared to do the heaviest kind of moving. He was born in Prussia, Germany, near Berlin, April 26, 1837, a son of Fred and Fredericka (Yeates) Freitag. The mother died in her native land but the father came to the United States in 1850, bringing with him his four children. They came to New York from Hamburg, on a sailing vessel named the "Carolina," and spent seven weeks on the ocean. From New York, they went to Newark, N. J., spending a year there together but at the close of that time Charles H. Freitag, upon the advice of a friend who had two sons in what is now the city of Champaign, Ill., came west. When he reached Chicago, Mr. Freitag found no one who seemed to know anything about a place called Urbana, as Champaign was then named. After many inquiries, however, he found that there was such a spot, on which a town was to be built. This location was the terminus of the division of the Illinois Central Railroad, and at that time two tents and two sheds constituted the town. The first building in the place was a warehouse, and in the point of its roof was a hotel dining room, so low that the waiters had to stoop in serving the guests.

The first house at Urbana was erected by Adolph Maker and Mr. Freitag assisted in its construction, boarding there when the family moved in. Upon the completion of this house the German citizens there proposed celebrating the event, and as they thought they could not do this properly without beer, Mr. Freitag was delegated to go to Chicago and get a barrel of this liquor. Three dances were then given, the music being supplied by an accordion, and although the temperance people of the place tried to break up the jollification, the participants drove them off and completed their celebration.

As soon as the Illinois Central Railroad Company had work at Urbana, Mr. Freitag entered its employ there, as assistant to a blacksmith, and saving his earnings with German frugality, he was soon able to take advantage of the opportunity to buy cheap land, purchasing eighty acres from the Illinois Central Railroad Company. Although he knew nothing about farming, this young German was not daunted, but assuming that he understood the work, hired out, and being quick to learn, was soon able to break prairie land with anyone. The work was done with an ox team. However, as he was not an agriculturist, Mr. Freitag sold his farm, going to Galveston, Texas. While he was working there, the yellow fever broke out in his vicinity and he decided that he did not care to remain in a place where such an epidemic was imminent at any time. For some time he lived in the country, then returned to Galveston, where he learned that a manager was wanted for a hotel at Columbus, Colorado County, Texas, and immediately upon hearing of this fact Mr. Freitag went there, secured the position and filled it satisfactorily until the outbreak of the war. He then enlisted in Company I, Twenty-fourth Texas Rangers, and was taken prisoner and confined at Fort Hueman, being later taken to Camp Butler. He tells some entertaining stories of prison life, as well as of the privations endured by the soldiers of the Confederacy. At one time their only food was cornmeal, and the whole grain parched served as coffee. Quinine was in demand to help break the fever that wasted them, and cream of tartar was also valued to raise their bread. Mr. Freitag remembers the dire conse-

Richardson made the Mill Reservoir at Waverly, and this is the beginning of his business success. Little by little, he increased his business, adding team after team, and taking up moving and transfer business, until he had the best equipped line in the city. In January, 1910, he retired from active life, being well satisfied with what he had accomplished.

In 1834 Mr. Freitag was married, in Springfield, to Margaret Bieverlein, a daughter of Michael and Katherine (Kell) Bieverlein. Five children were born to them, of whom the two now surviving are Henry, of Springfield, and Lizzie, Mrs. John McGavin, also of Springfield. Mr. Freitag is a Republican. Genial kind-hearted, fond of his fellowmen, Mr. Freitag has a host of friends, and is welcome wherever he goes. In his life he demonstrates what a man can accomplish if he be ambitious and willing to work.

FRENCH, Augustus C. (Vol. I, pp. 176-177.)

FRESE, Adolf G.—The United States has no better citizens today than those who are of German birth. The Germans, as a rule, are intensely loyal and patriotic, striving to advance the interests of their country and contribute to the support of its institutions. When they come here, they bring with them these patriotic impulses and seek to carry these ideas into effect. They are also industrious and thrifty, and are bound to succeed in whatever they undertake. Springfield is the home of some of these good men, and among them none stands higher than Adolf G. Frese, born in Elberfeld, Germany, June 9, 1854, a son of Louis and Helene (Wulling) Frese, the former a native of Waldeck and the latter of Elberfeld, Germany, where in his native country the father was a baker and horse-dealer.

Adolf G. Frese was educated in the K. K. Real Gymnasium, where he fitted himself to be a school teacher. He lost his parents early in life, and his struggle was a difficult one, so he finally decided to come to America. Having learned the butcher's trade, he came to Springfield, Ill., he found employment in that line and is justly regarded as one of the substantial men of the city. He has been an important factor in organizing German and American benefit associations, and is at present the deputy organizer of the National Protective Legion of Sangamon and Logan counties.

On July 1, 1866, Mr. Frese was married to Sarah Stewart, whose family are engaged in business in New York City. There is no issue of this marriage. Mr. Frese belongs to the Netherlands Reformed Church. Starting out as a common laborer upon his arrival in the United States, he has sought to do his part in promoting the interests of his adopted country and make it the most prosperous nation in the world. No matter how small his wages, he managed to save money, and to advance himself. He is a great advocate of the rights of humanity, and believes in giving to his fellow beings and his adopted country, the benefit of his experience and good will.

FREY, John (deceased), was a large landowner in Sangamon and Christian counties, and followed farming most of his life. He was born in Germany, January 9, 1829, a son of Lawrence and Mary (Rodemeler) Frey, both natives of Germany, the former born in Derkheim and the latter at Siebott. They lived on a farm in Germany, where the mother died, and the father came to the United States in 1822, locating in Louisville, Ky., where his death occurred in 1866. Very little is known about the grandparents, who were residents of Germany. John Frey received his education in his native country and passed his childhood on a farm. After leaving school, he worked at farming, and left Germany May 20, 1850, for the United States, landing July 13, in New York, with but one dollar in his possession.

After coming to the United States Mr. Frey first worked in a saw-mill until he had enough money to go to Louisville, Ky., and reached that city August 10, 1850. He remained a short time with a brother in Louisville, then went to Pike County, O., where he remained until 1851, working at farming, first, but from 1861 until 1888, was engaged in a mercantile business in Waverly. In 1888, he sold out his business and purchased 440 acres of land in Illinois, going to Buffalo. He was able to converse in five languages: German, French, Italian, Hebrew and English.

Mr. Frey fought with the "Patriots" in Germany for nineteen months, but his comrades were so greatly outnumbered that they were forced to surrender. He was wounded in the head while near the French lines, and at the close of his services was exiled, so came to the United States. Though he had espoused a losing cause, he had risked his life for what he believed to be right. He was a member of the Christian Church at Buffalo, and a Democrat in political belief, taking an active interest in the public welfare and in the improvement of the community.

Mr. Frey was married in Pike County, O., in 1863, to Miss Mary Hildebrand, born in Germany, November 9, 1833, daughter of William Hildebrand, also a native of Germany. Mr.
Hildebrant and his wife were natives of Germany. They were there married, coming to America in 1818, locating in Pike County, O., but later moved to Kaukaus, where she died, but he died in the northern part of Ohio. There were three girls and one son in the family. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Frey: three sons and six daughters. Namely: Mand, born in Pike County, O., wife of Frank Thompson, lives in Sangamon County, and has five children; Jacob is married and lives on the home farm; Lizzy, wife of George Armstrong lives in Mechanicsburg; Emma, wife of John Rowe lives in Springfield, no issue; Lena, wife of George Kiser lives in Ohio; William is married and lives in the west; Louisa, wife of Jacob Eyreline lives in Sangamon County, one child; John is married and lives on his father's farm in Sangamon County; and Tillie, wife of Harve Mosentetter, lives in Springfield and has four children.

Mr. Frey owned 420 acres of land in Sangamon County and also 220 acres in Chritser County, Kas, besides four business blocks in Waverly, O. He had a handsome residence in Buffalo. Having been very industrious and thrifty, he was able to accumulate a competency. Mr. Frey was much respected in his community and made many friends during his residence there.

FRY, Dominick, a veteran of the Civil War, who has lived in Springfield since 1872, was born in Baden, Germany, August 4, 1836, son of Frank and Mary (Leifer) Fry, both of whom spent their entire lives in Germany, as did the grandparents. Dominick Fry was reared and educated in his native country, and in 1857 emigrated to America, landing in New York. He worked first at gardening and later moved to Pennsylvania, where he was employed digging in an ore bank.

In October, 1861, Dominick Fry enlisted in Company H, Third Maryland Infantry, served two years and was discharged at Alexandria, from the hospital camp. In 1864, he re-enlisted in Company H, Two Hundredth Pennsylvania Infantry, and served to the close of the war. He was wounded at Antietam, and also participated in battles at Cedar Mountain, Culpeper, Bull Run, Fort Stedman, Fort Held, Petersburg, and many others. He endured many hardships, and feels reasonably proud of his record as a soldier. He was later transferred to the Fifty-first Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. During his first enlistment he served as Corporal. He was discharged in June, 1865.

Mr. Fry was married in Springfield, in 1870, to Miss Annie Wietles, who was born in Menard County, Ill., March 3, 1859, daughter of Uffie Wietles, who was born in Germany and died in Springfield as did his wife, Minnie. Four children were born to Mr. Fry and his wife, namely: Minnie, born in Springfield, March 10, 1878, married William Reitz, of Springfield, and they have three children; Mary born in Springfield, July 12, 1883, married Russell Revelly, and they live in Springfield; John, born in Springfield May 4, 1885, is unmarried and lives with his parents; Uffie, born in Springfield November 19, 1887, is unmarried and lives at home. Mr. Fry and his family have lived in the home which he owns, at No. 1228 North Eighth Street, for thirty years. He has three grandchildren—Grace, Blossom and Lee Wright. Mr. Fry is a member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics is a Republican. He served as a member of the Village Board of Ridgely, and was the first police officer of that village. He worked in the rolling mills from the time he located in Springfield until 1899, since which time he has been employed as janitor of the Ridgely School. Honest and upright in all his dealings, he has many warm friends.

FUDGE, Adam Thomas, retired carpenter and builder, and one of the men who are responsible for much of the good work on Springfield residences and public buildings, is living at his comfortable home, No. 1412 East Fourth Street. He was born on a farm in Washington County, West Va., August 20, 1855, a son of Samuel and Elizabeth (McReynolds) Fudge, both natives of the same county as their son. The grandfather, Adam Fudge, was a soldier in the War of 1812, and served in defense of Baltimore. Located in Washington County, Va., he died there. Both he and his wife were natives of Germany, and they had three children.

Samuel Fudge spent his youth on his father's farm, and when he had attainted to his majority, bought a farm one mile from the family homestead. This he later sold, coming to Illinois with his family in 1840, settling on the Okaw River in what is now Shelby County, becoming the owner of 120 acres of land, forty of which was government land, and all in a somewhat wild condition. In 1847, he moved to Springfield, dying here in 1900, aged ninety-one years. His wife passed away when she was eighty-seven years old. There were seven children in their family: James went to Oregon when twenty-two years old, served as a pilot on the Columbia River and was killed in an explosion; Samuel H. died at the age of thirteen years; Adam Thomas; Eliza Jane married Harry Smith and died in 1901; Mary E., is now Mrs. Mary E. Raymond of Aurora; George W. of Decatur; Lucinda, now Mrs. James Vance, of Springfield.

Adam Thomas Fudge attended school held in a log house, while living in Shelby County, and when he came to Springfield continued his studies, being then only twelve years old. A year later he became what is called "off boy" in a brick yard, following which he drove a team for his father until he was nineteen. At that time he began learning the carpenter trade with Morris & Phillips, remaining with them for four years, after which he engaged in contracting and building for himself. In time he made a specialty of stair building, operating a shop in connection with his work. Many beautiful residences in the city attest his skill.

In 1855, Mr. Fudge married, in Springfield, Elizabeth Hortou, a daughter of William Hortou, a farmer. Mr. and Mrs. Fudge are consistent members of the First Methodist Church, and in politics he is a strong Republican, in early life having been an old time Whig. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Fudge are: Elizabeth, died at the age of seventeen; Hannah, died at the age of fifteen; Samuel, of James-town, N. Dak.; Mary, Mrs. Henry Ebel, of Chicago; Thomas of Illerston, Ill., and Jessie Ebel, at home. Mr. Fudge is a man whose activities in former years entitle him to the rest he is now enjoying, and he uses some of his leisure in studying local conditions and giving the community the benefit of his investigations.

FUNDERBURK, William Braden.—The visitor to Sangamon County, Ill., invariably remarks upon the excellent appearance of the farms, the flourishing condition of the crops, the neat appearance of the buildings and the healthy look of the livestock. If the visitor be unacquainted with the business of farming, he is very apt to give credit to the excellence of the soil of this condition, not taking into consideration the years of toil, of study and experiment, and of hard, unremitting labor which have been put upon these farms before such results could be accomplished. He does not think of the long period that has elapsed since these farms were brought under cultivation, nor of the more recent period when tilling, grading, ditching, crop rotation and even fertilizing were unknown and unheard of; or when the present farm machinery, the reapers, the mowers, harvesters and threshers, with their horse propelling power, their time and labor-saving devices, were something that even the most far-sighted never dreamed of. Yet such were the early conditions in Sangamon County, Ill., just as they have been in every other section of the country, where the land had to be reclaimed from the prairie or the forest, and the excellent conditions existing to-day are the result of hard, conscientious labor and unflagging energy on the part of those who tilled the soil before present scientific methods came into use.

William Braden Funderburk, one of the progressive agriculturists of Sangamon County, is carrying on operations along scientific lines on a fine 110-acre property, on Section 9, Cotton Hill Township. He was born in Cotton Hill Township, December 25, 1864, a son of Alford Newton and Emily Jane (Ward) Funderburk, farming people of Sangamon County where their lives were spent. Mr. Funderburk secured his educational training in the country schools of Sangamon County, and as a youth was always fond of out-of-door sports. His father was engaged in farming here, and reared his son to the life of an agriculturist, which the latter has always followed. His property is well fenced, his buildings in excellent condition and the farm, all in all, is one of the valuable properties of Cotton Hill Township. In his political belief Mr. Funderburk is a Republican, and his reputation for honesty and integrity, together with his personal popularity, has won him the vote of his fellow townspeople at various elections, and on numerous occasions he has been elected to positions of honor and trust. In 1900 he acted in the capacity of Census Taker. With his family Mr. Funderburk attends the Methodist Church. He is public-spirited to a high degree and can always be counted upon to give his support, both moral and financial, to those movements which he feels will be of benefit to his township or the community at large.

Mr. Funderburk was married April 9, 1903, at Glenarm, Sangamon County, Ill., to Miss Mary Elizabeth Lord. Mrs. Funderburk was born November 23, 1896, at Glenarm, which was also the birthplace of her father, Robert Jones Lord, born December 13, 1837, and of her mother, Sarah A. (Rupert) Lord, born March 20, 1850. To Mr. and Mrs. Funderburk have been born two children, both sons. Shelby Lord Funderburk, born June 23, 1906, at home, and Paul Rupert Funderburk, who was born May 15, 1904, but died July 8, 1907.

FUNKHOUSE, Charles Elbert.—Springfield is the home of some of the most reliable business men in the State, who have gradually developed through numerous experiences which have taught them some lessons of economic humility. These men would be successful in almost any line of work, for they have the proper business sense, and are willing to devote themselves to the matter in hand untiringly and devotedly. One of these men is Charles Elbert Funkhouse, born near Terre Haute, Vigo County, Ind., October 13, 1861, a son of John G. and Mary (Hay) Funkhouse, native of Virginia and Indiana, respectively. They were married in Vigo County, Ind., where the mother died in 1864, but the father’s death occurred in Kansas in October, 1906. He was a farmer and a reliable, industrious man.

Charles E. Funkhouse attended the district schools of his native county until he was sixteen, when he stopped to give his services to his father, working on the latter’s farm. This continued until he was twenty-one years old. At that time he went to Kansas and for eight years rented a farm. He then entered the employ of the Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis Railroad, returning to Illinois at that time. He remained in that position three years, leaving it to take a position with the Springfield Boiler Manufacturing Company. Here he worked as an expert machinist for seven years, but at the expiration of that period went into business for himself. He has become prominent in civic matters, serving on the Board of Health, to which position he was elected on the Democratic ticket. He belongs to the American Order of Owls, being one of its charter members, and is liberal in his religious views, according to others the liberty he gives himself.

On February 12, 1883, Mr. Funkhouser was united in marriage with Miss Isabelle Leuts, who was born in Washington, Ind., a daughter of Seal Leuts. Mr. and Mrs. Funkhouser have these children: Verna May, wife of Roy McCune, a resident of Springfield, one child, Lloyd; John Cleveland, assistant book-keeper for the Springfield Mattress Company; and Joseph Edward, attending school. Mr. Funkhouser is one of the progressive men of the city who believes in good government and local improvements, and he has a number of warm personal friends, who know and appreciate him.

GADERT, John, who has been in business in the city of Springfield for the past twenty years, was born in Mondorf, Luxemburg, Germany, August 24, 1848, a son of Nicholas and Eva (Wiedert) Gadert, both natives of the same place. The father was a farmer and John Gadert was given early training in habits of industry. He received a very meager education, attending school little more than two years, and at an early age began earning his own way in the world. At first he worked about the house in various families, receiving his board and clothing as remuneration for his services. He came to the United States as a young man and subsequently located in Springfield. He was one of three children, the two others being daughters.

For twenty-seven years Mr. Gadert worked at the trade of machinist, being a good workman and skilled in this line. He was able to save from his wages and invested his earnings with such good judgment that he was eventually able to engage in business on his own account, and has been fairly successful. He owns a business corner at 315-317 East Washington Street, Springfield, and a six-acre truck farm three and one-half miles south of the city. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and ready to support its good work. He is also a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters, which he joined in 1892, and of the Western Catholic Union, which he joined in 1887. In political views he is a Democrat. He is well-known in the city, where he has lived some fifty-two years, and has many friends.

Mr. Gadert was married, in Springfield, April 9, 1874, to Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Maurer, who was born in Baden, Germany, in 1820, and children as follows have been born to this union: John A., born June 10, 1876; Charles J., born November 27, 1876, died at the age of nine months and ten days; William H., born August 9, 1878; Florenz N., December 13, 1881; Eva M., born July 20, 1886, died at the age of seventeen years.

GAHDE, Charles W.—A typical German-American citizen, now living retired from active business life in the city of Springfield, Ill. He was born January 15, 1845, near Berlin, Germany, and received his education in his native land, there learning the trade of shoemaker. He is a son of John and Henrietta (Loe) Gaede, both born in Germany, who spent their entire lives in their native land. The father was a shoemaker and he and his wife had three sons and one daughter, those living, besides Charles W., being a son and daughter who reside in Germany.

Mr. Gaede followed the trade of a shoemaker until he was twenty years old, when he served a term in the German Army. In 1870 he came to the United States landing at New York City, thence came west to Ohio, a short time later to Springfield, Ill., and has since lived in that city or its immediate vicinity. He spent five years at farm work, since which time he has lived in the city. When he first came the Capital building was in process of construction, and he obtained work on it. For the past twenty-five years he has been in the employ of Oak Ridge Cemetery Company. He erected his present home on Monument Avenue in 1872, and is well known in that part of the city where he has many warm friends. He is a member of the Lutheran Church and in politics is a Republican.

Mr. Gaede was married in Springfield, August 35, 1872, to Christina Brueess, whose parents lived and died in Germany, where she was born, in July, 1845. To them he has been born five children: Gustie, wife of Charles Dallman, living in Minnesota; Bertha, wife of Sam Roberts, a mail-carrier of Springfield; Lena, wife of Frank Ahrens, a Lutheran Minister at Sabin, Minn.; Fred, living at home; and John, of Los Angeles, Cal. There are eight grandchildren in the family. Mr. Gaede is the owner of his residence and has been successful in his investments and other business ventures.

GAFFIGAN, Michael.—Ireland is well represented in the business life of Springfield, there being men from that land in almost every line of commercial and industrial activity. One who has attained more than the average amount of prosperity is Michael Gaffigan, one of the city's grocers. He was born in County Mayo, Ireland, November 5, 1843, a son of Patrick and Cecilia (Flanerry) Gaffigan, the former born in County Mayo, Ireland, as also was his wife. In 1851 the father came from his native land to Pennsylvania, where he found employment as a coal-miner. He had the misfortune to lose his wife in that State in 1854, but survived until September, 1870, when he too, passed away, aged fifty-seven years. In July of that year, he had come to Illinois, and the change did not appear to agree with him, as he died two months later. His wife remained in Ireland, with her four children, until the year 1853, when she joined her husband in Pennsylvania.
Michael Gallagher was educated in his native land, and attended school for a short time in Pennsylvania. When a mere boy he went to work in the coal mines, but in 1865 made a trip to Illinois, returning east the next year. During the following year he returned to Illinois and worked in LaSalle and Peoria at whatever he could find to do. In 1867, he came to Springfield, and in December, 1870, he opened up and went into a grocery business, which he has since conducted in a profitable manner. In addition to his business, he is also owner of the building in which it is conducted.

Mr. Gallagher was married in Springfield, Ill., in September, 1875, to Margaret Proctor, who was born in England. After her demise, he married in 1880 Margaret Hickey. The following children have been born to him: James, Tersa, Helen, Patrick, Lizzie; and Cecilia, deceased. Mr. Gallagher was brought up a Catholic, and has been faithful to his membership in that Church. Politically he is a Democrat. His business relations with the general public have been of a satisfactory character and he knows that they can depend upon him, and trust him accordingly. He enjoys a large trade, and knows how to furnish the people what they want at satisfactory prices.

GAINES, David, a highly respected and substantial resident of Springfield, enjoying the confidence of a grocery business, which he at No. 2039 East Clay Street, is a retired farmer and deserving of honor as a veteran of the great Civil War. He was born in Western Tennessee, July 18, 1834, a son of John and Polly (Smith) Gaines, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter in Tennessee. John Gaines came to the United States in early manhood and settled in Tennessee, where he was engaged in farm pursuits until the end of his life. He married there and his two children were born on the old homestead, the only survivor being David, of Springfield.

In the schools near his father's farm Mr. Gaines obtained his schooling, and farming became his occupation. In 1851 he moved to Illinois, settling in Jefferson County, where he resumed farming and continued until 1863, then enlisted for service in the Civil War. From Washington County, Ill., he entered Company I, Forty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which command he remained until the close of the war. He took part in a number of severe battles and did not escape all the dangers that attend war, being wounded by a shell at Nashville, Tenn. He was honorably discharged and mustered out at Paducah, Ky. After the war Mr. Gaines went to Missouri, where he visited for a time, but did not invest in farm land until after he returned to Washington County, Ill. After a few years of farm life there he sold to advantage and moved to Springfield in 1881, where he lived for a short time, then moved to Morrisonville, purchasing a residence there. In 1896 Mr. Gaines returned to Springfield and purchased his house on East Clay Street, together with other property, and this has remained his home.

Mr. Gaines was married in Tennessee, in July, 1856, to Miss Charlotte J. Marcrum, who was born in Kentucky, January 8, 1836, a daughter of Elijah and Hattie Marcrum, both of whom were natives of Kentucky, died on their farm in Allen County. Mr. and Mrs. Marcrum had thirteen children of whom have passed away except Mrs. Gaines and a brother, the latter of whom lives near Centralia, Ill. To Mr. and Mrs. Gaines eight children were born and four of these are living, namely: Anna, wife of Henry Turner, of Springfield; James, who lives in Oklahoma; Emma, who is the wife of Edward Goff, a plumber by trade, at Springfield; and Frank, who lives at home. There are seven living grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Gaines are members of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He is identified with the Republican party and belongs to the G. A. R. Post at Morrisonville. Mr. Gaines is a man who has won the esteem of his fellow citizens through uprightness of character and these neighborly qualities which help smooth the pathway of life.

GALLAGHER, Patrick (deceased).—Closely associated with the commercial development of Springfield are the names of many persons who deceased, to whom the city owes much in every way. Ned the parents came to the United States, locating in New York City. The father obtained employment in a brick yard and they spent the remainder of their lives in that city, dying there. They had children as follows: James, John, Mary, Ellen, Anne, Margaret, Ellen (II) and Patrick. The latter was fifteen years of age when the family emigration took place, and finished the education began in Ireland in his new home. About 1861 or 1862, he came to Springfield, and immediately recognized the future of that city, and decided to make it his permanent home. For the first seventeen years he was in the employ of the United States Express Company, during which time he carefully saved his money and was able, at the expiration of his service with the company, to embark in a grocery business on the southeast corner of Eleventh and Adams Streets. Here he continued until his death, gradually enlarging his business as trade necessitated and warranted. He was known over a wide territory as "the honest grocer," and held customers for years.

In 1871 Mr. Gallagher was married to Marla McCormick, daughter of Michael and Catherine HISTORY

(McCormick) Mrs. Gallagher was born in Limerick, Ireland, in 1859, and had the misfortune to lose her parents, who died in their native land. A brother and two sisters still reside there. She was a young girl, under twenty years of age, when she came to the United States with relatives. The little party landed in New York City, whence they came on to Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Gallagher became the parents of children as follows: Mary E., now Mrs. J. C. Wessenberger, of Springfield; James E., at home, having succeeded his father in the management of the store; John died in infancy; Catherine, Annie, Hugh and Margaret, all at home.

Mr. Gallagher was a member of the Roman Catholic Church from boyhood and was connected with the parish of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Springfield. The Democratic party had his best support from the time he cast his first vote. He was a genial, hearty man, whose honesty of purpose and thorough conception of right dealing was never questioned. He was fond of his home and family, and no man was every prouder of his children. He possessed in marked degree those excellent traits of character which distinguish the Irish race and make them prominent wherever they are found. Stanch in his friendships, he was loyal to those who needed him, and no man appealed to his sense of justice in vain. When he died, in 1905, there were many who felt that they had lost a warm, personal friend, and one that could not be replaced. There are too few men of such character left, for one like Mr. Gallagher not to be sadly missed, and his memory is kept green, not only in the hearts of his immediate family, but by those with whom he was in daily association in his business relations.

GALLIGAN, Bart.—The Springfield Bar has some eminent men, whose names are known all over the central part of the State, as fairly representative of all that is best in the legal profession. They are men whose caliber has been proven; who have gained their prominence by hard work and unremitting study, and who are permitted to practice in any court in the State. Among these able lawyers, one of those most deserving of mention is Bart Galligan, who was born in Fancy Creek Township, Sangamon County, Ill., April 4, 1859, a son of Bart Galligan and his wife, Ellen (Riley) Galligan. Both were born in County Cavan, Ireland, and brought to the vicinity of Toronto, Canada, when only six years of age. The father was brought by an uncle and the mother by an aunt. These childhood playmates grew up together and married, and for some time thereafter lived in their old home. In 1858 they emigrated to the United States and located in Fancy Creek Township, where the father still resides, although he lost his wife in 1905. He has always carried on farming, and has been important in his vicinity, holding various township offices, although he has had no desire for a public life. He is a consistent member of the Catholic Church, as was his wife. Eight children were born to this couple, seven of whom survive, Mr. Galligan, of this record, being the second in order of birth.

After finishing his district school course in Fancy Creek Township, Bart Galligan Jr. farmed for three years, then spent a year at Wesleyan University. Later, entering the university at Valparaiso, Ind., he took a scientific and law course, graduating in the Class of 1888. Directly following this, he located in Springfield, which has been his place of residence ever since. Mr. Galligan has built up a large law practice and has been connected with some of the most important jurisprudence in his part of the State. While a Republican in national matters, in local elections he believes in voting for the man rather than the party. Though his friends believe him well fitted for a number of offices within the gift of the people, he has never cared to accept nomination for any of them, preferring to devote himself to his profession.

In June, 1888, Mr. Galligan was united in marriage with Elizabeth Fortune, daughter of John Fortune. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Galligan: Virginia V., and Francis B., both attending school.

Mr. Galligan is a keen, shrewd, able lawyer, who thoroughly understands his profession, and is noted for his eloquence in presenting his cases. However, he does not depend upon this, but works them out in a clear, forcible, logical manner, that presents the salient points to the jury and insures a fair and just decision.

GALYEN, George E.—No more striking example of what a man can accomplish through the force of his own ability and perseverance, though the sheer strength of his determination to succeed, can be found in Sangamon County than that furnished by the career of George E. Galyen, of Pawnee, Ill., who in a few short years has raised himself from practical obscurity and humble circumstances to a place among the substantial men of his section and the office of chief executive of his town. Mr. Galyen was born in Sangamon County, May 12, 1874, a son of William R. and Harriett A. (Sanders) Galyen.

William R. Galyen was born March 15, 1844, in Smithville, Dekalb County, Tenn., and was married in Sangamon County, Ill., to Harriett A. Sanders, who was born in that county, August 10, 1853. Mr. Galyen resided in his native county until two years old, when he moved with his parents to Kentucky, but when thirteen years of age he went back to Tennessee, settling in Smith County. In 1861 he left home and joined a Confederate company at Dixon Spring, Tenn., went to Nashville, and on April 18th was ordered to Tomsdale, where the company was drilled until being mustered into the service May 18, 1861, as Company A, Eighth Tennessee Infantry, under Col. Fulton, Brig.-Gen. Daniel Donaldson and Div.-Gen. B. T. Cheatham. The company arrived at Manassas, Va., the day after the terrible battle at that place, and here Mr. Galyen first saw a dead soldier. On the trip to that point he had taken his first ride on a railroad train, riding on top of a box car and being compelled to lie flat to avoid being swept off when the train went through a tunnel. From Manassas the company went to Petersburg, Va., and then was ordered to West Virginia, Mr. Galyen doing picket duty most of the time. They finally took up winter quarters at Pocahontas. They went thence to Cheat Mountain, where Mr. Galyen first saw a man killed, a party of Confederates surprising a bunch of Union pickets playing cards, killing one of them and making the others prisoners. While camping on Cheat Mountain he could look down into the valley and see 15,000 Union soldiers camped there, and much excitement was caused in the camp on one occasion when a stamped-out Union house corner let the Southerners to think that the Federal troops were upon them, only later to find that a large bear had invaded the corral and caused the stampede. At this time Mr. Galyen first saw that famous general, Robert E. Lee. Mr. Galyen's company then went to Stanton and later to Beaufort, S. C., where they did picket duty on the coast until shelled by the gun-boats, then went to Shiloh, where they arrived the day after the main fight. The army then fell back to Corinth, Miss., remained for a month, then went to Tapelo and remained until September. They then went to Chattanooga by train, marching thence into Kentucky with Bragg's Command, and taking part in the great fight at Perryville, where 30,000 men on each side fought from eleven o'clock in the morning until dark, October 8, 1862. They then went to Cumberland Gap for the last time and next to Stone Mountain, where Mr. Galyen received a scalp wound, December 31, 1862. After the flight there, the whole army being engaged, the Southern forces fell back to Chattanooga and camped most of the summer of 1863 on the side of Missionary Ridge. Later they were ordered to Chickamanga and went thence back to Chattanooga, where November 23, 1863, Mr. Galyen's company was ordered to guard a bridge. The Union soldiers had reached there first, however, and just as the Confederates were within range opened fire, Mr. Galyen receiving a bullet in the leg that splintered the bone. He was taken to Atlanta, Ga., where he remained until 1864, and then was taken to Covington for two months and was retired from service for six months and sent to Fort Gaines, Ga., where he stayed until the winter of 1864, being then sent to Columbus Springs. The company then went to Macon, Ga., until the surrender of Wilson's Cavalry, and Mr. Galyen went to Nashville, where he was paroled in June, 1865. After the war he came to Sangamon County, Ill., and worked on various farms until his marriage, after which he started farming on his own account and so continued until 1890, when he retired and moved to Pawnee, where he was residing at the time of his death, January 16, 1910. His widow survives him and makes her home with her daughter in Pawnee. Mr. Galyen was one of the prominent men of Pawnee Township and was active in public matters, being one of the first members of the Township High School Board of Education, and served as Justice of the Peace and Assessor for many years. He was a Democrat in his political affairs and his religious belief was that of the Baptist Church.

George E. Galyen was educated in the public schools of Pawnee and lived at home until nineteen years of age. Until he was seventeen he engaged in farming, but at that time started to learn the trade of barber, at which he worked for two years. He was married in July, 1863, and went to Springfield, where he remained until winter, then came to Pawnee and opened a parlor of his own, conducting them with much success for ten years. In April, 1863, he sold out and went on the road, selling groceries for the E. C. Harley Grocery Company, of Dayton, Ohio. Several months later he became a clerk in a store in Pawnee, but two years afterward engaged in the real estate and insurance business, in which he has been engaged to the present time. He is identified with Twist Brothers Grain Company.

Mr. Galyen has always been a Democrat, and is strictly a Local Optionist, on which ticket he has been elected to fill various positions of honor and trust. He is now President of the Village Board, Township Treasurer and Vice-president of the Law and Order League. His fraternal connections are with the Masonic Lodge, of which he is Secretary, the Order of the Eastern Star and the Modern Woodmen of America. Religiously he is connected with the Presbyterian Church. In every walk of life Mr. Galyen has shown himself to be a man in whom the utmost confidence can be placed.

In Springfield, Ill., July 26, 1893, Mr. Galyen was married to Catalena Higgins, who was born December 10, 1873, in Sangamon County, daughter of Robert and Lydia (Stare) Higgins, the former born November 22, 1836, and died December 6, 1885, and the latter born June 14, 1838, and died March 21, 1910. To Mr. and Mrs. Galyen there have been born two children: Ozema, born in Pawnee in 1883, died in infancy; and Leroy E., born in Pawnee, March 25, 1885, is now ready for high school.

Gamble, Ezra, a retired carpenter living at Buffalo, Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County, was born in Franklin County, Pa., May 15, 1830, and is a son of Morrell R. and Hannah (Filson) Gamble, natives of Pennsylvania. The parents were farmers and spent their entire lives in Pennsylvania, the father dying at the age of forty-four years, and the mother also dying young. The Gamble family came originally from Scotland and the Filson family from Ireland. Morrell R. Gamble and his wife had seven children, of whom five were sons, and Ezra is the only surviving member.

Mr. Gamble was educated in his native county and during his boyhood worked on his father's farm until eighteen years of age, then began learning the trade of carpenter, which he followed in Pennsylvania for some years. He came West May 15, 1857, and lived for a time in Scott County, Ill. Two years later he moved to Sangamon County, and has since resided in Buffalo. Since coming to the village he has followed contracting in the vicinity, and in this connection has erected many residences, and has been successful financially. He has made a large number of friends during the many years he has lived at his present location and is considered a representative, useful citizen.

Mr. Gamble was married in Buffalo, January 7, 1861, to Mary Elizabeth Vlerbome, who was born in Butler County, Ohio. Her parents came to Sangamon County, Ohio, at an early day and located on a farm. Mrs. Vlerbome died in Sangamon County and her husband returned East and died in New Jersey. Mr. and Mrs. Vlerbome had five sons and four daughters. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gamble, of whom two survive: Jennie E., widow of William T. Hall, of Buffalo, and Anna, who lives at home. Mrs. Hall has two children, Lela E., with her mother, and Hazel, wife of Ernest Fullenwider, residing in Springfield. Mr. Gamble is a member of the Methodist Church and a member of its Board of Directors. In politics he is a Republican.

GARDNER, William P., a general farmer and stock raiser on Section 17, Gardner Township, was born in the house, now his home, June 13, 1854, son of John Gardner for whom the township was named. The latter was one of the commissioners employed in dividing the county into townships, and was thus honored. He was born June 21, 1805, in Trimble County, Ky., and grew to manhood. There he married Mary C. Duncan, born March 27, 1810. The Gardner family is of English extraction the founders of the family in America first settling in Virginia. The Duncons are of Scotch origin. The mother of Mrs. Gardner died when she was only six weeks old, and she was reared by an uncle, William Prior. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner remained in their old home until 1833, when they came to Sangamon County, and in January of the following year, settled in what is now Gardner Township, building a one-room house, at what was Hickory Point, on Prairie Creek. From time to time they enlarged their primitive house until it was one of the best in the township. Their nine children were as follows: Hiram E., born April 28, 1831, in Franklin County, Ky., died in August, 1903, vice-president of the Farmers National Bank of Springfield; Sarah A. born October 15, 1833, in Sangamon County, died August 12, 1908; Nannie C., born September 12, 1835, died April 10 1857 and is buried on the home place; John P., born July 5, 1839; Cruamer, born in 1841, died Aug. 3, 1845; James, born March 27, 1844, at Clarksville, Texas; Mary E. Gardner, born April 3, 1847, married John S. Berry, two children died in March 1857; Lucy M., born June 19, 1851, married W. T. Hurt; and W. P., of whom we write.

John Gardner was one of the representative men of the county, and one who was fitted for rounding out a pioneer community. He and Pater Cartwright were fast friends, and often worked together in effecting public changes. He was a strong Democrat, and was often returned to the Board of Commissioners. A devout Baptist, he was active in Church work, and lived out in his religious doctrines he believed. Charitable, broadminded, he never failed to give liberally of means and sympathy, and was affectionately called "Uncle John" by those who knew and loved him. His death occurred February 11, 1868, and at the time he was the owner of 3,000 acres of excellent farm land. His widow survived him until March, 1882. She was reared in the Methodist faith, but after coming here, she and her husband joined the Christian Church. These two excellent people reared up their children in the fear of the Lord, and those who came within their home were expected to live according to their standards. Of these perhaps the most noted is Judge McGuire, who affectionately remembers their kindness to him during the several years he lived with them.

William P. Gardner attended district and Springfield high school, but when sixteen years old, left school as he was the only one of the sons then at home with his mother, she having been left a widow two years before. The lad shouldered the heavy responsibilities until she died in 1882. On September 24, 1873, he was married to Mary R. Harrison, born December 20, 1853, daughter of Simeon and Mary (Renshaw) Harrison, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Peck. Mrs. Harrison is living with Mrs. Gardner. Two of the Harrison sisters have married brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner became the parents of three children: William R., born January 13, 1883, married Mamie Fugate, on June 22, 1905, issue Mary P. born September 4, 1906, and Harriet R., born May 6, 1909; Lee D., born August 20, 1884, married Nina Moberly of Chicago, and is now employed by the Stock Yard National Bank at Kansas City, Mo.; Hiram E., born September 30, 1889, living at home. The eldest son is operating the old farm. The children have been given a good education, and assisted in their settlement in life.

For fifty-seven years, Mr. Gardner has lived in the township bearing the same name as his own, and is one of its most representative men. Many are the township offices he has filled with ability, including a seven years' occupancy of the assessorship. He is a member of the Christian Church, and his wife of the Methodist GARNER, Thomas G., a prosperous and well-known farmer of Section 29, Fancy Creek Township, has lived on his present farm about thirty-five years. He was born in Williams Township, Sangamon County, April 27, 1866, and is a son of Anderson S. and Elizabeth (Whitefoot) Garner, the former born in Tennessee and the latter in Washington County, Md. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, came to Illinois in the early fifties and settled in Williams Township, purchasing a farm near Sherman. Some years later he removed to a farm a half-mile south of the farm where his son Thomas now lives, lived there six years and in 1870 bought the farm now owned by the son, where he erected the log house which is still standing, one of the few of its kind now in existence in Sangamon County. He died there in 1877. He and his wife were married in 1863 and became parents of three children: Thomas, subject of this sketch; Mary J. died in 1891; Rhoda M., living with her brother, Elizabeth Garner came to Sangamon County in an early day, and her father, who was a native of Maryland, died there. Her death occurred in 1904.

The education of Thomas G. Garner was acquired in his native county and he early began to help his father with the farm work. He has lived on the home farm since 1876, inheriting it at the death of his parents, and owns forty acres of good farm land. He is an enterprising and energetic farmer and his efforts have been rewarded by success in a gratifying degree. The parents were members of the United Brethren Church, and he now belongs to the Methodist Church.

Mr. Garner was married in Sangamon County, February 8, 1889, to Minnie B. Keeth, born in Ohio, August 22, 1869, and brought to Sangamon County at the age of one year. Her father, John Keeth, was born in Maryland, emigrated thence to Pennsylvania, where he lived several years, then removed to Ohio and carried on farming for some time, coming to Sangamon County in the 'seventies, and settling on a farm near Sherman, where he and his wife still reside. He served four years as a soldier in the Civil War. He and his wife had one son and four daughters and one daughter is deceased, the others being: Samuel; Mrs. Elizabeth Slaughter, of Maysville, Mo.; Benjamin, living with his father near Sherman; Mrs. Garner. Two children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Garner, one who died in infancy, and Thomas X. Mr. Garner is an intelligent, useful citizen and actively interested in the public welfare, being ready to support any worthy cause.

GARREN, John W.—Probably no section of Illinois responds more generously to the care expended upon it than Sangamon County, and one of the farmers who has proven this through long, prosperous years, is John W. Garren, of Section 12, Cooper Township. He was born in Indiana, April 9, 1847, a son of Andrew and Mary E. (Foutz) Garren, natives of Indiana. They were farming people who came to the southern part of the State in 1848. There the father engaged in farming, in the vicinity of Centralla, but later went to Macon County, and, after spending a year there, to Marion County. There he lived, engaged in farming, until his death, in 1891. The mother died in 1873. There were five sons and four daughters in the family, of whom the following survive: Theodore and Charles are farmers of Cooper Township; Scott is a farmer of Marion County; Mrs. Julia Malcolm, Mrs. Elizabeth Markam and Mrs. Adaline Garren, live in Marion County; and John.

John W. Garren was educated in Marion County, Ill., and spent his boyhood in helping on the farm. In 1868 he came to Sangamon County, settling in Cooper Township, where he hought thirty-five acres of land. This is in a good section of cultivation. The mother, great-grandfather, Jesse Sump, was a soldier during the American Revolution, serving under General Washington, and was wounded in the battle of the Brandywine.

On November 9, 1868, Mr. Garren was married in Jefferson County, Ill., to Martha J. Tate, born in Tennessee, June 1, 1844, daughter of John and Adaline Tate, natives of South Carolina, and Randolph County, N. C. Later the father moved to Tennessee, where he lived until his death, in 1857. His widow survived him until 1896. There were ten children in the family, and of them Mrs. Garren is the survivor. Mr. and Mrs. Garren have no children but have an adopted daughter, Fern Barbre, whom they are rearing as their own.

Mr. Garren belongs to Union Chapel of the Methodist Church, contributing liberally towards its support. In political faith he is a Democrat. Both he and his wife are much beloved among their neighbors, for they are good, honest, kindly people, whose charity and Christianity are put to everyday use.

Garvey, J. Walter, who owns one of the finest herds of Holstein cattle in the State of Illinois, is a whole-souled, kindly man and a prominent citizen of Auburn Township. He is a native of the county, born at Mechanicsburg November 7, 1877, son of John Garvey, who is one of the leading farmers of the vicinity of that village. J. W. Garvey spent his early life on his father's farm, and attended the district school until about eighteen years of age, then went to Eureka College, where he took a special business course, which he finished in 1898, after which he returned to the home farm and took charge of 240 acres of same, beginning life on his own account. He began breeding pure-blood Poland-China hogs and became very successful in this line, making a creditable showing at the State Fair, 1905, winning a championship with "American Special." In 1904, he won a First and Grand Champion at the Missouri State Fair and one year later, won first prize at the Illinois State Fair with "Lucky" Charro." The following year he won first prize at Columbus, Ohio. He has been one of the leading breeders of those hogs in central Illinois, and although still comparatively a young man, has won remarkable success. He has exhibited in Missouri, Ohio, Illinois and other States with excellent results, and in December, 1905, he took possession of a farm on Section 29, Auburn Township.

Mr. Garvey has 100 acres of land in his farm and has made many improvements. He has a comfortable home and good outbuildings, and his buildings for housing his cattle and hogs are among the best in the township. He began paying special attention to breeding fine Holstein cattle in 1907, and in the interests of this industry visited Indiana, Ohio and New York, where he selected his stock. He purchased Pontiac Jewel Batter Boy, at the head of his herd, one of the finest animals in the State, a native of Utica, N. Y., and bred by W. A. Matheson, one of the best judges of cattle in that State. Mr. Garvey purchased other animals for his herd from C. F. Hunt of Syracuse, taking seven of the best cows in his herd; purchased two cows from T. H. Russell of Ohio; and three head from John Sugar, of Marion, and, Mr. Garvey has a herd of about eighty heifers, of this strain and now has a herd of 70. He has had buyers from several States and has won many prizes on his cattle. He has had a return of 32.7 pounds of butter in seven days from one cow, Molly. He has a dairy 60x100 feet, with the latest equipment and appliances, and has provided the most sanitary conditions in every respect. Although he has not had the advantage of a university education he is well versed in matters pertaining to the management of a dairy, and his opinions are often sought by the faculty of the State universities. He has written many articles on this subject and also on the subject of the proper selection of a dairy herd. Mr. Garvey has devoted his active life to agricultural pursuits and his success is the result of his most careful study of every detail of his business.

Mr. Garvey was married October 10, 1900, to Miss Florence May Moore, who was born in Waverly, Ohio, October 18, 1881, and came to Sangamon County with her parents in 1883. She is a daughter of M. K. Moore, a prominent citizen of Springfield, residing at 835 South Park Avenue. Mr. Moore dates his ancestry back to the royal families of Germany through his mother. Mr. Garvey and his wife have two children, Florence Irene, born July 30, 1903, and Frances Mildred, September 26, 1904.

Mr. Garvey is an educated and cultured woman and is a graduate of Williamsville High School and of the Bettie Stuart Institute, of Springfield. She formerly won many medals in oratorical contests while attending school. She has social gifts as well, and is popular among her many friends. She is an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, while her husband belongs to the Christian Church.
Fraternity he belongs to the Masonic Lodge at Virden and to the Knights of Pythias, of Springfield. Politically he is a Republican. He is a representative of the class of enterprising young American citizens interested in the public welfare and ready to advance any worthy cause. He takes a leading part in the conclave of his party but has never had political aspirations of his own. He has the fullest respect of all who know him and is a Christian man and a gentleman in the fullest sense.

GARVEY, Patrick (deceased), who for some years prior to his death lived retired from active pursuits in Springfield, Ill., was a useful, upright citizen, who had the esteem and good will of all who knew him. He was a native of County Mayo, Ireland, born in March, 1852, son of John and Mary (Ratchford) Garvey, both also born in County Mayo, where their entire lives were spent, and the father was a farmer.

The boyhood of Patrick Garvey was spent on his father's farm and he was educated in the country schools of his native place. He lived with his parents until reaching his majority, then, believing he could better his condition by leaving his native soil, sailed for America in 1873, locating in Sangamon County, Ill., where he became a successful farmer, energetic and ambitious and was able to retire from active life a few years before his death. He was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and fraternally belonged to the Western Catholic Union. He was a firm Republican in politics, although taking no very active part in public affairs, being absorbed in his farming. He was a man of cheerful disposition, a kind friend, neighbor and husband, and won many warm friends.

Mr. Garvey was married at Bloomington, Ill., February 13, 1876, to Miss Annie O'Brien, born in County Mayo, Ireland, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Welsh) O'Brien, both also natives of that county. Children were born of this union as follows; John, an electrician in the employ of Rachford Brothers, of Springfield, is unmarried and lives with his mother; Mary, a dressmaker, unmarried, and living at home; Joseph, connected with a ranch, lives in California and is unmarried; Anna married Frank Maley, a business man of Springfield, and they have no children. Mr. Garvey passed away at his home, which is now owned by his widow, at 118 North Fourteenth Street, in 1905, and was buried in Calvary Cemetery.

Mrs. Garvey is a member of the Immaculate Conception Roman-Catholic Church.

GATHARD, Malon.—Many of the most substantial men of Sangamon County are now living retired from farming activities in one or other of the towns which surround Springfield. There they find congenial surroundings and pleasant friends, among whom to spend their declining years. A representative of this class is Malon Gathard, of Riverton. He was born in Hamilton County, Ohio, May 27, 1836, a son of William and Matilda (Hogan) Gathard, both natives of New Jersey. At an early day these parents came from New Jersey to Ohio, farming there until 1848, when with their two sons, Malon and Elijah, they came to Illinois, locating in Round Prairie, Sangamon County. They farmed there for twelve years, then moved to Springfield where they spent four years. They then settled on a farm in Fork Prairie, which continued their home until death claimed them, the father dying in 1871 and the mother in 1881, both being over eighty years of age. There were eight sons and two daughters in the family, those surviving being: William, of Germantown, Ind.; Elijah, of Fork Prairie, and Malon.

Mr. Gathard was educated in the country schools of Sangamon County, working during boyhood for his father on the home farm. After the war broke out, he enlisted at Camp Butler in Company B, Sixty-eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Stuart, serving for three months, when he was discharged, and re-enlisted in Company E, One Hundred and Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, from which he was discharged after a service of one hundred days, and mustered out at Camp Butler. After war was over he resumed farming, lived at Round Prairie for several years, then moved to Riverton, where for fifteen years he was in the employ of the Clear Lake Ice Company. Since 1892 he has been living retired in Riverton. He is a member of Riverton Post, G. A. R. His religious affiliations are with the Christian Church, of which he is a member, but his wife belongs to the Methodist Church.

Mr. Gathard was married in Rochester, Ill., December 21, 1865, to Amanda Lawyer, born in Round Prairie, November 12, 1848, a daughter of Hiram Lawyer, who was born in Ohio but his wife was a native of Round Prairie, her maiden name being Nancy Trotter. Mr. Lawyer came to Illinois at an early day, locating at Round Prairie, where he farmed until his death, passing away April 13, 1891, his wife preceding him, dying March 25, 1884. There were four sons and five daughters in the Lawyer family, those surviving being: Mrs. Gathard; Eliza, wife of James Burch, of Riverton; William, a farmer south of Riverton, and Eva, wife of William Beck, of Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Gathard became the parents of eight children, six daughters and two sons, six of whom survive: Emma, wife of James Moore, a farmer near Springfield; Archie, of Middle- town, Ill.; Matilda, wife of Henry Bout, of Riverton; Eva, wife of Robert Ruby, of Springfield; Ada, wife of Manuel Raylott, of Riverton, and Jessie, of Riverton. There are twenty-nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild in the family.

Mr. Gathard owns the comfortable family residence in Riverton, and is in receipt of a pension, which does not compensate him for what he has endured all his life as a result of exposure and hardships while in service. While many gave up their lives on the battlefields, they were not the greatest sufferers. The real heroes of the Civil War are those who lived, enduring, through years of suffering, the ailments which resulted from forced marches, poor and insufficient food, exposure, and other hardships. Such veterans are deserving of distinguished honor and material benefits as well.

GATTON, Walter T., a successful farmer and breeder of Holstein-Frisian cattle, living on Section 34, Woodside Township, Sangamon County, is a native of that township, born February 5, 1852, and although comparatively a young man, has shown great enterprise and excellent business judgment. Mr. Gatton is a son of Walter T. Sr. and Mary (Whitehurst) Gatton, the former born in Woodside Township, September 16, 1854, and the latter born August 1, 1856. Walter T. Gatton, Sr. spent his entire life on Oakwood Stock Farm and was an expert in the cattle business, his father having come to Sangamon County from Hardin County, Ky. He died March 4, 1896, and his wife April 22, 1906.

Walter T. Gatton Jr. was educated in the public school and in Springfield Business College, and as a boy was fond of hunting and other outdoor sports. He began to assist his father with the duties on the home farm as soon as he was old enough and was always much interested in stock. He has done much to advance the interests of stockmen in Sangamon County and has a fine herd of pure-bred stock, having exhibited cattle at the State Fairs and won several premiums. He is also greatly interested in hogs, and is a prosperous farmer as well. He has the entire confidence and esteem of his neighbors and is well-known throughout the county in connection with his business. In political views he is a Democrat and he joined the Masonic order in 1907. He belongs to Tyrian Lodge No. 353 A. F. and A. M.; Springfield Council No. 4; R. A. M., Elwood Commander No. 6, and Sangamo Lodge of Perfection. He and his wife belong to the Christian church and are interested in many worthy causes.

Mr. Gatton was married in Springfield, June 20, 1906, to Eva C. White, born in Mason County, Ill. In 1884, daughter of Elbert and Anna (Scott) White, the former born in West Virginia, March 21, 1854, and the latter in Illinois, April 5, 1855. Mr. White came to Illinois at the age of ten years, and when he reached manhood engaged in farming, which he continued many years, then retired from active life. Mr. Gatton and his wife own a very pleasant home and a farm of 194 acres.

GAUL, George M. (deceased).—There are certain staple articles which have been necessary to mankind from time immemorial, which no innovations could displace, no inventions dispose of, and these facts have made the trade of broom-making one of the time-honored occupations. In the ranks of this profession have been found men of the highest character and integrity, and one who made it his life work was the late George M. Gaul, in whose death Springfield lost one of its best citizens. He was born in August, 1855, in Germany, a son of George W. and Katie Gaul, the former a molder. Mr. Gaul's parents died in Germany when he was nine years old and he resided and attended school until he had reached the age of twenty years, when he came to America, settling first in New York and later removing to Springfield. His education had been begun in Germany and he also attended high school in New York, but after coming to Springfield devoted all of his time to the trade of broom-making, establishing a large and profitable business, with which he was connected right up to the time of his death. He was a Republican in politics, but never cared for public preferment, nor would he consent to become a member of any fraternal order. His religious connection was with the Gethsemane Lutheran Church. Mr. Gaul was married in Sangamon County, Ill., March, 1887, to Catherine Haritt, who was born in Germany in 1846, and to this union there were born ten children: George Peter, John, Adam, Thomas, William, Elizabeth Cummins, Emma Walz, Annie Carey, Caroline and Katie, residing at home. John and Thomas have died. The family is still prominent and Mr. Gaul is remembered as a man of integrity, whose friends were many and whose enemies were few.

GEDMAN, Charles. — America has long been the refuge of those from foreign lands who are oppressed by their own governments. Some of the best citizens we have are those who have thus sought the religious and political freedom denied them elsewhere. Springfield is fortunate in having many such men, and among them, an excellent example of what a foreigner can accomplish in this country, if he is intelligent and willing to work and learn, is Charles Gedman. Mr. Gedman was born in Russia, August 19, 1870, a son of Michael and Rosie (Gemba) Gedman, born in the same place as their son. The father was a farmer, who died in 1887, but his wife survives, residing in Russia. They had two sons and three daughters, who, with the exception of one daughter, came to America. The family are all Catholics. Mr. Gedman was fortunate in possessing an educated mother, who taught him in his youth and implanted in his heart the desire for acquiring more knowledge. He speaks Russian, Polish, Lithuanian, English and Bohemian, all learned from contact with men. In addition, he writes English well and reads fluently. While living in Russia he was a miner, but, believing he could do better in America, he came over in 1893 and located in Chicago. There he found employment in different lines, until 1895, when he came to Springfield to begin working in the coal mines. This was his occupation for some years, until he embarked in a coal business, July 1, 1902. His previous experience has served him well and he has developed a large and constantly growing trade.

Mr. Gedman was married in Springfield, October 30, 1890, to Emelia Valtoncys, born in Russia, where her parents died. She has a brother and sister in America, and came in 1899, to join Mr. Gedman. They had been sweethearts in their native land, and one of his reasons for leaving was to prepare a home for her. Two children have been born to them, Julia, attending St. Mary's Academy, and John. Mr. Gedman belongs to St. Vincent De Paul's Church of Springfield, being a consistent Catholic. He is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Society, Eagles and the Lithuanian Citizens Club, and has belonged to the Guards of Grand Duke Vittaugh. Independent in politics, he votes for the men and principles he believes best suited to secure the interests of the people. His success is something of which he has every reason to be proud, for he is essentially a self-made man, and one who has had to struggle hard for all he possesses. It is such men who form the backbone of the nation and support it in any emergency.

GEHLMAN, Samuel Henry.—The Gehlman family has been identified with the progress and development of Springfield, Ill., since 1849, when the father of Samuel Henry Gehlman located there and established himself in business as a contractor. Samuel H. Gehlman was born in Petersburg, Menard County, Ill., May 21, 1851, son of Ernest F. and Mary (Sldener) Gehlman. E. F. Gehlman was for thirty years a successful contractor and erected some of the largest and best stores and residences of the older portion of Springfield. In Company with his son, S. H. Gehlman, he erected the main building of the Illinois State University, at Champaign, Ill.

Samuel H. Gehlman was educated in the public schools of Springfield, and after leaving school became employed as bookkeeper and clerk. He worked some time in company with his father, but has now established himself in the real estate business on his own account, and has met with gratifying success. He has always been a Republican in politics, and fraternal is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Order of Elks. For the past forty years Mr. Gehlman has been a member of the Presbyterian Church, and he is interested in every measure for the public benefit. He takes an active interest in local politics and public affairs and is an enterprising citizen. He has spent most of his life in Springfield, where he has a reputation for business sagacity and reliability, and has a large number of friends.

Mr. Gehlman was married, September 30, 1872, to Miss Nettie L. Lasswell, who was born December 5, 1851, daughter of John Lasswell, who was born in Sangamon County and spent his entire life there. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gehlman, namely: Virginia Mary, May 23, 1874; Howard L., December 16, 1876; Janetta, January 30, 1887; John Alexander, August 30, 1892. Mrs. Gehlman died November 26, 1906. The family reside at 707 South Douglas Avenue, Springfield.

GEHRMANN, Charles A., is now living retired from active life in his pleasant home at 1021 North Third Street, Springfield, Ill., where he has about three acres of ground, laid out in a beautiful park. The place is adorned with ornamental trees, flowering shrubs, choice fruit trees, and with giant forest trees rising in an ancient grandeur. Evergreens, some sixty feet high, spread their dark green branches over the extensive lawn, and benches underneath invite one to repose, while admiring the beautiful prospect. The house contains many original paintings, some from Mr., Gehrmann's own brush and some executed by his children. The home contains a large library and there are various musical instruments which show evidence of daily use. It is a model home, with every comfort and many luxuries.

Mr. Gehrmann is a native of Nordhausen, Germany, born August 1, 1853, son of Frederick Augustus and Christiana Gehrmann. His father was born in Nordhausen and his mother in Haynrode, Germany, he August 24, 1804, and she January 6, 1811. They owned a farm at Nordhausen and were parents of four children, of whom but two are living: Charles A., of this sketch, and Theodore A., who has two sons, Dr. Adolph G. and Felix G. Dr. Adolph G. Gehrmann is connected with the Columbia Laboratory, of Chicago, and Felix G. is a large buyer in the stock yards in that city. Frederick A. Gehrmann and his wife died in Germany.

The boyhood and early youth of Charles A. Gehrmann were spent in his native country, where he received an excellent education and a thorough training for business, becoming a clerk in one of the leading dry goods stores of Potsdam, and later being employed by Herman Gerson, of Berlin, where his knowledge of the English and French languages brought him into contact with the foreign customers, especially the trade of Russia. On one occasion he became the recipient of a fine gold watch from the Empress of Russia in acknowledgment of services rendered. Having a desire to see the world, he made arrangements to enter the employ of a London house, but on reaching Hamburg altered his plans and, contrary to the wishes of his parents, came to America. He tried to buy a ticket on the ill-fated "Austria," but finding them all sold, he and a friend came over in another vessel, the trip consuming six weeks. The first news he heard on his arrival in New York was of the burning of the "Austria" in mid-ocean, but ten persons being saved of about one thousand on board. Mr.
Gehrmann spent some months very pleasantly, traveling through the northern part of the country and going as far as the source of the Mississippi, where he found excellent hunting ground, and visiting the larger cities of the region. He finally located in Springfield in 1838. The primitive condition in which he found it in that place, as compared with some of the larger cities he had visited, aroused his interest and convinced him it would be a good location for a business. He did not believe in spending his life as a clerk, and to those who later worked under him he would say, "Save one thousand dollars; accomplish this and we will talk about your future." Many who followed his advice are today rich and prosperous merchants, either in Springfield or elsewhere. He believes a clerk should have an ambition to become proprietor of some business of his own, and has helped many to realize such an ambition.

By close attention to the needs of his business and work and liberal dealing, Mr. Gehrmann built up an extensive dry-goods trade, at No. 113 on the west side of The Square. In 1852 he bought out the old John Williams dry-goods store, at No. 507 on the north side of The Square, which he occupied until the purchase of his place on the west side. He was able to mark the business up during this time, having at that time many warm friends, who gave him their entire respect and esteem. He left the business world with the good will of all. In 1876 he became a prominent member of the Merchants' and Shippers' Association, of Springfield, which was largely instrumental in securing an Interstate Railroad Commission.

He was for eighteen years a member of the Springfield Board of Education, and was the originator of the idea of a training school for manual labor in the schools of the city, which has been so successfully and thoroughly installed there. It began with four pupils and now has about one hundred thirty-five, some of its graduates having won distinction in industrial discoveries and projects. He believes in the necessity of manufacturing goods at home and strongly advises the training of home talent into industrial and productive work, thus doing away with the necessity of "buying brains" from outside. He is a Mason, being affiliated with Elwood Commandery No. 6, K. T., and also belongs to Capital Lodge No. 14, Knights of Pythias. In 1875 Mr. Gehrmann was made an honorary member of the Governor's Guard, which had been founded the previous year. W. D. Richardson was President and E. S. Johnson Commander of same.

April 12, 1862, Mr. Gehrmann married Miss Minnie Jahnke, a resident of Springfield, who was born in Berlin, Germany, June 23, 1844. She accompanied her parents to the United States when she was quite young. She departed this life October 31, 1886, leaving five children, namely: Charles A., a professor of chemistry and a mining engineer, owns several mines in Colorado and Nevada; Clara M. mar-ried F. W. Sutton, of Kenilworth, Ill.; Ella G., Adele and Paul M. The family are members of the German Lutheran Church and highly esteemed in social circles. Mrs. Gehrmann was much beloved by all who knew her, being of a kind and loving disposition and one of those faithful women whose chief pleasure in life consists in making the home a place of comfort and peace for husband and children, and who have always a kind word for the unfortunate and a smile for those who are struggling against adverse circumstances. Mr. Gehrmann has a brother, Theodore A., who is a retired business man of Chicago; a cousin, Charles G., of Montclair, N. J.; and another cousin, C. W. Klemm, of Bloomington, Ill.

Mr. Gehrmann is now over seventy-six years old, but has never abused his body by the use of liquor or by other bad habits, and is in complete possession of all his mental and physical faculties. He greatly enjoys watching boys at their fishing and likes to care for his garden in which he takes great pride. He has great love for his native country and takes much comfort in his linguistic knowledge, through which, to use his own words, "The whole world lies before me, and it is satisfactory to answer the old question 'Why?' quickly and correctly."

He is fond of fishing and has written several poems along this line for local German papers, many of which have been translated into English. One of these, "Bob White," which he considers one of his best, was suggested by scenes in Sangamon County. His wise, temperate manner of living was instilled into his mind by his grandfather, who reared him carefully and strictly, and there is no period of his life upon which he looks back with regret or with the feeling that he would have done well to act or speak in a manner other than he did.

GIBSON, David L., an enterprising and public spirited citizen of Springfield, Ill., may always be counted on to do his share in promoting any movement which is for the general welfare of the public. Mr. Gibson was born in Mercer County, Ky., September 21, 1840, son of James B. and Fannie Violett Gibson, the former a native of Owen County, Ky., born in 1805, and the latter of Virginia. Mr. Gibson proved himself to be a brave and faithful soldier and in the performance of duty participated in the battles of Atlanta, Franklin, Nashville, Falligh, Salisbury, Knoxville, and many others. He was with Sherman’s army. Mr. Gibson is reasonably proud of his record and won the highest esteem of his comrades. He belongs to Stephen son Post G. A. R. Upon his discharge from the army he returned to Clinton. In 1872 he moved to Kansas, thence to Missouri in the same year, and returned to Illinois in 1874, having since lived in Sangamon County. Mr. Gibson was married in Macon County, Ill., January 25, 1869, to Miss Jennie Simpson, born in Sangamon County, Oct. 25, 1850, daughter of Jordan and Clarissa (Sayer) Simpson, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of New Jersey. Six children blessed this union, namely: Lydia B., born September 14, 1869; Emma, Aug. 27, 1870; Grace, November 13, 1883; George William, born March 3, 1874; died November 20, 1894; Nellie, born 1876, died in March, 1879. Mr. Gibson is a man who takes great interest in the welfare of his family and friends, and is a favorite among his acquaintances on account of his cheerful disposition and sterling traits of character. He is genuinely liked by all who have had dealings with him and has won many personal friends in Springfield. He lives in a very comfortable home at 1118 North West Grand Avenue.

GIBSON, John T., a retired teamster living just outside the city of Springfield, is a veteran of the Civil War and is well known as a useful, public-spirited citizen. He was born in Hamilton, Ohio, son of Hiram and Mary Ann (Miller) Gibson, the father born in Kentucky, in 1818, and the mother in Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1820. Hiram Gibson was a blacksmith by trade and he and his wife came to Illinois in 1855, settling at Greenup, Cumberland County, Ill., where they lived two years, then located at Charleston, Coles County, where the father died in 1863, being buried at that place. Mrs. Gibson moved to Vandalia, Ill., in the spring of 1866, lived there fourteen years, then moved to Springfield and lived there until her death, in 1891. She is buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

The education of John T. Gibson was received in the public schools of Illinois, and the first one he attended was held in a log building. He lived at home until the death of his father. In 1862 Mr. Gibson enlisted in Company A, Fifth Illinois Cavalry, remaining two months in Camp Butler, January 13, 1863, they left for Pilot Knob, Mo., where they joined their regiment. Their first serious engagement was at Vicksburg, and they spent about sixty days on this campaign. After the surrender of Pemberton, July 4, 1863, they moved on to Big Black River, where they took part in a fight, spent a short time at Champion Hills, and had a three days’ engagement at Jackson, Miss. They went on to Meridian, then came back to Vicksburg and spent about two months there, went on to Memphis, Tenn., where they remained about two months, then went on to Natchez, Miss., where there was some skirmishing. At the close of the Meridian campaign they went to Alexandria, La., thence to Hempstead, Tex., where they remained a couple of months, then got orders to be mustered out and returned to Camp Butler, Ill., where they received their honorable discharge in October, 1865. Mr. Gibson served ably and faithfully and was never captured, but was wounded at the Battle of Big Black River and spent three months in the hospital. Upon his return, at the close of the war, he engaged in teaming and built up a good business. He now lives retired in his home at the northeastern limits of Springfield. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and is a Republican. In 1900 he was elected to the office of Constable of Springfield Township. He was born May 23, 1848, and was only a boy when he enlisted in the service of his country.

Mr. Gibson was married at Charleston, Ill., October 26, 1866, to Miss Mary E. Bartholomew, who was born in Hocking County, Ohio, March 2, 1844, daughter of David and Rachel Bartholomew, who came to Illinois in 1859. They had eleven children, of whom four are now living. GIESE, Gustav, a substantial and enterprising German-American citizen of Springfield, Ill., has resided in his present home at 1104 East Laurel Street, since 1854, and during that time has witnessed many changes and improvements in the community. Mr. Giese is a native of a village in Prussia, Germany, born October 23, 1843, and spent his early life in his native country, on his father’s farm and in the German army. He is a son of John and Annie (Sailer) Giese, both natives of Germany, who were lifelong residents of their native country, where both died. John Giese served under King William in the Prussian Army. He and his wife had seven children.

The education of Gustav Giese was acquired in his native village and in 1866 he entered the Prussian Army, under King William, serving two years. He again enlisted in 1871, serving another two years, after which he sailed for America, landing in New York June 7, 1873. He spent but a short time in New York, then removed to Springfield, which has since been his home. He worked three years in the brick yard of Herman Master, then entered the employ of the North Shaft Coal Company, where he remained twenty-seven years. For the past seven years he has been retired from more active labor and has been engaged in gardening; in which line he has met with gratifying success. He has always been industrious and thrifty and has been fortunate in his investments, now owning his home and other city property. Mr. Giese and his wife are well known in Springfield, where they have a large number of personal friends.

GIGER, Henry Douglas (deceased).—Faithful service as a public official is more rare than it ought to be, and consequently deeply appreciated whenever found. The late Henry Douglas Giger, who for nine years was Chief Deputy of County Clerk Opal, of Sangamon County, was a man against whose public and private life no word of censure could ever be uttered. He was a native of the county, having been born on a farm in Cooper Township, September 18, 1861, a son of Benjamin Giger. The latter was born on the same farm, in January, 1827, his father Henry Giger, having been among the very early settlers of that part of the State. Benjamin Giger died on the homestead, October 14, 1889, having been a constant member of the First Methodist Church at Buckhart for many years. He was twice married, his first wife having been Margaret Kirk, who died when Henry Douglas Giger was only seven years old. He was the youngest of the three children she bore her husband, the others being: Luella, who died at the age of four years, and Edward, now living on the home farm. The second wife of Benjamin Giger was Mary Johnson, who survives him, making her home in Springfield.

Henry Douglas Giger received an excellent education, attending the public schools of his neighborhood and Brook's Institute of Springfield, and being reared to farm work at the same time. On November 24, 1857, he married Ida McCune, of Rochester, daughter of the late John McCune, who was born in Kentucky, but came to Illinois in young manhood, locating on a farm which his father had entered. His death occurred in Rochester, in September, 1871. His wife was Jane Baker, a most estimable lady. After marriage Mr. Giger taught school several terms and, becoming prominent in politics, served as Township Treasurer and Supervisor, at the same time continuing his farm work. When appointed Chief Deputy by County Clerk Opal, Mr. Giger moved to Springfield, where he built a comfortable home, and in it his death occurred, on August 28, 1897. Like his father, he died firm in the faith of the Methodist Church, of which he had long been an active and valued member. In politics he was a stanch Democrat, upholding party principles upon all occasions. Fraternally he was an Odd Fellow and a Woodman. Mrs. Giger and their children are: Gertrude, now Mrs. Roy Cameron, of Springfield; Frank C., a student of the high school; Eva and Agnes, both at home, survive him.

Faithful to the duties of his office, a kind father and devoted husband, Mr. Giger's loss was deeply felt by the whole community, for such men are not easily spared. His absence to his office as well as those to his church brought him into contact with many, and none failed to find him accommodating and loyal to what he believed were the best interests of all concerned.

GILBERT, A. D. (deceased), who served nearly eighteen years as Postmaster of Illinolopolis, Ill., for several years conducted a general store in that village, and was well known and highly esteemed in his part of Sangamon County. He was well known in church and Masonic circles and was a man who readily made friends and retained their good will. He was a Christian and a gentleman, and his memory is tenderly revered by his family. He left a widow, three children and several grandchildren. He was born in Portage County, Ohio, April 10, 1828, a son of Jabez and Olive (Daniels) Gilbert, the former born in Connecticut and the latter in Massachusetts. The parents lived on a farm in Ohio, where both died, and of their six children all are deceased. The father of Olive Daniels was a soldier in the Revolution.

A. D. Gilbert was educated in Hiram College, in his native State, and worked for his father on the farm as soon as he was old enough. At the age of seventeen years he began teaching school, and after spending one year at this profession in Ohio came to the southern part of Illinois and taught there one year, then came to Sangamon County and taught for some time in the Lick Creek and Sugar Creek Schools, spending his summers at farm work. While teaching between Riverton and Dawson his future wife was one of his pupils. In 1868 he engaged in mercantile business in Illiopolis and the following year received the appointment for the office of Postmaster, which he filled seventeen years and a half. He also conducted a store for two years previous to his death, which occurred in 1904. The family have made their home in the house they now occupy for forty-one years. Mr. Gilbert served many years as School Director and in politics was a Republican. He was a member of the Christian Church and the Masons. He became prominent in his community and always took an active interest in the cause of education and progress. He was a man of superior intelligence and good judgment and a most useful citizen.

Mr. Gilbert was married in Clear Lake Township, September 14, 1858, to Nancy Harbert, born near Lafayette, Ind., September 11, 1838, daughter of Eli and Mary (Hulbert) Harbert, the father a native of Ohio and the mother of Virginia. They moved from Ohio to Indiana and there both parents died. Mr. Harbert was a tanner and shoemaker. Three children were born to himself and his wife, namely: Samuel Harbert, of Illiopolis; Eli, on a farm in Sangamon County, and Mrs. Gilbert.

Children as follows were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert: Eli J., superintendent of a mine in California; Olive, wife of William C. Galloway, a traveling salesman living in Chicago; Fannie, wife of George Smith, a real estate dealer of Lawrence, Kan. There are six grandchildren in the family: Earl and Claire Gilbert; Massock, Paul and Richard Galloway, and Gilbert Smith. Mrs. Gilbert owns the home in Illiopolis, as well as other property.

GILBERT, Edward, who for many years was engaged in mining ventures, and whose experience as a mine superintendent took him to various parts of the country, is now living retired, in Springfield, his home being located at No. 1904 South Fifth Street. He is a native of Cornwall, England, born February 18, 1840, a son of Richard and Elizabeth (Roberts) Gilbert.

The parents of Mr. Gilbert came to America in 1848, bringing a family of five children, and from Quebec, Canada, where they landed, made their way to Milwaukee, Wis., and thence by wagon to Galena, Ill., where they remained for five years, the father being engaged in mining. At the end of this time the father and the eldest son, John, went to the island of Cuba, where they were engaged in copper mining, and there the father was accidentally killed, the son returning to the United States soon after, and eventually dying in the West. Another son now resides in Bowdler, Colorado; a daughter, Mrs. Fannie James, in Seattle, Wash.; and another daughter, Mrs. Jane Clemmens, in Cuhia, Wis.

Edward Gilbert was educated in the schools of Illinois, and first engaged in mining at Hazel Green, Wis., whence he went to the upper peninsula of Michigan to engage in copper mining. He remained there about two and one-half years, and later made a second trip there, remaining about one year. He engaged in copper mining for about six months in Ducktown, Tenn., later was employed in the iron mines of Orange County, N. Y., and in 1850 went to North Adams, Mass., where he worked in the Hoosac Tunnel. He spent the next six months in the coal mines of New Brunswick, where he met the Superintendent of the Springfield Mining Company, and on his return to the United States again went to work at copper mining in New Jersey. After some time spent in the mines of North Carolina, Mr. Gilbert enlisted as a soldier in the Civil War, and fought bravely from 1861 to 1864, in which latter year he returned to his old home in Galena. In 1865 he went to Colorado, where he was employed in gold, copper, silver and coal mines, and then went to the State of Virginia, where he was married. Several months afterwards he again went to Colorado, but in 1871 went to Hazel Green, Wis., and thereafter was engaged for more or less extended periods in Butler County, Iowa; in the Black Hills; in Colorado; again in Iowa; the lead mines of Joplin, Mo.; the coal mines of Pittsburg, Kan., and Parke County, Ind., and eventually went to Decatur, Ill., where he engaged in sinking the first mine located there. This was about the year 1879, and after one and one-half years there he went to Marletta, where he resided for a quarter of a century and was superintendent of the mines. He retired after a long and active career, and is considered a substantial citizen, having property in Springfield and Niantic, Ill. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and is a Republican in political views.

In 1867, Mr. Gilbert was married, in Cassel, Va., to Margaret Darnewood, who was born in Virginia, and died in 1905, having been the mother of three children, of whom one survives, William E., book-keeper, for the Franklin Life Insurance Company, of Springfield, who has two children—Evelyn and Adele.

GILLET, Joseph E.—The manufacture of vehicles is one of the time-honored occupations and one without which our present state of civilization could not exist, for transportation has always been a necessity to mankind. Although in these days of automobiles and steam and electric cars, the manufacture of carriages, buggies and wagons is not carried on to such an extent as in former years, still there are many uses to which these vehicles can and always will be put, and their manufacture will go down in the annals of time as one of the standard occupations. Joseph Gillett, who was for many years engaged in this line of work in Illinois, now living retired at No. 1823 East Capitol Avenue, Springfield, was born May 31, 1835, at Dayton, Ohio, the son of Francis and Mary Gillett, natives of France. Francis Gillett, who was a stone manufacturer and quarry-man, came to America at an early date, and in 1828 opened a stone quarry at Dayton, Ohio, where he engaged in the same kind of business until his death. His burial took place at Dayton, and after this event his widow came to Jacksonville, Ill., where she resided with her son, Joseph E., until her death, in 1891, when she was eighty-four years of age.

Joseph E. Gillett, who is the only surviving child of his parents, was educated in Dayton, Ohio, and when a young man learned the carriage-making trade, which he followed there until 1857, and in that year went to St. Louis, Mo. One year later, in 1858, he went to Jacksonville, Ill., where he followed his chosen occupation for some time, later going to Columbus, Mo., but two years later settling in Springfield, Ill. After several years spent at his trade in Springfield he returned to Jacksonville, and was there employed for some time in an official position in the Insane Hospital and the Deaf and Dumb Institute. For the past two years he has lived retired, having earned a competency. He is a Roman Catholic in religious belief and his politics are those of the Republican party.

On November 7, 1862, Mr. Gillett was married, at Springfield, Ill., to Clara A. Robinson, who was born in Springfield in 1840, daughter of John and Mary Robinson. Mr. Robinson, who was born in Scotland, came to America and settled in Sangamon County at an early date, for several years conducting a saw-mill at Spring Creek. Both he and his wife are deceased. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Gillett, namely: Thomas, who is engaged in the coal business in Springfield, and Mrs. Mary F. Murphy of St. Louis, Mo. In the family there are four grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

GLAREN, Maurice, a well-known citizen of Springfield, Ill., was born in County Waterford, Ireland, December 4, 1848, a son of Maurice and Johanna (Wade) Glaren, both natives of that county. The father was a farmer by occupation and both parents died in County Waterford, the father March 4, 1848, and the mother in 1853. Maurice Glaren was the youngest of seven children, namely: Michael, deceased; James; Bridget; Johanna, of Boston; two died young, and Maurice. All live in Ireland except Johanna and Maurice, and the sister Bridget made them a visit recently, but returned to her native land.

In boyhood Maurice Glaren attended the public schools of his native place and his work was done on a farm. He came to America in May, 1870, and located first at Charlestown, Mass., where he was employed at the water works two years, and in 1872, came to Springfield, Ill. He then engaged in work on the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad, now part of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern. In 1873 he purchased about three logs in Springfield, on which stood a small cottage, and later erected his present comfortable home. For thirty years he worked in the rolling mills of Springfield, becoming foreman there, and later, until recently, was connected with the Springfield Gas Company.

Mr. Glaren was married in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Springfield, by Father Brady, in 1875, to Margaret Foley, a native of County Waterford, Ireland, born December 1, 1852, daughter of Patrick and Catherine (Curran) Foley, both natives of that county and the mother born in 1831. Mr. Foley and his father, James Foley, were wealthy farmers and never left their native land. Mrs. Foley's father, Patrick Curran, was also a wealthy farmer and spent his entire life in Ireland. Patrick Foley died in 1864 and his widow in 1891, both passing away in Ireland. They were parents of three sons and four daughters, only two of whom now survive: William died in Ireland in 1890; Patrick came to the United States in 1881 and died at Springfield in 1901; Thomas died in Ireland; Hannah, deceased, was the wife of Thomas Hawley, of Springfield and left eleven children; Anastasia is the wife of Richard St. John, of Springfield and they have three children; Mary came to Canada and died there recently; Mrs. Glaren came to the United States alone in 1871.

Nine children have been born to Mr. Glaren and wife, namely: Patrick, born November 18, 1874; James L., born November 4, 1876; Maurice, born May 7, 1881; William J., born November 15, 1884; John, born November 18, 1886; all under the parental roof; and four children who are deceased. Mr. Glaren is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and in St. Joseph Parish. He belongs to St. Joseph's Lodge of the Catholic Order of Foresters, and is also a member of the Court of Honor. In politics he is a Democrat. He is regarded as an upright, useful citizen, and is popular with his many friends.

GLEASON, James M.—The grocery trade of Springfield is rapidly developing into one of the most important branches of industrial activity there. The demand for food-stuffs is growing, and careful housewives, recognizing the necessity for careful marketing, owing to advanced prices and the increased cost of living, are directing their attention to those grocers upon whom they can depend, not only for fair prices, but for good material. No longer do they buy blindly, taking no heed as to quality. Investigations have shown her of the dangers that lurk in imperfectly prepared foods and she demands the best. One of the men who has proven himself able to cope with these existing conditions, and to earn a fair profit for himself, is James M. Gleason, of No. 1000 North Fourteenth Street.

Mr. Gleason was born at Contrafl, Ill., in 1853, being a son of Matthew and Margaret (Moore) Gleason, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. Gleason was educated in the pub-

Illc schools of his native place and, leaving school at the age of sixteen years, stored up vitality by working on the home farm until he came to Springfield in 1862. He established himself in the grocery business at the corner of Fourteenth and Jefferson Streets, in 1902, and successfully carried it on until 1906, when he built his present store, to which he transferred his stock. As yet he is unmarried. His religious connections are with St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of which he is a consistent member. In political faith he is a strong Democrat. Energetic, hard-working, a good buyer and understanding thoroughly the possibilities of his business, Mr. Gleason is giving his customers an excellent service and growing in popularity.

GOLDFUSS, William, who for many years was well known in Springfield as being connected with the painting and contracting business, is now living retired, although holding a public position. He is a native of the Capital City, born June 12, 1872, a son of Paul and Margaret (Rapps) Goldfuss, natives of Germany, who left the Fatherland and located in Springfield, where the father was engaged in contracting and mason work.

The education of William Goldfuss was secured in the German Lutheran schools of Springfield, and he spent his youth at home with his parents. On reaching the proper age he went to learn the painter's trade, and this he followed, with contracting, for a number of years, or until his retirement from that business. He has always been more or less of a leader in Democratic politics in his community, although he has never cared to hold office. He is now serving as, watchman at the police station. With his mother and wife, he is living at No. 334 West Mason Street, where the family home is located, and all are well known in society circles and highly esteemed by a large number of acquaintances. All three attend the German Lutheran Church and may he found ready at all times to assist in church and charitable movements.

On July 4 1899, at Decatur, Ill., William Goldfuss was united in marriage with Miss Olive May Tuel, who was born in Newman, Ill. There have been no children born to Mr. and Mrs. Goldfuss, but they have an adopted daughter, Miss Elvin Goldfuss. Mr. Goldfuss was well and favorably known in the trade of which he was a member, and for a long period served as foreman of the union in Springfield. He has never cared to associate himself with secret or fraternal organizations, preferring to give his spare time to his family or his business.

GOMES, Eli, a lifelong resident of Springfield, Ill., was born on Tenth, between Reynolds and Mason Streets, in 1855, a son of Joseph Gomes, an old citizen of Springfield, who passed away there in 1902. The family is given more extended mention in connection with a sketch of John Gomes, to be found in this work. Joseph Gomes was a native of Madeira Island and came to the United States as a young man, locating in North Carolina, whence he emigrated to Springfield, Ill., about the middle of the nineteenth century. He worked in various capacities for others for some years and later established himself in mercantile business, retailing groceries and other goods. He lived to the age of eighty-one years.

His wife, Johanna Gomes, was also a native of Madeira, as a young girl accompanied her parents to Springfield, Ill., and there her death occurred, at the age of seventy years. He has followed various occupations since reaching his majority and has been fairly successful, having acquired some property and won the respect of his fellows by his upright, reliable disposition and his regard for the highest principles of honor. He was married to Miss Jennie Rodlicks, of Springfield. Mr. Gomes and his wife reside at 718 North Eleventh Street, where they have a comfortable and well-appointed home. Children have been born to them as follows: Edward, of Springfield; Ida; Mrs. T. Haynes; Stella, Mary; Mrs. Frank Boehm; Mollie, wife of William Cort; Wilbert and Joseph, at home. All live in Springfield. Mr. Gomes belongs to one of the old Portuguese families who have done so much in the building and development of the city of Springfield. He is a staunch Republican in political belief. He is well known as an industrious and useful citizen and has the highest esteem of all who have had dealings with him.

GOMES, John, an old retired citizen of Springfield, Ill., followed his trade of carpenter for forty years in the vicinity of Springfield and helped in the erection of many large buildings, business blocks, residences, etc., and has been identified with the development of the city since 1849. He was an enterprising and skillful workman and formed many acquaintances and warm friends among his associates. Mr. Gomes was born on Madeira Island, southwest of the coast of Portugal, August 29, his early childhood in his native place. He is a son of Frank and Martha Amelia Gomes, and after the death of his father accompanied his mother and sister Juana to the West Indies, where they remained one year and then came to the United States. Mrs. Gomes died in North Carolina and her son afterward went to New York City, and thence, by a devious route, reached Springfield, Ill., where he has lived for more than sixty years.

After arriving in Springfield John Gomes learned the trade of carpenter with James Sutton, and afterward worked eleven years for the firm of Sutton Brothers & Runyan. He worked for many other firms in a similar line and became an expert carpenter. He is a stanch Republican and takes considerable interest in public affairs and issues. He is considered a useful representative citizen, honest and upright in all his dealings. He married Julia Gomes, a daughter of Anton Gomes, a native of the Madeira Island, where she was born. The father died in Trinidad. They became parents of nine children, viz.: Ella, of Oshkosh, Wis.; John, deceased; Joseph; Carrie, of Milwaukee, Wis.; Frank, of Springfield; Mary, of Iowa; James, died in Milwaukee. The family reside at 612 North Eleventh Street and attend the Presbyterian Church. Mr. Gomes is now living retired. His wife died about 1870, and he has never married again.

GOODPASTURE, Levi D., a successful and enterprising business man of Springfield, has lived in that city most of the time since 1871, and is identified with its progress and growth. He is well established in the line of cement work contracting, and his enterprise is constantly enlarging. He was born in Menard County, Ill., January 28, 1855, son of William Bryan and Martha (Harville) Goodpasture, natives of Tennessee, the father born September 25, 1810, and the mother in February, 1815. The father was a farmer and came to Morgan County, Ill., in 1830, lived there five years, moved to Wayne County and lived there a time, then moved to Menard County and lived there thirty years. His wife died in February, 1855. In 1871 he moved to Sangamon County and there spent the remainder of his days, passing away April 4, 1883. He is buried at Auburn, Ill. When he was a boy living near Salem, Ill., the old home of Abraham Lincoln, he split rails in company with the latter.

The school-house where Levi D. Goodpasture first went to school, near Middletown, Ill., is still standing. Upon leaving school he worked at farming and continued this occupation fifteen years, then moved to Chicago and was employed two years in a baby-carriage factory. Returning to Sangamon County, he carried on farming three years at Auburn. He learned the trade of brick and stone mason and worked at it fourteen years. He realized the possibilities of cement work, and for the past eight years has been contracting in that line. The family reside at 931 West Governor Street, and Mr. Goodpasture owns eighty acres of excellent improved farm land in Dewitt County. He is well known and respected in business circles as a man of strict honesty and integrity. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church and in politics is a Republican.

Mr. Goodpasture was married, in Auburn, Ill., December 3, 1874, to Miss Martha Fletcher, who was born February 11, 1855, daughter of Nathan and Margaret Fletcher, the former born in Kentucky, in 1816, and the latter in Menard County, Ill., September 7, 1828. Mr. Fletcher came to Illinois in 1820 and died March 29, 1906. Mrs. Fletcher died in 1888, and both are buried in the old Fletcher Cemetery at Auburn. They were well known in Sangamon County, where they had lived many years and made many friends. Mr. Goodpasture and his wife became parents of children as follows: Delia M., wife of Geer H. Truman, a machinist in the mines at Virden, Ill., was born May 8, 1875; Clyde, born May 15, 1888, shoe merchant at 629 East Adams Street Springfield; Benaiah Merle, born November 23, 1896, living at home. Geer H. and Delia (Goodpasture) Truman have one child, Marian Ruth, born June 24, 1901.

GOODSON, L. Jay, D. D. S.—Dr. L. Jay Goodson, who has been engaged in the successful practice of his profession in Springfield, since 1901, was born in Christian County, Ill., near Taylorville, July 14, 1870, son of Benjamin D. and Maria E. (Blankiship) Goodson. Benjamin F. Goodson was born in Bond County, Ill., February 24, 1836, and his wife in Fayette County, Ill., June 12, 1843. He was a farmer and livernman by occupation, and in 1860, moved from Bond County to Taylorville, where for twenty years he was engaged in manufacturing brick. He afterward engaged in farming. For many years, he conducted a livery stable at Taylorville. Dr. Goodson is the only surviving child left of a family of twelve children.

The boyhood of Dr. Goodson was spent in his native county, and after attending the public schools, he entered Lincoln University, and afterwards the Northwestern University dental department, at Chicago. He disliked farm work, and turned his attention to mercantile affairs after leaving school. He was employed for some time as a clerk in a grain warehouse, and later in a dry goods store, and continued this occupation until 1891, when he became cashier of a life insurance company's branch office, and later district manager. Six years later, he disposed of his insurance business, and entered the Northwestern University, in 1897, taking up the study of dentistry. He was graduated with his degree in 1900, and practiced a few months in Chicago; spent one year practicing in Shawneetown, and then located in Springfield, where he has built up a good practice, and has established an excellent reputation for honest skill in his profession. He is a Presbyterian in religious belief, a Republican in politics, and fraternally a member of the Knights of Pythias, which order he joined in 1891. Professionally, he belongs to the Illinois State Dental Society, is Committeeman of the same; is a member of the Sangamon and Menard Dental Society, and during 1909, served the latter as president. He is a man of pleasant manner, and prepossessing in appearance, and has many warm friends.

Dr. Goodson was married in Greeneview, Menard County, Ill., November 27, 1894, to Miss Ella Blane, born in that village, February 19, 1871, daughter of John J. and Mary Ann Blane, both natives of Greeneview, the former born in 1845, and the latter in 1843. Mr. Blane is an extensive farmer and stockman, and ships a large number of cattle and hogs annually. Two children have blessed the union of Dr. and Mrs. Goodson; Blane J., born July 17, 1897, and Mabel, born July 7, 1899. They own a comfortable residence at No. 514 South State street, and his office is on the second floor of the Illinois National Bank building. Lately, Dr. Goodson has been interested in the colonization of lands in Florida.

GORDON, Marion L., publisher of the "Auburn Citizen" and one of the representative newspaper men of Sangamon County, is a public-spirited citizen and one who has the welfare of his locality deeply at heart. He was born in Schoharie County, N. Y., April 18, 1861, a son of Seth E. and Anna (Freese) Gordon, the former born December 25, 1833, and the latter November 20, 1835, both natives of Schoharie County, N. Y. The father served three years in the Army of the Potomac, during the Civil War. At the close of the war moved, with a wife and three sons, of whom Marion L. Gordon, the youngest, was then but five years old, to Sac County, Iowa, and homesteaded eight and one-half miles from Sac City. There he lived until his death, February 19, 1889. During his residence there he became an important factor in local politics, serving as Supervisor for fourteen years in succession. He refused to permit his name to appear on his party ticket for County Treasurer, although solicited to accept that honor. The family originated in the vicinity of Aberdeen, Scotland.

Marion L. Gordon took a course at the Northern Illinois Normal School at Dixon, and a classical course at Iowa College, Grinnell, Ia. He was brought up on a farm, but from childhood found his pleasure in reading and studying. For twenty-nine terms he taught in the public schools, finally becoming President of Mendota College, and for three years held that responsible position. Then his health failed because of his close application to his duties, and he had to leave the profession. He began newspaper work and has succeeded along this line as he did in his other field. A stanch Republican, he has always favored strong opposition to intemperance, and since coming to Illinois in 1886, has affiliated with the Prohibition party. He has steadfastly refused to be a candidate for any office, as his tastes do not run in a political direction.

Mr. Gordon was married at Auburn, Ill., October 24, 1893, to Minnie O. Lowry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lowry, born in Auburn, Ill., December 25, 1873. The grandfather founded the "Auburn Citizen," owning it until a short time before Mr. Gordon assumed its management. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have these children: Herbert E., born at Sac City, Iowa, August 10, 1894, and William Truman, born in Auburn, Ill., April 3, 1903. Mr. Gordon has been a member of Advent Christian Church since he was fifteen years old. He joined the Knights of Pythias in 1891, the Modern Woodmen of America in 1895, and the Court of Honor in the same year. While very charitable, he helps others so quietly that few know of his kind deeds. Industrious, conscientious, scrupulously honest, fearless in his advocacy of what he thinks is right, sympathetic with the "under dog" unless too far in the wrong, Mr. Gordon is a man of upright living and broad views. He declares, though, that he desires no higher praise than the remembrance when he is gone that he did his best to do the right and help his fellow-men. Mr. Gordon owns residence property in Sac City, Iowa.

GOREY, John Patrick.—The business instincts of some men are such as to insure their success in whatever line they undertake. They appear to know what is wanted by their customers and how to supply them with the best goods at satisfactory prices. Springfield is the home of a number of such men, whom some are more worthy of special mention than John Patrick Gorey, proprietor of the largest retail store in Sangamon County, if not in this part of the State. He was born six miles southwest of Springfield in Sangamon County, August 26, 1834, a son of Patrick and Margaret (Casey) Gorey, natives of Ireland. In the 'fifties Pat- rick Gorey came to the United States, locating in Boston, Mass., where he remained for two years. He then came to Sangamon County, engaging in farming until 1884, when he moved to Chatham, and until his death, in 1890, conducted a butchering business. In politics he was a Democrat but never entered public life, not aspiring to office. His widow survives, residing in Chatham. Both were born and reared in the Catholic Church, in which faith they reared their nine children, all of whom are now living.

John Patrick Gorey attended the district schools until about seventeen years of age, when he began working the farm in partnership with his father. He then worked for two years in a general store at Chatham, after which he was on the road as a commercial traveler for three wholesale shoe houses. In this way gaining an invaluable knowledge of the requirements of the trade. About 1894 he came to Springfield to enter the employ of Klayholt & Fogarty, shoe merchants, buying them out two years later. Since then he has been engaged in supplying a large retail territory, and has a handsome shoe emporium, that would do credit to any city in the country.

In politics Mr. Gorey is a Democrat, and served very ably and acceptably as Tax Collector for a year, but, like his father, has never desired office. A strong Catholic, he belongs to St. Agues' Church, and is one of its liberal supporters. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Columbus, the M. W. of A., the Knights and Ladies of Honor, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

On February 28, 1890, Mr. Gorey was united in marriage, at Aulurn, Ill., with Mary Jane Burns, daughter of James Burns and his wife Elizabeth. Mr. Burns was born in Scotland, while his wife was born in Ireland. They came to America in 1862, having been married at Glasgow, Scotland. Mrs. Gorey was one of a family of twelve children. Mr. and Mrs. Gorey have had an interesting family of children, as follows: Mary J., studying music at the Sacred Heart Academy, with the intention of developing her exceptional ability to the extent of fitting herself for teaching music; Marguerite died at the age of three months; Jesse Veronica and Irene, attending the same school as Mary J.; Josephhue, who died at the age of four years; John, Jr., who is attending St. Agnes school, and Leonarda Bernaine, the baby. Mr. Gorey belongs to the class of self-made men, his success being the result of his own unaided efforts intelligently directed in legitimate channels. His pleasant, genial manner and unfailing courtesy aid in furthering his business and making friends, and no man is more highly regarded in Springfield than he.

GORMAN, William, now retired from active life and living with his daughter, Mrs. James McAlone, at 1228 North Walnut Street, Springfield, was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1841. He is a son of Thomas Gorman, a farmer in Ireland, who had seven children: Thomas, Patrick, John, Johanna, Lizzie, Sarah and William, all of whom came to the United States, although at different times.

William Gorman was educated in his native country and worked for the parish priest before emigrating to America, at the age of twenty-one years. He landed in New York and soon after joined his brother Thomas in Springfield. Upon first coming to Springfield he found employment in the hotels of that city, and during the war drove a wagon for the United States Government, from Camp Butler to Springfield. He afterward carried on farming at Buffalo, Sangamon County, and later at Tolono, Champaign County, where he lived many years, and there reared his family. His first wife, Miss Catherine Cler, of Springfield, died at Tolono, July 7, 1874, and he married (second) Bridget Bohan, who died in Springfield, in 1885. About 1885 Mr. Gorman moved to Springfield and purchased the home where he now lives. He worked at putting in water mains until he retired from active life.

Mr. Gorman is a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church and is a Democrat in politics. He is an old resident of Springfield and has always taken an active interest in the progress and welfare of the community. He is highly respected by all who know him and has many friends. Children as follows were born to him: Thomas died in Nebraska, at the age of twenty-six years; Elizabeth, Mrs. McAlone, of Springfield; Sarah, unmarried; Johanna, Mrs. Thomas Lardregan, of Springfield; John, died young; Margaret died at the age of thirteen years; James died in infancy.

James McAlone was born in Springfield, July 10, 1866, and has lived in the city all his life. His father, who is deceased, was a carpenter, and served on the city police force. He was married, April 24, 1906, to Miss Elizabeth Gorman. He and his wife are both members of St. Joseph's Church. She and her sisters own the old family home on North Walnut Street. Mr. McAlone is well known in Springfield and he and his wife live with her father.

GRAHAM, James M., Member of Congress from the Twenty-first District of Illinois, is a man of whom his country and his constituents are well pleased. He was born in Sangamon County, and reared in Sangamon County, Ill., in 1818. His father was a man of superior intelligence, educated and cultured, he has at all times maintained the attitude and principles of a true gentleman, though forceful in speech and vigorous in defense of his opinions. The people of Sangamon County and of Central Illinois feel proud of the record of Mr. Graham, and acknowledge that his success is a credit to himself and to his constituents.

Mr. Graham was born in County Monaghan, Ireland, April 14, 1812, and came to Sangamon County, Ill., in 1808. He is a son of Hugh and Sarah (McMahon) Graham, the former a farmer by occupation. Honorable J. M. Graham received his education in the common schools, the Northern Normal School at Valparaiso, Ind., and when of age began teaching in Champaign County, Ill., continuing this profession seven years. During his teaching he began the study of law under William A. Day, who later became Second Auditor of the Treasury under President Cleveland, and finished his legal studies under the supervision of James A. Creighton, who became and is Circuit Judge of the Springfield District. Mr. Graham was admitted to the Bar in 1885, and served in the Thirty-fourth General Assembly of Illinois, in 1885-86. He rose rapidly in his profession and served as State's Attorney for Sangamon County in 1892-96. He afterward entered the law firm of Palmer, Shutt & Graham, the senior member being Hon. John M. Palmer, a biographical sketch of whom appears on another page of this work, and the second member, W. E. Shutt, became United States District Attorney for the Southern District of Illinois. The firm has since been reorganized and now consists of Hon. James M. Graham and his two sons, Hugh J. and James J., both of whom are graduates of the University of Illinois. The firm has won high prestige and all its members stand high in their profession. Mr. Graham was elected a member of the Sixty-first and Sixty-second United States Congress. He has always been interested in educational matters and served as a member of the School Board in Springfield in 1898-1900. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Court of Honor, the Catholic Order of Foresters, the Knights of Columbus and the Loyal Americans. In political views he is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Democratic party. Mr. Graham has always taken an active interest in the progress and welfare of Springfield and Sangamon County, and as a public-spirited citizen, has been ready to promote the same. Mr. Graham is an active member of the Catholic Church and has made a special study of its history as well as other lines of historical research. He is the author of an article to be found in this work entitled History of the Catholic Church, and is well fitted to cover his subject comprehensively.

Mr. Graham was married at Rantoul, Ill., August 15, 1876, to Miss Catherine Wallace, a native of Rantoul, daughter of Michael Wallace and Ellen (Nolan) Wallace. Seven children have blessed this union, three of whom are graduates of the University of Illinois, and one a student in that institution. Their names are: Hugh J., born in 1877; James J., in 1879; Arthur E., in 1881; Charles W., in 1882; Mary, in 1885; Neille, in 1892; Agnes, in 1897. Mr. Graham is a fine specimen of athletic manhood, being six feet tall and weighing 185 pounds. He has little time for social pleasures, but has always been greatly absorbed by his work and it is his favorite occupation. His two oldest sons are partners in the firm of Graham & Graham and his third and fourth sons are preparing for business life. Mr. Graham owns a residence in Springfield and some farm land in Sangamon County. Though Mr. Graham has been so successful in his professional and political career, he never forgets his former friends and meets them with the same pleasure and greets them with as much friendliness as in his early life. He is modest and unassuming in demeanor, pleasant and courteous to all, and has a multitude of close personal friends, in all stations of life.

GRANT, Ulysses S. (Vol. I, pp. 266-267.)

grandfather was one of those sturdy old Germans who came first to Kentucky, and thence to Sangamon County, making his home with his son Louis B., until his death, which occurred when he had attained the extreme age of ninety-two years. The maternal grandfather was a prosperous farmer of Kentucky, where he died. Louis B. Greenawalt brought his family to Sangamon County in 1852, and spent a useful but unevenful life in this locality, dying at an advanced age. His remains were interred in the Baptist Cemetery, but his wife was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

George W. Greenawalt spent a useful boyhood on the homestead, attending the Oak Ridge School. From the time he was able to assist his father his interest centered in farming, and he has followed that calling all his life. His fine farm of 200 acres in Pawnee Township is rated as one of the best in the county.

Mr. Greenawalt was married in Springfield, by Squire S. B. Brock, on February 24, 1874, to Mary C. Landrey, born in Indiana March 26, 1853, daughter of Joseph M. and Adaline (Bowers) Landrey, the former born in Ohio, January 22, 1827, and the latter in Indiana, July 27, 1830. The grandparents on both sides were farmers. Mr. and Mrs. Greenawalt have had five children: Pearl died in infancy; Laura, born December 17, 1874, married Owen Molohon of Pawnee, one child, Phalma, eight years old; Addie, born November 28, 1879, at home; Charles, born July 12, 1881, at home; Ollie, born August 16, 1883, married Fred Ketzer, of Pawnee, no issue.

Like other members of his family, Mr. Greenawalt is a very staunch Democrat and is active in his party. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen and Loyal Americans. The Methodist Church claims his membership. He is a man of high moral character and he and his wife are important factors in their church and community. They have brought up a nice family and are proud of them and their grandchildren. Their pleasant home is the scene of many delightful social gatherings and both are never as happy as when extending hospitality to their hosts of friends.

GREENAWALT, Leroy.—There are many men in Sangamon County who have devoted themselves to farming, spending their lives at the work, learning it from the foundation up, and therefore have become authorities upon everything pertaining to agricultural matters. One of these men who has amassed a comfortable fortune from his farming, and is regarded as one of the most representative of his class, is Leroy Greenawalt, born in the county, February 10, 1858, and now residing on his farm, which occupies portions of Sections 2 and 3, Divenon Township. He is a son of Louis B. and Polly (Holloway) Greenawalt, natives of Kentucky.

The paternal grandfather came from Germany to America at an early day, locating in Kentucky. The maternal grandfather was born in Kentucky, where he died. In 1852, the family migrated to Sangamon County locating in Divenon Township, with the object of securing cheap land. Here the paternal grandfather passed away, aged ninety-two years. The father died on the homestead, aged eighty-three years, and his wife passed away on that same property.

Growing up on the homestead, Leroy Greenawalt attended the country school of his neighborhood, but his interest was centered in farming, and the caring for horses and other kinds of stock. This homestead of 119 acres of rich farm land came into his possession, and he is still improving it, although his fine buildings, neat premises, well kept fences, sleek stock and modern machinery would indicate that but little is ever left undone.

Mr. Greenawalt has never married, but is interested in his two brothers, George, who is a farmer of Sangamon County, and James, a farmer of Kaukas. He is a Democrat, and is proud of the fact that he has always voted the straight ticket. Fraternally, he is a member of the Modern Woodmen, the Royal Circle and the Odd Fellows. While not connected with any religious organization, Mr. Greenawalt in his daily life sets an example of morality that many a church member might follow with profit, believing in the Golden Rule as a guide in business and social intercourse. Pleasant, genial, kind-hearted, Mr. Greenawalt has made countless friends, and probably no enemies. It is such men as he who raise the standard in any community, and their influence once exerted, results in the securing of good government and the enforcement of existing laws.

GREENE, Henry S. (Vol. I, p. 208.)

GREENWALT, John Thomas.—Farming as an occupation is a profitable one if followed along scientific lines, but the work of the farmer today entails much study and not a little scientific training, in sharp contrast to the agricultural life of several decades ago. While the soil of Sangamon County is very fertile, water plentiful and easily obtained, and weather conditions nearly ideal, good crops cannot be raised unless conditioned, and the high standard set by the agriculturists of this section is, therefore, all the land is properly worked and scientifically the more creditable. John Thomas Greenwalt, who is farming along scientific lines in Cotton Hill Township, was born in this township, May 22, 1802, a son of John W. and Elizabeth Ann (McAtee) Greenwalt.

Mr. Greenwalt's paternal grandfather was a native of Kentucky who died in Sangamon County. On the maternal side his grandfather was a native of Tennessee and served as Justice of the Peace of Sangamon County many years, and he also died there. John W. Greenwalt was born in Kentucky July 23, 1830, and came to Sangamon County with his parents in 1836. He spent his life there, dying January 4, 1904, and his widow, who was born in Sangamon County, March 5, 1852, died May 16, 1908. Both are buried in Zion Cemetery.

John Thomas Greenwalt was educated in Crabapple College, in Cotton Hill Township and his boyhood was spent on his father's farm. He went to Texas in 1855 and remained there for six months, when he removed to Kansas and stayed there until 1889. He was engaged in farming and for one year carried on a butcher business, but sold out and returned to Sangamon County May 6, 1889, having been rather unsuccessful in his undertakings. He then rented the John Kincaid farm, and next the Willan farm, where he remained one year, then purchased a farm of eight and one-half acres, on which was situated a log cabin. Four years later he sold this and bought a twenty-acre farm. Two years later he purchased seven and one-half acres of the Funderburk property, and still later added from time to time to his property by purchasing land from Mr. Funderburk, Al Crowder and Ed Fox, paying $5,000 for forty acres from the latter, and he now owns an excellent property of 156 acres on Section 20. Mr. Greenwalt has always been a Democrat and is now serving as Township Trustee, this being his second term. He was one of the incorporators of the Zion Cemetery in 1906 and is still serving as Secretary of that organization. He also owns stock in the State and National Banks of Pawnee, Ill. Religiously he is connected with the Zion Methodist Episcopal Church, of Cotton Hill Township. He fraternizes with the A. F. & A. M. No. 675 of Pawnee, and the Royal Circle, his wife also being a member of the latter, also a member of the Royal Neighbors, New City Camp No. 194.

Mr. Greenwalt was married in Moline, Kan., December 27, 1855, by Rev. Samuel Huntzbury, to Margaret Ellenor Hankinson, who was born March 25, 1857, in Montgomery County, Ill., daughter of Nicholas B. and Rhoda E. (Blair) Hankinson, the former born in Darke County, Ohio, January 28, 1833, and the latter April 6, 1840. Mr. Hankinson came to Illinois as a boy and died in Kansas in 1851, his wife passing away June 24, 1877. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Greenwalt were as follows: Helen E., born October 2, 1880, died December 12th of that year; Opal E., born September 2, 1887, in Moline, Kan., was married to Emery Browu, February 30, 1909, by Rev. M. V. Hill, and has one child; Gordon E., born December 20, 1899, of Sangamon County; Walter L., born March 31, 1891; Loy S., born May 30, 1894; Jessie J., born June 17, 1897; Margaret E., born July 1, 1900; Elsie M., born November 5, 1903; and Nellie E., born January 4, 1908. Mr. Greenwalt is one of Sangamon County's self-made men. He has a fine home, is very popular in his neighborhood and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

GRIDER, Marshall S.—To become a successful cattle raiser it is necessary that one should spend years of study and observation, years of experimenting with breeds and conditions, and years wrought with failures and disappointments, and combine with this a certain keen insight and a faculty to recognize the time when the proper conditions have been brought about. One of the most successful stockraisers of Sangamon County, who is known throughout Cartwright Township as an excellent judge of all kinds of stock, is Marshall S. Grider, who carries on operations on Section 34. Mr. Grider was born within a mile and one-half of his present home, on a farm in Menard County, Ill., January 23, 1865, a son of Thompson and Martha (Bradley) Grider, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter from Tennessee, who were married in Menard County, Ill., where their six children were born, as follows: Hattle, the wife of Henry Hodges, a resident of Petersburg, Ill.; Emery, a farmer near Glennville, this county; Samuel L., a farmer in Auburn Township; Marshall S.; Charles A., who is farming in Auburn Township; and Nora, the wife of Heurry Erickson, a farmer near Pleasanton, Kan.

Marshall S. Grider's father died when he was but five years of age, and one year later his mother passed away, and the young lad then went to live with Andrew M. Houghton, with whom he made his home until twenty-six years of age, meanwhile securing an education in the district schools and being taught the business of stockraising by his employer, with whom he eventually went into partnership. While this connection was still in force, Mr. Grider came to Sangamon County and purchased seventy-eight acres of land on Section 34, Cartwright Township, and to the little log cabin which was on this farm he brought his wife, who was formerly Miss Lelia Wells, whom he had married March 11, 1891. She was born April 22, 1859, in Salisbury Township, the daughter of James R. and Margaret (Sackett) Wells, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Sangamon County, Ill. Mrs. Wells died July 13, 1902, but his widow still survives and makes her home in Salisbury Township. Mr. and Mrs. Wells had five children, namely: Marilou L., a farmer of Salisbury Township; Hattle E., the widow of A. B. Hohimer, residing in Chatham, Ill.; Mary B., who married George Curran, of Springfield; Richard R., living near Salisbury, Ill.; and Mrs. Grider. Mr. Wells was a prominent citizen of Salisbury Township, serving several terms as Supervisor, to which office he was elected on the Democratic ticket. Although a member of no especial church, he was a consistent attendant of Sunday school, and in his charities was known as one of the most generous men in his community.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Grider located on the little farm and began to clear away the timber, and they continued to reside in the little frame building on the south end of the farm until 1861, when Mr. Grider erected their present modern residence, which is fitted with the latest plumbing and lighting systems, is furnished with steam heat and is one of the handsome structures of that part of the township. From time to time Mr. Grider has added to his acreage, his farm now comprising 130 acres, which with his forty acres in Salisbury Township and the farm of 324 acres owned by his wife there, makes a total of 494 acres, all in the highest state of cultivation.

Mr. Grider has always been active in breeding fine stock, making a specialty of short horn cattle and Duroc Jersey hogs, of which latter he ships about 200 each year, his animals bringing top-notch prices in the Chicago market. Among the blooded animals to be found on his farm may be mentioned Border Buck, a fine registered stallion, 16/12 handsome coal black, sired by Confident, an imported stallion; and a Missouri jack, named Bob Bodine, black, with white points, bred at Chillicothe, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Grider have had three children: Loren H., born August 15, 1882; Ray R., June 23, 1884; and Percy J., born June 23, 1890. The boys have been given liberal educations and are assisting in the duties of the home farm. The family are consistent members of the Richland Baptist Church. He is a staunch Republican in politics and has filled the office of Collector of Cartwright Township. Mr. Grider is fraternity connected with Pleasant Plains Lodge No. 770, I. O. O. F.

GRIESSER, Conrad, of Springfield, where he has lived the past ten years, was born in Wurttemburg, Germany, February 21, 1865, and is a son of Andrew and Julia F. Griesser. The father was a soldier in the German Army and fought against Napoleon in 1870-71. He died in Germany but the mother still resides there. They were parents of children as follows: Conrad; Josephine, living in Germany; John, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Griesser learned forestry in Germany and became a forester under the Government.

The education of Conrad Griesser was obtained in his native country, and at the age of fourteen years he left school. He learned the trade of brewer, which he has followed most of his life, and in 1886, came to the United States. He landed in New York, and soon afterwards, went to Cincinnati, Ohio, where he obtained a position as assistant brew master, and held it fifteen years. In 1898, he took a course at Wahl and Heulins Brewing academy, at Chicago, returned to his position in Cincinnati, and in 1900, came to Springfield as brew master for the Reisch Brewing Company, which position he still holds. He has expert knowledge, ability and experience in his line and is an honest, reliable citizen. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church and politically votes for the men and measures he considers for the general good of the people.

Mr. Griesser was married in Cincinnati, Ohio, May 5, 1892, to Miss Pauline Cetjock, who was born in Germany and came to the United States at the age of fifteen years. Two children have blessed this union, namely, Hilda and Frank, who has learned the trade of brewing with his father. Mr. Griesser has a very pretty home on East Miller Street.

GRIFFIN, Mrs. Mary.—A number of the property owners of Springfield belong to the sex which does not have a vote, for many of them are women. However, although they have no voice in the management of public affairs, these women exert a powerful influence for good, and are a very important factor in the life of the city. Many of them give largely and generously to charities; others devote themselves to their homes and families, but all of them are good, earnest women, whose highest desire is to better humanity and make their wealth work for the best purposes. Among those who are accomplishing so much, is Mrs. Mary Griffin, a widow, daughter of John Mahoney, long one of the solid, reliable men of Springfield. Mrs. Griffin was born in that city, March 13, 1873, daughter of John and Mary (Pendergast) Mahoney. Mr. Mahoney is a contracting bricklayer, and is connected with much of the building of the city. Both he and his wife are natives of Ireland, who came to Springfield many years ago, and have become identified with its interests. They have lived there for at least forty years.

After school days spent in St. Joseph's School and high school of Springfield, Mrs. Griffin took up the dressmaking and millinery business, in which she was very successful. Her marriage occurred in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, of Springfield, in November, 1899, when she was united with Mr. Griffin. Mr. Griffin was a Republican in political faith and belonged to the Catholic Church, as does Mrs. Griffin. Mr. Griffin was a member of the Modern Woodmen, and also belonged to the Foresters and Carpenters' Union. Mrs. Griffin is proud of the fact that her father served as a soldier in the Civil War. She is a good churchwoman, energetic in religious work, and is a valued member of any circle she sees fit to join. She is a member of the Catholic Church.

GRIFFITH, Benjamin M., M. D.—It is not the purpose of biography to give a man's modest estimate of himself, but rather to establish his character by the consensus of public opinion, for the public is a discriminating factor, readily determining between the true and the false, the real and the baser metal. Viewed through the medium of public opinion, then, the life and work of Dr. Benjamin M. Griffith stands out prominently upon the pages of Springfield's history. He was a man whom to know was to re-cause of an upright life devoted to the welfare of his fellow men, morally as well as physically.

On the Griffith farm, near Shelbyville, Ky., April 14, 1831, the Doctor was born, and he acquired his literary education in the public schools and Woods Academy at Louisiana, Mo., under Professors Woods and Ash. He then began the study of medicine under Drs. Bartlett and Pinkney, of that place, and subsequently entered the St. Louis Medical College, in 1858, diligently applying himself to the mastery of those branches of learning forming the college curriculum. At a class meeting he was chosen to formally present to the faculty and managers of St. Louis Medical College, a portrait of Prof. M. M. Pallen, as a token of gratitude to their alma mater; and on the completion of the course in 1859 he was graduated with valdctorian honors of his class, numbering 170 members.

As an undergraduate Dr. Griffith began practice at Rockport, Ill., in 1854, but after leaving college returned to Louisiana, Mo., where he opened an office and continued in practice for six years. In 1865 he moved to Springfield, Ill., and was for a third of a century a distinguished member of the medical fraternity of that city. He was spoken of as an "ideal family physician," and well he might be so called, for he possessed not only marked skill in the line of his profession, but also a ready sympathy and kindly interest in his patients, and his cheery presence in the sick room was like a ray of sunshine, breathing of hope and promise. As a conscientious physician he was never found wanting when his services were needed in charity, and though his patronage came largely from the best families of Springfield, no home was too humble, no family too destitute, to receive the professional aid of Dr. Griffith when it was needed. A deep and earnest student throughout his professional career, he continued his reading an investigations, an kept abreast with the foremost thinkers of the medical fraternity. In 1892 he was appointed consulting physician of the St. John's Hospital and was, throughout the remainder of his life connected with the institution, being the head of the staff at the time of his death. An honored and valued member of the Illinois Central District Medical Society, he was always loyal to its interests, contributed many valuable papers to its meetings and served as its president. He firmly believed in the dissemination of knowledge concerning the laws of health and the uses of medicinal agencies, and was always glad to assist a younger member of the profession by advice which was the outcome of years of experience and investigation on his part. At the time of his death he was the second oldest physician in the city, but through a long period he had maintained a position second to none in skill. Becoming a member of the State Medical Society, he gave to it the same unwavering allegiance which marked his connection with the District Society and carefully watched its interests and workings for science, truth and humanity, presiding for some years over the organization as its President. He had a deep and sincere interest in his work, arisng not from a desire for its pecuniary rewards, but because of his unbounded sympathy and desire to be of benefit to his fellow men.

Dr. Griffith was intimately associated with Dr. John H. Ranch in organizing the Illinois State Board of Health, and although a Democrat, was appointed by a Republican, Governor Pifer naming him for the position in 1890, while Governor Altgeld reappointed him in 1894. In 1893 he served as its Treasurer, in 1895 was its President, and in the following year he resigned his position. He was President of the City Board of Health in 1880, and during that time advised and presented plans for improving the sanitary condition of the city. He gave much attention to the study of sanitation and was regarded as an authority on such matters. He suggested a curriculum of study for colleges especially arranged for students contemplating the study of medicine, and advocated this until its adoption in 1891, and as Secretary of the National Confederation of Examining & Licensing Boards, he made a concise but far-reaching and conclusive report to the American Medical Association, of which he was a member, when it met in Atlanta, Ga., in 1896. This was his last public work. Of the Illinois Auxiliary Sanitary Association he was a helpful member, his advice and counsel being of much value.

On the 1st of June, 1859, following his graduation, Dr. Griffith was married in Springfield, Ill., at the home of her cousin, Col. James A. Barrett, to Miss Alice A. McElroy, and for almost forty years they travelled life's journey happily together. The Doctor is survived by his wife and two children, the daughter, Eloise, is the wife of J. F. Pitner, of Jacksonville, Ill., and the son, Dr. B. B. Griffith, a graduate of Rush Medical College, Chicago, of the class of 1882, and of the College of Physicians & Surgeons of New York, of the class of 1883, is now a successful practitioner of Springfield, occupying the office which was his father's, and is also his father's successor at St. John's Hospital.

While Dr. Griffith made the practice of medicine his real life work, he yet found time to devote to the welfare of the city, meeting fully every obligation of citizenship and laboring effectively for the general good. He was actively interested in intellectual development in Springfield, and was a member of the first local Board of Education in the city, being appointed by Mayor Broadwell in 1890, served for seven years and during that period was largely instrumental in establishing a high school system which has proved a credit to the city. He was a charter member and for six years the honored President of the Authors' Club, which was organized in 1882, and for six or seven consecutive years his hospitable home was its meeting place. The success of the club from the beginning was largely due to his untiring efforts in its behalf.
His kindly courtesy won all hearts and made the meetings of the club important events in the social life of Springfield, while his papers were prepared with painstaking care after thorough research, displayed marked literary ability, and were greatly enjoyed and appreciated by the club members. Dr. Griffith also belonged to the Masonic fraternity and was a Sir Knight, who exemplified in his life the beneficent and brotherly spirit of the order. One who knew him well said of him: "He was one of the best of men, at all times a gentleman, a man of education and principle; a well informed and entertaining conversationalist; of excellent habits and a hard worker; a good father and loving husband. He had a social nature as warm and genial as spring sunshine. A man of sterling worth, dignified bearing and inflexible integrity, he delighted in an unpretentious manner, to leave upon others the impress of his own character and to reveal, by a true life, the power of noble manhood." He died at his home in Springfield, September 24, 1898, but his life labors will benefit mankind for many years to come, and the memory of his career will long linger as an influence for good. Vita patrifi a nobilitate, Deo et humanitati.

Dr. Griffith's father, Nicholas Howard Griffith, belonged to the Tenth Regiment Missouri Volunteers, 1861-65, his grandfather was Mordecai Griffith of Baltimore, Md. His mother, Sarah M. (Parish) Griffith, was the granddaughter of Colonel Harlow, a pioneer of Kentucky and an officer in the Revolution. His father's uncle, Prof. Dorsey, of Baltimore, and his cousin, Prof. Dorsey of Philadelphia, were both eminent physicians and authority on medical questions.

GRIFFITH, Mrs. Alice A. (McElroy), daughter of William Irvine and Jane (Muldrow), McElroy, was born near Palmyra, Mo., September 25, 1859. Her early life was spent on a large prairie farm near Perry, Mo., where inherited colored people did the planting, plowing, mowing, etc. Her father died before she was sixteen years old and she began the individual struggle for preparation to teach school, in which, with no libraries, indifferent country schools and few people of culture, her progress was unsatisfactory and slow. However, relief soon came from Illinois; her cousin, Col. James A. Barrett, who afterwards raised the Tenth Illinois Cavalry for the Civil War, made her a proposition to pay all expenses if she would become a student of the Illinois Woman's College, at Jacksonville. This she gladly accepted.

As a green country girl she came to Springfield, Ill., in 1859. Soon afterward an invitation was received by her cousin's family, in which she was included, to a large reception given by Major and Mrs. John T. Stuart. It was an embarrassing compliment, as she was conscious of her ignorance of all society customs and regulations, yet she accepted it and attended. As she stood in the large parlors, surrounded by beautiful women in silks and satins, laces and jewels, trembling in her boots for fear she would say something out of place or hear a response that she did not understand, Mr. Lincoln came to them and very cordially spoke to her cousin, as they had been young men together. Mr. Barret said, "Lincoln, this is a little protege I found over in Missouri, and I'm going to put her in our new college in Jacksonville." Her name was not mentioned in the introduction, but as she looked up into the face of that tall man with deep searching and questioning gray eyes, she was mesmerized, as it were, feeling that he read her character and thoughts. He did not speak for five or ten minutes, and then began to talk of schools, teachers and school work, which brought her a restful independence with pleasure and benefit by a half hour talk.

As a student in the Illinois Women's College under the tutelage of the cultured and efficient President, Rev. J. F. Jaques, she did good work, graduating July, 1882, as salutatorian of the first class to graduate from the college. After leaving college she taught in Woods Academy, Louisiana, Mo., for four years, and studied Latin and German one year in Fayette, Mo., under President Lucky. Again she taught two years in Collinsville, Ill., with Dr. Samuel Willard and Dr. Merrill. June 1, 1859, she was married to Dr. B. M. Griffith, a practicing physician in Louisiana, Mo. In 1865, just two weeks before Mr. Lincoln was assassinated, they moved to Springfield, Ill., where the Griffith home is today.

Having received a religious education in childhood, she has, through life, been interested in Home and Foreign Missions in connection with the Presbyterian Church. She has been Recording Secretary for the Local Society, in the Presbyterian Society and in the Synodical Society; in all a big record about eighty years' service. Mrs. Griffith has always led an active life. She is a charter member of the Authors' Club of 1882; is a member of the Bible Class, the Via Christi Study Class, the State Historical Society, the Y. W. C. A., the Alumnae Association of the Woman's College and the Woman's Club.

She enjoys recreation in the parks with her kodak and friends. In late years she takes great pleasure in making scrap-books of clippings collected from newspapers, classified as Home, Literature, Science, Religion, Politics, etc.; she pastes them on leaves in book-form and has them bound. She typewrites an index and short preface with each volume. The Home volumes especially always awaken an interest to family and friends, as they review the events of individual interest of the long ago.

The loving Lord gives grace and strength; For all the duties of Life; If we ask in faith with true intent, He abrogates all strife.
GRIFTI TH, Ben Barrett, M. D.—Among those who devote their time and energies to the practice of medicine and have gained a leading place in the ranks of the profession is Dr. B. B. Griffith. Since 1885 he has been in active practice in Springfield, and his skill and ability are attested by the liberal patronage he enjoys. Dr. Griffith was born in Louisiana, Mo., on the 17th of September, 1861, a son of the late Dr. B. M. Griffith, who is represented elsewhere in this work. The subject of this sketch was privately reared and educated in Springfield, belug there graduated at the High School, June 14, 1878. During the following two years he took a post-graduate course preparatory to entering the medical college, and for one year was a student at Ann Arbor, Mich. He then entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, where he was graduated in 1882, and after two years spent in his father’s office, matriculated at the New York College of Physicians & Surgeons, graduating from that institution with the class of 1885. He then returned to his home in Springfield and was associated in practice with his father until the death of the latter; since which time he has been in practice alone. Success has attended his efforts and he enjoys a large and lucrative patronage in his profession.

As a progressive physician, Dr. Griffith keeps well informed on the latest discoveries and theories known to the science, and is a member of the State Medical Society, the Sangamon County Medical Society, the Central Illinois District Medical Society and the American Medical Association. For fourteen years he was a member of the City Board of Health, and for eighteen years has been on the staff of the St. John’s Hospital. He stands high in the esteem of his professional brethren. Socially the Doctor is a member of the Blue Lodge, Chapter, Council and Commandery of the Masonic Order, and also belongs to the Knights of Pythias fraternity. As a member of the Illinois National Guard, he twice saw active service, once in East St. Louis and once in Chicago during the riots, first with the Fifth Regiment and later with the Second Brigade.

On June 28, 1903, Dr. Griffith was married to Miss Sadie A. Gildings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Gildings, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and they reside in their pleasant home, at No. 1115 South Second Street, a quiet and restful place. They have two children, Alice Hester, born at Springfield, Ill., April 14, 1900; and Ben Barret, Jr., born at Colorado Springs, March 4, 1911.

GROSSELL, Michael.—The history of the development of the commercial interests of Springfield is dealt with elsewhere in this work. The present prosperity is largely due to the efforts of the men who built the foundations upon which the present generation is rearing so stately a structure. Among the earlier mer-always lived. The father died at the age of sixty years, and the mother, if still living, is now eighty-two years old. Mr. Groth was married in Germany, November 11, 1857, to Olga Radtke, daughter of Ludwig and Augusta (Branesch) Radtke, her father born September 24, 1810, and the mother born September 16, 1820. There were seven children in the Radtke family, namely: Anna, wife of Charles Stuempe; Mrs. Groth, who was born November 3, 1856; one son, Frank, of Missouri, born January 13, 1859; and four died in infancy. Mr. Radtke was a Corporal for a time in the German Army, in which he served two years, and one brother served in the navy, and a half-brother of Mrs. Groth served in the army. When Mrs. Groth accompanied her husband to America in 1886 her mother came with her and located in Alton, Ill., where she died.

Mr. Groth brought his wife and their two children to America in 1886, one of whom is still living, and they first located in Effingham County, Ill., where they remained but two months. They then removed to Sangamon County, where he worked for nine years on the Tamsy farm, but in 1894, purchased a small tract of land in Woodside Township, where he has since lived. He has but five acres of land, but it is sufficient for the purpose to which it is devoted, and as he is skilled in gardening has been very successful in this line. He has a beautiful home and is in good circumstances. A member of the Lutheran Church, and in politics a Republican, he is highly respected as an upright and substantial citizen, and stands well in his community.

Fourteen children have been born to Mr. Groth and wife, namely: William, a farmer, married Lena Welborg; Charles is a boiler-maker in the employ of the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad Company, married Ida Stuckemeyer; John, a gardener, lives at home; Elizabeth, also at home, is a dressmaker; Anna, at home; a bookkeeper in the employ of the Roberts Laundry Company; Olga, at home, is clerk for the Smith Grocery Company; Frank is attending college in Chicago; Louis is attending a German school, and six died in infancy. There are two grandchildren in the family: Louis and Frederick George. Mr. Groth is the owner of a valuable seven-acre tract of land on South Sixth Street, near the city.

GROVE, G. R.—All over Sangamon County are to be found men who are holding to their farm land with tenacious purpose, for they realize its value and propose to keep it, no matter what price may be offered for it. One of the men who has demonstrated his ability as an agriculturist is G. R. Grove, residing on Section 34, Divernon Township, where he owns a farm of sixty acres. He was born in Maryland, February 6, 1866, being a son of James S. and Mary D. (Cauliflower) Grove, farmers of Maryland. Mr. and Mrs. James S. Grove resided in their native State until coming to the town of Divernon in 1905. Mrs. Grove’s mother was one of three sisters who married three brothers.

G. R. Grove attended school in Maryland, and grew up as any healthy, happy farmer’s son, and after coming to Illinois began farming for himself. His valuable farm is located two and three-quarter miles southeast of Divernon, and he and his wife dispense a royal hospitality.

On August 16, 1889, Mr. Grove was married in Springfield to Miss Nancy E. Dill, born in Montgomery County, November 20, 1866, a daughter of A. B. and Nancy (Hilman) Dill. She was brought to Sangamon County by her parents when she was six years old, and this has since continued her home. Both her parents are now deceased. The grandfather of Mrs. Grove, J. B. Hilman, came to Sangamon County in 1818, and spent the remainder of his life there. Two of her brothers, A. W. and W. F. Dill, survive, the former residing in Hope, Ark., and the latter in Butler, Ill. Four other members of her family are deceased. The Grandfather Dill came from Ohio, settled near Auburn and bought 400 acres of land. He went back to Ohio, where he died while on visit. His wife died on the farm near Auburn. An aunt, Mrs. Dicy Dill, is now living, being eighty-two years old. She had two brothers in the Civil War, and her Grandfather Smith was born in New York and was a sea captain for years. When she was about seven years old the family moved to Sangamon County, and she remembers back seventy-five years very distinctly to a winter when the snow was so deep that it came up to the roof of the log cabin.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove have two sons: James Clarence, born June 13, 1900, and Howard Leroy, born August 5, 1902. For the past twenty-one years Mr. Grove has been a Modern Woodman of America. Since casting his first vote he has been a Democrat, and served as School Director for three terms. He is an enterprising farmer and stockman, interested in his home and devoted to his family. The Groves stand high in their neighborhood, and have many friends throughout the township. They are members of the Baptist Church and Mrs. Grove is a member of the Royal Neighbors.

GUNDY, Nathaniel.—One of the best known of Pawnee’s citizens is found in Nathaniel Gundy, the oldest wagon-maker there, a veteran of the great Civil War, and a man who is universally respected and esteemed on account of his many sterling traits of character. Mr. Gundy was born in Fairfield County, Ohio, March 20, 1835, a son of Noah and Nancy (Lyon) Gundy. His paternal grandfather was a native of Germany, who came to Pennsylvania and later removed to Ohio, where he died in 1836, and his maternal grandfather, a native of Holland, died in Ohio in 1845. Noah Gundy was born in Ohio, January 6, 1800, and was married in 1829 to Nancy Lyons, who was born in Germany July 6, 1800, and who came to Pennsylvania when three years old and to Ohio when nine years old. Mr. Gundy died in 1896, having followed farming all of his life, and his wife passed away in 1884. There were ten children in their family, of whom five are now living: Silas, George W., Nathaniel, Betty and Hannah, and four of the sons of this couple served in the Civil War. Noah Gundy served during the War of 1812 and Nathaniel, his son, has many mementos of that struggle, some of which were made by his father.

Mr. Gundy's education was secured in the schools of Ohio and he remained at home until he was twenty years of age, at which time he started to learn the trade of wagon maker, and remained in his home county for three years longer. He then located in Shelby County, Ill., but in 1839 came to Pawnee, where he has followed his trade to the present time. On August 10, 1862, he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred Twenty-Fourth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for service in the Civil War, under Captain Sanders, which was mustered in September 10, 1862, and accompanied this hard-fighting regiment throughout its many hard marches, numerous skirmishes and vicious battles, always comporting himself as a brave and valorous soldier and making for himself a record of which any man might well be proud. Some of the battles may be here mentioned: Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson, Champion Hill, Black River, Siege of Vicksburg, second battle of Champion Hill, Jackson, Benton, a trip across Louisiana to Shreveport, New Orleans, Mobile Bay, Spanish Fort and Fort Blakeley, and then a march to Macon, Georgia, where he was ordered home, going via Vicksburg up the river to Cairo, Ill., and thence to Chicago, where the regiment was mustered out August 16, 1865, after a faithful service of eleven days less than three years. Mr. Gundy was always willing and eager to do his duty and this generally brought him into the thickest of the fighting, and at the Siege of Vicksburg he received a wound, his entire time under fire being a matter of eighty-seven days. He is now a popular comrade of A. J. Weber Post, No. 421, Grand Army of the Republic, and for the past twenty-three years has served as Chaplain. In 1878 he was elected to the office of Overseer of Public Highways, and he has also served as Assiistant Postmaster of Pawnee and as School Director. For many years he has been a Republican, but he casts his vote rather for the man than the party, and lets no party lines bind him. Baptized in the faith of the Christian Church January 7, 1800, Mr. Gundy has always been a faithful, conscientious church member, and in all his seventy-six years has never touched either a drop of liquor or other spirituous liquor.

Mr. Gundy was married in Pawnee Township, March 21, 1857, to Mary J. Williamson, who was born June 22, 1840, in Indiana, daughter of Benjamin and Catherine (Snyder) Williamson, natives of Pennsylvania, who were married in Ohio and removed to Indiana, where both died. They had nine children, namely: Elmina, Hiram, Nancy, Levi, Susan, Mary J., Cassandra, Laura and Henry. Of these only two are now living: Mrs. Gundy, and Henry, who lives in Grand Rapids, Mich. Mr. Gundy's grandparents were Germans and early settlers of Pennsylvania.

Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gundy: Evert, born June 26, 1868, single and living at home; Minnie, born April 1, 1877, married Charles Hollow and now lives in Tulsa, Okla.; and James H.: Henry D., born January 27, 1874, died October 4, 1894, and an infant daughter born September 4, 1872, died on the same day.

GUY, David Franklin, a substantial citizen of Springfield, Ill., residing at No. 1710 East Carpenter Street, has for seventeen years been engineer of the Sangamon Coal Company's mine, and is one of that large corporation's most trusted employees. Mr. Guy was born on a farm in Watauga County, N. C., in 1853, a son of James C. and Caroline (Cable) Guy, and a grandson of Levi and Lydia May Guy.

There were no free schools in the vicinity of Mr. Guy's birthplace and his grandfather paid for three months' tuition for the lad, but owing to a quarrel he had with another boy he left school two weeks after entering. He is well read, however, having learned much from observation. Mr. Guy's grandfather, Levi Guy, who had served during the Mexican War, was born in two children, Gladys and James H. and has been so outspoken in his beliefs, that he incurred the enmity of those who bad Southern sentiments and was eventually taken out and hung. At this time James C. Guy, David F. Guy's father, was serving in the Union army, as were also three of his brothers, but he obtained leave and hurried home to hunt down, if possible, his father's murderers, only to suffer a like fate himself, also being hung by Southern sympathizers. His three brothers lost their lives while doing army service.

In 1873 David F. Guy located in Olney, Ill., finding employment on farms for several years and then working in a coal mine in Fountain County, Ind. He then went to Grape Creek, Ill., where he worked under mine superintend-ent John Vosi as fire boss and coal digger, and in 1889 came with Mr. Vosi to the Sangamon Coal Company's mine, where he dug coal until 1893, and in that year was made engineer, a position which he has since held. In the spring of 1904 he built the fine residence which he now occupies.

Mr. Guy was married in Salem, Marion County, Ill., November 7, 1850, to Miss Elizabeth Peart, daughter of Benjamin Peart, a well-known citizen of Logan County, Ky., where Mrs. Guy was born and reared. There have been born to this union the following children: LeRoy, a resident of Potlatch, Idaho, who married a Miss Hollingshead; Carrie Myrtle, who married J. P. Gannon, of Springfield; James Benjamin, of Springfield, who married Flo Cuff; and Annie L., who married William Cherry, of Springfield. Mr. Guy was reared in the faith of the Presbyterian Church. He is a stanch Republican in politics and his fraternal connections are with the Modern Woodmen and the Odd Fellows.

GUYMAN, Ralph A.—In these days of progress, when all business connected with the printing trades is receiving such an impetus forward, those who are engaged in any line of reproduction are bound to succeed. The 19th century printer differs materially from his prototype of fifty years ago. Not only have methods changed, but there are so many more opportunities now for securing fine work, that the up-to-date printer has to be well informed and skillful, and must know how to meet the popular demand rapidly and satisfactorily. One of the most progressive of this class of men is Ralph A. Guyman, born in Randolph County, Ill., November 20, 1876. He is a son of William J. and Amella (Hanna) Randolph, both born in Randolph County, he in 1849, and she in 1854. He was a miner, who spent his life in his native county.

Ralph A. Guyman was brought up in one of the small towns of Randolph County, and followed his father's calling until he went to Indiana. From there he came to Springfield, in 1892. Coming there, he commenced learning the printer's trade, and has followed that line of work ever since. He is one of the leading men in his line, and has been so successful that he is regarded as one of the responsible men of his locality.

Mr. Guyman was married in Springfield, October 7, 1896, to Elizabeth Andrews, born in Springfield, October 2, 1881, daughter of John and Bridget Andrews, both of England. Mr. and Mrs. Guyman became the parents of two children: William A., born March 30, 1901, and Helen L., born July 13, 1903. For a number of years Mr. Guyman has been a consistent member of the Methodist Church. He is a Democrat, and is proud of his party and what it represents. Fraternally Mr. Guyman is a member of the Order of Owls, the Royal Arcanum, the Fraternal Order of Rangers, and the Pressmen's Union, being active in all of them. Geuial and courteous, Mr. Guyman makes and retains friends, and is popular wherever he is known.

HACKETT, Daniel J.—Recent mine accidents in Illinois and elsewhere have demonstrated the fact that there is a fascination in the work of the miner that attracts men, clearly outside of any mercenary reason. Men who have escaped death or injury by the slightest of margins will gladly return to their positions the moment they can. The average miner does not retire from the work until he has accumulated a comfortable competency or until old age has incapacitated him for further duty. Daniel J. Hackett, who retired but a few years ago, was a miner during all of his active career, and followed his calling in a number of States in the Union. He was born on a farm near Clonmell, County Tipperary, Ireland, March 17, 1848, the youngest of the seven children of John and Margaret (Carey) Hackett, both of whom died on the Emerald Isle.

Mr. Hackett attended the schools of his native place, and on reaching the age of sixteen years embarked for the United States. On his arrival here he joined his sisters in Schuykill County, Pa., where he first became engaged in mining, one year later being a full-fledged miner and drawing a man's salary of $250 per month, the average wages paid in those days. He was married in 1875 in Mahanoy City, Schuylkill County, Pa., and during the following year left for the West, locating first in Iowa and working in mining at Fort Dodge and in Boone County. His wife joined him in Iowa, and in Oct., 1879, they went to Equality, Ill., where one year was spent, then removed to Springfield, where they have since made their home. Mr. Hackett retired from mining in 1902 and since then has been living a quiet life at his Chippewa residence at No. 1629 North Eighth street.

On September 13, 1875, Mr. Hackett was united in marriage with Catherine Fall, who was also a native of Clonmell, County Tipperary, Ireland, where she was born March 17, 1856, a daughter of Richard and Mary (Travers) Fall, the former of whom died in Ireland and the latter in New York City. Mrs. Hackett came to the United States with her mother and a sister, and after landing in New York City, the little party went direct to Mahanoy City, Pa., where numerous of their relatives had already arrived. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hackett, namely: Margaret, Mrs. John McVannar of Springfield; John J., also of this city; Thomas Richard, who died at the age of twenty-seven years; Nicholas and James, residing at home with their parents; Mary Ellen, who married Charles C. Carter, of Springfield; and Elizabeth May, Catherine and Daniel Joseph, all at home.

The family are consistent members of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Hackett is a stanch Democrat in his political beliefs and has always been ready to defend the principles of his party. He has spent a long and useful life and is now enjoying the fruits of his years of labor. He has been a member of the Western Catholic Union twenty-five years and is a charter member of the Catholic Order of Foresters. He also belongs to the United American Society and has been a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians for forty years.

HAEGELE, Patrick (deceased).—The late Patrick Haegel, who passed away at his home in Springfield, Ill., January 13, 1906, was highly esteemed as a man of true worth and a public-spirited citizen. He was a successful business man and left a large number of sincere friends to mourn his loss. Mr. Haegel was a native of Rittenberg, Germany, born February 5, 1849, being a son of Patrick and Theresa (Swartz) Haegel, both natives of the same place. The father was a farmer by occupation, and both parents died in Germany at an advanced age. They had eight children Patrick being the oldest, and the others were: Tillie lives in Germany; Mary, wife of John Bush, of Chicago; Theresa, of Germany; Lena, wife of Lenard Schaefer, of Springfield; John, a Road Commissioner, and Bernard, a machinist, both of Springfield; Tardy, a successful farmer of North Dakota.

Mr. Haegel received his educational training in the schools of his native land and came to America in 1867. He engaged in the butcher business in Springfield, and later established a retail meat market on the corner of Sixth Street and North Grand Avenue. In 1871, he purchased a forty-acre tract of pasture land near Oak Ridge Cemetery, and sixty acres five miles west of Springfield. During that year, he engaged in dairy business, which he successfully conducted until his death. Soon after coming to Springfield, he erected a beautiful home on four city lots on what is now North Grand Avenue. As a successful business manager, he was able to provide well for his family. He was a devout Catholic and was affiliated with SS. Peter and Paul Church, belonged to St. Paul's Society, and was a member of the Royal Neighbors and the Modern Woodmen of America, and in politics, a Democrat.

Mr. Haegel's marriage was celebrated in SS. Peter and Paul Church, Springfield, May 25, 1871, Father Varly officiating when he was united with Elizabeth Zimmerman, a native of Germany, born July 16, 1850, daughter of Bernard and Barbara Zimmerman, also natives of that country. The Zimmerman family came to Springfield in 1866 and located there permanently. Mr. Zimmerman died in 1894 and his wife in 1891. Twelve children were born to Mr. Haegel and wife; four are deceased: Frank, born February 16, 1879, a successful farmer living eight miles west of Springfield; Carl B., born October 19, 1887, lives at home; Minnie, born June 6, 1887, wife of Clyde A. Ralph, of Springfield; Anna born February 13, 1882, wife of Frank Galenbeck, a farmer of Westport, Minn.; Frances, born February 19, 1884, wife of Henry E. Dressendorfer of Springfield; Elizabeth Barbara, born April 27, 1889, at home; Mary Rowe, born April 25, 1892, at home. Mrs. Haegel died March 1, 1911. Some years after the death of her husband, Mrs. Haegel disposed of the one hundred acre farm. She was a faithful member of SS. Peter and Paul Catholic Church and has reared her children in the same faith. She was a good mother to her children and was warmly regarded by many friends. Mrs. Haegel belonged to the Royal Neighbors and the Catholic Foresters.

HAGAMAN, Thomas, a retired farmer of Buffalo, II., was born in Bath County, Ky., January 15, 1837, son of John and Elizabeth (Shropshire) Hagaman, the former a native of Philadelphia, Pa., and the latter of Kentucky. The father was a carpenter and he and his wife spent their latter years in Kentucky. He came to Illinois on a visit to his son Thomas and was taken sick and died there. He served through the War of 1812, taking part in the Battle of New Orleans. His father was a native of Holland and his wife's family were from Kentucky. John Hagaman and his wife had fourteen children, of whom nine were daughters, and besides Thomas two sons and two daughters still survive.

The education of Thomas Hagaman was received in Kentucky, and though he attended school only about three months, he educated himself later and made the most of all his opportunities for improvement. As a young man he conducted a saw-mill in Bath County, Ky., for five years, and for two years worked in iron mills there. He came to Sangamon County in 1880 and spent two years driving an ox team, then took up farming. He worked ten years in a tile yard, then resumed farming and became quite successful. For the past twenty-five years he has acted as street commissioner and has also served as Constable. He and his son have been quite successful in conducting a small apary. He is a devout Christian and carries his teachings and principles into his every-day life. For the past thirty-five years he has been a Deacon in the Christian Church, of which he is an active member. In politics he is a Democrat. He has worked hard most of his life and well enjoys the rest he has earned.

January 15, 1862, Mr. Hagaman married, in Springfield, Sarah McClain, who was born in Bath County, Ky., July 28, 1838, and died October 4, 1901. Her father was a farmer and he and his wife spent all their lives in Kentucky. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hagaman: Albert, of Buffalo, Ill.; Isabelle, Mrs. Masters, living on a farm near Mechanicsburg; Lafayette, a carpenter, living with his father; Thomas, died July 20, 1871; David A., also a carpenter, lives with his father. Mr. Hagaman has fourteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. He married (second) Mrs. Ellen Cornell, a native of Kentucky, and no children were born of this union. Mollie II., a step-daughter lives in the family. Mr. Hagaman has a comfortable home in Buffalo.
HAINES, John C. Fremont.—It is not so many years ago that Sangamon County was naught but a broad, rolling prairie, with the feel of the plow unknown and where vegetation ran wild, and it is hard to believe, as one views the prosperous, flourishing farms of today, that in some cases the men who reclaimed the land from the wilderness are still cultivating it, while in other and more frequent instances the present owners are sons of the original pioneers. John C. Fremont Haines, a prosperous and well known agriculturist of Sangamon County, was born on the property on which he now carries on operations, on Section 16, Cotton Hill Township, September 30, 1858, a son of John Wesley and Sarah C. (Hart) Haines.

The grandfather of John C. F. Haines was a native of Kentucky who came to Sangamon County in the early days and there spent the remainder of his life. On the maternal side the grandfather was born and died in Monroe County, Ky., where W. Haines was born April 28, 1826, in Allen County, Ky., and in 1842 accompanied his parents to Sangamon County. In 1858 he purchased property in Cotton Hill Township and there spent the remainder of his life, engaged in agricultural pursuits, his death occurring August 8, 1896. Mr. Haines married Sarah C. Hart, and their immediate descendents now living are: Richard J., born in Hillsboro, Ill., August 6, 1829, and her death occurred September 20, 1905, both being buried in Sangamon County.

John C. Fremont Haines secured his education in the country schools of Sangamon County, being reared to agricultural pursuits and taught to love his home, and was exceedingly fond of music as a boy. He has followed agricultural pursuits all of his life on this farm, and now owns 163 acres of some of the finest farming land in that section of the county. Mr. Haines was a Republican in his political belief until 1896, at which time William J. Bryan was a candidate for the Presidency, and since that time he has cast his vote rather for the man than the party. He served as Collector of his township in 1889, and has also been a member of the School Board. Fraternally he is connected with Modern Woodmen Camp No. 619, and is also a member of the Methodist Church.

On September 30, 1884, Mr. Haines was married at his present home by Rev. B. D. Wiley, to Mary E. Eldridge, who was born in Sangamon County, Ill., September 19, 1863, a daughter of John and Hannah A. (Merrill) Eldridge. John Eldridge was born in New York, July 25, 1836, and came to Illinois in 1861, where he taught school until 1863, a daughter of John and Hannah A. (Merrill) Eldridge. John Eldridge was born in New York, July 25, 1836, and came to Illinois in 1861, where he taught school until 1863, and was later connected with the University of Illinois. His death occurred August 31, 1888. He married Hanah A. Merrill, who was born in New York, August 1, 1852, and died May 7, 1888.

To Mr. and Mrs. Haines there have been born the following children: Nellie, born June 26, 1885; Katie, born February 20, 1887, married Charles Nation and has one child, Emma; Eliza, born August 16, 1886, married George Coomes, lives in North Carolina and has two children. Grace and Nellie; Eldridge, born April 6, 1891, living at home; Harry W., born February 12, 1893; Herbert, May 19, 1895; Lola, born August 27, 1897; Ira, born September 15, 1899; Charles, born September 26, 1901; Laura, born January 11, 1904; Mary, born July 16, 1906; and Neva, born February 26, 1906. All of these children were born in Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County.

Mr. Haines is one of the representative farmers of his district and is of a public-spirited nature, always being found in the front rank of those movements which his judgment leads him to believe will be of benefit to his community. He has an excellent farm and is looked upon as one of the substantial men of Cotton Hill Township.

HALL, David S.—Springfield has been largely developed by the capital of those who make the city their home. But little outside money has been required to establish and carry on the various institutions which afford employment to many of the city's residents. Those who have lived here for years realize the excellent opportunities afforded for profitable investment and secure them for their own benefit, as well as to that of others interested. One of the heavy landowners and capitalists now living retired from former activities is Davis S. Hall, of Mechanicsburg. He was born in Shelby County, Ky., January 9, 1830, son of David and Juliet (Owen) Hall, both natives of Shelby County. The father owned a considerable amount of land, but left Kentucky, in 1854, on account of his opinions regarding the institution of slavery, and found more congenial surroundings in Sangamon County. There, he died in April, 1864, living to see the blot of slavery wiped from the map of his beloved country. His wife passed away some years later, and both are affectionately remembered. They were foremost in the promotion of all enterprises having for their object the betterment of their community, and both bore an important part in the establishment of schools and churches in the county.

David S. Hall went to school in Mechanicsburg, and was reared to general farm work, remaining at home until his marriage. Owning to his southern birth, Mr. Hall felt he could not enter the army, but gave his hearty support to all war measures and knew and admired Abraham Lincoln, voting for him in 1860, and 1864, and being prostrated by his death. Being a strong Republican, he has served his party efficiently and faithfully in different township offices. Both he and his father were deeply interested in the formation of the Republican party, being at the time strong Whigs, and both did their part in securing its success during the stormy days of the early sixties. Early in life, Mr. Hall connected himself with the Methodist Church, giving it a warm, loyal and generous support.

On March 15, 1855, Mr. Hall was married to Elizabeth J. Fullerwider, daughter of Jacob N. and Agnes Fullerwider, who came from Shelby County, Ky., to Sangamon County, in 1834. Mrs. Hall passed away, deeply lamented, February 11, 1902, having borne her husband four children: Georgie E. wife of William T. Grout, of Denver, Colo.; Charles B., Edwin P. and Jacob F., all married and having families, and residing in Mechanicsburg. Mr. Hall owns over 800 acres of the best farming land to be found in his part of the State. His property is all highly improved, well stocked and exceedingly productive and he is one of the representative men of the county. His sons are living up to their father’s high standard of character and are fast becoming men of importance in their community.

HALL, Edward Augustus.—The mercantile houses of Springfield compare favorably with any in the State, their connections enabling them to carry a stock of goods surpassed by few, whose resources and the volume of their trade are productive of prices that meet the most exacting demands of their customers. This desirable state of affairs has been brought about through the energy and foresight of the men who are at their head, and to them is due the credit for the commercial importance of Springfield as a distributing center. One of the best known houses of this class is that operating under the name of Hall & Herrick Co., clothiers, of which Edward Augustus Hall is President and Treasurer.

Mr. Hall was born at Pekin, Tazewell County, Ill., August 21, 1845, being a son of Jonathan Parker and Esther Lavina (Fowler) Hall. He was born near Nashville, Tenn., October 28, 1815, and the latter in Rochester, N. Y., February 9, 1826. The maternal grandfather, Robert Fowler, was a soldier in the War of 1812, while the maternal grandmother, Ann M. (Platt) Fowler, was a descendant of the Platts, founders of the city of Plattsburg, N. Y. Jonathan P. Hall was brought to Springfield by his parents, in 1828, but moved to Pekin in 1838, which remained his home until his death in 1887. His wife came to Pekin with her parents in 1833, and she still survives, enjoying good health at the age of eighty-four years. Mr. Hall was an architect and builder, and some of the best work done in this line at Pekin in the earlier days, is his.

Edward Augustus Hall attended the public schools of Pekin, and in 1862 began his business career as a clerk in the dry goods store of Cummings Brothers. In 1871 he founded a dry goods business in Pekin, known as E. A. Hall & Company, combining it, in 1874, with that of Cummings Brothers, under the caption of Cummings, Hall & Company. In 1876 Mr. Hall came to Springfield, and in conjunction with J. E. Herrick established the clothing firm of Hall & Herrick, which still continues, although it was incorporated in 1906, as Hall & Herrick Company, with Mr. Hall as President and Treasurer. In addition, Mr. Hall is Vice President of the Sangamon Loan & Trust Company, and Director in the State National Bank.

Although he has been so active in business life, Mr. Hall has not neglected his duties as a citizen, beginning with his service to his country as Sergeant of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, during the Civil War. As a loyal Republican, he served as Alderman of Springfield during 1883 and 1884; as Supervisor of Sangamon County during the term between 1894 and 1898; as Trustee of the Park Board, during the term of 1900 to 1905, by being elected on the Citizens’ ticket to this last named office. An article written by Mr. Hall entitled “Springfield Parks” appears on another page in these volumes. He was appointed by Gov. Dunceen a member of the State Fire Commission, on April 24, 1900. He has also been Treasurer of the State Fair, serving in 1889 and 1891; was Director of the Springfield Exposition and Fair from the organization of the association to the location of the State Fair in 1895, and was treasurer of the Illinois State Board of Agriculture from 1901 to 1906. In each one of these offices Mr. Hall displayed the same conscientious attention to detail, and the same skillful executive ability, which have insured his business success, and the people he has thus served cannot be too grateful to him. Mr. Hall has also been active in fraternal matters, being a Mason in high standing, having joined that organization in 1877. He is a member of the G. A. R. and served the company during 1902; is a charter member of the Sangamon Club, and was its President during 1890 and 1900, and is also a charter member of the Country Club. During 1908 he was President of the Chamber of Commerce, of which he is an active member.

On March 12, 1873, Mr. Hall was married in Pekin, Ill., to Frances Augusta Browne, born in Peoria County, Ill., November 1, 1845. Her family were among the pioneers of Peoria County, coming there from Massachusetts in 1833. There is no issue of this marriage. Mr. Hall is prominently identified with the Congregational Church, which he affiliates with, and is one of the honored supporters of the Republican party.

It would be difficult to point to any measure of importance which looked towards the betterment of the city or county that has not been supported by Mr. Hall, for he has the welfare of his community at heart. His energies have always been directed towards securing good government, improved conditions and homorable methods of administration, and that he has succeeded in accomplishing much the record of his life demonstrates beyond any doubt.

HALL, Thomas, a retired business man of Springfield, has spent most of his life in that City. He was born in County Limerick, Ireland, in November, 1836, a son of Thomas and Mary (Ryan) Hall, both natives of that country. The mother died in Ireland and the father, who was a gardener by occupation, came to America in 1838. One easily finds that the year 1838 is excellent for Thomas Hall, he was only Edward, and he does not turn thirty years old, that is to say, that he is about twenty years old, that he was born in the year 1838. He and his wife had three sons and three daughters and the only member of the family now surviving is Thomas.

Mr. Hall came to America the year after his father, and after coming to Springfield worked a year in a brick yard. He moved to Chicago and there learned the trade of blacksmith, at which he worked in that city three years, then returned to Springfield and followed the same line of work until his retirement a few years ago. He was said for some time in a shop that stood on the ground now occupied by the St. Nicholas Hotel, and later engaged in business with James Kennedy, under the firm name of Hall & Kenney, this partnership being dissolved some years later, when Mr. Hall embarked in business alone.
He was always well patronized and had a good reputation in his line.

Mr. Hall resided in Springfield, in 1861, to Johanna McCarthy, a native of Ireland, where both her parents died. Twelve children were born of this union, of whom the following five now survive: Edward, a blacksmith living in Springfield; Dennis, a horse-shoer by trade, residing in St. Louis; Margaret, widow of John Dunham, of Springfield; Catherine, wife of William Thorpe, a stock-buyer and wool dealer, and who lives at Springfield; Mrs. Mary Hickey, also of Springfield.

Mrs. Hall died in 1906, deeply mourned by her family and friends. Mr. Hall is a member of the Roman Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception and in politics is a Democrat. He owns a handsome residence at 1401 East Capitol Avenue and is well known in the city. Mr. Hall attended school a short time after coming to Springfield and endeavored to take advantage of his opportunities to improve himself in many ways.

HALL, Thomas R., a prosperous young farmer living just north of the city of Springfield, Ill., is a native of that city, born May 17, 1884, son of Joseph B. S. and Katherine (McCann) Hall, the former born in Kentucky, October 8, 1855, and the latter in Donybrook, near Dublin, Ireland. Joseph B. S. Hill came to Sangamon County about 1870 and became employed at meat carver at St. Nicholas Hotel, Springfield, where Katherine McCann was also employed, having come to Illinois about the same time as Mr. Hall. He afterward worked about twenty years in the rolling mills in Springfield, and was living on a farm in Bailey County, Tex., but recently moved back to Springfield. He and his wife had three sons, respectively named: Frank J., in Camp No. 156, Coast Artillery, was born December 15, 1887; John, born April 14, 1890, a farmer living near Springfield; Thomas R. All attended public school in Springfield.

After leaving school Thomas R. Hall began working in a brick yard and remained there twelve years, learning to make brick. He was employed two years at the Zoo Park, later for the Springfield Water Works, and for the past two years has been carrying on farming, in which enterprise he has been markedly suc-essful. He owns twenty acres of excellent land, which is easily worth two hundred dol-ar per acre. He is well known in Springfield, where his entire life has been spent, and has many warm friends. About one year ago he joined Camp No. 455, Modern Woodmen of America, and he is a Democrat in politics.
He is a member of the Third Presbyterian Church and is interested in many benevolent causes.

Mr. Hall was married, in Springfield, March 15, 1909, to Miss Mary S. Thorpe, born July 20, 1875, daughter of Thomas and Emily Thorpe, the father born March 24, 1834, and the mother March 3, 1838. Mr. Thorpe and his wife came to Illinois from Ohio in 1858, lived one year at Taylorville, and then came to Springfield, where he is now living. He was a soldier in the Civil War and served as captain 11th Illinois Cavalry, and here he still lives.
He was discharged in 1865. He was taken prisoner at Camp Fort Tyler, Tex., held captive thirteen months, then returned home and received his discharge at Camp But-er, near Springfield, Ill., in 1865. He was discharged with rank of Sergeant and took part in many battles.

HALLAHAN, Daniel O'D.—One of the best known Irish-Americans of Springfield, Ill., is Daniel O'D. Hallahan, who was born in the historic town of Skibbereen, County Cork, Ireland, on May 5, 1869. Skibbereen is particularly remarkable for having been the birthplace of the first Total Abstinence Society or-organized in the world, the father of Mr. Hallahan having been one of its organizers; also remarkable for the patriotism of its inhabitants, it being the birthplace of the Phoenix Society, which subsequently culminated in the Fenian Brotherhood, in the organization of which the late Daniel O'Crowley of Springfield, O'Donovan Rossa and Mr. Hallahan were prominent. The London Times about that date, 1858, referred to Skibbereen as being a "hot-bed of sedition."

Mr. Hallahan is one of the two surviving children of Dauley Hallahan and Mary (O'Donovan) Hallahan, the other survivor being Mrs. Eliza O'Donovan, residing in Skibbereen. Daniel Hallahan was the nephew of the celebrated Rev. Dauley Burke, D. D. who was an eminent scholar and an ardent supporter of Robert Emmett in the rebellion of 1798 and who was compelled to leave Ireland, a reward having been offered for his capture, alive or dead. He escaped to France in a fishing boat and became either a professor or President of the Irish College in Paris, returning to Ireland in the early part of the nineteenth century and dying shortly after his arrival. A tablet to his memory was placed in the Art Hall of the college. Daniel Hallahan for many years had been Custom House Agent at Castletownsend and Skibbereen. He died in Skibbereen, October 30, 1849, aged about seventy-six years. Mary O'Donovan Hallahan was a niece of the famous poet O'Donovan (O'Donovan) Hallahan, a local leader in the rebellion of 1798. He was wounded in the battle of Béalawebollig near Clonakility and taken prisoner, tied to a horse and dragged about two miles to the town, then disemboweled while still alive, afterward beheaded, such being one of the sources of amusement indulged in in those days by the soldiers of Christian England. A very handsome monument has been erected to his memory near the place of his death, by public subscription. Mary (O'Donovan) Hallahan, mother of Mr. Hallahan, died in Skibbereen, November 30, 1866, aged seventy-six years.

On attaining his majority, Mr. Hallahan was appointed Custom House Agent and discharged the duties of his office until May 19, 1853, when he, in company with O'Donovan Rossa and a host of other young men, left for this country with the avowed purpose of enlisting in the U.S. Army, and if they survived the war to return to Ireland and use their knowledge and experience in an endeavor to free her. O'Donovan Rossa and Mr. Hallahan are the only survivors. Mr. Hallahan, immediately on his arrival in New York, enlisted in Company C, Thirteenth New York Heavy Artillery for three years, or during the war. He served in Virginia and North Carolina and at the close of the war his regiment was consolidated with the Sixth New York Heavy Artillery, taking the name of the latter Regiment, the company letter having been changed to K. The Regiment was mustered out of service in August, 1865, at Washington, D. C., and discharged at Harts Island, New York, a month later.

Mr. Hallahan was married in New York City on February 3, 1856, in St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, to Miss Anne Sheehy, daughter of Morgan Sheehy and Aune (O'Donovan) Sheehy. She was born in North Reene, County Cork, Ireland, on February 9, 1847. She left Ireland for America in March, 1860, in company with her father, brother John and sister Elizabeth, her mother having died in the year 1848. Her father returned to Ireland in March, 1865, and died in the year 1868. The brother and sister also are dead.

The following named children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Hallahan: John S., married Miss Catherine Murphy, to whom three children have been born—Marie, John S., Jr. and Catherine; Mary T., married to M. J. Hanrahann of Chicago; Elizabeth A., married Harry Ramstetter, and she died April 7, 1898, leaving one child, Catherine; Daniel L. died February 21, 1903, aged twenty-eight years; Florence died November 10, 1922 aged twenty-one years; Joseph G., died January 30, 1904, aged twenty-four years; the survivors are Agnes, Francis Morgan and Genevieve, living at home 401 West Adams Street.

In June, 1874, Mr. Hallahan located in Springfield, which has since been his home. He was for thirty years an employee of the firm of Latham & Souther, Abstractors. In the year 1887 Mr. Hallahan became a partner of the late John J. Hardin, who owned a set of abstract books, under the firm name of Hardin & Hallahan, which partnership continued successfully until 1906, when Mr. Hallahan purchased the remaining interest of Mr. Hardin and continued doing business alone under the former name until September, 1905, when he sold his abstract books to Mr. Walter Eden and retired from active life. Mr. Hallahan is a most patriotic citizen of his adopted country and is actively interested in the progress and welfare of his community. He is also much interested in the cause of his native country. He is a staunch Democrat in politics and his first vote in the United States was for General George B. McClellan. He is a devout Roman Catholic, being a member of St. Agnes Church, is Trustee and Treasurer of Calvary Cemetery Association, belongs to the Knights of Columbus, Catholic Order Foresters and Western Catholic Union, is an active member of Stephenson Post, Grand Army of the Republic, and of the Modern Woodmen of America. In June, 1906, Mr. Hallahan revisited the home of his childhood.

HAMILTON, Frank H.—The work accomplished by the engineering department of Springfield is of such a nature as to call forth universal praise. The capital city of the State is a model in respect to the perfection of its engineering work, and the credit for this supremacy must be given to the efficient City Engineer, Frank H. Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton was born in Springfield, August 8, 1857, a son of the late Henry J. Hamilton and his wife, Rose M. (Bradley) Hamilton. The former was born in New York City and the latter in Lowell, Mass., and they were married at Joliet, Ill.

Henry J. Hamilton was a railroad engineer and came to Springfield, about 1888, as an engineer on the Wabash Railroad. Later he was with the Hannibal & St. Joe Railroad and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas; with Hannibal as his place of residence for four years. Following this he moved back to Springfield and engaged with the last-named road, continuing in its employ until his retirement in 1893. His death occurred five years later, October 3, 1900. His widow survives and makes her home in Springfield. In politics he was a stanch Republican, but could not be induced to accept office. In 1878 he spent a few months in the office assisting W. D. Clark, in his work as City Engineer. Fraternally he was a member of T. E. L. O. M. E. Five children were born to Henry J. Hamilton and wife, but the other son, Charles E., died in 1880. Frank H. Hamilton and his three sisters survive.

Frank H. Hamilton attended the Stuart school and the high school, graduating from the latter in the Class of 1891. He then entered the University of Illinois, and graduated from it in the Class of 1895. Upon his return to Springfield he was appointed Assistant City Engineer, and filled that office until two years later when he was made City Engineer, and he has continued to hold this post ever since. A full description of his work is given elsewhere in this volume.

Mr. Hamilton has a war record of which he may well be proud. In 1890 he joined the Fifth Regiment, Fourth Army Corps, and later Company C, Fifth Infantry, I. N. G. In this he was elected to fill the successive offices until he was made First Lieutenant. In 1897 he was transferred to the Engineers Corps, of which he was made Captain, and thus continued until 1904. Meanwhile, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, he enlisted, passed the examinations, and was appointed First Lieutenant of the Second Regiment, United States Engineers, by President McKinley. Mr. Hamilton continued with his regiment until September of that same year, when he resigned his commission and returned home to resume his interrupted duties as City Engineer. In addition to his arduous duties in this connection, Mr. Hamilton also discharges those connected with the office of Commissioner of Buildings, and is just as efficient as Commissioner as in the office of City Engineer. His political affiliations have always been with the Republican party.

Fraternally Mr. Hamilton is a member of the B. P. O. E., the K. of P. and the Red Men. He is a live, progressive young man, who has the best interests of Springfield at heart, and who understands the requirements of his two exacting positions. Understanding his work thoroughly, he has gone ahead to accomplish what he deemed was necessary, and the results justify him and demonstrate his good judgment and practical common sense.

HAMILTON, John M. (Vol. I, p. 217.)

HAMILTON, Hon. Lloyd F.—A man versed in the laws of the country, as distinguished from the business man or the politician, has been a recognized power. He has been depended upon to conserve the best and most permanent interests of the whole people, and without him and his practical judgment the efforts of the statesman and the industry of the business man and the mechanic would prove futile. The reason is not far to seek; the professional lawyer is never the creature of circumstance; the profession is open to talent, and no definite prestige or success can be attained save by indomitable energy, perseverance, patience and strong and sure judgment. The Hamiltons are a prominent family, and Lloyd Hamilton has ever been noted for these characteristics. Born in April, 1844, at Brandenburg, Meade County, Ky., he is a son of Felix J. and Jane (Wathen) Hamilton. Felix J. Hamilton, who was a native of Kentucky, died in October, 1844, in early manhood, and his widow came to Tazewell County, Ill., where her parents had settled in 1835. Her death occurred in Springfield, III., March 6, 1886.

Lloyd F. Hamilton began his education in the district schools, attended the Eureka College from 1860 until 1864, and then went to the Michigan State University at Ann Arbor. He read law under Judge Schofield, of Marshall, Ill., who became widely known as the man who refused the Supreme Court Judge-ship tendered him by President Cleveland because "he was a plain man and he and his wife did not care for the social activities of Washington." Mr. Hamilton entered the Union College of Law at Chicago, from which he graduated in 1886, and during that year formed a partnership with Paren England. Later he was associated with Thomas G. Prickett and from February, 1882, until May, 1902, his partner was James W. Patten. From that time until recently he practiced with B. L. Catron. At the present time he has no partner. Mr. Hamilton has taken an active part in shaping public sentiment where the welfare of the city has been at stake and he is a representative of its best type of citizen. He has a rare gift of oratory, but has ever been modest and unassuming, and has hesitated about pushing himself forward for positions of public preferment. His political views are those of the Democratic party.

HAMMAN, Samuel.—There are plenty of opportunities for any live business man not only to earn a fair living, but to amass a comfortable fortune in Springfield, for the city, being the State capital, draws almost every class there, and the visiting trade is immense. One of the men who has made a good and honest profit from his endeavors is Samuel Hamman, now retired, who for many years conducted a teaming and transfer business. Mr. Hamman was born in Winchester, Ill., May 12, 1848, being a son of Andrew and Christiana (Schultz) Hamman, both natives of Germany. The parents were married in Germany, but came to America at an early day, landing in New Orleans after a trip of fifty-two days. They came on to St. Louis, and after a short time in that city went to Winchester, Ill., where the father followed his trade of baker. In 1848 he started overland to California in a wagon train of twenty-seven wagons, and died on the way of cholera. A terrible were the ravages of this dread disease that only seven wagons of this train reached California.

In 1858 Samuel Hamman arrived in Springfield, growing up in the city, where he received his educational and business training. In 1868 he established himself in a teaming and transfer business, with which he worked up to large proportions, and continued in it until 1908 when he retired. He is a Democrat, politically, while the German Lutheran Church holds his membership.

On November 20, 1873, Mr. Hamman was married in Springfield to Louisa Hanselman, born in Springfield, November 26, 1855, daughter of Michael and Barbara (Hill) Hanselman. Her parents were also natives of Germany, who located in Springfield, but later went to Mt. Pulaski, Ill., where Mr. Hanselman operated a farm for several years. He then moved back to Springfield and worked at his trade of a carpenter until his death. Both parents died in the same house in Oak Ridge Cemetery. Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hamman: George, a cigar manufacturer of Springfield; Louis, engaged in the same business; Christina is a trained nurse of Denver, Col.; Anna is the wife of Richard C. Latal, a tinner of Springfield; Mary is the wife of Harry Durham, member of the Fire Department of Springfield; Susie lives at home, and two who are deceased. There are three grandchildren in the family. In addition to his beautiful home at No. 101 West Reynolds street, Mr. Hamman owns other city realty and is in very comfortable circumstances. He has never sought public office, but has been content to wield his influence as a private citizen in favor of good government and proper civic improvements.

HAMMON, Charles Henry.—One of the large industries of Springfield which has grown rapidly during the past several decades is the iron foundry business, which during the past few years has been influenced to a great degree by the growth of the automobile industry. Charles Henry Hammon, who is engaged in this business in Springfield, was born in the Capital City, December 16, 1855, a son of George and Catherine (Van Horn) Hammon, natives of Germany.

George Hammon, who was a mechanic by occupation, was born in Baden, Germany, from which country he came to the United States and located in Springfield, where he and Mrs. Hammon were married. Mr. Hammon worked for the &Etna Foundry in Springfield, of which John Lamb was the proprietor, for forty years, and in 1900 retired, since which time he and his wife have resided at No. 413 West Reynolds Avenue. Mr. Hammon was a member of the Old Volunteer Fire Department, and has always been connected with the German Lutheran Church. He is a Democrat in his political views, but has never cared for public office. Of the five children of George and Catherine Hammon, but two survive, Charles Henry and a daughter.

Charles Henry Hammon secured his early education in the German Lutheran school, and later attended night school in Springfield, and Professor Bogardus Business College, which was located over Ryan's Drug Store. At the age of thirteen years he left the latter institution to become a delivery boy in Hardsell's grocery store, but six months later was employed by the rolling mills. After a short period spent in the St. Nicholas barber shop, he entered the &Etna Foundry, where he learned the trade of molder, remaining ten years, and then went to the Bloomington foundry, where he was employed for three years, also spending a like period at the Ide foundry. He subsequently returned to the &Etna Foundry for three years, and at the end of this time embarked in business for himself, having continued therein in Springfield since 1894, and meeting with much success. He is also agent for the Zimmermann Automobile Company, of Auburn, Ind.

On October 5, 1886, Mr. Hammon was united in marriage with Magdalena Burgner, born in Springfield, Ill., the daughter of John Burgner, who with his wife is residing at No. 535 West Washington Street, Springfield. Three daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Hammon, namely: Elizabeth, a graduate of Springfield high school, class of 1906, who is possessed of much artistic talent; Magdalena, who graduated from the high school with the class of 1908; and Irena, who graduated from the same institution with the class of 1910.

Mr. Hammon's fraternal connection is with the Knights of the Maccabees. He is liberal in political views and his business takes so much of his time that he has very little to give to public matters, although he has always supported movements which have promised to be of benefit to the city. The family attends the Lutheran Church.

HAMMON, George.—Some of the representative citizens of Springfield today are men who have retired from the stress of active life, and are now free to consider matters of civic interest. They have the time and give it unreservedly to their city, exerting their influence in many ways in favor of law and progress. One of these men of moment is George Hammon, a retired businessman, who, with so many others of the successful residents of Springfield, is of German birth, having been born in Bavaria, June 14, 1833, a son of Adam Hammon, also a native of Germany, and a shoemaker by trade. The parents spent their entire lives in Germany, dying long ago. The three children born to them, two boys and one girl were: John, deceased; Catherine and George.

After attending school and working on his father's farm, George Hammon followed farming for five years, then came to America, arriving in 1853. At first he continued to farm, then began butchering, but eventually went into John Lamb's foundry. Following this he learned the coat-making trade, and continued in that line of business for thirty-eight years, retiring in 1894. When he was first married he lived on Carpenter Street, but later built a good house at No. 413 West Reynolds Street, which is still his residence. He is a member of Trinity Lutheran church and gives liberally to it in both time and money. His political convictions make him a Democrat, but he has never been willing to accept public office.

Mr. Hammon was married in Springfield, July 18, 1865, to Catherine Van Horn, daughter of Henry and Mary Van Horn, natives of Germany, who lived to an advanced age. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hammon: three sons and three daughters, of whom two survive; Johanna Fidengruber lost her husband twenty-three years ago; Charles H. is proprietor of a cigar store here. Fourteen grandchildren and four great grandchildren have been born to this family. Mr. Hammon owns his home, and is otherwise interested in the city. He came there without a cent, yet persevered, never shirking any work and trying to add to his knowledge as he went along. His customers came back to him, appreciating the fact that they could always depend upon him. Although he has now retired, he holds the friendship of those he served, and enjoys it and the esteem in which he is held by all who know him.

HANES, Urias.—There are certain staple articles which have been an absolute necessity to the forward march of progress and the advancement of civilization. Travel has always been the means of widening mankind's scope, the medium that has brought about our present civilization and, naturally, travel has always necessitated the use of a means of conveyance. The manufacture of carriages and wagons is one of the time-honored occupations and for years has had in its ranks men of the highest character. Urias Hanes, now living retired in Springfield, was for a long period one of the best-known vehicle manufacturers in the State. Mr. Hanes was born near Altville, Canada, March 22, 1827, son of John C. and Charlotte (Monticue) Hanes. Mr. Hanes' maternal grandfather was a native of Germany, but John C. Hanes was born in Pennsylvania and his wife in France. Mr. Hanes was a shoemaker by occupation, following that calling all of his life in Altville, and dying there.

The education of Urias Hanes was secured in Canada and he learned the trade and wagon manufacturing business in his native town. In 1850 he went to Chicago, Ill., working there for a short time and then going to Pekin, Ill. In 1854 he left the latter place for Williamsville, where he engaged in business for forty years, then came to Springfield and retired. He is residing at No. 1516 East South Grand Avenue, in the same house in which he has lived ever since coming to Springfield. It is an interesting fact that Mr. Hanes in 1861 built a caravan wagon which was inter used by President Abraham Lincoln. He is a Republican in politics and his religious faith is that of the Methodist Church.

Mr. Hanes was married in 1854 to Margaret Dowdell, of Pekin, who lived but one year thereafter, and in 1855 he was united with Louise Bartram, who was born in Vermont and whose parents came to Springfield at an early date and there spent the remainder of their lives. The four children born to this union are as follows: Carl J., an architect of Springfield, carrying on an extensive business; Joseph A. and John, carpenters and contractors with a fine business; and Ella, the widow of Clifford Council. Mr. Hanes is now living at No. 1516 East South Grand Avenue, which residence he owns, in addition to other valuable city property.

HANKS, John. (Vol. I, p. 219.)

HANLEY, John Henry.—The mining interests of Sangamon County have developed and brought to the front men of unusual business and executive ability; men who have made their own way in the world, forging ahead through aggressiveness, intelligence and determination to succeed. The school of mining is not an easy one; it takes men of more than ordinary ability to succeed, and as a result we find some of the county's foremost men engaged in this business. One of the self-made men of Springfield who has been identified with mines and mining nearly all of his life is John Henry Hanley, who was born near Lima, Allen County, Ohio, October 15, 1857, the son of Patrick and Bridget (Byron) Hanley.

Patrick Hanley was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, March 17, 1826, and when he was sixteen years of age came to the United States, landing in New York and going thence to Ohio, where he worked on a railroad for a few years. He then came to Springfield, Ill., and from there went to Will County, where for many years he was engaged in farming, although for the past ten years he has lived retired in Wilmington, Ill. His wife died in 1907, in the faith of the Catholic Church, of which he is also a member. He has been a Democrat all of his life. Mr. and Mrs. Hanley had the following children: John Henry; James, of Joliet, Ill.; Michael, of Punxsutawney, Pa.; William, a resident of Wilmington, Ill., and Mary, who married Daniel Tobin, of Chicago.

John Henry Hanley was but an infant when his parents came to Illinois, and he was reared to the life of a farmer, being sent out to do his share of the farm work when he was but eight years of age, and as a consequence not having much chance for learning, although close observation and much reading have made him a well-educated man. At the age of twenty-six years he left home and became engaged in selling coal-milling machinery, and in this way came to Springfield. After some years spent in this manner he became manager of the Old North mine, later held the same position with the Chicago & Kansas City Coal Company, and then became manager of the Springfield Mining Co. During the year following he served as County Mine Inspector, and for five years was manager of the Chicago-Virden Coal Company, accepting his present responsible position in 1905. Probably no man in Sangamon County knows more about mines and mining than does Mr. Hanley, and his selection by this large company as manager goes a long way towards proving it. His experience has been long and varied and he has learned how to meet every situation and how to overcome every obstacle.

In Chicago, in April, 1883, Mr. Hanley was married to Miss Elizabeth Kane, daughter of Timothy and Mary (Dalton) Kane, and to this union there were born six children: Mary, who married Patrick Foley, of Peoria; William E., who married Elizabeth Slocom; and John Edward, Nora, Bessie and Esther, all at home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanley are members of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, in which he is serving as a member of the Board of Trustees. He was Trustee for a long time of Ridgely, before it was incorporated with the city of Springfield, and has always been a staunch and active Democrat. He is also a member of the Knights of Columbus and the Catholic order of Foresters and is District Vice President of fourteen counties for the latter order.

HANSON, Frederic A., an industrious and enterprising farmer living near the Fair Grounds just outside of Springfield, Ill., was born in Denmark, October 6, 1852, son of Peter and Karry Mary (Nelson) Hanson, both natives of Denmark, the father born in 1824 and the mother November 3, 1810. The former was a flax manufacturer and he and his wife spent their entire lives in their native country, where he died in 1857 and his widow in 1887. They were parents of four sons, of whom two came to the United States. Frederic A. Hanson has a brother now living in Springfield, who came to the United States in 1873.

Frederic A. Hanson received his education in the public schools of Denmark and until twenty years old followed the occupation of fisherman. He then took up farming and has followed that occupation ever since. He sailed from Copenhagen in 1873, spent two weeks on the water and landed in Boston. He came direct to Springfield, reaching that city on May 16. He immediately took up farming at Berry Station, where he remained one year, worked two years on William Bradford's farm, one year for Lute Bortman, then spent five years in the employ of J. P. Gardner, after which he worked for himself. He has lived six years on his present farm, and owns three acres. He carries on his work with intelligence and good judgment and makes it pay well.

Mr. Hanson was married at Springfield, October 16, 1879, to Mary A. Shoemucker, born in Germany, October 6, 1859, and died September 25, 1905. Her parents died when she was a girl and never came to America. She was seven years of age at the time she was brought to the United States. Five children were born to Mr. Hanson and his wife, four daughters and one son: Nellie; Mary; Mr. Dickerson, a mail carrier at Curran; Laura Lee, deceased; Dr. John, in the employ of Schucks Lumber Company; Lucy Aune, Mrs. Stroub, of Springfield, and Mary E., deceased.

Mr. Hanson was married (second) in December, 1908, in Springfield, to Wilhelmina Meierke, born in Germany, November 27, 1883. Her mother and father died when she was sixteen years old and both parents spent their entire lives in Germany. Mr. Hanson is a member of the Christian Church and in politics is a Democrat. He is a member of the Loyal Americans and has a large circle of friends. He is pleasant and genial in manner and has a reputation for honesty and integrity.

HAPPER, Andrew F. (deceased), was for many years one of the leading citizens of Gardner Township, and well known as a substantial farmer and grain operator, owning the elevators at Farmingdale. He was born on the old Happer homestead, on Section 19, of the township which continued his home, July 14, 1854, son of James F. Happer. The latter was born in Washington County, Pa., but located in Gardner Township, where he became a teacher in the country schools. He bought 160 acres of land and divided his time between farming and teaching, becoming one of the leading men of his neighborhood. In 1857 he returned to his native county, where he married Sarah Gardner. They returned to the home he had made in the still new State, and settled down to happy married life. Mr. Happer was a man of political convictions such as would HARBAUGH, Edward, a retired farmer of Mechanicsburg, Ill., and a veteran of the Civil War, was born at Baltimore, Md., September 5, 1846, a son of Jerome and Martha (Thompson) Harbaugh. Both parents were natives of Georgetown, Md., and the father spent most of his active life at his trade of coachmaker, in Baltimore, where his death occurred, at the age of eighty years, his widow living to the age of ninety-two. The paternal grandfather of Edward Harbaugh, subject of this review, was born in Little York, Pa., his parents being natives of Switzerland.

After completing his education in the schools of his native city, Edward Harbaugh became clerk in a store there and in 1863 came to Illinois and remained one year on a farm near Mattoon. January 4, 1864, he enlisted for service in Company E, Thirty-Eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under command of Captain Voris, of Mattoon. Mr. Harbaugh served to the end of the war, was mustered out at Victoria, Tex., and on March 21, 1866, was discharged at Camp Butler, near Springfield. He had rendered efficient service and never had the misfortune to be taken prisoner or receive a wound.

After his service in the army Mr. Harbaugh returned to Coles County, where for five years he engaged in farming, then removed to Madison County, Ill., manufactured tile there for a time and then engaged in the same occupation in Edinburg, Ill. Some years later he located in Springfield and spent about five years in that locality. For the past four years he has held the post of janitor of the public school at Mechanicsburg, which he ably and satisfactorily fills. He is a Republican in political views and while a resident of Edinburg served as a member of the Town Board. He is a member of the Methodist Church and belongs to Maroa Post Grand Army of the Republic. He is well known in Mechanicsburg and vicinity, where he has won a reputation for reliability and honesty.

Mr. Harbaugh was married near Sullivan, Moultrie County, January 14, 1872, to Mrs. Lucetta (Taylor) Hawkins, who was born near Winchester, Va., May 7, 1843, daughter of Peter Taylor and wife, also natives of Virginia. Peter Taylor was a farmer by occupation and in 1859 located near Oakland, Coles County, Ill., where he carried on farming until his death. Mrs. Taylor died in Indiana. Mrs. Harbaugh died December 13, 1908, having had four children, two of whom survive: Ella, wife of William Ogden, residing in Mechanicsburg, and James, a foreman in the shops of the Wabash Railroad Company at Moberly, Mo. There are eight grandchildren in the family. Mr. Harbaugh owns a comfortable residence in Mechanicsburg.
HARBERT, Samuel M., a retired farmer living at Illiopolis, III., was born near LaFayette, Ind., May 31, 1837, and is a son of Eli and Mary (Hulbert) Harbert, the former born near Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1809, and the latter born in Virginia in 1817. The father was a tanner, farmer and shoemaker, and he and his wife moved to Indiana from Ohio, settling on a farm near LaFayette. Mr. Harbert died in 1859 and his widow survived until 1863. The fathers of Mr. and Mrs. Harbert both fought in the War of 1812. Samuel M. Harbert is one of three children, the others being: Eli, a farmer of Sangamon County, and Nancy, married A. D. Gilbert, who died in 1904, and she now lives in Illiopolis, in the home she has occupied for forty-one years.

The education of Samuel M. Harbert was received at Wolf Creek in the district school, and his first teacher was William Ide. His grandfather, James Harbert, located on a farm on Wolf Creek, Sangamon County, in 1889, and lived there until his death, and on this farm Samuel M. lived until 1863, being partly reared by his grandparents. Mr. Harbert began farming on his own account in Illiopolis Township and lived there until 1903, then moved to the village of Illiopolis, where he owns a comfortable home, and he has since lived retired from business activities and cares. He still owns a farm of 120 acres in the township. He was well acquainted with Abraham Lincoln in his younger days and was always his warm personal friend.

Mr. Harbert was married Christmas Day, 1862, to Zerelda Miller, who was born in Mechanicsburg, Sangamon County, daughter of Nathan Miller, an early settler of Sangamon County, who spent the rest of his life on a farm near Mechanicsburg, and died in Dawson, III. His wife's maiden name was Anna Landenbeck, who died in Dawson, III. Mr. Harbert and his wife had four children, of whom three survive: John Harbert, a farmer of Sangamon County; Anna, wife of William Clendenen, also a farmer of Sangamon County; Ada M., wife of William Gall, living on her father's farm. There are six grandchildren in the family.

He is a public spirited, representative citizen and is universally respected.

HARBOLD, Jacob, a self-made business man of Springfield, has built up a large enterprise from a small beginning, and is now a recognized authority along the line of his specialty. He was born in St. Louis, Mo., March 10, 1859, son of Jacob and Fanny Harbold, natives of Germany, who came to the United States in youth. The parents were married in the United States and in 1860 came to Springfield where for twenty years the father was engaged in an express business. He was an active member of the Lutheran Church and he and two other persons bought the old church near the Chicago & Alton depot. In politics he was a Democrat. He died in Springfield in 1880, and his widow now lives with her son Jacob, being seventy-two years of age. They had two children, Jacob, of this sketch, and George, of Indiana.

Mr. Harbold was educated in Springfield public schools, and after completing his education spent a short time teaching in a Lutheran school, then entered the old Etna foundry to learn the trade of machinist, receiving at first but three dollars per week. Later he spent six years in the rolling mills, and at the end of that time engaged in business on his own account. He has made a specialty of pumps and has spent twenty-five years in his present enterprise, being an expert in his line. He is proud of the fact that while at the outset he had but forty-five cents as capital, by his energy and ambition he soon began to prosper, and has been successful in so gratifying a degree that he now owns a very comfortable home and property. His line includes several kinds of pumps. Being an expert mechanic at the outset, and possessing business instinct and enterprise, Mr. Harbold could not fail in his venture, but has built up his enterprise step by step, each one being the result of well-planned effort.

Mr. Harbold has been twice married: (first) to Mrs. Elizabeth Hartford, a widow, their union taking place December 28, 1890, and (second) July 13, 1902, he married Fanny Hudson, who died in 1907. Mr. Harbold is a staunch Republican and takes an active interest in politics. He is a devout member of the Lutheran Church, to which he is a liberal contributor. He is well known in Springfield, where he has lived since infancy.

HARGITT, William P. (deceased).—There is no better gift that a man can leave to his city than a well-ordered family, fitted to take up their duties in the order of things and to assist their community in advancing in every way. Thus is new blood infused into the city's veins and its future prosperity insured. One of Springfield's respected families is that of Hargitt, descendants of William P. Hargitt, who for many years was a successful merchant. Mr. Hargitt was born near Lawrenceburg, Ind., November 25, 1825, a son of Robert and Jane (Pommen) Hargitt. In his youth Robert Hargitt was engaged in tanning near Lawrenceburg, Ind., but in later years moved to Hamilton, Ohio, where he became wealthy and prominent, serving as Mayor of that city.

William P. Hargitt secured his education in the schools of Lawrenceburg and the Bloomington (Ind.) High School. His youth was spent on his father's farm, and he became the latter's partner in mercantile business, so continuing HARLOW, George H. (Vol. I, p. 221.)

HARNSBERGER, John Jacob, a successful agriculturist and cattle raiser of Sangamon County, Ill., who is cultivating a fine property consisting of 360 acres, on Section 27, Cartwright Township, was born on the farm now owned by John H. Campbell on Section 26, in the same township, January 29, 1848, a son of Henry M. and Melinda (Harrison) Harnsberger.

Jacob Harnsberger, the grandfather of John Jacob, was a native of Rockingham County, Virginia, whence he went to Clark County, Ohio. He was born in 1781 and was married in his native county to Catherhine Harnsberger, there being two children born to this union in Virginia and seven children in Ohio, where Mrs. Harnsberger and one child died. The eldest son went to Wisconsin, where he was married, had one child and died. Two sons and three daughters located in Indiana, but Mr. Harnsberger and three sons came to Cartwright Township, Sangamon County, August 25, 1830.

Henry M. Harnsberger was born in Clark County, Ohio, February 2, 1823, and was reared to manhood in Sangamon County, Ill., where he was married February 18, 1846, to Miss Melinda A. Harrison, who was born in Christian County, Kentucky, March 29, 1829, and came to Sangamon County with her parents, Reuben and Barbara Harnsberger Harrison. Her great-grandfather, Benjamin Harrison, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The family is of English lineage and the ancestry has been traced back through six generations to an Englishman who settled in the old Virginian Colony in the Shenandoah Valley. From the same ancestry came two Presidents, William Henry Harrison and Benjamin Harrison. The signer of the Declaration of Independence was the father of Benjamin, William, Henry, George and Reuben Harrison. Reuben Harrison, the father of Mrs. Harnsberger, was born on a farm in Rockingham County, Va., June 12, 1770, and was married in May 16, 1804, to Parthenia Harrison, by whom he had one child. The wife died in Virginia, and Mr. Harrison married a second time, Barbara Harnsberger, November 29, 1810. In 1815 the family removed to Christian County, Ky., and on November 4, 1822, came to Sangamon County. Mr. Harrison's son, Leonard C., born of the first union, entered the University of the Methodist Church at the age of eighteen, and died in Summerville, Ala., in 1857, and it was while on a visit, at his son's home, that Renhen Harrison passed away, May 3, 1852.

The second Mrs. Harrison died August 23, 1842. There were four children born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Harnsberger, namely: John Jacob; George Leonard, born July 13, 1850, educated in the district schools, Lincoln University and the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he took a two years' course in civil engineering, was for one year Deputy County Surveyor, and now resides in Springfield, Ill.; Amanda C., the wife of Julins Hanback, a farmer near Centertown, Ark.; and Virginia, who married L. H. Washburn, of Springfield, has one child, Anna, who is the wife of Charles I. Himlieh. The mother of the above children died May 8, 1845, and he followed her to the grave in September of the same year. Both were consistent and lifelong members of the Methodist Church, in which they labored faithfully, giving their time and means towards forwarding any church movements, whether formed by their own church or by one of another denomination. Kindly and generous almost to a fault, the extent of their charities will probably never be fully known, and it is but just to say that both did a world of good in the community in which they spent so many years.

John Jacob Harnsberger received his preliminary education in the district schools of Sangamon County, and for a time attended the North Sangamon Academy and the Jacksonville Business College. He then returned to the old home, where he took up his duties on the farm, and continued to live there until his marriage, February 10, 1870, to Miss Nancy C. Campbell, who was born in Cartwright Township, July 25, 1851, daughter of Robert and granddaughter of Maxwell Campbell. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Harnsberger began life on a farm adjoining this township in Menard County, Ill., but in 1874 removed to Sumner County, Kan., where Mr. Harnsberger had the misfortune to be persecuted by the grasshoppers which came in such swarms even that on clear days they hid the light of the sun. In 1884 Mr. Harnsberger sold out his Kansas property and moved to Gentry County, Mo., and had been very successful there, when, on April 3, 1893, a cyclone struck that county, stripping the farm of everything and demolishing the new house which had been erected by Mr. Harnsberger and which was just ready to paint. He sold this property in 1897 and moved to Brazoria, Tex., where he purchased 290 acres of land and had gotten a nice start and had the farm well stocked, but ill luck had not yet deserted him, for he was again cleaned out by the great storm which destroyed Galveston. Nothing daunted by this series of misfortunes, Mr. Harnsberger started all over again, selling his farm in Texas in 1903 and buying 160 acres of land in Wright County, Mo., but six months later, on account of the serious illness of his parents, he decided to return to his home in Cartwright Township, where he took charge of 280 acres of the old homestead, which had been divided, and also rented eighty acres, and since that time has cultivated 300 acres, having a fine producing farm, well stocked with valuable livestock.

Mr. and Mrs. Harnsberger have had four children: Carrie M., born May 28, 1871, wife of Howard Ellenwood, of Canby, Minn., whom she married March 4, 1904, and they have two children, Helen Clarinda, born in May, 1905, and Leonard H.; Katie Irene, born November 23, 1873, married George Harrrider, a farmer in Callaway County, Mo., and they have six children—Lawrence E., Clyde F., Corn E., Catherine, Charles L. and Julius; Leonard J., born March 10, 1878, in Sumner County, Kan., residing in Kansas City, Mo., married Mae Willhoit in 1902, and they have one child, Erneste Vivian, born January 15, 1904; and Helen G., born July 26, 1884, near Stannberry, Mo., living at home.

In religious belief the family adhere to the faith of the Methodist Church. Mr. Harnsberger has always been a Democrat and is now serving as Director of the plankett School. He has been active along agricultural lines, as well as in his conduct as a citizen, and is looked upon as one of the good, representative men of Sangamon County.

HARRIS, Mrs. Mary Bell.—One of the heaviest tax-payers of Springfield, and one who is deeply interested in the welfare and improvement of the city, is Mrs. Mary Bell Harris, whose many charities and kindly deeds of good will make her beloved in the Capital City. She was born in Kentucky, March 30, 1853, being a daughter of Jacob and Mary A. (Logan) Kerl. Mr. Kerl was for many years a pilot on the steamboats of the Mississippi River, retiring only after he had reached an advanced age. His death occurred at Lebanon, Ind., in 1895, his widow surviving him. Later she married John D. Malosh, an old soldier, who now is an inmate of a soldiers' home at Dayton, Ohio. Mrs. Malosh lives in Springfield to be near her daughter, Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Harris was brought up in Southwestern Kansas, and was educated at the schools of Hodgeman County, that State, coming to Springfield in 1873. There she was united in marriage with James o. Harris, whose untimely death occurred in 1892, in Springfield, and his remains are interred in beautiful Oak Ridge cemetery. He was a Mason and an Odd Fellow, and had passed all the chairs in the last-named order. Mrs. Harris owns fully $50,000 worth of Springfield realty, one of her possessions being the Monroe Hotel, one of the most popular host-teries in the city. It is well managed and its guests are given satisfactory accommodations. The cuisine is excellent and the food tastefully served. The entire establishment reflects credit on Mrs. Harris and her corps of able assistants. Whenever a woman enters the business field in competition with men, she does her work so thoroughly that she is sure to command success, and Mrs. Harris is no exception to this rule. She stands high in the community where she has lived so long.

Mrs. Harris was married June 12, 1910, in Chicago, at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. M. Myerfeld, by Rev. Robert Lincoln Kelly to Mr. John Scott Reavley, of Springfield, Ill., and they now reside at No. 528 East Monroe Street.

HARRISON, James (deceased), was born in Dover, N. J., June 22, 1856, son of George and Jane (Watts) Harrison, the former a native of England and the latter of Ireland. The parents came to the United States and located in New Jersey, where for some time the father was engaged in the nursery business. Later the family moved to Centralia, Ill., where the father's death occurred. The mother afterward moved to Springfield and her death occurred in that city, in 1907. She and her husband were parents of three sons and one daughter, of whom two sons survive: Noble, of Springfield, and John, who is a mine manager and lives near Centralia, Ill. The family lived a short time in Duquoin, Ill., and there James Harrison received his education. At the age of ten years he began working in a mine and continued in mining work until the time of his death. He worked several years in the vicinity of Centralia and Duquoin, Ill., and about 1890 moved to Springfield, where he worked in the north and west shafts of the Klineville Mine. A short time before his death the family moved to Middletown, Ill., and there he was killed in an accident, May 15, 1906. His widow returned to Springfield with the children, and there the family has lived since.

Mr. Harrison was well known in mining circles in Springfield and was an expert in his line, having spent most of his life in mining work. He was devoted to his home and family and had many warm friends, to whom his death was a shock. He was a member of the Episcopal Church, to which his wife also belongs, and was a charter member of the Court of Honor, of Springfield. He was a Republican in politics. Mrs. Harrison owns the home at 1004 South Tenth Street, where she has resided for most of the time the last fifteen years.

Mr. Harrison's marriage occurred in Springfield, December 10, 1881, when he was united with Miss Eliza Gibson, who was born in Belfast, Ireland, October 22, 1856. Mrs. Harrison was one of six children (three sons and three daughters), and has one brother living in Glasgow, Scotland, and another in Springfield, Ill., the other three children being deceased. Three HARRISON, John Q., a practical farmer and stock raiser of section 11, Cartwright Township, was born September 7, 1809, being a son of Robert P. and Almeda J. (Bone) Harrison. Robert P. Harrison was born on Rock Creek, Cartwright Township, January 25, 1846, being a son of Simeon Q. and Mary (Renshaw) Harrison.

Simeon Q. Harrison was born September 27, 1816, in that part of Christian County, Ky., which is now included in Trigg County, coming to Sangamon County in 1822. He and his wife had five children: Robert P., Anna G., Jennie E., Mary R., Ida, Sue A. and Roxana. After their marriage Robert P. Harrison and wife located on a farm owned by his father, S. Q. Harrison, which they rented. Later they bought 360 acres of land, partly improved, and on it Mr. Harrison began breeding draft and road horses, making a specialty of the Clyde strain of the former and the McGregor roadsters, the breed. He Queen McGregor that at one time held the world's record. He was a firm believer in blooded stock, and also bred shorthorn cattle, keeping his farm up-to-date in every respect. Adding to his first purchase he eventually owned 1,000 acres, although he disposed of some of it prior to his death, which occurred April 7, 1860. While not a member of any church, he gave of his ample means to all church work, and was ever ready to assist those in need. Long will he be remembered for his many excellent traits of character. In politics he was a Republican, and always gave the party his hearty support. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison had three children: John Q.; Mary Elizabeth, born May 7, 1876; wife of F. A. Whiteley, of Carlele, Ill.; and Nellie A., born September 1, 1878, married B. F. Marbold, a banker and farmer of Greenview, Ill. After the death of Mr. Harrison his widow and children remained on the old farm. The former is a member of the Presbyterian Church and has many friends in it and the community.

J. C. Bone, father of Mrs. Robert P. Harrison, was born in Rutherford County, Tenn., September 7, 1817, a son of Elihu and Nancy (Brown Warwick) Bone. They were natives of Tennessee, farming people who had moved to Illinois in 1824, when John C. Bone was seven years old. Settling on Rock Creek in Maunard County, they spent the remainder of their lives there, and there died. In religious faith they were Presbyterians, while politically Mr. Bone was a Republican. Mr. Bone was married in Sangamon County November 28, 1839, to Catherine Foster. She was born June 7, 1823, and died March 25, 1841, leaving one child. Catherine E., born February 14, 1841, died September 1, 1841. Six years later Mr. Bone married Elizabeth Jane Purvines, born June 24, 1828, in Sangamon County, a sister of Greenlee Purvines whose history is given elsewhere in this work. To this union one child was born, Almeda J. born April 1, 1846, married January 29, 1888, to Robert P. Harrison. The second child was born September 13, 1852, and in March, 1854, Mr. Bone married Lydia Ann Purvines, her cousin, and a sister of Mr. Newton Purvines, whose sketch is also written for publication in this volume. She died in August, 1862, and in 1864, Mr. Bone married Nancy F. Purvines, who was a sister of his third wife, born December 6, 1836, in Sangamon County. They had four children: John C. died in Chicago; Charles R., is in a stock commission business in Omaha, Neb.; Carrie, wife of Edward Thorn, of Chicago, and Orlando S., in a stock business in Kansas City, Mo. The fourth Mrs. Bone died January 11, 1900. Mr. Bone died November 17, 1901. In 1852 he came to Sangamon County, settling on a farm in Cartwright Township. He accumulated over 1,000 acres near Pleasant Plains, Ill., but in 1870 went to Chicago to engage in the live stock commission business. He bought from farmers in Sangamon County, shipping to Chicago, and was noted for liberality in all his dealings. He was very hospitable and all were welcome who came within his gates. Liberal in religious views, he granted perfect freedom to others; charitable, he gave generously without thought of any return, and while he was a Republican, could not be induced to accept office.

John Q. Harrison was educated in the neighborhood schools and Springfield Business College, and has spent his life on the farm, which has always been in his family. He was in partnership with his father until the latter's death, since which time he has conducted his business alone. He now lives on his farm located on Odd Medium, registered number 36,002. His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his tabulated pedigree, the most popular and profitable producing combination in trotting blood line, the kind that gets the money on the race course and in prize show rings. This animal stands sixteen hands high, was foaled in 1895 by Oward, sired by George Wilkes, of the Patchen-Wilkes, Lexington, Ky., stock farm.

While greatly interested in his stock business, Mr. Harrison finds time to attend to his duties as a citizen, being a strong Republican. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, Camp No. 130, while his wife belongs to the Royal Neighbors. Mr. Harrison supports the Presbyterian Church, of which Mrs. Harrison is a member, both attending service at Pleasant Plains.

On June 21, 1899, Mr. Harrison married Nellie Happer, born near Maroa, Macon County, Ill., January 19, 1875, daughter of John G. and Anna (Brown) Happer, both natives of Sangamon County. The father is a large farmer and stockman of South Dakota, living near Bushnell, but his wife died in 1884. They had the following children: Howard died in 1885, aged twenty-two years; Lena, wife of D. A. Allen, of Iowa Falls, a traveling salesman, and Mrs. Harrison. Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have two children: Helen, Happer, born July 14, 1905, and Lucile J., born February 11, 1908. Mrs. Harrison is a delightful lady, who makes her home one of the most pleasant in the county. The farm now consists of 400 acres and is conveniently located four miles from Pleasant Plains. Both Mr. and Mrs. Harrison have many friends whom they gladly entertain with lavish hospitality upon numerous occasions.

HART, George W., a retired farmer living in Springfield, where he owns a comfortable home. He is a veteran of the Civil War and well known in his neighborhood as a useful, public-spirited citizen. Mr. Hart is a native of Ten- nessee, born April 20, 1841, son of Henry and Elizabeth (Hicks) Hart, both natives of the same State, the former born March 12, 1808, and the latter in the same year. The parents removed to Illinois in 1871 and spent ten years on a farm in Morgan County, then moved to a farm in Salina, Sangamon County. Seven years later they located on a farm in Clear Lake Township, where they lived six years, after which they went to Christian County, and there the father died May 22, 1897, after which George W. Hart remained five years longer in that county, then came to Springfield and retired from active life.

Mr. Hart received his education in Tennessee and at the beginning of the Civil War enlisted from Knoxville in the Home Guard, where he served six months, having previously served three months in the Confederate Army. He proved himself a good soldier and participated in several skirmishes. At the close of his term of service he returned to his former home and accompanied his family to Illinois some years later. Both he and his wife are members of the Baptist Church and active in the good work of that organization. He is a Democrat in politics.

Mr. Hart was married in eastern Tennessee, November 20, 1861, to Salina A. Beard, who was born in Virginia, December 20, 1845, daughter of John Beard, a Virginia farmer. Both her parents died in that State. Fifteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hart, of whom thirteen survive, namely: Franklin, of Round Prairie, Sangamon County; Delta, wife of Charles Emory, of Havana, Ill., where he is employed as a machinist; Nannie, wife of Joseph Redford, a teamster of Springfield; Samuel, of Barclay, Ill.; Tuleta, wife of Samuell Miller, a farmer of Clear Lake Township; Etta, wife of Charles Carver, of Springfield; Leotta, wife of Roy Adams, of Decatur; Charles, Fred-of business—an illustration of the success which awaits the man of real industry and determination.

Mr. Hartman was admitted to the Illinois Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on trial, in September, 1896; two years later he was ordained as Deacon and admitted to full membership, and in 1900 was ordained as Elder. During that period and since then he has filled pastorships as follows: Greenview, Ill., one year; Carman, four years; Chatham, six years; and Rochester, four years, the last three pastorates being within Sangamon County.

Mr. Hartman has been prominent as an advocate of Prohibition, and in 1904 was candidate for Representative in the General Assembly from Sangamon County, but failed of election. He was nominated on the same ticket as a candidate for Congress from the Springfield District, but being unable to make the canvass, declined the nomination. At national elections he has always supported the Prohibition ticket, but in local affairs votes for the man, regardless of political relations.

On Oct. 7, 1888, Mr. Hartman was married, at Springfield, Ill., to Miss Lydia L. Welden, who was born in Randolph County, Ill., and for a number of years before her marriage was a teacher in the city schools of Springfield. They are the parents of the following children: Harold Hartman, born September 10, 1891, and now a student in Sangamon County; Loyd., born October 27, 1899; and Royal L., born May 10, 1903. Mr. Hartman's fraternal relations are with the Masonic Order, Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America.

(Mr. Hartman was granted a supernumerary relation from the Illinois Conference September, 1901, and moved with his family to Memphis, Tenn.)

HARTMANN BROTHERS.—The food supply in any community generally goes a long way towards determining the health of its citizens. Certain it is that a more healthful state is to be found in those localities where proper attention is paid to hygienic conditions, just as it is true that one improper source of supply could undermine the health of a large community. The citizens of Springfield, Ill., are fortunate in this respect, as they may receive their bakery goods from the largest dealers in this line in Sangamon County. The Hartmann Brothers, Uriah and Joseph, have a large, modern bakery has always been noted for its cleanliness. They are sons of Joseph and Rosena (Schwing) Hartmann, natives of Germany, where the father carried on farming and butchering and was also engaged in a mercantile business, and where he died, while the mother still survives and makes her home there. Conrad Hartmann was born in Germany in 1870, and received his education in his native country, coming to America in 1888. He was married to Louisa Boehme. Like his brother, Joe Hartmann was born in Germany, but one year later, in 1871. He also was educated in Germany, came to the United States in 1888, and was married to Lena Behr, a native of Springfield, by whom he has had two children, a boy now ten years of age and a girl twelve years old.

The bakery business of Hartmann Brothers was started on a small scale, in Springfield, in 1896, but the excellence of their product soon attracted attention, and as a result orders began coming in so fast that they were compelled to enlarge their place of business. As the business steadily grew more additions were made, and the plant now covers nearly half a block. Starting with only themselves to operate the business, the brothers found in a short time that they would need help, and as additional have been called, there have been added to the working force, until they now employ fifteen skilled bakers. So rapid has been the growth of the business that the Hartmann Brothers now find themselves in charge of the largest bakery in Sangamon County, doing business not only in the city but throughout the State, and the present state of affairs has come through hard, persistent work and conscientious attention to the laws of health and hygiene. They are very popular in Springfield and are both men of keen business perception.

Fraternally, Joe Hartmann belongs to the Catholic Union, while Conrad is a member of the Modern Woodmen. They are members of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception of Springfield, whose priest is the well-known and universally beloved Father T. Hickey.

HARWOOD, William T.—During the past few decades farming has been revolutionized. The rich Sangamon County farm lands have been brought into the highest state of cultivation, and agricultural operations are carried on according to scientific methods. One who has made a success of farming is William T. Harwood, of Section 30, Williams Township. He was born in Decatur County, Ind., July 20, 1848, son of Ebenezer and Caroline (Sunter) Harwood, natives of Kentucky and Indiana.

Ebenezer Harwood, who was a farmer, came from Kentucky to Indiana when only eleven years old, locating on a farm in Decatur County. There he grew up, and when the war plant, he gave the Union cause his loyal support, to the extent of enlisting in Company A, One Hundred and Twenty-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry, but after a year's service, he was taken sick and died at Knoxville, Tenn. His wife was a relative of General Sunter, and her death occurred in Decatur County, Ind., in 1898. She bore her husband five sons and two daughters, five children of whom survive: C. D., of St. Paul, Ind.; James F., a farmer of near Greensburg, Ind.; Mrs. Mary O. Wilson, of Milford,

The marriage of Mr. Harwood and Josie Kagle took place in Springfield, November 14, 1878. She was born in Sangamon County, where her father Joseph Kagle had located upon coming from Ohio, although he was a native of Pennsylvania. Mr. Kagle was one of the early settlers of this part of the State and developed a fine farm. He also worked at his trade of cooper, thus continuing until his death. His wife was born in Virginia, and she, too, has passed away. Mrs. Harwood is one of a family of nine children, only three of whom survive: Mrs. Knight, of Rantoul, Ill.; Mrs. A. C. Kalb, of Springfield, and Mrs. Harwood. Mr. and Mrs. Harwood had two sons: Forest C., living on a farm in Logan County, married Florence Bates, of Williamsville, issue—Gerald E., John C., Milton T. and J. Irice; John A., married Golda Van Meta and lives in Williams Township.

During his long residence in his locality Mr. Harwood has witnessed many changes, participating in a number of them. He has always been a friend of good roads, excellent schools and splendid improvements, and has lent his influence towards securing them. While he has never sought public notice, he has proven himself a good citizen and a most trustworthy and reliable business man.

HASELRIG, William A., of Mechanicsburg, Ill., now living retired from active life, is a veteran of the Civil War and much respected as a useful and patriotic citizen. He was born at West Liberty, Morgan County, Ky., April 10, 1839, a son of James Henry and Nancy (Day) Haselrig, the father a native of Virginia and the mother of Kentucky. James H. Haselrig was a brick mason and as a young man located in West Liberty, where he worked several years at his trade. Later he removed to Lexington, Ky., where he worked at his trade until his death. His brother, Col. John Haselrig, was prominent in Morgan County politics and served several terms as Circuit Clerk. James H. Haselrig and wife were parents of five sons and two daughters. The mother and father both died in Kentucky.

The boyhood of William A. Haselrig was spent in his native county and he early learned the brick-mason's trade of his father, with whom he worked many years, then began work in the same line on his own account. He enlisted in the regular United States Army early in 1853, being sent to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and serving six months in the cavalry under General Kearney and Col. Sumner. After his discharge he came to Springfield, Ill., arriving in that city October 14, 1853. He lived in the city and worked at his trade eight years, then (in 1861) enlisted in Company C, Seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for three months, re-enlisting February 2, 1864, in Company C, Tenth Illinois Cavalry. He served to the close of the war, being discharged at Little Rock, Ark., in 1865, having taken part in many engagements. At one time Mr. Haselrig was captured by his brother Albert, a soldier in the Confederate Army, who was out squirrel-hunting at the time, and who let the prisoner go free.

At the close of the war Mr. Haselrig moved to Mechanicsburg, where he took up his former occupation, which he followed successfully until he retired from active life, several years since. He helped in the erection of many of the residences and business houses in Mechanicsburg, besides similar buildings in Springfield, Decatur, Taylorville, Bloomington and other cities. He was a contractor on his own account during part of this work and established a reputation for ability and fair dealing that is well remembered by those with whom he had business dealings.

November 3, 1861, Mr. Haselrig was married, in Mechanicsburg, to Lucy J. Dunn, who was born in Mercer County, Ky., February 1, 1843, daughter of John T. and Rachel Ann (Moore) Dunn, both natives of Mercer County and the father a carpenter by trade. The Dunn family came to Illinois in 1853 and the father following his trade in Mechanicsburg until his death, which occurred October 26, 1867, being a great shock to his family, as he died suddenly. His widow survived him but a short time, passing away in 1869. They were parents of two sons and four daughters, of whom two survive: Mrs. Haselrig, and R. T., of Mechanicsburg. Eleven children were born to Mr. Haselrig and wife, seven daughters and four sons, and nine of them are still living: Hattie, wife of Harry Halloway, a retired employe living in South Chicago; Laura, wife of John Muehlhausen, of Springfield; J. William, of Texas; Anna, deceased; Lee, wife of Harry Fox, a locomotive engineer living in Blue Island, Ill.; Mrs. Jessie Putnam, deceased; Herbert, of Bakersfield, Cal.; Frank, a locomotive engineer living in South Chicago; Mrs. Grace Schmidt, wife of William Schmidt, a commercial traveler whose home is in South Chicago; Merle, widow of Louis Rogers, who is a stenographer in the employ of the Rock Island Railroad Company and a resident of South Chicago; Grover, who served two enlistments in the Regular United States Army. There are thirteen grandchildren and two great-grandchildren in the family. Herbert Haselrig, of Bakersfield, Cal., served in the Regular United States Army eight years, taking part in the Spanish-American War and being sent to the Philippines twice.

Mr. Haselrig is well-known in Mechanicsburg and vicinity, where he has lived so many years, and has a large number of friends. He owns a comfortable home there and takes an active interest in the welfare of his community. He is a member of the Christian Church, a Democrat in politics and is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic.

HATCH, Ozias M. (Vol. I, p. 224.)
HATCHER, Mrs. Mary (Currier), daughter of the late Silas Wright Currier, has inherited many of his sterling traits of character and is fully capable of representing this fine old family. Mrs. Hatcher is a native of Springfield, born June 19, 1880, daughter of Silas Wright and Mary (Priest) Currier, the former born in Potsdam, N. Y., January 8, 1846, and the latter in Springfield, November 2, 1848. Silas Wright Currier was one of Springfield's foremost business men and his biography appears on another page of this volume.

The grandfather of Mrs. Hatcher, John W. Priest, came from St. Lawrence County, N. Y., to Springfield, and became one of the city's most prominent men. He was a pioneer in the manufacture of brick and was also prominent as a farmer, being the owner of 1,200 acres of land at the time of his death, which occurred June 29, 1887. His worth was recognized by the community, and when again he was called upon to fill some position of trust and honor. For a number of years he was President of the School Board, for eight consecutive years acted as Alderman, and in 1855-58, and again in 1870, served as Mayor of Springfield, during which time the city prospered as it had never done before. During the administration of the affairs of the city by Mr. Priest, the first street paving was done and the water works established. He was a member of the water works board, was for some time President of the company, and went to New York to sell bonds for these improvements. Always a leader in movements which would benefit his city or State, in his death Springfield lost one whose place was far from easy to fill.

Mary (Currier) Hatcher was given the advantages of a full and comprehensive education. She attended Springfield High School, St. Agatha's Episcopal School, St. Mary's School at Knoxville, Ill., and "The Castle" (Miss Ma- son's school) at Tarrytown, N. Y., being graduated from the last-named institution in the class of 1900. On November 28, 1905, she was united in marriage with Oliver William Hatcher, one of Springfield's well-known business men of the younger generation, who was born at Charlton, Iowa, January 24, 1877. Mr. Hatcher is a member of the firm of Johnston & Hatcher, operating a large house-furnishing store. One daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hatcher, Mary Jane, February 24, 1909. Mrs. Hatcher's religious connection is with the Central Baptist Church, while Mr. Hatcher's is with the Episcopal Church.

HATTON, Joseph, who has been a resident of Chatham, Ill., for over half a century, is an extensive land-owner and successful farmer, and is held in great respect by all who know him. Mr. Hatton is a native of Garrard County, Kentucky, born March 6, 1829, a son of Richard and Hannah Hatton, both natives of Virginia, whose parents were born in Kenucky and Virginia. Richard Hatton was a large land-owner and an extensive raiser of tobacco, being a man of local prominence. He died in Kentucky and his widow afterward moved to Illinois, dying in Chatham, always.

The childhood of Joseph Hatton was spent on a farm and he received his education in his native State. He was always very fond of horses and stock of all kinds and was reared to agricultural pursuits, which he has followed all his life. He moved from Kenucky to Illinois in 1874 and has since resided at Chatham, where he has been a successful farmer. He now owns 400 acres of land in Sangamon County and has put it all into good condition. He is a good business man and has managed his affairs in a manner to insure success. He stands well with his neighbors and has a large number of friends. While not a member of any church, he is actuated by the highest principles in social and business relations, as well as in his daily life at home, and has won a reputation for strict integrity and reliability. In politics he is a Republican and is always ready to further the interests of his party. He has witnessed many changes since locating in Sangamon County and has always been interested in the development of the community. He drove cattle through Springfield on the day ex-Governor Matteson's mansion was burned, one of the coldest in the history of Illinois.

Mr. Hatton was married at Chatham, Ill., November 2, 1873, to Liza Clements, a native of Sangamon County, and daughter of Rosamond and Dicy (Harris) Clements, the parents both natives of Kentucky. Mr. Clements was a prominent farmer and he and his wife had seven children. Mr. Hatton and wife have no children.

HAY, John, one of the early settlers of Springfield, and the son of Adam Hay, was born in Berkeley County, Va., April 13, 1775, and came of a sturdy race of men. His grandfather was the son of a Scottish soldier who left his own country near the close of the seventeenth century and entered service in the army of the Elector of the Palatinate of the German Empire. About the middle of the eighteenth century the grandfather, who was also John Hay, with his four sons, emigrated from Germany to America. The family soon scattered and one son settled in Pennsylvania, where he acquired a considerable estate and filled several important offices. He served as a soldier of the Revolutionary War, attaining the rank of Colonel. His brother Adam went to Virginia. He, as well as his brothers, had received a military training in Europe, and he served with some distinction under General Washington in the War of Independence. He was an acquaintance and friend of the great General, and one of the early recollections of his son John, the subject of this sketch, was of meeting Washington on a country road. The boy was riding behind his father on the same horse when a carriage approached. They turned aside to let it pass, when it halted, and Washington greeting Adam Hay, directed some friendly remarks to the young lad, who was requested by his father to salute General Washington, which order was promptly obeyed. The mother of John Hay was Mary Boyer, who was born in Germany and came to America when a young girl. She has been described as an excellent woman, of independent spirit and strong personality.

John Hay spent his boyhood days in Virginia, but was not satisfied to remain there, believing that he could do better in a newer country. At the age of eighteen, with a small company of his Quaker neighbors, he emigrated to Kentucky and took up land in Fayette County, near Lexington, in the heart of the far-famed blue-grass region of that State. A few years after settling there, while still young, he was married to Jemima Coulter, an estimable young woman well-fitted to be his companion, with whom he lived happily for a period of forty-six years and until her death at Springfield in 1843.

In all Mr. Hay lived in Fayette County, Ky., for thirty-nine years, and in that beautiful garden spot, were born his thirteen children, six sons and seven daughters. Although he continuously prospered, he was opposed to negro slavery and, for that reason, was not satisfied to have his family remain in a State where that institution seemed so firmly established. In the fall of 1832, at the age of fifty-seven years, with his wife and eleven of his children, he came to Sangamon County, settling at Springfield, then only an insignificant village, and there he lived and labored for a little more than a third of a century until his passing away in 1865.

On coming to Illinois Mr. Hay brought with him from Kentucky the machinery and other appliances for a cotton gin and the manufacture of cotton goods, but this venture did not prove a profitable one. It is said that the idea prevailed at that early day that cotton could be successfully grown in Illinois. After operating this factory for a year or two, the machinery was taken out and stored in an old shed in the back yard of his home at Second and Jefferson Streets, where it slowly rotted and rusted away. Many years after it was put there, his grandchildren used this dim and cobwebbed storeroom as a place to play, and as they romped among the curious looking things, they often wondered about the use of so many wheels and spindles. For a number of years he and several of his sons engaged in the manufacture of brick. The investments he made in land in Illinois proved in time to be remunerative.

John Hay had the rather unusual distinction, which in that time could only have come to one who had reached a very advanced age, of living through two of the most trying and critical periods of our country's history. He was born just six days before the battle of Lexington, the real and actual beginning of the American Revolution, and lived until the close of the Civil War.

Mr. Hay was a man of great physical power, but quiet and peaceful in manner, and of great strength of will and force of character. He was a true patriot, with firm and fixed principles of justice and duty. At the outbreak of the Civil War he took a strong stand for the Union, and during the years of that sanguinary conflict was deeply concerned and anxious in regard to the final result. He was a near neighbor and warm personal friend of Abraham Lincoln. When the news of the assassination of the President was received, he was deeply affected, and on the day of the funeral in Springfield, he sat at his window and sorrowfully watched the procession that bore the remains of the martyred President to its resting place. A few weeks later, May 20, 1865, in the ninety-first year of his age, he was called to his final rest.

Very soon after coming to Springfield Mr. Hay and his wife became members of the Baptist Church, of which he was a loyal and earnest supporter until the end of his life. Before that little organization had a place of its own in which to worship, his home was open for any of its services. He was one of the three trustees to whom the land was deeded for the site of the first Baptist Church of Springfield. To an unusual degree he enjoyed the respect and even the veneration of his fellow citizens. He was a public-spirited man, and was the first to sign the promissory note to the State Bank, which secured the erection of the first State House building on the public square of Springfield. One who knew him well said of him: "His name was a synonym of honor and probity. His long white hair, his compact and powerful form, were for many years a noticeable sight in the streets of the town."

Three of his sons, Charles, Joseph, and Theodore, became physicians; and one, Milton, occupied a leading place as a member of the Illinois Bar. His grandson, the late John Hay, is well-known at home and abroad as a diplomat, for nearly seven years and until his death on July 1, 1905, as Secretary of State under Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt. Two grandchildren who bear the name of Hay reside in Springfield, Hon. Charles E. Hay, and Senator Logan Hay; and another, Nathanael Hay, lives in Champaign, Ill.

HAY, Logan, attorney-at-law and State Senator from the Springfield District, was born in the city of Springfield, February 17, 1871, the son of Milton and Mary (Logan) Hay, the latter a daughter of the late Stephen Trigg Logan, one of Illinois' most noted members of the bar. Mr. Hay received his primary education in the public schools of his native city, later entering Yale University from which he was graduated with the degree of A. B. in the class of 1893.
He then entered the Harvard Law School, graduating therefrom in 1867, the same year was admitted to the Sangamon County Bar as a member of the firm of Brown, Wheeler, Brown & Hay, of which he and his brother-in-law, Stuart Brown, are the surviving members, the late C. C. Brown and S. P. Wheeler, the senior members of the firm, having passed away.

Enjoying superior opportunities and inheriting rare abilities from his father and his maternal grandfather, Mr. Hay has established for himself a high reputation in his profession and won the confidence of his fellow-citizens, as shown by his promotion to positions of public trust without the asking. The first public position to which he was called was that of Alderman of his ward, for which he was chosen in 1903. In 1906 he was elected State Senator for the Springfield District, a position which he still holds by virtue of his re-election in 1910. Like his father, of quiet, unobtrusive manner, Mr. Hay depends upon what he actually accomplished for his constituents, rather than upon self-advertising, for the confidence which he enjoys.

Mr. Hay was married to Miss Lucy L. Bowen, and he and his wife have two children: Mary Douglass and Alice Houghton. In his business relations he is serving as Director of the Illinois National Bank.

HAY, Milton. (Vol. I, p. 226.)

HAYES, Joseph W.—Belief in the ultimate future of Sangamon County land has resulted in the accumulation of wealth by many of the agriculturists of this favored locality. One of the men who had the pleasure of seeing his faith amply justified is Joseph W. Hayes, of Section 6, Cartwright Township. He was born on this farm September 27, 1852, in a small frame house, which is now included in his substantial residence. He is a son of Augustus and Mary Ann (Wright) Hayes, both natives of Lancaster, Pa., where they married, after growing up together. Augustus Hayes is a son of John Hayes, a native of the North of Ireland, coming of Scotch and Irish ancestry. They were all Protestants, belonging to the Presbyterian Church.

Augustus Hayes was a man of some prominence in Lancaster County, living as he did in Mt. Joy, where he carried on a general store and operated a canal-boat. In spite of his successful business transactions, however, he decided he wanted a broader field for his children, and in 1848 sold out and moved to Illinois. Seven of his children were born in Lancaster County. All of them are now deceased except Joseph W. and Mrs. Rebecca Fink, who reside at Springfield. The others were: John, who died in Pennsylvania; Sarah, who became the wife of Dr. Albert Atherton; Mary J., who became the wife of R. J. Rudisell; Charlotte, who became the wife of Isaac P. Smith; Albert, who died in Sangamon County in 1824.

The family migration was accomplished by water to Beardstown, and from there overland to Springfield, where the winter of 1824 was spent. In the spring of 1825 they came to Cartwright Township, renting land on the old State Road. Many weary travelers passed the hospitality of the old pioneer, who never stopped to think of himself, but kept open house for all who needed rest and refreshment. In 1826 he bought 640 acres, on which he began to build a home. He had intended to embark in a mercantile business, but found that it would not be profitable to do so, as the merchant of those days was expected to carry his customers for a year and then take his pay in coon skins. Therefore, he devoted his energy to the development of his land. Here, as in Pennsylvania, he took a lively part in politics, supporting the Democratic party, and was a recognized leader in local affairs. While not a member of any church, he contributed liberally towards the erection and support of numerous churches. Mrs. Hayes was a devout Christian lady, who passed away firm in the faith of the Methodist Church, in 1808. Her husband died September 12, 1878, after having retired from active labor, on the farm he had made so valuable.

J. W. Hayes was brought up on the farm, attending the district school and those of Springfield. For some years he was in a mercantile business, but eventually sold out, having more faith in agriculture, and in 1876 he took charge of the homestead. He began farming on his own account after his marriage. This event took place March 12, 1877, when he was united with Miss Fannie A. Fair. He was born March 8, 1853, in Duchess County, N. Y., a daughter of Lowe and Louisa (Ferry) Pierce, but the only one of the family now surviving, her father passing away in 1898, and her mother in July, 1900. All her brothers and sisters died in infancy. The family came to Pleasant Plains about 1870. Mr. Pierce was in early life a maker of scythes and sickles by hand, but later was a farmer. He was also a blacksmith, and was well known in this locality.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Hayes began farming on the property which they still own, and here all their children have been born, they being: Harry D., a farmer of Wyoming; Mary Maud, at home; Karl Lowell, a physician and surgeon of Farmersville, III.; August W., a graduate of the agricultural department of the State University, now in charge of the experimental farms in various parts of State; Zella F., a teacher in the public schools of Tallula, Ill.; Rose May, and Oliver H., at home. For fifty-eight years Mr. Hayes has been identified with the best interests of Sangamon County, and since 1824 the Hayes family have been leaders there. He has always taken an interest in public matters, giving his support to the Democratic party. Fraternally he belongs to the Masonic organization, being affiliated with Lodge No. 700, of Pleasant Plains. The family all belong to the Presbyterian Church and give it a hearty and intelligent support. While Mr. Hayes was always refused to permit his name to be used on the ticket of his party, he has given his services for many years as a School Director, and it is largely due to his efforts that his home district has secured such good teachers and the children such intelligent supervision of their interests. His farm contains 185 acres, on which he raises a good grade of stock, including horses, cattle, hogs and sheep. The land is in a high state of development and his crops are astonishingly large. No man stands higher in the community than he as an intelligent and successful farmer and broad-minded, loyal citizen.

HAYES, Michael.—Those who have been fortunate enough to succeed in their life work are able to retire before old age overtakes them, and to enjoy, during the evening of life, the comforts to which their toil has entitled them. Springfield is the home of a number of these substantial men, and one of which it is justly proud is Michael Hayes, a veteran of the Civil War, born in Waterford, Ireland, May 12, 1838, a son of Patrick and Mary (Kennedy) Hayes, both natives of Ireland, farming people, who lived and died in their own land.

Michael Hayes was educated in Ireland and worked at different occupations in his native country, until he came to America, in June, 1859, landing in New York. From that city he came to St. Louis, after a stay of four months, and made the latter city his home for a year. By this time war had been declared, and the fiery young Irishman enlisted. In May, 1861, in Company A, Second United States Artillery, serving faithfully and well, until he received his honorable discharge in 1864. Returning to St. Louis, he spent about four months there, coming to Springfield, October 5, 1864, since which time this city has been his home. For a number of years he was employed in various positions by the City of Springfield, and was conscientious in the discharge of his duties, as he had been while a soldier. He has accumulated some realty, owning his own house and other city property.

The young hero, newly returned from the war, was married in St. Louis, August 1, 1864, to Ellen Foley, born in Waterford, Ireland, in 1844. Her parents also spent their lives in Ireland. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hayes: Ellen M., wife of John Lanterbeck, a farmer living in the vicinity of Springfield, Sangamon County; Patrick R., a member of the Springfield Fire Department stationed at Engle House No. 1; and a child died in infancy.

Mr. Hayes belongs to Stephenson Post, G. A. R., of Springfield, in which he is Banner Bearer. He belongs to St. Joseph's Catholic Church of the city. His political affiliations are with the Democratic party. For a number of years he has taken an active part in all the affairs of his Post, and is a thoroughly representative member. Nothing pleases him better than to relate stories of the thrilling days when he and his comrades were engaged in defending the Nation, and if space permitted their insertion here, they would furnish interesting reading.

HAYNES, Roscoe A., a well-known citizen of Springfield, was born in Macoupin County, Ill., September 30, 1852, son of John A. and Elizabeth (Darrrah) Haynes. John A. Haynes was born in Macoupin County, October 11, 1833. His parents were early settlers of that county, where his father died in 1866. The parents of Elizabeth Darrrah came originally from Richmond, Va., and located in Ohio before the Civil War, coming to Illinois in 1857. Elizabeth Darrrah was born in Champaign, Ohio. In June, 1859, John A. Haynes and his wife live on a farm in Macoupin County, and there Roscoe A. Haynes spent his boyhood and attended the public school. After leaving school he worked some time on his father's farm.

As Mr. Haynes was not content with farm life he went to Chicago and became a dry-goods salesman in the employ of John V. Farwell Company, and worked there three years. He returned to his father's farm for a vacation and in 1865 came to Springfield. He was employed three months by Brice-Surless-Pana Company, then began working for the Prudential Insurance Company, and was so successful in this line he has followed it since. He was solicitor three and one-half years, then was promoted to the post of Assistant Superintendent, which he still holds. He has applied himself enthusiastically to his work and has done well for himself and for the company for which he works.

Mr. Haynes was married, at Chicago, Ill., September 27, 1905, to Miss Clara M. Russell, born October 3, 1884, daughter of William J. and Josephine Russell, the former born December 30, 1859, and the latter May 25, 1866. Mr. Russell's parents came from Glasgow, Scotland, and his wife's parents came from Hanover, Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Russell moved from Canada to Chicago in 1880, and still live in that city, where the father is engaged in printing business. They had children as follows: Clara, Mrs. Haynes; Ellie, Lottie M.; Arthur, employed by W. P. Herrick, a commission merchant; and Evelyn, all residing in Chicago.

Mr. Haynes is a member of the Presbyterian Church and in politics is a Republican. He has formed many friends in Springfield and stands well with his associates. He is very fond of baseball and greatly enjoys watching a good game whenever he has the opportunity. His Grandfather Darrrah served three years in the Civil War and three uncles of Mr. Haynes also served in the war.

HAYNIE, Isham N. (Vol. I, p. 227.)
HAYS, Harry.—A fact now being recognized is that a man's personality plays an important part in his business. Through a pleasant, genial manner, a man can attract trade, and can secure it with good articles. Harry Hays, wholesale and retail cigar dealer of Springfield, one of the most popular men of the city, can justly feel that his courtesy has been of valuable assistance to him. He was born in Madison County, Ky., January 28, 1867, a son of Frank and Louise (Terrell) Hays, natives of Kentucky, the former born in 1835. The father was a shoemaker by trade, who moved to Bloomington, Ill., with his family, in 1881. There he worked at his trade, building up a large business and continuing in it until his death, in that city, in 1893. Mrs. Hays and the rest of the family moved to Springfield after the demise of Mr. Hays, and this continued to be the family home, Mrs. Hays dying two years ago.

Harry Hays grew up in Bloomington and Springfield, and is a graduate of the high school. Leaving school, he entered the employ of the Railroad News Company, and for several years was one of its valued employes. He went from this work into a restaurant business in Springfield, and after developing it very materially, sold it to start his present enterprise. He now carries a large stock of tobacco, cigars, and smokers' supplies, and controls a good retail and wholesale trade, that is rapidly increasing.

Mr. Hays was married in Springfield, July 9, 1900, to Anna Packard, born in Peoria, Ill. Her parents spent their lives in Peoria, where they died, leaving considerable property. They were prominent in that city, and their loss was deeply felt by a number, in addition to their home circle. Mr. Hays is a Republican, and a member of the Catholic Church. Both he and his wife are very popular socially and have gathered about them a delightful circle of friends, to whom they dispense a charming hospitality.

HAYS, James (deceased), an honored veteran of the Civil War and a farmer of Clear Lake Township, Sangamon, was prominent in church and Masonic circles and also belonged to Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., of Springfield. He was an industrious and conscientious man and a good citizen, and had many warm friends to mourn his loss. He was born in Indiana, in 1842, son of Samuel and Mary Hays, the former a farmer and carpenter. Samuel Hays brought his family from Indiana to Illinois and settled at Hamilton, where his death occurred, and both he and his wife died about 1890. Two sons and one daughter survive and one son besides James, is deceased.

James Hays received his education in the public schools of Indiana and after leaving school worked some time on his father's farm. He was employed six years in the rolling mills at Springfield, and in 1888 bought a small tract of land in Clear Lake Township, where he carried on farming two years. In 1894 Mr. Hays enlisted for service in the Union Army and served one year. He came to Illinois as a young man and spent many years at Hamilton. There was a log house on his farm in Clear Lake Township, where his widow now resides. He was an active member of the Methodist church, and in politics was a Republican.

Mr. Hays was married, in Springfield, in January, 1876, to Susan, daughter of Jeremiah and Paulina Brock, who was born February 27, 1841. Her father was born near Bloomington, Ill., and her mother in Louisville, Ky., and came to Illinois when about fifteen years of age. Mr. Brock died when nearly seventy years old and his widow survived to be eighty-four. They were parents of seven children, of whom three were daughters, and three children now survive: Jeremiah, of Keokuk, Iowa; Frank, of Butler, Ill., and Mrs. Hays. Mr. Hays and his wife had one son, Fred Morgan, a farmer living near Holliday, Mo., who is married and has had six children, of whom four survive. Mrs. Hays owns five acres of land and has lived on this place the past twenty-two years. She is well known in the community and has many friends.

HEBERLING, Thomas H., one of Sangamon County's oldest citizens and an honored veteran of the Civil War, was born in Darstown, Pa., February 13, 1823, and is a son of George and Catherine (Youngman) Hoberling, the former a native of Lancaster County and the latter of Union County, Pa., and the father born in 1791. Catherine Youngman's father fought in the Revolutionary War under General Mifflin, and George Hoberling fought in the War of 1812. The latter was a millwright by trade.

Thomas H. Hoberling was educated at Lewistown, Pa., and passed his childhood on the farm with his parents. He assisted his father in the erection of many mills in Pennsylvania, and filled the first mortise wheel in the city of Springfield, in 1805. He has been a resident of Sangamon County since August, 1865, having come there after the war.

February 28, 1894, Mr. Hoberling enlisted at Warsaw, Ill., in Company E, One Hundred Eighteenth Illinois Infantry, and served to the close of the war, being mustered out at Baton Rouge, La., July 10, 1865. He served some time in the Quartermaster's Department at Baton Rouge, and worked for a time at New Orleans for the Government, as pattern-maker. He is a member of the G. A. R. and has an honorable record as a soldier.

Mr. Hoberling was married at Palmyra, Mo., in July, 1854, to Rebecca Fryberger, who was born in Lancaster County, Pa., in 1819, daughter of John Fryberger, also a native of that county. Her mother was also a native of Pennsylvania. Two children were born of this marriage, namely: Kate, married W. B. Adams, of Taylorville, was born in Hamilton, Mo., in 1856, and has two children, and Ella, who was born in Warsaw, Ill., in 1862, married William Schlitt, a farmer living seven miles northwest of Springfield, and they have reared eight children, all of whom are living.

Mr. Heberling has considerable mechanical ability and has made several useful inventions, among them many years ago a twine binder, which he learned through misplaced confidence in others. He is now nearing the age of ninety years, but is active around his farm and enjoys excellent health and strength. He has patented a number of his inventions. Besides his property in Sangamon County he has a farm in Virginia, which he has owned since 1858. He is a member of the Episcopal Church. Although a Republican in political principles he has sometimes voted for Democratic candidates when he has considered it would be for the general welfare that he should do so. He is public-spirited and patriotic and takes an active interest in current events and issues. He is very well known in the community where he lives and has the respect and friendship of all who have had dealings with him. He owns a farm of ten acres in the city of St. Andrews, Fla. He resides on a farm with his son-in-law, Wm. H. Schlitt, seven miles northwest of Springfield.

HEIDLER, Samuel H., Principal of the Converse School, at Springfield, Ill., is one of the scholarly and well equipped educators of the country, who, in devoting himself to the arduous life of a teacher, chose a path of many difficulties, but one that has also had its compensations, for he has seen hundreds of his pupils go out into the world from under his instruction and successfully meet the requirements of modern civilization. Mr. Heidler was born in Lancaster County, Pa., September 6, 1861, and is a son of Levi and Martha (Hogendoubler) Heidler. The maternal great grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier and his paternal ancestors were among the earliest settlers in Pennsylvania.

Levi Heidler, the father, was born in Lancaster County, Pa., August 23, 1815, carried on farming as an occupation, and died in his native neighborhood, in 1902. The family is long-lived, one of his aunts having lived to be one hundred and six years of age. She died in 1876 and could remember the Revolutionary War. Levi Heidler married Martha Hogendoubler, who was born in Lancaster County, April 1, 1826, and died in 1907. Ten children were born to this union, namely: Anna, who married Christian Shenk, lives in Lancaster County; William; Henry; Harriet, who is the wife of Dr. Henry Brememan, in Lancaster County; Barbara; Cyrus; Sarah, who is the wife of Dr. Charles McCaney, of Petersburg, Pa.; Martha, who is the wife of C. K. Shenk; Samuel H., and Horace.

Samuel H. Heidler was reared on the old homestead, which land had been secured by his ancestors from the Penns. He attended the country schools and graduated from the county high school in 1879. From the first educational work appealed to him and he chose teaching rather than any other profession. After one year in the school-room in Lancaster County, he entered the Millersville State Normal School, in September, 1880, and graduated there in July, 1883. Two years of teaching and study in Lancaster County followed and in 1885 he received his Master's degree and a State Teacher's Certificate in Pennsylvania. Mr. Heidler then came to Sangamon County and taught two years at Centralli and two more at Pleasant Plains. He was elected principal of the Stuart School at Springfield and served as such from September, 1888, until July, 1893. Mr. Heidler then went to California and spent two years in the State University at Berkeley, returning to Illinois in 1895. In June of that year he was elected Superintendent of the Schools of Ottawa, Ill., where he remained until June, 1899, when he again became a student, spending the following year in the University of Chicago. In 1900 he was elected to his present position. He is recognized as a man of learning, experience, and a large measure of executive ability. His standards have always been of the highest and his influence upon his pupils has been inspiring. His uprightness of character and his frank personality have been prominent factors in his life.

Professor Heidler was married by an English Lutheran minister, a former friend, at Kansas City, Mo., July 29, 1893, to Miss Concellia Bunn, who was born at Springfield, Ill., one of five children born to her parents, who were natives of New Jersey. She was the third in order of birth, the others being: Mrs. Charles Seaman, Mrs. Charles Bovard, Joseph F. and Norcross. Two children have been born to Professor and Mrs. Heidler: Martha, born May 14, 1894, and Joseph R., born May 22, 1896. They are members of the Christian Church. Prof. Heidler has been a liberal contributor to other religious and charitable organizations. Fraternally he is a Knight of Pythias and a Mason. He is active in all the Masonic bodies, being Past Commander of Elwood Commandery, No. 6, Knights Templar, at Springfield.

HENDRICKS, Joseph, a retired miner living at Riverton, Ill., was born in Nicholas County, Ky., October 14, 1845, son of James and M. (McClelland) Hendricks, the former a native of Nicholas County, Ky., born April 18, 1819, and the latter born in Bath County, Ky., in 1816. The parents were farmers and came from Kentucky to Illinois in 1852, settling near Barclay, Sangamon County, where for several years they conducted a farm. Later they moved to Riverton, where the father engaged in mining in which occupation he continued until his death, June 27, 1888. His widow survived until 1891. They were parents of seven sons and two daughters, and three sons and two daughters are now living: Frank, Charles and Joseph, all of Riverton; Mary, wife of Albert Jones, of Riverton; Mattie, wife of Henry Shaw, of Peoria, Ill.

The education of Joseph Hendricks was acquired in Wolf Creek School, which was held in a log building, and as soon as old enough he began working on his father's farm. At the time of the war he enlisted in Company E, One Hundred Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and served 300 days, being mustered out at Camp Butler. He had been on guard duty in Missouri and Arkansas and had acquitted himself creditably. At the close of the war he resumed farming, but two years later began work at miling, which he continued until a few years ago, when he retired. He is an active member of Camp Butler Post G. A. R. In politics he is a Republican and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. He owns the home where he resides and has been fairly successful in a financial sense. He has spent most of his life in Sangamon County and is well known and much respected. He is popular among his friends and has a reputation for integrity and reliability.

Mr. Hendricks was married in Springfield, January 7, 1859, to Elizabeth Cantrell, born in Sangamon County, September 6, 1851, whose parents were natives of Ohio and came to Illinois at an early day, settling on a farm near Athens, where both died. Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Cantrell (four sons and four daughters), five now survive. Eight children were born to Mr. Hendricks and his wife, five sons and three daughters, of whom two sons and two daughters survive: Irene, wife of Samuel Fox, of Springfield; Leonard, Wesley and Lillian, living at home. There are two grandchildren in the family.

HENKEL, Henry Bailey, President of Springfield Business College, has arranged a course of study in this institution calculated to meet the demands of modern business methods. The course is a most practical one, and the work provided for by the manager of the school is a valuable training for the young man or woman entering upon a business career. Prof. Henkel was born in Freeport, Harrison County, O., but soon came with his parents to Ipava, Ill., and after receiving good preliminary training, took special courses of study in Jacksonville, Ill., Cleveland, O., and Philadelphia. After teaching eight years in the Jacksonville (IlI.) Business College, he came to Springfield and purchased a half-interest in the Springfield Business College, which then had an attendance of about one hundred and fifty students. In 1893, Prof. Henkel became sole proprietor of the college, and one year later it was incorporated under the laws of Illinois, with Prof. Henkel as president and manager. The annual enrollment is, at present, about five hundred.

Under the management of Prof. Henkel, the Springfield Business College has maintained a steady and healthy growth, and is recognized as an institution of merit and high educational value. Several new branches have been added to the curriculum, and the students are assisted to good positions when they are prepared for the work. In its bookkeeping department the most modern methods are taught and the department of penmanship is also very important. An excellent system of shorthand and typewriting is taught, and modern machines are furnished for practice work. The Stenotype, a machine for writing shorthand, has lately been introduced and is proving to be a great success. The college is located on the third floor of the Illinois State Register building, opposite the post office, on East Monroe street, where it occupies the entire floor space of over 6,000 square feet. The rooms are light, heated by steam, and well ventilated.

Mr. Henkel was married in 1881, to Elizabeth Corinne Freeman, of Jacksonville, and two sons have blessed this union: Myron F., a graduate of the law department of the George Washington University of Washington, D. C., now an attorney-at-law of Springfield; and Herbert B., a graduate of the medical department of the Northwestern University of Evanston, now a practicing physician of Springfield. Prof. Henkel is Past Commander of Elwood Commandry, No. 6, Knights Templar, and is also a Thirty-second degree Mason, Scottish Rite. He is recognized as an able, intelligent instructor, a good business man, and a useful, hard-working, resourceful citizen. He has a genial manner and dignified bearing, he is popular in the many circles where he is known and esteemed. In training young men and women for business pursuits, he is playing an important part in the future welfare and progress of the city.

HENKLE, Jake S., of Ball Township, is one of the best-known farmers of his part of Sangamon County, and is well liked by all. He has a nice farm of seventy acres on Section 35, where he carries on general farming with profitable results. He is energetic and enterprising and has won success through hard work and good judgment. Mr. Henkle has spent his entire life in Sangamon County, having been born in Cotton Hill Township April 7, 1850. He is a son of Marshall L. and Louisa (Rape) Henkle, the former a native of North Carolina, who came to Sangamon County in boyhood, his father being a native of North Carolina, where he died. The mother of Jake S. Henkle was born in Tennessee, and now lives with her son, having reached the age of eighty-five years. Her father, a native of Tennessee, served in the War of 1812 and died in Sangamon County.

Mr. Henkle received his education in the country schools of Sangamon County, but had few advantages in this direction. He early engaged in the work on his father's farm, remaining at home until he was twenty years of age. He has spent all his active life in farm work and has been a resident of his present farm nine years. He was married, in Sangamon County, December 29, 1875, by Rev. Clark, to Fannie Safford, born in New York State March 24, 1855, daughter of Daniel and Helen (Stone) Safford, both natives of New York. Mr. Safford was a farmer and an early settler of Sangamon
HISTORY OF SANGAMON COUNTY

County. His parents spent their entire life in New York, but his wife's father, also a native of New York, came to Sangamon County, where he died. Six children were born to Mr. Henkle and his wife; Ernest, born in Sangamon County, February 19, 1879, died January 2, 1898, and is buried in Zion Cemetery; Daisy, born in Christian County, May 8, 1876, lives at home; Helen, born in Sangamon County, August 13, 1882, married John R. Lard, April 9, 1902, and they have three children—George, Ernest and Agnes; Hattie, born in Sangamon County, May 4, 1887, is unmarried and lives at home; Nellie, born in Sangamon County, May 28, 1890, lives at home; Edna, born December 15, 1895.

In religious views Mr. Henkle is a Methodist and he and his family are members of the church. He is a Democrat in political principles, but in local matters votes for the interest of the community and the man he believes will best serve the interest of the people, rather than for party. He has served during the past year as School Director. He is a member of the Modena fire companies and the Loyal Americans, and his wife is also a member of the latter order and of the American Home Circle.

HENKLE, Thomas Condell (deceased).—The late Thomas Condell Henkle, a prominent citizen and successful merchant of Springfield, was born in Decatur, Ill., January 13, 1850, and died at his home in Springfield, May 27, 1900. He was a son of Enos M. and Martha (Condell) Henkle, he born in Pennsylvania and she near Dublin, Ireland, and they had four children. Thomas C. Henkle received his education in the public schools of Illinois and moved to Springfield about 1808.

For many years prior to his death Mr. Henkle was a member of the John W. Bunn Company, wholesale grocers of Springfield, an old established firm and very successful in their operations. The men connected with this company were able business men and the affairs of the firm were handled in a manner to insure the confidence of its patrons, one of the greatest elements of success in any enterprise. Mr. Henkle was a representative and upright business man and was greatly respected and admired for his many admirable qualities and characteristics. He was handsome in form and feature and of attractive personality, showing high character in his every act. He was a true friend, a kind neighbor and a most loving husband and father, possessing those qualities which contribute most to the happiness of domestic life.

Mr. Henkle was married, April 20, 1874, to Ellen Huntington, a singer of rare talent and well known throughout Illinois, and a daughter of George Lathrop and Hannah Flagg (Forbes) Huntington. Mr. Huntington was a talented musician and was prominent in business circles and public affairs in Springfield. A sketch of his life appears in this work. Four children blessed the union of Mr. Henkle and his wife, namely: Ellen Josephine, wife of William L. Patton, an attorney of Springfield and they have three children—James Huntington, Leonora L., and William Henkle; Leonora, wife of Paul Lester Starne, a coal merchant of Springfield; John Bunn, single, with A. J. Edwards & Son, loan brokers of St. Louis, Mo., and Thomas Huntington, with the Electric Service Supply Company, of Chicago, Illinois. The family attend St. Paul's Pro Cathedral Episcopal Church. In politics Mr. Henkle was a Republican. He never cared for public office. He was very fond of his home and cared little for public life, though he was always interested in the general welfare of the community and the success of public movements that were calculated to be of lasting benefit to the people. The family residence is 811 West Edwards Street.

HENRY, George Washington (deceased).—Not all of the men who were once numbered among the veterans of the Civil War, are still with us, and Springfield can claim a large quota of them on the other shore. Although they have departed, the memories of their good deeds, both in war and peace, remain, and their families cherish these and seek to enshrine their heroes in the list of the country's great. Among those who proved their worth when their country had most need of them, was the late George Washington Henry, of Sangamon County, Ill., a son of Richard and Lucy (Pickett) Henry, natives of Kentucky, the father being both farmer and blacksmith. They were most excellent people and did their full duty in the state of life in which they were placed.

George Washington Henry was educated at Jacksonville, Ill., to which the family removed in his childhood, and remained with his parents, working on the family farm, until he secured one of his own. He had learned blacksmithing from his father, and carried on his trade while cultivating his farm. Mr. Henry enlisted in the Illinois Volunteer Infantry and served gallantly until he was honorably discharged. He did not connect himself with any secret societies, but was a very consistent member of the Christian Church. From the time the Republican party was founded he was one of its earnest supporters, and continued as such all the remainder of his life. In later life Mr. Henry retired from the farm, coming to Springfield, where he bought a pleasant home. His death occurred March 10, 1896, and he is buried in Arkansas, having gone to that State in search of health.

Mr. Henry was married in Jacksonville, Ill., August 3, 1852, to Elizabeth Reynolds, born in Springfield, March 6, 1835, daughter of James and Amelia Reynolds. Mr. and Mrs. Henry had these children: Mrs. Emma McMechan of Independence, Mo.; Ida, born October 19, 1866, married George Norton; Mrs. George Grubb, born in 1868, lives in Chicago.

HENRY, James D. (Vol. I, p. 230.)
HENSLEY, William Sherman, a well known business man of Sangamon County, is a member of the firm of Hensley Brothers, furniture dealers and undertakers at Tallula and Pleasant Plains. He was born in Island Grove Township, July 4, 1865, a son of John and Lee Ann (Lyuch) Hensley. Mr. Hensley's youth was spent on a farm in Cartwright Township, whence the family had moved when he was but one year old, and he began his education in the Franklin District school. Until twenty-two years of age, he remained on the home farm, and on November 9, 1887, he was united in marriage with Rebecca J. Griffin, who was born in Pike County, Ill., January 14, 1864, a daughter of William Blair and Malinda (Farris) Griffin, the former a native of Georgetown, Ohio, and the latter of Highland County, that State. Mr. Griffin was what was known as a singing master in his young manhood, and after coming to Illinois in 1874, he became widely known throughout the State. He located in Pleasant Plains and here his wife died March 13, 1895, while he still survives and makes his home with Mrs. Hensley. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was one of the first to offer his services to his country, enlisting in Company C, Twenty-eighth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and serving throughout the war. He received an honorable discharge and has a war record of which any man might well be proud. There were eight children in the Griffin family: Frances, who was the wife of A. O. Irwin; Amanda, the wife of A. L. Irwin of Springfield; Litta, the wife of S. A. Hensley, of Hensley Brothers; Henry, of Oklahoma City, Okla., a contractor and builder; Charles, a farmer near Dawson, Sangamon County, Ill.; two died in infancy.

After his marriage, Mr. Hensley settled on a farm in Cartwright Township and for twelve years carried on agricultural pursuits there, and on that farm his two sons were born: Charles Reed, born January 22, 1890, who was educated in the schools of Pleasant Plains and The James Millikin University of Decatur, has a fine musical education and is a graduate of the Barnes College of Embalming of Chicago, and will assist his father as funeral director; and John Russell, born September 28, 1894, is in the Sophomore class at the Springfield High School. On account of the failing health of his father, Mr. Hensley went to live on the latter's farm and continued there until 1896. In 1904 Mr. Hensley purchased his present home in the eastern part of Pleasant Plains and here he and his wife have resided to the present time.

Mr. Hensley went to Chicago in June, 1898, and there took a full course in undertaking and embalming at the Chicago College of Embalming,secured a diploma, returned to this place and engaged in business, also operating a branch at New Berlin, the latter of which was sold in 1907 to Mr. Wilcox. In 1904, Mr. Hensley and his brother, S. A., formed a partnership, engaging in undertaking and in dealing in furniture and farm implements. Later the implement department was closed out on account of the growth of the undertaking department, and a branch was established at Tallula, of which S. A. Hensley has charge. The Hensley Brothers have one of the finest equipped undertaking establishments in the State, and every possible convenience has been installed for the benefit of patrons. They have their own private ambulance as well as an elegant funeral car, and both brothers have made their work a study, keeping constantly in touch with all inventions and innovations in their line.

Fraternally Mr. Hensley is connected with the Odd Fellows, the Masons, the Court of Honor and the Eastern Star, of which latter his wife is also a member. In political matters he is a Republican, with Prohibition tendencies. He and Mrs. Hensley are connected with the Presbyterian Church, in the work of which both are prominent.

HERMAN, George W.—The pioneer history of Sangamon County has been dwelt upon so exhaustively elsewhere in this work, that but little remains to be said relative to those who developed this part of the State, yet when the Herman family is mentioned it is only fitting that some reference be made to those sturdy frontiersmen who braved the dangers and endured the privations of Sangamon County as it was then, keeping the State capital, and people who had not yet begun to flock there. To the far-sightedness and keen appreciation of location and climatic conditions, which these pioneers showed in selecting Sangamon County as a permanent home, is due its present importance. A well-known member of the Herman family is George W. Herman, a prosperous farmer of Ball Township, born in Woodside Township, Sangamon County, May 17, 1840, a son of David H. and Sarah (Mitts) Herman, the former born in North Carolina in 1805, and the latter in Kentucky, in 1811.

David H. Herman was taken to Kentucky from North Carolina by his father, when a boy, and lived there for a number of years, marrying in that State. In 1829 he migrated to Sangamon County, arriving the winter of the great snow, but, not discouraged, he entered forty acres of government land in Woodside Township, on which George W. Herman was later born. He and his good wife had six children, four sons and two daughters, all of whom are deceased except George W. The maternal grandfather of the latter also came to Sangamon County, entering eighty acres of government land, forty of which are now owned by the grandson.

In a little log schoolhouse, containing slab seats and a puncheon floor, George W. Herman eagerly learned all the teacher sought to impart. His entire life has been spent in farming, and with the exception of eight years spent in Montgomery County, he has always lived in Sangamon County. For the past twenty-five years he has lived on his present fine farm of forty acres, now worth two hundred dollars per acre. He takes great pride in it and has brought the whole place up to a high standard.

On February 26, 1863, Mr. Herman was married, in East St. Louis, Ill., to Sarah Childers, born in Covington, Ky., August 22, 1842. Her father, a stone mason, lived for a time in St. Louis, where he built the first jail. Later he moved to Schuyler County, Ill., where he lived for a time, but spent his declining years at Alton, Ill., both he and his wife passing away in that city. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Herman, seven of whom survive: Nora E. lives in Springfield where she is a dressmaker; Emma D., wife of William Jeffries, of Springfield; Augusta M., wife of William Parker, a fireman on the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad; Laura D. Page, another daughter, lives in Springfield; Edward C., lives in Springfield, as does Sarah L., the latter being in the employ of the Roberts Laundry; and Georgia is a school teacher at Auburn, Ill. There are four grand- children in the family.

Mr. Herman is a Democrat in political faith, but has been too much occupied with farming operations to find time to go before the public for consideration as an official. He believes in a man's doing all he can as a private citizen, to secure good government and such improvements as will work out for the best interests of the community at large. Hard-working and thrifty, he has earnestly applied himself to his business, and has developed into a practical farmer, whom it would be difficult to excel in his special line.

HERNDON, Archer G. (Vol. I, p. 230.)

HERNDON, Isaac William, belongs to one of Sangamon County's old and highly respected families. He was born on a farm four miles southeast of Cantrall, in Fancy Creek Township, November 29, 1874, a son of James Nathaniel and Mary Ann (Dunlap) Herndon, the former born in Springfield April 26, 1841, and the latter born near Cantrall, Sangamon County, March 5, 1850. The father, who was a farmer by occupation, served in the Civil War in Company G Tenth Cavalry, and his father was William H. Herndon, well known for his association in legal practice with Abraham Lincoln. William H. was a son of Archer G. Herndon, who was born in Culpeper County, Va., February 13, 1795, and when about ten years of age was taken to Green County, Ky., where he was married in 1816 to Mrs. Rebecca (Day) Johnson. Mrs. Johnson's father served in the Revolution. Archer G. Herndon had one child born in Kentucky, and moved to Madison County, III., where another was born. Subsequently he removed to Sangamon County, where they arrived in the spring of 1821. They settled five miles northeast of Springfield on what became known as German Prairie, and there two other children were born to them.

William H., eldest son of Archer G. Herndon, was born in Green County, Ky., December 27, 1818, and was married in Sangamon County, March 26, 1840, to Mary J. Maxey, who was born July 27, 1822. They had six children: James N., Annie M., Beverly P., Elizabeth R., Leigh W., Mary X. The mother of these children died August 18, 1860, and William H. Herndon was married (second) July 31, 1861, to Anna Miles. Two children were born of this union, Nina Belle and William M. The family removed to a farm six miles north of Springfield in Fancy Creek Township. For many years William H. Herndon was a practicing attorney in Springfield, being the law partner of Abraham Lincoln from 1848 to Mr. Lincoln's death.

Isaac William Herndon received his education in the public schools of Fancy Creek Township and lived on a farm until about 1862, then spent a year in Springfield, but returned to Fancy Creek Township for permanent residence. He then learned the trade of blacksmith, which he has since followed. He has spent most of this time in work at a mine near Cantrall, and makes that village his home. He is recognized as a skilled workman and stands well with his associates and fellow citizens. In politics he has always been a Democrat, and fraternally he was for nineteen years a member of the Woodmen of the World, a short time belonging to the Court of Honor. He has served as Township Assessor and takes an active interest in public affairs.

Mr. Herndon was married in Springfield August 13, 1865, to Irene Emma McCoy, who was born near the Council estate, two miles east of Cantrall, July 18, 1881, daughter of Martin and Anna (Brown) McCoy. Mr. McCoy was born in Ohio, February 8, 1848, and Anna Brown was born two miles east of Cantrall. The latter was a daughter of Benjamin F. and Susannah (Dunlap) Brown, her father born in Kentucky March 28, 1815. Benjamin F. was a son of James L. Brown, who was born in South Carolina October 20, 1788. His native State was married in 1806 to Jane M. Berry, soon afterward going to Union County, Ky., where eight children were born to them. James L. Brown brought his family to Sangamon County, arriving there in 1824, and locating in what became Fancy Creek Township, where three children were born.

The progenitor of this family in Sangamon County, Archer G. Herndon Sr., was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Springfield from 1825 to 1836, during which time he erected the first regular tavern in the town. He was one of the "Long Nine" who were largely instrumental in securing the removal of the capital from Vandalia to Springfield, having been elected Senator in 1836. He served as Receiver of Public Moneys in the Land Office in Springfield from 1842 to 1849. He died January 3, 1857, and his widow survived until August 19, 1875, both in Springfield.
William H. Herndon's wife, Mary J. Maxcy, was a member of one of Sangamon County's oldest families. She was born in Kentucky, daughter of James and Maria C. (Cook) Maxcy, the former a native of Prince Edward County, Va., born in 1791, and a soldier in the War of 1812, from Kentucky, to which State his parents moved when he was about seven years of age. He brought his family to Sangamon County in 1834. James Maxcy served as the first City Marshal of Springfield and for twenty-six years in succession held some city office. He was a son of Joel and Susan (Davis-Hill) Maxcy, the latter of whom died in Kentucky in 1812. Joel Maxcy was born in Rockingham County, Va., about 1759, and served as a soldier in a Virginia regiment at the time of the Revolution, taking part in the battle of Guilford Court House. After his second marriage, which occurred in Butler County, Ky., he removed to Logan County, Ky., and later to Sangamon County, Ill., arriving in Springfield in November, 1827, and soon afterward removing to Island Grove Township, where he died December 27, 1827.

HERRING, Henry (deceased).—The late Henry Herring, former Chief of Police of Springfield, was missed in many circles in this city. He had been a resident of Springfield since 1873, having in that time had won many warm personal friends. A man of great energy and industry, by his own efforts, he won a position of trust in the community to which he came as a poor boy with his own way to make in the world. Mr. Herring was born at Johnstown, Pa., May 12, 1850, son of John and Mary (Ackerman) Herr- ing, both natives of Pennsylvania, the former born at Johnstown. The father was a carpenter and contractor and brought his family to Illinois in an early day, settling at Niantic, where he carried on a farm and also worked at his trade. He enlisted for service in the Civil War, from Niantic, and while in the South was taken sick, died and was buried there. The mother some years later went to Missouri and lived with a daughter, dying there.

As a boy Henry Herring went to school in Niantic, Ill., and worked on the farm for his mother until he came to Springfield in 1873. He took a position with the Springfield Rolling Mills, he worked for this company twenty-seven years, becoming foreman of the plating department, and was one of the most trusted men in their employ. In 1898, Mr. Herring secured a position as Sergeant of Police, under Mayor Wheeler, serving one year in this capacity, then went back to his position with the rolling mills. Eight months later he took a position as policeman, under Mayor Wheeler, and after working a few months in that position was appointed Chief of Police by Mayor Phillips, serving two years and three months in that responsible office. Mr. Herring then served three years as a custodian at the State Arsenal, and was later employed at various occupations. He then enlisted on the police force and at the time of his death, April 8, 1906, was serving as special officer at police headquarters.

Mr. Herring was married at Springfield, January 19, 1873, to Miss Lydia Lane, who was born near Middletown, Ohio, November 18, 1851. Her father, whose people were all Quakers, was a farmer, and made a specialty of raising fine horses and cattle. Mrs. Herring is related through her mother to Gen. Scott, of revolutionary fame; a cousin of Abraham Lincoln married her father's only sister; her maternal grandfather, Gen. Fall, served in the Mexican War, and all her father's brothers served in the Civil War. Mr. Lane and his wife came to Illinois in an early day and settled on a farm near Kenney, later moving to Maroa, where they kept a hotel. They spent their last days on a farm near Macon. Two sons and two daughters were born to Mr. Herring and wife, namely: Harold S., who was a trumpeter in Company C, Fifth Illinois Infantry, was killed while on duty as a soldier during the big mine strike at Fana, Ill., December 29, 1898; Herbert died at the age of two years and eight months; Manue L., at home, is employed by the Illinois Watch Company; Orinta D., wife of William C. Kikendall, of the firm of Kikendall & Troxell, dealers in insurance and real estate, Mr. Kikendall and wife have two children, Leona and Delia. Mr. Herring was a prominent member of the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of the Maccabees and the Court of Honor. He was a member of the Christian Church and his widow belongs to the Baptist Church. In politics he was a stanch Republican. The family reside at 1420 Monument Avenue, Springfield.

HERTEL, George, for the past twenty-six years a miner in the vicinity of Springfield, was born in that city, June 25, 1850, a son of Matthias and Mary E. (Lee) Hertel, the father born in Prussia, February 27, 1809, and the mother in Kentucky, in 1826. Matthias Hertel was a shoemaker by trade and emigrated to the United States in 1847, locating first in St. Louis, Mo. In 1858 he moved to Springfield, and later moved to Buffalo, Ill., where he died. His wife's parents were natives of Kentucky and came to Springfield, where both died.

George Hertel received his education in Springfield and spent his childhood in that city. After leaving school he learned the trade of shoemaker with his father, and followed same about fifteen years. In 1884 he moved to Missouri and worked about a year on a railroad, then returned to Springfield, where he has lived since. Two of his brothers enlisted from Sangamon County, in 1862, in Company E, One Hundred Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, under Colonel Shoop, and served three years, being mustered out in 1865. Both were farmers and are now deceased, one passing away in Springfield, the other in Arkansas.
In political views Mr. Hertel has always been a strong Republican and has been active in local affairs. He served from 1874 until 1877 as Constable of Buffalo, Ill. He does not feel bound by party lines in local affairs, but votes for the men and measures he believes will best serve the public good. He is a member of the Lutheran Church and is affiliated with the M. W. A. and the U. M. W. of A. Several years ago he turned his attention toward mining and has been successful in this line, winning the confidence and respect of all who have had dealings with him. He has a large grown-up family and is well known in Springfield.

Mr. Hertel was married, in Springfield, July 17, 1881, to Elizabeth Teal, who was born in Dawson, Ill., May 17, 1864, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Matheuey) Teal, natives of Kentucky, the father born in 1814 and the latter in 1808. They were early settlers of Dawson, where they lived on a farm, and died there. Four sons and three daughters were born to Mr. Hertel and his wife, all of whom survive, namely: George, born at Buffalo, August 2, 1887, after his time with his parent; Archie, born at Buffalo, October 25, 1883, lives at home, married Alice Collins and they have one child; Charles, born at Riverton, April 10, 1885, lives at home; Etta, born in Springfield, March 12, 1887, married Felix Ameche, of Kenosha, Wis., now serving as Deputy Sheriff, and they have two children; Sarah, born in Barclay, November 10, 1889, lives with her parents; William, born at Barclay, April 9, 1892, at home; Gladys, born in Springfield, May 16, 1895, at home.

HERTZ, Henry L. (Vol. I, p. 231.)

HESSER, John L., an enterprising and successful farmer of Clear Lake Township, owns eighty acres of land worth, at least, $800 per acre, and has spent most of his life in Sangamon County. He is a veteran of the Civil War and is well known in G. A. R. circles, and thirty-six national encampments of the organization. He is a prominent member of Stephenson Post, No. 30, of Springfield. He was born in Virginia, March 17, 1855, a son of Samuel L. and Ann (Slagle) Hesser, the former born at Winchester, Va., July 2, 1797. The former was a farmer and contractor, who moved to Sangamon County in 1836. He spent twelve years in the city of Springfield, helping to build the old State House, which is now the Court House, and the old American Hotel, that stood on the site now occupied by Bressmer's store. He was one of the organizers of the Masonic Order in Sangamon County, and a charter member of its first lodge. At the expiration of the twelve years he moved to Mechanicsburg, where he continued working at his trade, living in that village from 1848 to 1850. For the following two years he lived on a farm near Buffalo, when he retired to Buffalo, there dying in October, 1871. His widow spent the remaining eight years of her life with her son John L., when she, too, passed away, aged eighty-nine years.

The first wife of Samuel L. Hesser died January 25, 1828, so that the mother of John L. was Mr. Hesser's second wife, whom he married September 12, 1828. She was born in Hagerstown, Md., October 4, 1803, and reared in Winchester, Va. One child was born to the first marriage and ten to the second, six children now surviving, four sons and two daughters.

John L. Hesser received his early education in the city of Springfield, where he attended Prof. Springer’s subscription school, and spent two terms in Eureka College in 1857, and his first independent venture was buying and selling horses and mules. These his uncle, George O’Conner, brought to the amount of 250 head, from Texas. Mr. Hesser and his partner, Dr. Fowler, sold and traded them all over the State.

Mr. Hesser moved to Jacksonville in 1855, and worked at the trade of carriage trimming, remaining there two years. He then returned to Springfield, and until the war engaged in working on his father’s farm. On August 7, 1862, he enlisted, at Camp Butler, for three years, in Company A, Seventy-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry being mustered in as Corporal. On October 25, 1862, he was promoted to the rank of Fifth Sergeant; January 8, 1863, to that of Orderly Sergeant, and September 17, 1863, to that of Second Lieutenant. He spent 550 days in Confederate prisons and during this period suffered many hardships and privations. He was confined in Libby Prison, Andersonville, Danville and Charleston. Finally he was paroled, at Wilmington, N. C., February 25, 1865, at the close of a long and faithful service. In 1889 he made a visit to various battlefields where he had fought during the war but found all greatly changed. He was popular with his comrades and had reason to be proud of his service and his family. He is a strong Republican and had the honor of being well acquainted with Abraham Lincoln, of whom he has many pleasant recollections. Well informed on many subjects, Mr. Hesser keeps abreast of the issues of the day, taking great interest in public affairs.

Mr. Hesser was married in Clear Lake Township, November 1, 1860, to Mary J. Cromley, born in Ohio. Her father came to Sangamon County in 1858, engaging in farming there, and lived in that locality the remainder of his life. One daughter was born to Mr. Hesser and wife, Sarah M., living at home. The family have a very pleasant and comfortable home near Riverton, and have many friends in the community.

HICKEY, Patrick (deceased), for several years a prominent citizen of Riverton, Ill., will be remembered by many of the older residents there as a pleasant, upright man, of high character. He was a devout Catholic and honest in his dealings with his fellow-men, winning the respect of all who knew him. He was born in County Tipperary, Ireland, in 1822, and his parents, also natives of Ireland, lived on a farm, which the father operated, and they spent their entire lives there. Mr. Hickey was educated in Ireland and worked for his father in boyhood and youth. He emigrated to America in 1850 and soon afterward came to Springfield and engaged in business with Michael Doyle. For several years he and Mr. Doyle conducted the Cottage Gardens, and when they dissolved partnership Mr. Hickey moved to Riverton.

Upon coming to Riverton Mr. Hickey purchased land near the village and engaged in farming, remaining there until his death. He conducted a tavern for sometime and during the war boarded the soldiers who passed through Riverton. General Grant ate at his table as well as many other officers. He was an industrious worker and successful in his various occupations. He was interested in everything concerning the general welfare and supported the Democratic party.

Mr. Hickey was married in Springfield to Mary Funchu, also a native of Tipperary, and to their union three children were born: John, who survives, and two who are deceased. The mother and child died in 1855. Mr. Hickey married as his second wife, Julia Shelly, a native of Ireland, born in 1823, their union taking place January 20, 1850. Her father, Cornelius Shelly, was a farmer by occupation, and both her parents died in Ireland. Nine children were born of this union, of whom two now survive, Margaret, wife of Patrick Fleming, of Springfield, and Mary, wife of Michael Egan, also of that city. Mr. Hickey died at his home in Riverton in 1867, deeply mourned by his many friends. His widow became the wife of John Smith and owns a home in Riverton, where she is well known and highly respected. Mr. Smith died in 1880 at Riverton.

HICKEY, Very Reverend Timothy.—There is probably no man in Springfield who has in as full measure the respect, the admiration and love of the people of the city, as the Very Reverend Father Timothy Hickey, Vicar General of the Diocese of Alton and pastor of the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception, the mother church of that denomination in Springfield. Certainly no man more richly deserves this respect, admiration and love. During the many years, he has labored here among his people, he has shown them by his life and example of what charity, generosity and willing self-sacrifice may accomplish in benefitting mankind, the only reward he hoped for being the “well done, good and faithful servant,” of the Master.

Father Hickey was born in County Cork, Ireland, in 1841. He began his early education in the National Schools, and completed his studies and was ordained at All Hallows College, in the city of Dublin. He sailed for the United States in 1868, landing in New York, and came immediately to Springfield to accept the post of assistant priest in the Church of the Immaculate Conception, then under the direction of the Rev. Father Sullivan. After three years, he took charge of the Catholic Church at Virden, in Macoupin County, and at the same time had supervision over the spiritual needs of Catholics at Sugar Creek and Auburn, in Sangamon County. From there he went to Pittsfield, Ill., then to Decatur, where he remained five years as priest of St. Patrick’s Church of that place. Later, for several years, he was located at Jacksonvile. Returning to Springfield, in 1889, Father Hickey became rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and here he has since remained. During his pastorate, a fine parish residence has been erected, a beautiful structure, costing $11,000, well and tastefully furnished, and a residence for the sisters who conduct the parish school. In 1900, the interior of the church was re-decorated at a cost of $2,000, the ceiling containing seven life-sized paintings of the Saints, after whom the other Catholic Churches in Springfield have been named, these other churches being the progeny, so to speak, of the Immaculate Conception parish. The membership of the church consists of 500 families, and there are 500 pupils in St. Mary’s parochial school.

There is probably no man of any denomination or any walk of life in Springfield, who is held in higher esteem than Father Hickey. From rich and poor, he claims a first place in their hearts, and the claim is cheerfully allowed. His charities will never be fully known. In his quiet and unostentatious way he visits the homes of the sick and poor, in the performance of his pastoral duties, helping the afflicted and those in distress, always soliciting for the spiritual and temporal welfare of his people, and, indeed of everybody. The present biography, meagre and insufficient as it is, which would not have been published with Father Hickey’s consent, is but a slight testimonial of his worth to gratify the hundreds of men and women who have learned their prayers from his kind and sympathetic lips, and whose children are now learning theirs, in the same way.

HICKS, Lafayette Washington (deceased). late of Buffalo, Sangamon County, Ill., was a man of ability who won a worthy success and whose memory is held dear by all who knew him. He was born in Bath County, Ky., March 21, 1837, a son of Henry and Sarah (Renn) Hicks, natives of Virginia and members of old American families, who settled in Kentucky, prospered as farmers there, and in the immutable order of events, died there. They have had two sons and four daughters, all of whom have passed away.

Mr. Hicks was educated in the country schools in his native county, and learned farming by actual participation in the operation of the homestead. In 1858, he came to Illinois and settled on a farm in Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County, owned then by George and James Hamilton, but now the property of Lord Scully, of England. He was employed there nine years, much of the time breaking ground with oxen. He then bought land and farmed successfully for many years. In 1888, he was appointed Deputy Sheriff, in which office he served with much ability and credit until his death, which occurred in Buffalo, October 9, 1891. He also filled the offices of Constable and Justice of the Peace in Buffalo Township for several terms. For nineteen years after he left the farm, he varied his official duties by acting as auctioneer, holding public sales at Buffalo, and in all the country round about. He was a Democrat and a member of the Christian Church.

Mr. Hicks married, June 17, 1859, Miss Louisa Williams, born on Christmas Day, 1838, a daughter of Aaron and Georgia Linnie Williams, the former a native of Pennsylvania and his wife of Kentucky. In early life Mr. Williams settled on a farm in Kentucky where he spent the remainder of his days. He was a Mason. He and his wife were parents of four sons and two daughters, and all their children except Mrs. Hicks and her brother Joseph Williams, of Greenacastle, Ind., are deceased. Mr. Williams served his country as a soldier in the Mexican War, and his brother fought for the “stars and stripes” in the Civil War. Three of Mrs. Hicks’ brothers were members of the Masonic order. Mrs. Hicks owns her home and two other pieces of property in Buffalo, besides 120 acres of land in Mechanicsburg Township, and has lived in her present home in Buffalo twenty-three years. She is a member of the Methodist Church, and also of the Eastern Star Lodze No. 293, of Dawson, Ill.

Aaron Williams, father of Mrs. Hicks, was a descendant of the illustrious Roger Williams, of New England, and was born in Pennsylvania, about 1702. He was a son of Joseph and Mary (Bartel) Williams, natives of Pennsylvania, the former of Irish and the latter of German descent, farming people in that State. Aaron Williams spent his boyhood on a farm and attended school in his native State and later in Kentucky, his parents having removed to Bath County, that State, where he and they spent the remainder of their lives. He was a farmer and also an iron molder and miller. His parents were early settlers of Bath County, and the school which he attended (barefooted) was supported by subscriptions from its patrons and held in a log building, having shal seats and floor, with greased paper for window glass. He was married in Aberdeen, Ohio, to Miss Georgia A. Linney (or Linne), and both he and his wife died in Bath County, Ky. They were parents of six children: George J., deceased; formerly lived in Labadie, Ky.; Joseph lives at the State Soldiers’ Home in Lafayette, Ind.; Mary married Thomas Rogers, of Bath County; William, deceased, formerly a resident of Bath County, John was killed at the age of nineteen years, when a team ran away; Louisa, Mrs. Hicks. Mr. Williams became a man of prominence and influence in his community and was a useful citizen. He was liberal in religious views and was a member of the Christian Church; a Democrat in political affairs; he was affiliated with the Masonic Order fraternity. He and his wife, who was born and reared in Kentucky, reared a fine family and were much esteemed. Mrs. Hicks is a woman of high character and kind heart, interested in the welfare of those about her, and she is held in tender regard by her many friends, who delight to enjoy her favor and society.

HIGGINS, Owen (deceased), who was for over thirty years a resident of Springfield, Ill., was well known in that city and highly respected as a useful and enterprising citizen. He was born in Ireland, March 22, 1848, son of John and Catherine (Flynn) Higgins, both natives of Ireland, where they carried on farming. Mr. Higgins had small educational advantages but made the most of his opportunities and received a fair education in the country schools of his native land. He worked on the farm with his father until 1874, then emigrated to the United States, and after spending a short time in Pittsburg, Pa., and Rock Island, Ill., located in Springfield, where he lived the remainder of his life. He followed the trade of iron worker after coming to Springfield and was an expert in this line. He was industrious and energetic and accumulated considerable real estate. He never took an active part in politics, but was a Democrat all his life.

Mr. Higgins was married, in Springfield, January 25, 1878, to Miss Annie Hofferty, a native of Ireland, born January 1, 1856, daughter of Peter and Cecilia (Dwyer) Hofferty, both born in Ireland, where their entire lives were spent. They were farmers. Several children were born to Mr. Higgins and his wife, of whom the following survive: John B., stationary engineer for the Springfield Water Works, is married and lives at 1533 East Jefferson Street, Springfield; Peter F., unmarried, living at home with his mother; George W. and Charles V., yard masters for the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad Company, at Springfield; Thomas J., a railroad machinist; Katie J. and Cecilia E., attending school and living at home with their mother. Mrs. Higgis owns the home at 1129 East Reservoir Street.

Mr. Higgins died March 13, 1907, and his remains are buried in Calvary Cemetery, Springfield. He was devoted to his family and friends and his loss was widely mourned. He was a devout member of St. Joseph’s Roman Catholic Church, and was affiliated with Lodge No. 25, Ancient Order of Foresters.

HIGGINS, William (deceased), who spent many years on his farm on Section 33, Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County, Ill., was well regarded in his community and has many farm friends. Mr. Higgins was born in Ireland, December 25, 1823, a son of Thomas and Elizabeth Higgins, who spent their entire lives in Ireland. The father was a farmer by occupation and William Higgins was reared to farm work. He attended school in his native country as a boy and at the age of seventeen years came to America, continuing his education in this country. He landed in New York City, went thence to Ohio and lived there several years, then came to Sangamon County and engaged in farming there, which occupation he continued until his death.

Mr. Higgins first purchased forty acres of land, to which he later added forty acres more, and at the time of his decease had brought it to a high state of cultivation. He was married at Springfield, Ill., October 24, 1882, to Mrs. Miranda J. (Sudduth) Pratt, born in Nicholas County, Ky., June 11, 1839. Her father, Mr. Sudduth, located near Williamsville, Sangamon County, in 1835, and bought land near there, later removing to Broadwell, Ill., where he died March 17, 1900. His wife had passed away October 15, 1892, in Kansas. Mr. Sudduth and his wife had ten children, of whom six survive. Mrs. Higgins was first married to Allen C. Pratt, in Kentucky, and they had five children, of whom all are deceased except one son, Charles. Mr. Pratt brought his family to Sangamon County and there carried on farming until his death. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Higgins.

Mr. Higgins was a member of the Methodist Church and his widow belongs to the same denomination. He was a man of industry and energy and successful in his operations. He died in his seventy-sixth year, March 16, 1900. His widow resides on the home farm, now consisting of forty acres, which she owns.

HIMMELSBACK, Frank.—The German-American as he is found in Sangamon County, is one of the most desirable of citizens, co-operating with his fellows for the betterment of his community. He generally owns property and is a man of substance, whose word has weight among his associates. Such a man is Frank Himmelsbach, now residing on his 120-acre farm in Curran Township. He was born in Baden, Germany, July 26, 1856, a son of Joseph and Francisco (Dodd) Himmelsbach, natives of Baden, Germany. The parents, who were farming people, never came to the United States, dying in Germany. They had six children, two sons and four daughters, four of whom survive. Those in the United States are Frank and Joseph, living on Calhoun Avenue, Springfield, in the employ of the Reisch Brewing Company, Joseph, as well as the father, served in the German Army. Frank Himmelsbach was educated in the excellent German schools, working for his father on a farm until he was eighteen years old. At that time, he started for the United States, sailing from Bremen, and after a seventeen-day voyage, landed in New York, September 21, 1872. From there he came direct to Springfield, arriving with only fifty cents in his pocket, but he secured employment in a hardware store, working for five months for twelve dollars per month.

Following this he began working on a farm in Gardner Township, and for ten years continued this, or until he had saved up sufficient money to buy land in Curran Township. This property is very valuable and Mr. Himmelsbach is constantly improving it, naturally being proud of what he has accomplished.

Mr. Himmelsbach was married in SS. Peter and Paul's Church, in Springfield, May 6, 1884, to Josephine Itterleitn, born in Springfield, August, 1859. Her parents were Germans, who came to America, dying here, when Mrs. Himmelsbach was very young. Her father served in the German Army and also during the Civil War, enlisting in 1861. She has two sisters living in Jefferson, Mo.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Himmelsbach are consistent and conscientious members of SS. Peter and Paul's Roman Catholic Church, of Springfield. In politics he is a Democrat. Fraternally he is a member of the Western Catholic Union. Hard-working and thrifty, Mr. Himmelsbach, assisted by his excellent wife, has become the owner of a fine farm, and is in comfortable circumstances. Considering the fact that he came here a young boy, practically penniless, with no knowledge of the country or its language, his progress is remarkable, and he is deserving of unstinted praise for his success.

HOFFMAN, George.—Although Lincoln, Sherman and many of the other heroes who figured so prominently during the Civil War, are now dead, there remain in our midst those who knew them well and served their country in a humble, yet not less brave, capacity. One of these is George Hoffman, gate-keeper of Oak Ridge Cemetery, at Springfield. He was born in Baltimore, Md., February 23, 1840, being a son of Charles G. and Christina (Schultz) Hoffman, the former born in Hesse Darmstadt, and the latter in Baltimore. The father was a shoemaker, who came to American after learning his trade. He settled in Baltimore, Md., as early as 1837, there marrying and following his trade. During the two years spent in Baltimore after their marriage, the only child born to these parents was George, but after they located in St. Louis, Mo., four more were born. This city continued to be the family home until 1853, when the father went to California, with an ox-team, taking George with him. They were 125 days traveling across the plains from Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Upon their arrival in the gold fields the father began prospecting; they returned via Panama to New Orleans. They visited Havana, Cuba, eventually arriving at St. Louis. A short time later the family moved to Springfield, where the father continued to reside until his death, which occurred May 4, 1910, when he was ninety-five years old. His wife died in Springfield in 1880. The grandfather, Charles G. Hoffman lived to be one hundred and three years old and a brother of his also lived to the same age, both being natives of Germany.

George Hoffman learned the process of manufacturing sugar in St. Louis, and worked at it in that city. For several years he was on a Mississippi River boat, running from St. Louis to Memphis, and so was in touch with both sides of the question when the war broke out. In 1861 he was one of the first to offer his services, enlisting in Company G, Tenth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, and serving until January 6, 1866. He participated in many battles, including the Siege of Vicksburg, Helena, Licking Bend, Cotton Plant, and Holly Springs, being wounded at Cotton Plant and also at Little Rock, but never had the misfortune to be taken prisoner. His first commander was Col. Barrett, but later he was under Col. Wickersham and Col. J. B. Stewart, being a part of the Seventeenth Army Corps under Gen. Steele. Mr. Hoffman was Commissary Sergeant, being mustered out with that rank. Mr. Hoffman was taken sick at Milliken's Bend, and was removed to Birds Point, at the time of the fall of Vicksburg, there becoming much worse, so that his weight fell from 178 to 96 pounds. At the time of Mr. Lincoln's assassination Mr. Hoffman was at Greenville Parish, La. The regiment was sent to San Antonio, Tex., and Mr. Hoffman was sent to Sedwick Hospital, New Orleans, from Shreveport, thence to Jefferson Barracks, and then on to Camp Butler, where he was mustered out, as above stated.

At the close of the war he came to Springfield, and began working in a lumber yard, remaining with this firm for many years. He has also assisted in contract work for the city in its street department, but has been with the Oak Ridge Cemetery for thirteen years. He is a member of Stephenson Post, G. A. R. In political faith, he is a Democrat. His membership is with the First German Lutheran Church.

In 1879 Mr. Hoffman was married in Springfield, to Mrs. Mary Hosler, nee Gall, born in Germany, who came to America with her parents in 1844. They settled in Springfield, her father being in the employ of the Wabash Railroad Company until his death. His wife is also deceased. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, two of whom survive: Christopher, proprietor of a milliner establishment of Springfield; and Fred, a painter by trade. In the employ of R. F. Kinsella, of Springfield, Mr. Hoffman has a step-daughter, Mrs. Christina Paul. Mrs. Hoffman has eight grandchildren, seven of them having been born of her former marriage.

Mr. Hoffman was personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and other great men of the times. He now lives on his son's property.

HOFFMAN, George, engine inspector for the Wabash Railroad, is another of the efficient men whom the above mentioned corporation has gathered among its employees. For some years he has been stationed at the round house in Springfield, where he has proven his worth and demonstrated his thorough understanding of mechanics. He was born in Erie, Pa., January 4, 1850, and belongs to the well known family of Hoffman, of whom so many representatives appear in this volume. Mr. Hoffman was educated in the public schools of Erie, but in 1865, left to become fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad. On December 1, 1866, his ability was recognized by promotion to be engineer, but in 1877, being in the strike of that year, he came west, and the following year entered the employ of the Chicago & Alton as engineer, running out of Bloomington. November 9th of that year removing to Springfield he entered into the employ of the Wabash Railroad, first as engine "tramer," then as night foreman, later becoming stationary engineer, and in 1906 was given his present responsible position, for which he is so well fitted.

On February 12, 1882, Mr. Hoffman was married at Erie, Pa., to Gertrude, daughter of Mr. Kinsella, of that city. They are members of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. Their children are as follows: Ella, at home; Lucy, a teacher in the Enos public school; Lillian, George and Helen, all at home. Mrs. Hoffman died in 1896, leaving behind her a sorrowing family, for she was a devoted wife and mother and a kind and sympathetic neighbor.

Mr. Hoffman is a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, being a devout Roman Catholic, in political faith a Democrat, and belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, which he joined in 1867, the order of Maccabees and Yeomen of America. John Hoffman, the father of George Hoffman, was a German by birth, who came to the United States in 1844, locating first at Lyons, N. Y., where he worked on the Erie Canal, but later went to Erie, where he died. His wife who bore the maiden name of Mary Ann Collins, was also born in Germany, but came to the United States in girlhood. Her death also occurred at Erie. There were thirteen children in this family, of whom George Hoffman is the only one surviving.

HOFFMAN, Philip.—Fidelity, attention to details and strict probity mark some of the men employed by the State in caring for the beautiful capitol building. One deserving of special mention is Philip Hoffman, who was born in St. Louis, Mo., January 19, 1847, a son of Charles and Sabina (Graser) Hoffman, natives of Hesse Darmstadt, Germany. The father was a shoemaker by trade, who early came to America, first living in Baltimore, Md. Later he came west to St. Louis, which continued his home until 1846, when he went to California. After four years of prospecting for gold, he returned to St. Louis. He crossed the plains with an ox team, but came back via Panama, Havana and New Orleans, to St. Louis. After a short stay in that city, he came to Springfield, in 1875. He continued to work at his trade until he was seventy-five years old, when he retired, living thus until his death, May 30, 1910, and his wife died November 14, 1875, aged fifty-one years. There were eleven children in the family, six of whom survive: George, gate-keeper at Oak Ridge Cemetery; Alexander, of the Springfield Plow Works; Mrs. Louise Hoffman, of Springfield; Mrs. Ida Fetzer, also of Springfield, and Philip.

Mr. Hoffman enlisted from Springfield in Company H, One Hundred and Forty-Fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under the command of Colonel Lackey, for 100 days. Returning home, he entered the city fire department as a volunteer, serving from 1864 to 1864. In 1867 the city organized the paid fire department, and Mr. Hoffman was made, pipeman. Since 1894, he has been engaged in carpenter and contract work, and for the past eight years has worked at the State House. For nine years he was lived at his present residence, No. 1006 North Eighth street.

On December 10, 1867, Mr. Hoffman was married, in Springfield, to Frances Easton, born in Charleston, Coles County, Ill., September 10, 1840. Her father was born in Lexington, Ky., and her mother in Wales, and they came to Illinois at an early day, settling near Athens, where the father was a farmer, but now both are deceased. There were fourteen children in the Easton family, and three sons took part in the Civil War. Two of these children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman: Della, wife of Frank Donnelly, of Springfield; Maude, wife of Postmaster Wheeler, of Springfield; and Augustus, a cigar maker by trade, residing in Springfield. Mr. Hoffman belongs to Stephenson Post G. A. R. and to Carpenter’s Union. The family are members of the Baptist Church and Mr. Hoffman is a Republican.

HOLLIS, John W.—Veterans of the Civil War are now regarded with the veneration to which their great bravery entitles them, for no man can better prove his patriotism than by risking his life in defense of his principles. One of the veterans of Sangamon County is John W. Hollis, one of Springfield’s substantial men. He was born in Roane County, near Knoxville, Tenn., September 15, 1827, a son of Zachariah and Sarah (Dann) Hollis, natives of North Carolina and Knoxville, Tenn. The father was a wagonmaker, as well as farmer, who went first to Knoxville in the early thirties, and there married. He and his wife had seven children: Patrick C., of Knoxville; John; Nathaniel; Eliza Jane, wife of Anton Cooper; Margaret; Polly and Zachariah. The Dann family is of Scotch origin.

John W. Hollis received a common school education in Roane County, and was taught to farm by his father. When he was twenty years old he left his home and came to Springfield, arriving there in 1857, and immediately secured work on a farm on Lake Creek, Sangamon County. When the war broke out Mr. Hollis was one of the first from his neighborhood to offer his services, enlisting at Camp Butler, early in 1861, in Company B, Tenth Illinois Cavalry, and served three years and three months, under Captain Hitt, and was mustered out at Little Rock, Ark., in 1865. He participated in the battle of Little Rock and many others. Severely wounded a number of times, in shoulder and ankle, he has never fully recovered, but has lived out nearly a century, which has followed, malmed because of his devotion to his country. His record is singularly clear, for he was never placed under arrest, nor did he ever do anything unbecoming a soldier and a gentleman.

Returning from his service, Mr. Hollis began farming for himself near Curran, in Curran Township. In 1886 he married Martha C. Young, born in the township, daughter of James and Martha Young. Mr. and Mrs. Hollis had five children: Fatima, Margaret, Arthur, Nora and Martha. In 1896 Mr. Hollis was married for the second time, the maiden name of his wife being Alice Boyd. She was born in Tennessee, where the marriage took place, a daughter of John Boyd, and was one of a large family, all of whom are now deceased except her. Two children have been born of this union: Julietta, March 16, 1901, and Romeo, born April 18, 1903. Mr. Hollis is a Republican but has never aspired to public office. He has retired from farming and is comfortably situated.

HOOD, Thomas (deceased).—The late Thomas Hood, who passed away at his home in Springfield, Ill., January 17, 1908, has been a resident of the city since 1868, and had for many years been established in the business of florist. He was well known in many circles and his death was sincerely mourned by a large number of friends. He was born in County Kent, England, September 23, 1830, and was a son of Thomas and Lydia Hood, both natives of England, who died there, he is in his eightieth year and she in very old age. The father was a florist and the son Thomas worked for him as a young man. The latter received his education in subscription schools in his native country and upon leaving school learned the trade of gardener and florist, which he followed up to the time of his death. He landed in New York in September, 1855, lived two years on Long Island, being employed there as a gardener, worked in a similar occupation eight years on Staten Island, and in 1868 located in Springfield, III. He engaged in business as florist soon after coming to Springfield and became quite successful. He thoroughly understood all the details of his trade and was an excellent business man. He was a public-spirited citizen and became actively interested in public affairs. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, in 1860, while living in New York, but afterward became a Democrat. He was a member of the Episcopal Church and fraternally was affiliated with the United Workmen Lodge No. 39. He is buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery.

Mr. Hood was married in England, March 21, 1853, to Miss Margaret Shepard, who was born in that country, September 8, 1837, daughter of Thomas and Anna Shepard. Her father was a farmer. Mr. Shepard and his wife had nine children and Mrs. Hood is the only one now living. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hood, as follows: Edwin H., in the employ of the Illinois Watch Company; Mrs. Lydia Smith, a widow; Minnie married Louis Patrick, an engineer in the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, whose run is in Canada; Anna, married Philip Land, who for the past twenty years has been in the employ of Somner & Pierik, a jewelry firm of Springfield; Emma, wife of Frank Frinrock, a carpenter by trade; Ella, wife of W. C. Blodgett, a machinist in the Elgin Watch Company's factory, in Elgin, Ill.; Samuel, employed for the past nineteen years in the Illinois Watch Company's factory; and two who died in infancy and are buried on Staten Island, N. Y. Mrs. Hood has lived for the past seventeen years in her present home, 1246 Monument Avenue, and owns this property. She has twenty-three grandchildren living and four great-grandchildren. She has a remarkable memory and is of a most sociable and pleasant disposition.

HOOPER, William W., one of the substantial and highly respected citizens of Pawnee, Ill., who carries on an extensive contracting business, is a veteran of the great Civil War, in which he fought as a soldier in the Confederate Army. He was born at Spring Place, Murray County, Ga., May 24, 1847, a son of Gallant A. and Astamira (Payne) Hooper, and a great-grandson of a brother of the Hooper who signed the Declaration of Independence. Great-grandfather Hooper attained the age of 165 years, and his son, who was a native of South Carolina and a farmer, was 102 years old when he died. Gallant A. Hooper was born in Franklin County, Ga., May 22, 1814, and died in 1858 in Murray County. He was married on November 30, 1830, to Astamira Payne, also a native of Franklin County, and they had six children, namely: Harriet M., May E., James A., John F., Irene J. and William W.

William W. Hooper was educated in Murray County, where one of his youthful playmates was Sam Jones, who was later to become the great Evangelist. When only fifteen years of age, Mr. Hooper enlisted, in May, 1862, at Spring Place, Ga., in Company H, Eleventh Regiment, Georgia Volunteer Infantry, for service during the Civil War, under Captain Ramsey, and his service covered a period of nearly three years, he being captured near Dalton, Ga., in 1865, and taken to Summersville, Ky., where a month later he took the Oath of Allegiance. He had many thrilling experiences during his military career, being always a faithful and active soldier. He was struck by a piece of shell at the battle of the Wilderness and injured on both shins, was also struck by a piece of shell at Spotsylvania Court House, and at Petersburg contracted the measles. His battles included Chickamauga, Knoxville, Wilderness, Spotsylvania Court House, and Petersburg, not to mention Gettysburg, where after a terrific struggle Mr. Hooper's regiment was successful in taking a stone fence, and during which several color-bearers were killed, Mr. Hooper finally carrying the flag to victory. From Sweetwater to Knoxville the regiment was in a running fight of something like 100 miles following Burnside, and finally made a charge on Fort Sanders, being defeated with heavy loss and retreating towards Rogersville, Tenn. The regiment went into winter quarters December 24, 1863, at Morrisonville, Tenn., and in the spring of 1864 returned to Virginia, where the terrific Battle of the Wilderness, lasting eighteen days and nights, was fought. After Spotsylvania Court House and Petersburg, where Grant's forces were engaged, Mr. Hooper took the measles and was granted a furlough, and in the fall of 1864 went to Athens, Ga., and thence across country inside of the Federal lines to his home. After remaining there for some time he essayed to rejoin his command, but was captured. One of Mr. Hooper's most interesting reminiscences of his war experience is his account of how, at the battle of the Wilderness, he went on the field of battle to see if he could not get a pair of shoes, his own having long before worn out to such an extent that they were useless. Approaching a wounded soldier, Mr. Hooper noticed that he was possessed of a good pair, and just as he was about to take them, the wounded fellow opened his eyes, smiled and said: "Take them. I won't need them." Mr. Hooper then refused to take the shoes, but instead brought the wounded man some water and later found that he had been taken to the hospital. Years later, in 1877, while telling of this experience in Summerville, Ky., a stranger stepped up and asked him if he would recognize the wounded soldier if he should see him. It turned out that this was the injured man, whose life had probably been saved by Mr. Hooper's kindness, and the two later spent many pleasant hours together. On leaving Knoxville most of the army was barefooted and orders were given that mocassins were to be made of beef hides. This was done, but at Pigeon Creek the banks were so slippery that the soldiers could not climb with the mocassins and were compelled to take them off and throw them away, and Mr. Hooper tells of seeing wagon loads of these articles cast into the river.

After his army service was over Mr. Hooper went to Ohio, where he was engaged in farming for two years, but at the end of this time went back to Georgia, where he remained until 1869 and engaged in working at the carpenter trade, and later followed the same occupation at Bowling Green and Grayson Springs, Ky., and for one year at Lincoln, Nebr. He then went to Litchfield, Ky., and later to Florence, Colo., but finally came to Illinois, and after a short period in Springfield eventually located in Pawnee. In 1893, and there he has continued to reside until the present time, now having a large contracting business. He is a member of the Odd Fellows and the Anti-Horse Thief Association, is a Democrat and a Local Optionist, and his religious connection is with the Methodist Church, although when at home he was connected with the Baptist Church of Pleasant Valley, Ga.

HORN, James W.—The farmer who coped with the unfavorable conditions of a quarter of a century ago, feels that the agriculturist of today has no need to complain of the hardships of his life, there are many retired farmers of Springfield who well remember when they had to till their acres without any of the modern farm machinery now deemed absolutely necessary. They appreciate what they endured when corn was so cheap that it was burned for fuel, and their crops of other kinds brought so low a price that it did not pay to market them. In the earlier days, the farmer was content to make a bare living, now he secures a good percentage on his investment, as well as his profits for his labor. Among the farmers of the earlier days in Sangamon County, was the late James W. Horn, formerly living at No. 1027 East Miller street, Springfield. He was born at Chillicothe, O., November 28, 1841, being a son of Moses B. and Sarah (Keely) Horn, both born at Chillicothe. The parents came to Springfield with the Horn family in 1850, and engaged in farming south of the city, in Chatham Township. After eight years there, the father moved to Springfield, and for two years conducted a blacksmith shop, being then made Superintendent of the poor farm. For four years, he served in that capacity, then moved to Springfield with his family in 1854, four years more he was keeper of the city prison. When his term expired, he retired, and died in 1890. He was a man of high moral character, who devoted himself to whatever work he had in hand, and his services were highly appreciated. There were seven children in his family; five sons and two daughters.

Mr. Horn was educated in his native place and in Springfield, and grew up on a farm. He farmed very successfully until he came to Springfield, where he found employment in the city water works, faithfully discharging the duties of that position until his retirement in 1889. He occupied the family home from 1865 to his death, but prior to that lived at Seventeenth and Moffet streets until he sold to buy the present residence. All his life, he was a Democrat.

On May 2, 1862, occurred the marriage of Mr. Horn and Louisa Clemens, born January 25, 1842, on Sugar Creek, Sangamon County, near Balls Mill and there reared. Her parents were natives of Kentucky, who came to Sangamon County at an early day, locating on the farm where she was born. Her father died before her birth, and the widow and her children operated the farm, where the mother died. The farm was then sold, and the children moved to Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Horn had nine children, seven sons and two daughters, but only four survive: John H.; Moses B.; Charles, all of Springfield; Mollie A., wife of Peter Fagan, a farmer near Springfield. There are twenty-six grandchildren in the family. He made himself felt in neighborhood affairs, and was a Horn Posting-Sign System, of Springfield, which was established in 1877 and incorporated in 1903, with Mr. Horn as President. This concern, beginning on a small scale, has now reached large proportions and has been patronized by the leading business houses of central Illinois. Mr. Horn did all the work himself when entering upon the conduct of this enterprise, but now employs altogether about thirty men, all experts in their line. He is also President of the Horn Business Developing System, and Manager of the Clinton Posting Service, the Beardstown Posting Service and the Havana Posting Service. His main office is located at 527 East Adams Street. Besides manufacturing signs and posting bills, these concerns distribute various lines of advertising matter and do other publicity work for their patrons. These concerns have all been built up by the enterprise and sagacity of Mr. Horn, who has ability and natural aptitude in the line of outdoor advertising.

Mr. Horn is a native of Springfield, born in 1867, son of John and Louisa M. Horn. His father was a member of the first volunteer fire department organized in Springfield. Mr. Horn, subject of this review, was educated in the First Ward School in Springfield and Springfield Business College, and at the age of eighteen years learned the trade of carriage painting, becoming an expert in this line. Before he was of age he embarked in his present line of business, which is largely originated by his own ideas. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Business Men’s Association, the Sangano Club, and several fraternal orders: Lodge of Perfection; Springfield Lodge No. 4, A. F. & A. M., of which he is now Chaplain; Lodge No. 158, B. P. O. E., of which he has served as Chaplain, and Sangamon Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F. He is a member of Grace (English) Lutheran Church and Superintendent of its Sunday School. He is actively interested in every measure for progress and improvement, and favors modern ideas and methods in business. He has been a member of Company A, Fifth Regiment Illinois National Guard.

HOUGH, Francis M., one of the representative citizens of Springfield, now in the service of the Illinois Traction System as a foreman, was born December 17, 1846, in St. Clair County, Ill., a son of Gershom and Parley (Broom) Hough. The paternal grandparents were natives of Pennsylvania, and on the maternal side came from North Carolina. Houston, Miletus C.—For a half a century, Miletus C. Houston has been a factor in the development of Sangamon County, and his pride in its grand achievements is all the greater from the fact that he is a native born citizen of the county. He has seen its wild lands transformed into fine farms, while industrial and commercial interests have been born, and towns sprung into being, while Springfield has grown into a metropolis. In this work of progress, he has borne his part and was particularly active as a representative of the agricultural interests of the county. Although he is now living retired, he still retains a strong interest in whatever is going on. Not only is this true of him personally, but it may well be said that the history of his family is that of the county, for his father settled here in 1827, and was one of the county's pioneers.

Miletus C. Houston was born in German Prairie, Sangamon County, October 21, 1838, a son of Samuel and Lucretia (Rudder) Houston, the former born in Virginia, in September, 1800, belonging to one of the first families of that State, and the latter was a native of Kentucky, born in 1813. Samuel Houston came to Illinois and Sangamon County with his father, in 1827, arriving here from an overland route, in a prairie schooner. The family settled in German Prairie, on a farm of 900 acres, which the father of Samuel Houston bought. Here Samuel Housto

Mr. and Mrs. Houston became the parents of six sons and one daughter, of whom six are living: Clarence was accidentally killed, December 13, 1910. The others are: Samuel; John, William and Edward, contractors, residing in Springfield; Ralph, a carpenter and contractor, also of Springfield; and Etta, wife of C. S. Martin, residing in New York City. William is one of the Aldermen of Springfield. There are twenty-eight grandchildren in the family. Mr. and Mrs. Houston reside in their comfortable home at No. 710 North Sixteenth street. Politically he votes with the Republicans. He takes a very active interest in local politics, having cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Although he has served as Assessor of Clear Lake Township, he has never cared for office. His residence of seventy-two years in Sangamon County entitles him to representation among the early pioneers, and his upright life commands for him the respect and confidence of his county and State. The famous Col. Samuel Houston of Texas was born in the same locality as Mr. Houston, and was a second cousin.

HOWARD, Michael James.—The Howard family have long been one of the most prominent in Pawnee Township, Sangamon County; there are large landowners among the members of this family have stood for the best interests of their community along all lines and have been industrious and useful citizens, winning the esteem and respect of their neighbors. Michael James Howard is a native of the township, born on his father's farm on Section 30, October 13, 1857, a son of Patrick and Mary (Mc Cue) Howard, the latter of whom died in 1907. A sketch of Patrick Howard appears in this work. There were three children born to the parents, all of whom survive. Patrick Howard was a pioneer settler of Pawnee Township, where he purchased a small farm and began operations on a very small scale; by hard work and economy was able to increase his holdings of land from time to time until he is now the owner of some 2,500 acres of land in Sangamon and Montgomery Counties, his agricultural interests now being managed by his two sons.

In early boyhood Michael J. Howard attended the local district school and later, in 1887, entered Notre Dame (Ind.) University, leaving in 1891, six months before the time for his graduation. He had taken a course in civil engineering and upon his return began work in this profession. Later he turned his attention to agricultural matters, in which line he has been very successful, and although he has now retired from active participation in the work of the Howard estate, he and his brother are associated in the able management of its affairs. Having been reared on a farm, Mr. Howard was in early youth instructed in various lines of farm work, and has made a careful study of modern methods, with the result that he is well fitted both by ability and experience to oversee and plan the extensive operations carried on upon the estate.

Mr. Howard was married at St. Isador's Catholic Church, near Farmersville, Montgomery County, Ill., by Rev. Father Hoyer, to Miss Margaret E. Clarke, who was born in the parish where her marriage occurred and is a daughter of Patrick and Mary Ann (McAulney) Clarke, natives of Ireland. Six children have blessed their union, namely: Mary Cecilia, Edgar Michael, Charles Patrick, James Francis, Margaret Lauretta, and Cathérine Gertrude. The family have a pleasant and well located home and are well known in various circles. They are members of St. Mary's Catholic Church, of Pawnee. Mr. Howard is independent in local politics, but in national affairs is a Democrat. He is actively interested in public affairs in the community and, although he cares nothing for political preferment, has served at various times in local offices. He has been a member of the School Board and was Assessor one year. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America. He is well known as a man of business honor and integrity, whose word will be considered as good as his bond, and he has a large number of friends in his part of the county, where he is well known.

HOWARD, Patrick.—Among the most prominent of the early pioneers of Pawnee Township, Sangamon County, Patrick Howard deserves a place, being one of the oldest in point of age, as well as the length of his residence there. He began life in the county as a farm hand, later rented land, and finally purchased a quarter section in Pawnee Township, which was the nucleus about which he made additions from time to time as he was able until he is now the owner of some 2,300 acres of land lying in Sangamon and Montgomery Counties, of which the majority is in the former. Mr. Howard was born in Ireland about 1821 and spent his childhood and early manhood in his native country, coming to the United States in 1851. He landed at New Orleans on October 28th of that year on the ship "John Garrow," which had been six weeks on the way from Liverpool and during that time had encountered severe storms. He went up the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers to Cincinnati, and proceeded thence to Dayton and to Piqua, Ohio. He spent his first winter cutting wood for five dollars a mouth and his board, and remained a little more than three years in Ohio, coming to Sangamon County in 1854. For three years, he worked for farmers there, then rented land and carried it on for himself. After marriage, he continued for a time to live on rented land, and the first land he owned was the northeast quarter of Section 30, Pawnee Township, purchased at a price of fifteen dollars per acre. He was obliged to go into debt to acquire this farm, but was soon able to complete his payments upon it and add to it. The land was partly cleared, but the only building it contained was an old frame schoolhouse, where he and his family lived until he erected a log house, and the latter sheltered them several years before it was replaced by a more commodious and pretentious structure. Mr. Howard made purchases of land for twenty dollars per acre, for twenty-five dollars, and later for larger amounts, paying fifty dollars per acre for an entire section and seventy-five dollars per acre for a half-section. All this land is now worth many times what he paid for it, and he has one of the finest estates in the county, being one of the largest landowners of his part of the State. His home place is on Sections 29 and 30. He has always kept up good fences where needed and has erected fine buildings for housing his stock and other purposes. He and his sons have laid many hundreds of rods of tilling and in all ways improved the place and brought it to a high state of cultivation and productiveness. They raise large numbers of cattle, horses, hogs and sheep, and also give much attention to various kinds of grain.

Mr. Howard's marriage occurred in Springfield in 1858, when he was united with Miss Mary McCue, and of the five children born to them three are now living: Patrick J. follows farming on the home place, married Lura Buckles and they have six children—Marie, Josephine, Ruth, John, Charles and Paul; Michael James, a son of this work, married Margaret E. Clarke and they have six children; Mary married Hugh McCormick and they have five children—Kate, Howard, Hugh, Thomas, and Winnie. Patrick J. Howard was born in Christian County, was reared on a farm, and attended Notre Dame (Indiana) University for two years. He is a member of the Board of Supervisors.

Mr. Howard cast his first presidential vote for James Buchanan in 1856, and has since been a staunch and enthusiastic Democrat. He has always been much interested in the cause of education and served for twenty years as a member of the school board. He contributed generously toward the erection of the house of worship of St. Mary's Catholic Church at Pawnee, which he has helped since to support, and has also been active in the interest of other churches in the section. He is pre-eminently a self-made man, and has always had the sincere respect and esteem of his fellow citizens, who have recognized his zeal for the welfare and development of the community and his high character and integrity in all his dealings. He has displayed a high order of intelligence and ability in building up his fortunes and was able to retire from active work many years since. The work which he began has been ably carried forward by his two sons, who have taken a prominent part in the life of the township.

HOWARD, Thomas D., a representative and highly esteemed citizen of Springfield, Ill., was born in London, England, May 1, 1830, son of Daniel and Harriet (Walker) Howard, both
The father was reared in Suffolk County, England, and as a young man went to London to seek his fortune, spending about twenty-five years in that city, where he became a corn chandler, and he spent his last days in Swansea, Glamorganshire, South Wales, retired from active life. The grandfather of Thomas D. Howard was a farmer and lived all his life in England, attaining the age of ninety-four years.

The childhood of Thomas D. Howard was spent in London where he was educated. He was fond of cricket and other outdoor games, and was reared to temperate habits. He became clerk in a store after leaving school and in 1850, actuated by the same spirit which had impelled his father to leave home, emigrated to the United States, where he became a patriotic and useful citizen of his adopted country. He landed at New York, and worked awhile in that state and traveled some, and in 1852 removed to Ohio. Later he came to Illinois in 1856 and began work in a bakery, for John Cavanaugh, in Springfield, leaving this occupation in 1861 to enter the army.

Mr. Howard enlisted, at Camp Butler, Ill., September 20, 1861, in Company D, Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, under Captain Pope, serving three years and being mustered out at Camp Butler, October 15, 1864. He has a good record as a soldier who performed his every duty, and participated in many battles, among them being Cotton Plant, Helena, Pilot Knob; sieges of Vicksburg and Jackson, Miss. He was never wounded nor taken prisoner. He belongs to Stephenson Post G. A. R.

October 20, 1864, Mr. Howard was married, in Springfield, Ill., to Mary A. Strickland, a native of Springfield, born June 1, 1841, daughter of John S. and Mary Strickland. The ancestor of the Strickland family in America settled in Massachusetts and one of Mrs. Howard’s ancestors participated in the Revolutionary War. Four children were born to Mr. Howard and his wife, namely: John D., Thomas S., Harriet W. and Mary W. The family reside at 1517 North Fifth Street, where they have a very comfortable home. Mr. Howard has been employed twenty-seven years by the Illinois Watch Company and now holds the position of watchman or doorkeeper. He has the good will and friendship of all the eight hundred employees of the company and has the confidence and trust of his employers. He is a man who has lived in such a manner that he has no enemies and has won many warm personal friends. He is a member of the United Brethren Church and in politics is a Republican. He is always interested in every public enterprise which he believes will promote the general welfare of the city and is the friend of progress.

HOWARD, William Michael.—The building operations of Springfield, which have resulted in the present substantial city, known all over the county, have afforded ample opportunity for the energy and ability of those engaged in all lines relating to them, and a man who has benefited by these conditions is William Michael Howard, a carpenter and contractor of No. 2034 East Washington Street, Springfield. He was born in Milford, O., May 7, 1852, being a son of George L. and Vinie (Turner) Howard, the former of whom came to Springfield from Ohio and there carried on his trade of harness-making. He died at the home of Mr. Howard, at the age of seventy-nine years, and his wife passed away many years before in Springfield. The children born to them were: Kate, Mrs. Thomas Grahan, of Oklahoma; Rachel, Mrs. James Smith of Arkansas; Emeline, deceased; George of Arkansas; James and William M.

When William M. Howard was a small boy the family came to Springfield, and there he attended school and later learned bridge building, following this calling for years. He then became a carpenter and contractor, and, with the able assistance of his wife, has become very successful, his contracts extending over a wide territory. He is noted for his faithfulness in carrying out the terms of his contracts and for his close estimates.

On February 9, 1883, Mr. Howard was married in Springfield, to Mrs. Mary H. Belt, widow of J. W. Belt, and a daughter of John Giberson. She was born in Greene County, south of Carrollton, Ill., November 28, 1852. Her father died when she was ten years old, and she lived with her widowed mother, working out among the farmers and doing housework at small wages, which helped to assist at home, tenderly caring for her mother until the latter died, in 1873. She was one of the following children: Samuel and Benjamin, deceased; Susan, Mrs. J. W. Top- ton of Eldred, Ill.; Sarah, Mrs. Matthew Cockrell, of St. Louis; Joseph, deceased; Mrs. Howard and Hannah. Mrs. Thomas Hargett of Carrollton, Ill. Benjamin Gibson, the grandfather of Mrs. Howard, was a native of either Maryland or New Jersey, who settled in Greene County, Ill., where he made a specialty of raising fine horses. His wife was of Pennsylvania stock. The maternal grandfather of Mrs. Howard, Mr. Prough, was a soldier in the American Revolution.

In the fall of 1880 Mrs. Howard went to St. Louis and was married in that city, February 23, 1881, to James W. Belt, following which the young couple came to the Herndon Farm near Springfield, where Mr. Belt died in 1891. Mrs. Howard is extremely fond of horses and is an accomplished horsewoman. While Mr. and Mrs. Howard have no children of their own, she adopted her sister’s son George H. Hargett, born October 3, 1881, taking him when he was four years old. She has sent him to the Pleasant Hill School and has given him many opportunities, so that he is now one of the popular teachers in Springfield. Mrs. Howard belongs to the Court of Honor, as does Mr. Howard, who is also a member of the Modern Woodmen. They belong to the Christian Church, and are
Mr. Howard is a Republican. Both he and his wife have many friends in the vicinity, and are held in high esteem by all who know them.

HOWARD, William W. (deceased), a highly respected citizen of Clear Lake Township, Sangamon County, carried on a farm there many years and spent most of his life in the county. He was a veteran of the Civil War and was prominent in local Grand Army circles. Mr. Howard was born in Indiana April 10, 1831, and was a son of Sanderson Howard and wife, both natives of the same State. The parents were early settlers of Clear Lake Township and spent the remainder of their lives on a farm there. They were parents of four sons and three daughters, and a son and a daughter are now living: David, of Havana, Ill., and Mrs. Margaret Pates, of Missouri.

During boyhood Mr. Howard worked on his father's farm and attended the neighboring district school. During the Civil War he enlisted from Camp Butler in Company B, One Hundred Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving three years and participating in many battles. At the close of his term of service he was discharged at Camp Butler and resumed work on the home farm. He purchased the farm on Section 4, Clear Lake Township, now owned and occupied by his widow, and brought it to a good state of cultivation. He was a successful farmer and had a good standing in the community, proving himself a kind neighbor and friend, as well as a good husband and father. He belonged to the Methodist Church and in politics was a Republican.

Mr. Howard was married in Springfield, Ill., May 10, 1859, to Mrs. Sarah C. (Dixon) Workman, whose father, Joseph Dixon, was an early settler of Sangamon County, where he carried on farming until his death, and his wife being parents of three sons and three daughters, of whom three children now survive. Sarah C. Dixon was married (first) to Edward Workman, the union taking place in Springfield in 1852. He was a native of Sangamon County and to him and his wife one son was born, William, now in the employ of the Missouri Valley Interurban Railway Company, and a resident of Springfield. Mr. Workman met his death through an accident. To Mr. and Mrs. Howard two sons and one daughter were born: John, of Springfield; James, of Athens, Ill., and Sylvia, wife of Charles King, of Riverton. Mr. Howard died on his farm, July 25, 1906. He was a member of Stephenson Post No. 30 G. A. R. and was missed in many circles. Mrs. Howard has taken three little boys to rear and has always treated them as her own.

HOWENSTINE, Henry (deceased).—Those who became interested in the handling of stock in southern Illinois in the earlier days, reaped large profits, and were the forerunners of the present extensive stock business of Sangamon County. One of the pioneers in this line, and one who was more than ordinarily successful, was the late Henry Howenstine, for some years a retired resident of No. 203 West Carpenter Street, Springfield. He was born in Switzerland, August 17, 1828, a son of John and Barbara (Becker) Howenstine, natives of Switzerland and Germany, respectively. The father was a miller. The parents never left Europe.

Henry Howenstine went to school in Switzerland, but having learned of the opportunities in America, came here in 1853, landing in New York City, where after a short stay, he heard of Connecticut, and left for that State. This did not suit him, however, and he returned to New York City, and went from there to Schenectady, N. Y. None of these places came up to his ideas, and so he came west, living in Chicago for a short time, but in 1854, reached Springfield, which continued his home until his demise. He began handling cattle, buying and shipping them in carload lots, also selling them, going with his cargoes making the round trip seven times. His business was an arduous one, and made heavy demands upon his time and strength so that in 1905, he decided to retire, and enjoyed his well-earned rest. He belonged to St. John's Lutheran Church of Springfield. In politics, he was a Republican, but never sought office.

Mr. Howenstine was married in Springfield, January 1, 1865, to Barbara Baker, born in Germany, April 12, 1838. She was two years old when brought to America by her parents. They settled on a farm in Sangamon County, where they spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. and Mrs. Howenstine never had any children. Her death occurred May 10, 1906. In addition to his pleasant home, Mr. Howenstine owned other property in the city. His lot has a frontage of 150 feet, and he always enjoyed the space thus afforded him. During his long residence in Sangamon County, he witnessed many remarkable changes, and held firm to his belief in the future of Springfield, not only as the center of State government, but as an industrial home for some of the large corporations of the State.

HOWETT, James (deceased).—To pass away after a life of earnest endeavor, leaving behind grateful remembrances, does not fall to the lot of all, but when the late James Howett passed away, he was missed by all who had known him and mourned by his devoted family. He was born in Lancaster County, Pa., July 28, 1828, a son of Daniel Howett, a native of Pennsylvania, a farmer by calling, who operated in Lancaster County, until he migrated to Illinois, where he continued his agricultural pursuits, dying at the home of his daughter in Bushville. The education of James Howett was secured in Pennsylvania, and during his boyhood he worked for his father on the farm. When he came to Sangamon County with his father, he brought his wife and six children along, and located in Riverton. Prior to coming he had farmed at Marysville for some years, but after locating there he mined, and was thus engaged when he died, August 21, 1908. He was a Republican in political faith, and served as Alderman for a year in Riverton, giving his ward a business administration. For several years he served as policeman, and was a very efficient one. The Methodist Church claimed his membership, and he died firm in its faith.

In July, 1854, Mr. Howlett was united in marriage in York County, Pa., to Rebecca Robinson, born October 31, 1835, in Lancaster, Pa., a daughter of Daniel Robinson, born in Pennsylvania. He was a farmer and blacksmith, later becoming a merchant, and spent his life in Cumberland and Perry Counties, Pa. Both he and his wife died in Pennsylvania. There were six children in the Robinson family: Sarah, wife of A. S. Gordon, of Lancaster, Ohio; Jesse W., of Maryville, Pa.; Martha J., wife of Robert Boyd, of York, Pa.; William II., of Lancaster, Ohio; Joseph W., of Riverton and Marysville, Sangamon County. Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Howlett, six of whom survive: James, of Springfield; Sarah, wife of L. Orendorff, a farmer of Nebraska; Emma, wife of James Ringer, of Oklahoma; Elizabeth, wife of William Wilkinson, of Colorado; Charles, living with his mother; Ida, wife of Isaac Williams of Springfield. There are twenty-three grandchildren in the family, as well as seven great-grandchildren, all of whom are very dear to Mrs. Howlett. She owns her pleasant home in Riverton, and is widely known and universally respected.

While Mr. Howlett never thrust himself into public office, his ability caused him to be singled out upon more than one occasion for preference, and the way in which he discharged the duties entrusted to him proved that he was the right man in the right place.

HOWITT, Henry (deceased), belonged to one of the sturdy old Pennsylvania families to which reference is made when the highest type of citizenship is recalled. He was a man ready for any emergency that called for his efforts during a long and worthy life, and even in old age found useful occupation, when strength no longer remained with which to carry on large agricultural operations or to fight his country's battles. He was born in 1830, in Lancaster County, Pa., and was given his father's name. His parents were old Pennsylvania people and lived and died on their own land in that State. Henry Howitt attended school in the vicinity of Lancaster and then helped his father on the home farm. Meanwhile, Civil War had begun, and many of his friends and acquaintances had enlisted for service, and in January, 1863, he also became a soldier, enlisting in Company G, One Hundred and Twenty-Second Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, and was in the service until September 15, 1863, his honorable discharge being received at Harrisburg, Pa. He took part in several battles but was fortunate enough to escape all injury and returned home practically unharmed. Shortly afterwards he came west and settled first near Beardstown, Ill., where he engaged in farming, and then came to Sangamon County, purchasing a small farm south of Springfield, which he operated for some years. Subsequently he bought a comfortable residence on East Cedar Street, Springfield, which is now owned by his son Daniel. He had been a busy man so long that he felt the need of some occupation, and hence took up gardening, which was a congenial one. He died at his home on East Cedar Street, on January 27, 1906. He was a member of Stephenson Post, No. 50, G. A. R. and was a Republican in politics.

Mr. Howlett was married at Lancaster, Pa., to Miss Louise Streubel, who was born in Pennsylvania and died shortly after she accompanied her husband West. Three children were born to this union, the two survivors being: Daniel, who owns the old home place and follows gardening as a business; and Harry, who resides with his brothers. Daniel Howlett was married, on October 21, 1907, at Springfield, to Mrs. Mary Collins, who died in 1907, at Springfield. They had one son, James, who resides with his brothers.

HOWLETT, John T.—The Howlett family has long been prominent in Sangamon County, and the reader's attention is called to the fact that the son of William M., brother of John T. Howlett, also appearing in these pages. John T. Howlett is a native of the county, born near New City, February 24, 1856, a son of James P. and Laura (Farmer) Howlett, natives of Bullitt County, Ky. The father was a farmer and in 1850 came to Sangamon County. His first work was as a farm hand and later engaging in farming on his own account near Crowe's Mill. He took his family to Sullivan County, Ind., where he remained nine years, then returned to Sangamon County and for many years carried on farming in Cotton Hill Township. He moved from there to a farm near New City, a short time later removed to Kansas, and spent a comparatively short time there, returning to Sangamon County, where he lived the remainder of his days. His first wife died when his son John T. was an infant. By this marriage there were three children and John T. Howlett now has a sister surviving, Mrs. Sarah C. Williams, of Terre Haute, Ind. By the second marriage there are four children who now survive, namely: William M., a farmer living near New City; James F., of Williams Township; Amelia Louisa, wife of John Pettibone, of Rochester Township, and Martha E., wife of Richard J. Imes, of Ewing, Mo. The maternal grandfather of John T. Howlett, John Farmer, was an early settler of Sangamon County.

John T. Howlett was educated at New City and in boyhood helped with the work on his father's farm. He has spent his entire active life in this occupation and now operates 100 acres of land on Section 19, Rochester Township. He has lived on this place for the past fourteen years.

Mr. Howlett was married near New City in September, 1851, to Mary Rape, who was born there in October, 1859, daughter of Francis M. Rape, a native of Sangamon County, whose father was an early settler there and entered land from the Government. Mr. Rape and wife are both deceased and left two daughters; Mrs. Howlett, and Mrs. Bourg, residing of Chicago. There are four half-sisters in the family: Mrs. Rosie Pope, living near Glenarm; Mrs. Flora Brown, living near Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Elizabeth Gregory, near New City; Mrs. Bessie Lamb, who lives near Pawnee, Sangamon County.

To Mr. Howlett and wife six children were born, in whom four now survive: Ossie O., wife of Clay Howard, of Springfield, has two children, Eva H. and Orville M.; Roy Vernon, Luther G. and Alma O. Mr. Howlett's own farm contains twenty acres of excellent land and he operates altogether 100 acres. He is an aggressive and practical farmer and has met with success. He and his family are members of Forest Grove Methodist Church. He is highly regarded by his neighbors and is considered an upright, useful citizen.

HOWLETT, Lewis.—The Howlett family has been prominent in the vicinity of Riverton, Ill., for the past generation, and has been identified with the best interests of the place during that period. Lewis Howlett, who has lived in the town from boyhood, was born at Lockbourne, Ohio, October 17, 1847, son of Parley L. and Rebecca H. (Williams) Howlett. Parley L. Howlett was born at Syracuse, N. Y., April 23, 1815, and Rebecca H. Williams was born in Franklin County, Ohio, February 18, 1818. The father moved to Columbus, Ohio, in 1840, and there carried on business about fifteen years. In 1855 lost his business by fire and moved to Peoria, Ill., where he carried on business two years, and then spent three years at St. Joseph, Mo. November 16, 1865, he brought his family to Springfield, Ill., and remained there four years.

In 1862 Mr. Howlett came to what is now Riverton, then known as Jamestown. Later, as there grew a demand for a post-office in the village, the name was changed to Howlett, there being already one Jamestown in the State where a post-office had been established. (In 1874 the name became Riverton.) In this new town Mr. Howlett embarked in several lines of business and became actively interested in building up the place. He erected a distillery, and until 1869 conducted what were known as the Clear Lake Mills, where flour was made. In 1866 he sank the first coal shaft in the vicinity and in the fall of the following year the first coal was found. His mine, which he conducted until 1869, was known as the Howlett Mine, and is now Shaft No. 1 of the Springfield Coal Mining Company.

In 1869, having lost a considerable sum of money in various business ventures, Parley L. Howlett left Sangamon County, and lived successfully in Peku and Peoria, Ill.; Texas, Chicago, and McKeensport, Pa., leaving the latter place for Cumberland, Md., and then removing to McKeensport, Pa. He spent his last days in Cumberland, dying in 1891, three months after locating there, his widow surviving him about ten years. They were parents of eleven sons and one daughter, of whom but two children survive, Lewis and Edwina, who live together.

Lewis Howlett received his education in Riverton and in boyhood assisted his father in various business enterprises until the latter's removal from the town. He has since been identified with various lines of business and since 1908 has served as Justice of the Peace. He has the good-will and esteem of all who know him. He is a reliable, public-spirited citizen and has efficiently discharged the duties of his public office. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Howlett was married in Peku, Ill., May 29, 1873, to Frances M. Sapp, born at Red Oak, Iowa, Christmas day, 1858, daughter of William H. Sapp and wife. Her father, a native of Ohio, was a tailor by trade and an early settler of Peku, where he lived many years, and there his wife's death occurred. He later moved to Wisconsin, where he spent the remainder of his life. Mrs. Howlett died at Galena, Kan., September 27, 1908, leaves three children, all of whom survive: Parley L., of Taylorville, Ill.; Mae E., wife of Martin Chaumell, of St. Paul, Minn., and Alice A., wife of William M. Olive, County Mine Examiner of Madison County, Ill., and a resident of Worthen. There are five grandchildren in the family.

HOWLETT, William M., a successful farmer of Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County, is a native of the township and belongs to one of the pioneer families in that region. He was born August 22, 1856, a son of James P. and Amelia (Rape) Howlett, the former born in Bullitt County, Ky., and the latter in Tennessee. James P. Howlett was a farmer by occupation and brought his family in an early day to Sangamon County, locating near what is now New City, where he lived many years, then moved to a farm three miles farther north, where he died July 4, 1890, and his wife died January 29, 1890. The father had one sister, Bettie Howlett, and four brothers, John, Harrison, William and Nathaniel, all of whom are deceased. William M. Howlett is largely a self-educated man, and being one of a large family of children, early began to help with the work of operating the home farm. He has two sisters surviving, Martha, wife of R. J. Iams, and Amelia, wife of John Pettitbone, of Sangamon County. He also has four brothers: James E., John W., and John T., of Sangamon County; George and Daniel, deceased.

Mr. Howlett remained with his father until he was old enough to work away from home, and has followed farming all his active life. He has been very successful in his operations, and after living on rented land many years, now owns a farm that is well improved. About thirty-four years ago he rented a farm of 140 acres, spent one year there, then lived for the next four years on the White Walnut farm, and spent two years on the old Jones farm. He then removed to Comanche County, Kan., where he took up a homestead of 160 acres, which he improved, three years later moved to Montgomery County, that State, and one year afterward returned to Sangamon County and located on the Bruin farm. He spent one year there, then spent twelve years on the Bob Sanders place and six years on the Thomas farm in Montgomery County, Ill., coming to his present farm in 1908. He had purchased 124 acres of land there January 4, 1882, and located on it March 11, 1908.

Mr. Howlett was married January 4, 1882, to Adelaide Purnell, a daughter of Jonathan and Salie (Clayton) Purnell, the father being a native of Kentucky and his wife of Alabama. He died July 29, 1893, and the mother January 16, 1882. They were parents of nine children: Emily, widow of Nathan Plummer; Margaret, wife of Alonzo Page, of Springfield; Samuel, of Edinburg; Susan, wife of Isaac Basford; Mary, deceased. Mr. Howlett and his wife had no children of their own, but took John S. Connor, a boy of five years, to rear, who lived with them until he was twenty-six years old. They also took to raise, David M. Connor, son of John L. Connor, of Thomasville, Ill., who has three other children: Helen L., Alva Ward and Edna E. Mr. Howlett is highly respected as a man of industry and integrity and has a good standing in the community where he lives. He has good buildings on his farm and it is well improved in every way and in a high state of cultivation. Mrs. Howlett is a member of the Royal Neighbors.

HUBBS, Joshua.—The Illinois farmer, be he enterprising and energetic, is usually loath to transfer the control of his operations into other hands, even when he has reached the age that men in other lines of industry would consider advanced years, but when he finally does relinquish his hold on active labor and removes to his residence in the nearby city or village, he soon becomes known as one of the solid, substantial citizens of his new community, and as such is a welcome addition. Joshua Hubbs, a retired agriculturist, now residing at No. 1608 Pasfield street, Springfield, was born February 24, 1833, in Orange County, Ind., a son of Willis and Elizabeth (Releford) Hubbs. Willis Hubbs, whose father came originally from the vicinity of Charleston, was born in North Carolina in 1795; which State he removed to Indiana in 1810, settling on a farm near the present city of New Albany and erecting the first log cabin ever built in the county. Shortly thereafter he removed to Orange County, Ind., where he re-sized until 1852, then he went to Iowa and remained in that State until 1858, his last years being spent in Morgan County, Ill.

Joshua Hubbs secured his education in the common schools of his native locality in Orange County, Iud., and as a youth worked on the farm of his father. Later, in company with his brother, he became possessed of a large farm in the same county, and this was operated by them until 1852, in which year Joshua Hubbs removed to Marion County, Iowa. One year later he returned to Indiana but later went to California, and in that State remained for four years. at the end of which time he located in Morgan County, Ill., and resumed farming, having purchased a large farm. Mr. Hubbs remained on this property until 1888, when he located in Springfield, purchasing his present comfortable home, where he now is living retired, his years of hard labor having brought happiness and success. He is the owner of several good farms as well as some valuable city property in Springfield. He and his wife are members of the First Presbyterian Church. In politics, Mr. Hubbs is a Democrat, and served for a long period as School Director.

On November 14, 1851, Mr. Hubbs was married in Martin County, Ind., to Rachel Acre, who was born December 8, 1836, in Orange County, that State. Her father, who was born in Tennessee, and her mother, a native of Kentucky, came to Orange County, Ind., and remained there until 1839, when they moved to Martin County, Ind., where they were engaged in farming up to the time of their demise. Mr. and Mrs. Hubbs, who celebrated their golden wedding in 1901, have been the parents of eleven children, of whom eight are now living: Sarah, the wife of William Brown, living on a large farm in Morgan County, Ill.; Ella, the wife of George Wiswell, of Jacksonville, Ill.; Margaret C., who married Everett Burnette, engaged in farming in Morgan County; Minnie, the wife of Charles Jasper living near Manchester, Scott County, Ill.; Euphemia, who married Charles Wood, engaged in farming in Morgan County; Martin L., secretary of the Stuart Oil Company, Chicago; William N., residing in Morgan County; and George F., a resident of Springfield, connected with the well known clothing firm of Meyers Brothers.

HUBER, Fred Deles, M. D., physician and surgeon of Pleasant Plains, and a representative of one of the oldest pioneer families of Sangamon County, is one of the leading men of his profession in his part of the county. He is the exponent of the new school in medicine, and is faithful to his ideals and proficient in his calling. Dr. Huber was born in Meriden, Kan., June 1, 1878, a son of William M. and Emma (Irwin) Huber. On his mother's side, Dr. Huber is descended from A. B. Irwin, one of the earliest settlers of this part of the county, and who came to Sangamon County from North Carolina. William Huber was born in Ohio, but came to Pleasant Plains at an early day. There he married, becoming one of the leading men of his locality. When the war broke out, he enlisted in Company B, One Hundred and Fourteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving for three years, participating in the Siege of Vicksburg, as well as in many other hardly contested conflicts of the war. He inherited his military inclinations from Revolutionary ancestors. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Huber, Herbert O., at Pleasant Plains; Adah A., wife of D. C. D. Wright of Springfield, Ill.; Dr. Huber; Pearl B., wife of Dr. R. D. Duran, of Illiopolis, and W. Hope at home. The mother and daughter still reside at Pleasant Plains, but the father answered the last roll call in 1883. In politics he was a Republican, and fraternally belonged to the A. F. & A. M. Both he and his wife early joined the Presbyterian Church, and brought their children up in its faith.

Dr. Huber was only four years old when the family returned to Pleasant Plains, and his boyhood days were spent in that village, where he attended school, graduating in the class of 1861. He then accepted a position in Clarkson & Mitchell's drug store, on the corner of Fifth and Monroe, where he spent two years, and while there was trained as a pharmacist, but being ambitious of a higher position, in October, 1902, entered the medical department of the St. Louis University, where he studied medicine and surgery. In consequence of exposure in the service Mr. Huber became sick and was granted a thirty-days' furlough to go home and recuperate. He then rejoined his regiment remaining with it until the close of the war, and being honorably discharged August 3, 1865, after a brave and gallant service that covered three years and three months. Returning to Cartwright Township, he continued at home, when he removed to Kansas, where he took up land. After building a home there he returned to Pleasant Plains and was there united in marriage with Miss Bette Irwin, who was born in 1843 on the farm now owned by J. H. Irwin.

After the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Huber they went to the new home near Topeka, Kan., but in 1881 they sold this property and returned to Pleasant Plains, where Mr. Huber's death occurred March 24, 1883. He was a member of the A. O. U. W., a Republican in politics and a faithful member of the Methodist Church. He took a great interest in all matters pertaining to the welfare of his community and is well remembered as a man of fine character and many sterling qualities. Mrs. Huber, who is the daughter of Alexander B. Irwin and a descendant of a Revolutionary soldier, has spent her life in Pleasant Plains, with the exception of the time during which she lived in Kansas, and she enjoys the love and esteem of all who know her.

Herbert O. Huber, son of William H. and Bette (Irwin) Huber, and who is now serving as station agent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, lives in Pleasant Plains, was born in Kansas, December 24, 1871, and there began his school days. In 1881 he came with his parents to Pleasant Plains, and after school hours would visit the station here, finally taking up telegraphy in order to fit himself for his present position. On finishing his school training in 1890 he was given a position in the office and in 1894 was sent to the office at Virginia, Ill., as telegraph operator. In 1897 he was sent to Philadelphia, Cass County, as station agent, and in August, 1910, being recognized as a man peculiarly adapted to railroad work, was given charge of the company's business at Pleasant Plains, a position he still holds. He was married March 10, 1898, at Virginia, Ill., to Miss Nell B. Davis, who was born and reared there, the daughter of L. C. and Annie (Miller) Hawk, her father being engaged in the real estate and loan business in that city. Mr. and Mrs. Huber have one son, Vernon, born at Philadelphia, Ill., August 28, 1899. Mr. Huber is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America at Pleasant Plains, and the lodge of the Masonic fraternity at Virginia.

Of the other children of William II, and Bettie Huber, Adah, is the wife of Dr. C. D. Wright, a physician and surgeon of Springfield; Fred is a rising young physician; Pearl is the wife of Dr. Richard D. Dungan of Illiopolis, Ill.; and Hope resides at home with the mother of the family.

HUCKELBERRY, Eli L., an honored veteran of the Civil War, now living retired from active life at Illiopolis, Ill., is a native of Clark County, Ind., born April 7, 1828, son of Henry Huckelberry and wife, both of whom were born in Pennsylvania. The father was an early settler of Clark County, where he carried on farming for years. Later he came to Illinois and located ten miles east of Springfield, where he entered 340 acres of land from the Government and lived on it the remainder of his life, dying in 1860 and being survived ten years by his widow. Of their ten children Eli L. is the only survivor. Henry Huckelberry killed the last Indian left on the battlefield of Tippecanoe, and was a soldier in the Black Hawk war two decades later.

As a boy Eli L. Huckelberry attended the district school, which was held in a primitive log building, furnished with slab benches and desks, and later worked on his father's farm until the outbreak of the Civil War. He enlisted August 6, 1862, in Company A, Seventy-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and on account of disability was discharged November 25 of the same year. He is a valued member of the local post of the G. A. R. After his discharge Mr. Huckelberry returned to Sangamon County, and for many years has been a resident of Illiopolis. He is a member of the Methodist Church, and is much interested in all public movements. In politics he is a Republican.

Mr. Huckelberry was married (first), near Mechanicsburg, in September, 1856, to Emily H. Derry, a native of Virginia, where her father conducted a farm until his death. The mother came to Sangamon County and spent her remaining days with Mrs. Huckelberry. Seven children were born of this union, of whom two now survive; Samuel L., of Springfield, and Hattie M., wife of Edward S. Albertson, of Chicago. Mrs. Huckelberry died in 1882. Mr. Huckelberry was married (second) in Springfield, in April, 1884, to Elizabeth F. Waddell, whose parents were early settlers of Sangamon County, where her birth occurred, and both died on their farm there. Two children were born of this union, one deceased, and the other, Carrie, married Archie Bean and lives in Northville, Ill. Mr. Huckelberry is much respected in his community, where he was well known, and has many friends. He owns a home in the village.

HUCKELBERRY, William H.—Those who were born in Sangamon County naturally are more attached to this locality than those who came to it at a later period. Especially is this true of the older men who grew up amid pioneer surroundings and have had the pleasure of witnessing the marvelous development of a more recent period. One of this class of men is the prosperous farmer, William H. Huckelberry, residing on his well-cultivated farm on Section 29, Clear Lake Township, where he was born, December 7, 1852, and had there spent his life. He is a son of the late David and Almira (Cherry) Huckelberry, born in Clark County, Ind., and Sangamon County, Ill., respectively. The father came to Illinois from Indiana at an early day, settling in Sangamon County, buying 120 acres in Clear Lake Township, of Mr. Hipsh, later adding to it. His children were Benjamin, William, Owen O., Charles and Oran A., all surviving except the daughter. Charles is a farmer in Clear Lake Township. Benjamin Cherry, the paternal grandfather, was a soldier in the War of 1812, as was Henry Huckelberry, his paternal grandfather, the latter also participating in the battle of Tippecanoe. David Huckelberry died in 1906, aged eighty-five years, his wife having passed away the year before at an advanced age.

William H. Huckelberry, the eldest of the family, always rendered assistance to his parents who spent their lives in farming, and as the lad studied in the Sangamon County schools he worked at various kinds of farm labor. Farming as his life work, has engrossed his attention, so that he has had no time for politics, although a strong Republican and proud of the fact that his first vote was cast for Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Huckelberry has never married, but is interested in the children of his brothers, who look to him for many favors which they would not otherwise obtain. For many years he has been a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and can always be depended upon for faithful work. He is proud of his honorable ancestry, for not only does he trace back to those worth while on the paternal side his mother's people were important in Alabama, coming from that State to Illinois to become pioneers of this mighty commonwealth. Mr.
Huckelberry has devoted much time to reading, and is a very pleasant, well educated man, of agreeable conversation, who keeps himself posted on current events and their application to everyday life.

HUDSON, Andrew J., who has spent his entire life on the farm where he was born, on Section 8, Maxwell Township, Sangamon County, Ill., January 23, 1830, is a son of John and Margaret (McCreary) Hudson, both natives of West Virginia, where they were married. The parents came to Sangamon County in 1826, before it was organized as a county, and the Indians had only just left the vicinity. John Hudson erected a log cabin in Maxwell Township and had to go several miles in different directions to find enough men to help him raise his house. He secured land for $1.25 per acre, and located his house in the edge of the timber, though most of his land was prairie. He was a democrat in politics, though he never took a very active part in public affairs. His birth occurred in 1794 and he died in Sangamon County, July 12, 1878, his wife having been called to her last rest in 1854. They were parents of eleven children, two of whom died in infancy, while the others reached maturity, but Andrew J. is now the only survivor of the family.

The nine children of John Hudson and wife who grew to manhood and womanhood were: Young M., who accompanied his parents to Illinois and died about 1857, leaving a wife and one daughter, the latter the wife of Daniel Stailey; Jane, who married William Hodgson, both now being deceased, having had a family of eight children, one of whom married John Matthews, a farmer of Maxwell Township; William, died about 1855, had married (first) a Miss Nepper, by whom he had no children, and (second) a Mrs. Lacy, by whom he had three children; Rachel, married Willis Meacham and both are deceased, having had two daughters, Mrs. Ada Cora, of Waverly, and Mrs. Margaret Boyer, of Virden; John M., died in 1876, leaving a wife and one child, the former now Mrs. John Carson, of Loami; George W., married Nancy H. Park, and died in 1861, his widow having married J. L. Short, and living in Kansas; Andrew J., of this sketch; Frank N., died in Waverly, in 1907, leaving a wife and two children; Sarah E., who married Thomas Parke and died in 1870, her husband dying in 1910, they had one child, Lavinia, wife of D. C. Franklin, a farmer of Maxwell Township.

Andrew J. Hudson spent his boyhood on a farm, receiving most of his education in the subscription schools, as he was able to attend public school for only a short time after it was established. He worked for his father as soon as he was old enough and remained with him until he was twenty-three years old. He was obliged to work the full six days each week, with no time off, and was not allowed a horse and buggy to use for pleasure. In his early days corn was dropped by hand and he used the scythe and cradle, as well as the sickle. He at one time dropped seed for eleven acres of corn, for which he was to receive twenty-five cents, but failed to get his pay for the work. He plowed with the old wooden mold board plow. He has witnessed many notable changes in Sangamon County, where his entire life has been spent, and has a real interest in the progress and development of his community. He is well known and highly respected and has many warm personal friends.

Mr. Hudson was married, February 20, 1862, to Mary M. Smetter, who was born in Fairfield County, Ohio, August 28, 1840, a daughter of Daniel and Maria (Cook) Smetter, who came with her parents to Sangamon County in 1842. The father died about 1862 and the mother about 1870. After marriage Mr. Hudson and his wife began housekeeping in a small frame house on the farm where he was born, and this home burned eleven months after they moved into it. He erected another small frame building, which was their home until 1892, when he erected a comfortable seven-room two-story dwelling. He has built many barns and other outbuildings and has made many other improvements on his farm. He has set out beautiful shade and ornamental trees, as well as fruit trees, and has attractive grounds surrounding his house. His largest farm of 140 acres is in a fine state of cultivation. He and his wife have one daughter, Maria M., born February 11, 1876, is the wife of Oscar Vincent, and she and her husband have two children, Floyd Hudson and Florence, the former born August 17, 1904, and the latter August 10, 1907. Mr. Vincent has charge of Mrs. Hudson's farm.

Mr. Hudson has taken an active interest in raising a superior breed of stock, and during the past fourteen years has paid considerable attention to Duroc Jersey hogs. His hogs are all eligible for registry and he sells from forty to fifty each year. He has always been in favor of good schools and the providing of good church and school edifices. He has been Justice of the Peace and Road Commissioner, and has held other township offices. In politics he is a Democrat and in religious views a Primitive Baptist.

HUFFMAN, William (deceased), had many friends in Sangamon County, Ill., who remember him well, although all that was earthly for him passed away April 13, 1887, about a quarter of a century ago. He was a farmer of Buffalo Hart Township for many years. He discharged every duty that came his way with conscientious attention and was true to every friend. He was a stanch Democrat in political views and took an active interest in the welfare and progress of his community. Mr. Huffman was born in Kentucky, December 12, 1838, son of Jacob and Mary A. (Earls) Huffman, both natives of Kentucky, where they spent their entire lives. They were farmers, and William Huffman spent his boyhood on his father's farm, attending school and helping HUGHES, William, retired farmer, Riverton, Sangamon County, Ill., is a native of Macclesfield, England, and in his life has demonstrated the value of British blood in the making of our American civilization and progress. He was born in 1840, a son of George and Harriet (Ashworth) Hughes. His father, a sheet-iron and tin worker, conducted a manufacturing establishment. Of four sons of the family, only William Hughes and his brother Thomas, of Missouri, survive. William was educated in England and learned the sheet-iron worker's trade with his father and was employed in connection with it till 1848, when he came to America with his parents. The family sailed from Liverpool and, after a six weeks' voyage, landed at New Orleans. The mother sickened and died during the voyage and was buried in the Atlantic. After staying awhile in New Orleans, the subject of this notice made his way to St. Louis, where he lived eight years. Then, coming to Riverton, Ill., he found employment for some years with the Howlett Distillery Company. Later, after several years spent as a miner, he took up farming, which he followed with considerable success until 1901, when he retired from active business. During a portion of the period of the Civil War he was a member of the Louisiana State militia. In his political affiliations he is a Democrat.

In 1860 Mr. Hughes married at Springfield, Ill., Miss Emma Langfield, born in Ohio, a daughter of George Langfield, a native of England, who came to America and located in the Buckeye State, where he farmed during the remainder of his life. Mrs. Hannah (Whitehead) Langfield who was also a native of England, bore her husband three sons and three daughters, of whom the following survive: Mrs. Hughes; George Langfield, of German Prairie, Sangamon County; John Langfield, of Springfield, Ill.; and Mrs. Martha (Langfield) Peachey, of Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes have had six children, of whom two, George and Harriet, are deceased. The following are still living: Anna, the eldest, born June 28, 1871, is a member of the household of her parents; Thomas, born in 1873; George, born in 1875; and William, born in 1877—all of whom assist their father in the operation of his farm and in the management of his Riverton property, which consists of his home and other desirable holdings. They are not members of any church, but are liberal in their views.

HUIER, John Henry.—Springfield boasts many features that differentiate it from its sister communities of the Commonwealth. One, of course, is the fact that it is the capital, but there are several others. There is afforded an opportunity for business men of tact and judgment to pursue almost any line of business with a reasonable prospect of success, owing to the many transients who came there prepared to spend money, and who want the best of everything. One of the live young business men of the city is John Henry Huier, born sixteen miles south of Springfield, August 15, 1876, a son of James and Amanda (Murphy) Huier. James Huier was born in Sangamon County, one-quarter of a mile from the site of his son's birth, and he and his wife were married in the county. He was a farmer, who worked until his death, in 1896. He is survived by his widow, now making her home in Springfield. In politics James Huier was a Democrat, but never cared for public office. His four children are all living and, like him, are liberal in their religious views.

After attending the Oakridge School, J. H. Huier, of this biography, began to earn his own living, in the employ of Frank Sanford & Company, continuing with this firm for seven years, when he embarked in his present enterprise, which he still carries on. While he supports the candidates and principles of Democracy, Mr. Huier follows his father's policy in declining to permit his name to be used on the party ticket. His tendencies in religious matters are towards the fullest liberty for all, although he admits the good work accomplished by the churches. He is a genial, pleasant young man, with a large following of warm personal friends, and is deservedly popular with them.

HULBERT, John (deceased).—The late John Hulbert, who owned and operated a farm near Springfield, Ill., had been a resident of Sangamon County since 1875, and had established himself in the friendship and esteem of all who had dealings with him. He was a devout member of the Presbyterian Church and did his full duty in all the relations of life. His loss was deeply mourned, not only by his immediate famlly and friends, but by the community. He was a native of New Hampshire, born December 17, 1847, a son of Stephen and Nancy (Evert) Hulbert, both also born in that State.
The parents were farmers and came to Bureau County, Ill., when their son John was a small boy, remaining there several years, but then returned to New Hampshire, where their deaths occurred. They were parents of nine children, of whom five are now living.

The education of John Hulbert was received in the common schools of Bureau County, Ill., and he worked on his father's farm as soon as he was physically able. After leaving school he moved to Cass County, Ill., where he worked at farming for ten years, and in 1875 located on a farm near Curran, Sangamon County, where he lived twenty years, then located on the farm where his widow now resides. He was an energetic and successful farmer and brought his farm to a good state of cultivation.
In politics he was a Republican.

Mr. Hulbert was married in Morgan County, Ill., June 18, 1868, to Ester King, who was born near Nashville, Tenn., August 20, 1850, a doughter of John H. and Sarah A. (Chandler) King. Her parents, who were natives of Tensessee, moved to Kansas at an early day, and after remaining there ten years, came to Cass County, Ill., the father being killed by a falling tree in Missouri in 1866. The mother died in Cass County in 1872. There were six sons and three daughters in the family, all of whom are living. Mr. King was a farmer all his life and was a soldier in the Mexican War. Mrs. Hul-bert's grandfather, Andrew Chandler, was a Captain in the Mexican War and served under General Andrew Jackson.

Ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Hulbert; five daughters and five sons: Stephen, a farmer of Christian County; George, lives with his mother; John E., lives in Springfield; Oliver, at home; Nettie, wife of George Caldwell, a farmer living near Springfield; Myrtle, wife of Frank Rudolph of Christian County; Ruby, living at home; Ora, wife of Edward Miller, of Springfield; Esther and Lester L., both at home.
Mrs. Hulbert owns forty acres of the farm where she now resides. Mr. Hulbert passed away November 7, 1908, and was buried in Oak Ridge Cemetery. The children in this family all revere the memory of their father and all are respected and esteemed in the commu-

HUMPHREY, Judge J Otis.—Illinois has always been proud of its lawyers, its lawmakers and its statesmen; they have always taken rank with the leaders throughout the country, and when tried have never been found wanting. Many of the greatest men in the modern history of the country have come from the Prairie State, and it is safe to say that the present generation can be relied upon to keep up the high standard. One who has been promi-nently identified with the progress of the Nation and who has been called upon to fill numerous high offices of honor and trust is Judge J Otis Humphrey, of Springfield. Judge Humphrey was born December 20, 1850, in Morgan County, Ill., a son of William and Sarah (Stocker) Humphrey, natives of Ohio, who settled in Sangamon County in 1855.

Judge Humphrey is descended from an old and honored English family. His great-grandfather, Maj. Humphrey, won his title as commander of a division of the Fourth Rhode Island Regiment during the War of the Revolution. Later generations of the family came West and the parents of Judge Humphrey settled in Illinois, where William Humphrey died in 1856. J Otis Humphrey was reared on a farm in Auburn Township, Sangamon County, and his early education was secured in the dis-

JUDGE HUMPHREY'S PROFESSIONAL ACTIVITIES

Humphrey's activities in politics began in 1876, under the tutelage of Hon. Shelby M.
Cullom, who was during that year elected Goveror of Illinois. In 1884 he was a Presidential Elector of the Blaine ticket, and in 1896, was sent as Delegate to the National Convention at St. Louis. He was Chairman of the Republican County Central Committee for four years. On July 1, 1897, he was appointed United States Attorney for the Southern Distribute of Illinois, by President McKinley, and in 1908, was appointed United States District
Judge, in which capacity he is now serving.

Judge Humphrey has tried a great number of important suits during the time he has held a seat on the bench, and it is probable that no man in his capacity in the State, has a better record of unimpeached and unimpeachable decisions, or has ever enjoyed more conspicuously, the confidence of the community. Those who have known him know that he has always been fair and just, and that no man ever received more satisfaction from his decisions.

Judge Humphrey was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Scott, daughter of Rev. A. H. Scott, and to this union there have been born five children: Mary, Maude, Grace, Scott and Ruth. Judge Humphrey is possessed of more than ordinary literary ability, and specimens of his work in this line have been seen printed in a number of publications. He is a contributor to this publication, his valued contribution bearing the title of "The Lincoln Memorial."

HUMPHREYS, Joseph A. (deceased), came of an old and highly-respected Sangamon County family. His birth occurred January 2, 1843, on the old home farm, three and one-half miles southeast of Springfield, Alexander Humphreys, his father, being one of Sangamon County's early settlers. He married Nancy R. Whitecroft, in Bath County, Ky. They moved to Springfield, Ill., in 1827, and there one child was born. They later moved to Sugar Creek, and six children were born there. The Humphreys were of Welsh descent. Joseph A. Humphreys had two brothers, Charles and Thomas, who served in the war of the Rebellion. Alexander Humphreys was born November 21, 1800, in Fleming County, Ky., and was a son of Orin and Isabell (Lee Keith) Humphreys. Mrs. Humphreys was born September 7, 1771, and she and her husband were married in Fleming County, Ky., where their seven children were born, Alexander Humphreys being one of them.

Joseph A. Humphreys was only seven years old when his father moved to Christian County Ill., and there he grew to manhood, receiving a common school education. He remained at home until he married, February 2, 1862, his bride being Miss Ellen Powell, who died eighteen months later. On January 2, 1880, Mr. Humphreys was married to Miss Alice Johnson, of Berry Station, Ill., daughter of Samuel and Louise (Taff) Johnson both deceased. Mrs. Humphreys was born near Berry's Station, Sangamon County, Ill., February 20, 1859, and her father was born near Rochester Sangamon County, September 12, 1830. He was a son of Andrew Johnson, who was born in Dumbfrieshire, Scotland, but came to Sangamon County in 1829. Andrew Johnson was a millwright and built a mill on the south fork of the Sangamon River. He was married in 1827 to Mrs. Mary (Barker) Williams, and they had three sons, John, Samuel and Andrew. Louise Taff, mother of Mrs. Humphreys and wife of Samuel Johnson, was born near Athens, Menard County, Ill., July 4, 1839, and died February 26, 1854. She was a daughter of William and Theresa Taff. The Taff family were of English descent, but the mother of Mrs. Louisa Johnson was of German descent. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Humphreys: Owen, who died in infancy, and Joseph A., born May 27, 1853, now a student in Upper Alton Military Academy.

Mr. Humphreys operated his farm, eight miles southwest of Edinburgh, for ten years after his second marriage, and then moved to Taylorville, which continued to be his home for five years. He then went to Colorado Springs for his health, but nine months later returned, locating in Springfield, where he bought a home, and there resided until his death, November 25, 1910.

Mr. Humphreys was well and favorably known by all residing in his community, and sustained the reputation for probity and upright living that were so characteristic of the man, wherever he went. Possessing in marked degree the faculty of making and retaining friends, who loved him deeply, he had a host of them to mourn his death. In the fall of 1904 he became a member of the West Side Christian Church, and in his death this organization lost one of its most liberal and active workers. Recognizing his worth, soon after his admission into membership, the church's associates made him a member of the official board, and later still he became a deacon, holding that office the remainder of his life. Deeply interested in all kinds of church work, he was one of the leaders in the congregation. In politics he was a Republican, but did not care for office. Mrs. Humphreys owns some 434 acres of rich farm land in Christian County.

HUNT, George. (Vol. I, p. 239.)

HUNTER, Al, Assistant Manager of the Central Co-operative Coal Company, of Springfield, has had many years' experience in mining affairs, having spent his life in the business. Mr. Hunter, who resides at No. 2005 North Elizabeth Street, Springfield, was born at Chatham, Ill., July 12, 1876, a son of Robert and Sarah (Edwards) Hunter. Robert Hunter was born in Sangamon County, Ill., in 1833, and has been a miner all his life, now being in the employ of the concern of which his son is Assisitant Manager. He married Mary Edwards, who was born in Loami, Ill., forty-nine years ago, and they had a family of seven children, namely: Al, Maggie, James, Bessie, Clarence, Ruth and Sadie. Al Hunter attended the public schools of Chatham and Auburn, Ill., and in 1896 accompanied his parents to Springfield. He began working in mines when he was only fourteen years old, and his whole life has been spent in the business. He has held his present position since 1909 and largely through his efforts the company has increased its volume of business very considerably. Mr. Hunter has a nice home at No. 2005 North Elizabeth Street, in the capital city. His politics are those of the Democratic party, and his fraternal connection is with the Eagles.

In May, 1901, Mr. Hunter was united in marriage with Miss Amanda Roe, of Springfield. They have had no children. Mr. and Mrs. Hunter are consistent members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church.

HUNTER, Albion (deceased).—The late Albion Hunter, for many years a resident of Springfield, Ill., spent his last days in retirement from active life. He belonged to a family that had for many generations lived in the Allegheny Mountains in Pennsylvania. He was born in New Brighton, Beaver County, that State, to which place his parents had removed at their marriage, and where they spent the remainder of their lives. Both parents were born in

Greene County, Pa., the father in 1810 and the mother in 1812, and the farmer died at New Brighton in 1866, while his widow survived him until 1897. They were parents of eight children, four sons and four daughters, namely: Emily, wife of Joseph McDanielis, both deceased; Albion; Margaret married Levi Gibson, of New Brighton, Pa., and both are deceased; Samuel, deceased, formerly of New Brighton; Frank, of New Brighton; El- len, wife of John Brown, of Block House Run, Pa.; Elsie married, John Stuck, both now deceased; and William, of New Brighton, Pa.

The birth of Albion Hunter occurred May 22, 1838, and his education was acquired in the public schools of his native place. His first employment was in a brick yard there, and in 1875 he came to White Hall, Ill., where he engaged in brick-making. Two years later he located in Springfield, where he was engaged in the manufacture of brick until his retirement from active life in 1905. He built up a good business and won an excellent business reputation. He was highly esteemed as a man of business integrity, had stability and had many warm friends there.

September 20, 1857, Mr. Hunter was married in Beaver County, Pa., by "Squire" James A. Barrett, to Elizabeth, daughter of Samuel and Matilda (Shade) Smith, who was born in Perry County, Pa., August 23, 1833. Her father was born at Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pa., in 1815, and her mother at New Bloomfield, that State, in 1812. Mr. Smith, who was a shoemaker by trade, removed to Time, Pike County, Ill., in 1876, plied his trade there about two years, when he and his wife located at New Brighton, Pa., where both spent the remainder of their lives, the father passing away in 1907 and the mother, November 11, 1921. They were parents of three sons and four daughters, namely: William, of New England Hill, Pa.; George W., of Wheatland, Mo.; Samuel K., of New Brighton, Pa.; Mary A., widow of Benjamin Schlusser; Catherine, wife of Nathan A. Crouch, an undertaker living at New Brighton, Pa.; Rebecca, unmarried and living at New Brighton; Elizabeth, Mrs. Hunter. The three sons served in the Civil War. Mr. Hunter also served in the war as a private in Company B, Fifth Pennsylvania Volunteer Heavy Artillery, enlisting August 20, 1864, at the age of twenty-six years. He was mustered out at the close of his term of service, being finally discharged at Washington, D. C., June 30, 1865.

Four children were born to Mr. Hunter and wife, two sons and two daughters: Fraser, born September 1, 1858, died December 3, 1903; Clara, born October 9, 1860, wife of Christopher Francis, of Ridgely, Ill.; Anna, born November 16, 1862, wife of Alexander Farsworth, a printer living in Springfield; Byron died September 20, 1866. There were nine grandchildren in the family, of whom five are living, and there are three great-grandchildren. Both Mrs. Hunter and her husband belong to old Pennsyl vania families. Mr. Hunter was a Democrat in politics. His death occurred at his home in Springfield March 15, 1907, and was deeply deplored by his many friends.

HUNTER, George W. (deceased).—In the death of George W. Hunter, a pioneer stockman and successful farmer, Sangamon County lost one of its most useful and highly respected citizens. He was a native of the county, born in Auburn Township, May 9, 1860, son of James Hunter and wife (the maiden name of the latter being Lay son), both of whom died when their son George was but six years old. He was one of six children, four sons and two daughters, the others being: John, who died in Dakota; William, of Moscow, Idaho; Douglas, died in Moscow, Idaho, leaving a widow and two children—Mamie and William; Margaret, married Alfred Campbell, and both died leaving four children—Mamie, Minnie, Edward and Earl; Rebecca, married (first) James Campbell, by whom she had two children—Etta and Fred, her second husband being John Henry, of Jacksonville, Ill., by whom she had one child—Fred.

After the death of his parents, George W. Hunter went to live with his uncle, Wesley Hunter, at Jerseyville, Ill., where he remained until he was twelve years old, but in this time had never attended school. He then went to live with his sister, Rebecca Ann Campbell, then living in Talkington Township, Sangamon County, Ill., who was the second wife of Capt. James Campbell, and by whom she had three children—Franklin, Minnie and William. She was a fine woman and a good Christian, and it was in her home that the ambitious lad, began to attend the district school near by and apply himself diligently to his studies, in which he was assisted by his kind and patient sister. In this way he was able to make rapid progress, and by studying often until midnight, he was able, by the time he was sixteen years of age, to obtain a teacher's certificate, and began teaching in the Wilson District School in Auburn Township. For five or six years he continued in this profession with excellent success, then turned his attention to farming and stock-raising. He became a breeder of the best grade of horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, and spent a useful, busy life, being a kind neighbor and true friend, always ready to help those in need or distress, and was most highly esteemed in all relations of life. He was of a noble and upright character, and was prominent in social and political circles. He was an ardent supporter of the principles and representatives of the Democratic party and was active in party councils. He served as supervisor of his township and also in other offices.

Mr. Hunter was married, November 3, 1880, to miss Rachel C. Campbell, born in Chatham Township, Sangamon County, March 5, 1857, a daughter of Peter Campbell, one of the most prominent and extensive farmers of the southern part of Sangamon County, a sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this work. Mr. Hunter and his wife settled on the farm where she now resides, in Section 18, Chatham Township, occupying a small three-room frame building then standing on it. He continued teaching for a time, then gave his whole attention to the clearing and improving of his land, which was mostly uncultivated. He had accomplished a great deal at the time of his death in the way of developing and improving his farm, and had erected the handsome residence still standing there.

In 1888 Mr. Hunter and his wife went west to visit his brother and sister, and while on the trip Mr. Hunter was taken ill, finally dying at Chelahills, Wash., of typhoid fever, November 3, 1888. His remains were brought back to Illinois and buried in the cemetery at Chatham, after which Mrs. Hunter returned to the home farm which she carried on, hiring the work done until her sons were old enough to take charge of it. The children born to her and her husband were: John W. and Walter, twins, born September 3, 1851, the former a farmer living on Section 6, Chatham Township, whose sketch appears elsewhere in this work; the latter dying February 17, 1852; Peter J., born April 24, 1854; a sketch of whom also appears in this work; Charles A., born May 26, 1856, in charge of the home farm; William D., born July 10, 1859, a farmer on Section 12, Loami Township. The sons of Mrs. Hunter all did their share in carrying on the home farm, and now all except one have settled on farms of their own near the old home, having been provided with land by their mother. There are about 400 acres in the home place, and Mrs. Hunter owns in all about 1500 acres. At one time she owned 1900 acres in Chatham Township besides timber land in Louisiana. Mrs. Hunter is revered and beloved by all who know her, and has followed the example of her husband in taking an interest in all around her. She is a devout member of the Christian Church, while her husband belonged to the Methodist Church. She is a woman of strong will and high character and has reared her children to honorable manhood. Charles A. Hunter is one of the prominent stock-breeders of his community and has been successful in his farming operations. He makes a specialty of raising full-blooded Hereford and Polled-Angus cattle.

HUNTER, Hugh.—While the soil of Sangamon County is very fertile, water plentiful and easily obtained, and weather conditions practically ideal, good crops cannot be raised unless the land is properly worked and scientifically conditioned, and the high standard set by agriculturists of this section is, therefore, of great credit to them. Hugh Hunter, a well known farmer of Sangamon County, who is carrying on operations on Section 25, Illiopolis Township, was born in Christian County, Ill., October 1, 1841, a son of John and Martha (Dickinson) Hunter. John Hunter was born August 8, 1811, in Gallatin County, Ky., and came with his father, James Hunter, to Christian County, Ill., at an early date the grandfather having entered land there from the Government. John Hunter married Martha Dickinson who was born September 25, 1811, and they continued to farm in Christian County all their lives, Mr. Hunter's death occurring there December 22, 1856. To Mr. and Mrs. Hunter there were born the following children: Hugh; Scott, born September 28, 1852, who now conducts a meat market in Illiopolis; Sarah Elizabeth, the widow of Thomas Sledener, residing with her son in Springfield; Rachel F., born February 9, 1843, married James Lee, and both are now deceased; Harriet A., who died in infancy; and Thomas L., born September 18, 1847, now deceased.

Hugh Hunter was educated in the country schools of Christian County, and worked for his father on the home farm until the latter's death. On July 19, 1861, at Decatur, Ill., he enlisted in Company I, Forty-first Regular Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under the command of Col. I. C. Pugh, of Decatur, and with this regiment served three years, receiving his honorable discharge August 20, 1864, at Camp Butler. Although never wounded in battle, captured by the enemy or confined to the hospital, Mr. Hunter saw much hard fighting, and that he was able to be at all times with his regiment proved his worth as a hardy, brave and earnest soldier, and one at all times ready to do his full duty to his country. His regiment participated in such notable engagements as Forts Henry and Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Hatchie River, Coldwater, Vicksburg, Jackson and Atlanta, and it was at the last-named place that he received his discharge. After completing his army service Mr. Hunter returned to Illiopolis where for about five years he was engaged in tanning and then removed to his present farm in Illiopolis Township, where he has since been engaged in cultivating the soil. He has a sunny little farm of fifteen acres, in a high state of cultivation, and has kept it in good condition, well-fenced and with good buildings. One of Mr. Hunter's most pleasant recollections is his personal acquaintance with Abraham Lincoln.

On March 30, 1865, Mr. Hunter was united in marriage with Rose Ann Ream, who died July 2, 1904, at the age of fifty-five years. One child was born to this union who died in infancy. Mr. Hunter is a member of the Christian Church.
land there and remained a few years, then returning to Bond County, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their lives. They had seven children who reached maturity, and of these John B. was the second.

John B. Hunter received his education in the district school and was reared on a farm. He lived with his parents until his marriage, April 2, 1844, to Martha Young, of Bond County, and he and his wife became parents of one son, L. M., who died in Decatur, Ill., March 14, 1910. Mrs. Hunter died in April, 1845.

Mr. Hunter married (second), in April, 1847, Mary A. Robinson, of Bond County, and they had five children; Sarah J., now Mrs. Simon White, of Walter County, Tex.; W. H., of Downington, Wyo.; C. W., died in Illinois in 1885; Amanda J., died at the age of fourteen years; James R., killed on the railroad in 1873. Mrs. Hunter died in 1893.

Mr. Hunter was married (third), April 2, 1855, to Elizabeth White, a native of Bond County, and they became parents of three children: John B., of Denver, Colo.; Otis J., living near Orchard, Neb.; Guy L., of Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County.

After his marriage Mr. Hunter moved to his farm in Bond County, to which he added from time to time until he owned 2,500 acres, and was one of the most extensive farmers and stock-raisers in that county. In 1850 he sold out and moved to Lanesville Township, Sangamon County, where he bought land and became the owner of several hundred acres. In 1858 he purchased a farm in Mechanicsburg Township, to which he kept adding until he owned 570 acres, on which his son lives. Mr. Hunter also owned property in Buffalo. He had been retired from active life for several years. He was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he had held all the offices; was a Democrat in politics, a friend of education and progress and highly esteemed as a man of enterprise and good business judgment. His success in life was the result of his own enterprise and energy. Mr. Hunter died in January, 1911.

HUNTER, John W., an enterprising and practical young farmer, who has always been identified with the best interests of his community, and a lifelong resident of Chatham Township, Sangamon County, III., was born on his father's farm on Section 18, Chatham Township, the son of George W. and Rachel Caroline (Campbell) Hunter, mentioned at length in a sketch of the former, which appears in a preceding section of this volume. John W. Hunter spent his boyhood days on a farm, attending school and helping his father, beginning to do his share of farm work as soon as he was able to reach the plow handles and guide it in the furrow. After finishing a course in the district school he spent four winters attending the public school in Springfield and one year in the Springfield Business College, after which he returned home and soon after went to live with his maternal grandfather, Peter C. Campbell, an extensive farmer of the county.

November 4, 1903, Mr. Hunter was married to Miss Flora Van Doren, also a native of Chatham Township, born on a farm near Mr. Hunter's birthplace, and daughter of William L. and Emelly (Darnelle) Van Doren, her father a leading farmer of the township. After their marriage Mr. Hunter and his wife remained in the neighborhood and in 1905 located on the farm where they now live, on Section 6, Chatham Township, where he makes a specialty of breeding Percheron horses. This is one of the best farms in the neighborhood, containing 200 acres, most of it under cultivation. Since purchasing this place he has made many improvements in the way of erecting buildings, putting in tiling, etc., and now owns 345 acres in the township. His farm is well stocked with high-grade cattle, hogs and horses, and his Percheron stallion, "Casian," is well known as one of the finest in Central Illinois, being coal-black, 18 hands in height and weighing 2,000 pounds. He also has two pure-bred mares. Though a young man Mr. Hunter has won a good reputation for his intelligence and success in conducting his agricultural business. He takes great interest and pleasure in producing abundant crops, and in looking after the many details necessary in carrying on so large a farm to advantage. He believes in owning and using the latest improved equipment in carrying on his work and takes great interest in the progress and improvement of the community, and especially in the improvement of road conditions, which may be appreciated by examining the roads adjoining his land. He stands well with his neighbors and is popular with his many friends. In politics he is Independent, voting for the Men and Measures he thinks for the best interests of all the people. Having resided in the neighborhood all his lifetime he is well-known, is a popular representative of his family, which he has been identified with this community for so many years.

Mr. Hunter is a member of the Christian Church while his wife belongs to the Methodist Church. He is also a member of the Masonic Lodge at Loami, and of the I. O. O. F. No. 408 at Loami, and he and his wife are identified with the Order of the Eastern Star of that village.

HUNTER, Peter James, member of the well-known Hunter family that has done so much in promoting the welfare and progress of Chatham Township, Sangamon County, was born in the township, April 24, 1852, a son of George W. and Rachel C. (Campbell) Hunter. (A more complete history of the family is to be found in the sketch of George W. Hunter, in a preceding section of this department.) Peter J. Hunter attended the district schools of his neighborhood, and when twelve years old enrolled himself in the public schools of Springfield and attended them during the next five winters, working on his father's farm during the summer months. After leaving school, he remained on the home farm until March 5, 1902, when he was united in marriage with Miss Nellie A. Van Doren, born on the same section (18) of Chatham Township, as himself, April 30, 1882. She was a daughter of William Van Doren, a representative citizen of his community, still residing on his farm, and of whom may he found a sketch elsewhere in this work.

After marriage, Mr. Hunter settled on his farm on Section 3 of Chatham Township. In 1907, he and his wife took a pleasure trip to Colorado and New Mexico, then spent two years in the village of Chatham, and in the spring of 1910, returned to the farm, where they have a pleasant home, brightened by the presence of their two children: Emma R., born November 15, 1904, and Esther Eolise, May 1, 1908. For many years Mr. Hunter has been connected with the Christian Church, while his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Loami which he also attends. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge, No. 523, of Chatham, and he and Mrs. Hunter are members of the Order of Eastern Star. He is serving as Worshipful Master of the former.

Although a comparatively young man, Mr. Hunter has for several years been identified with the best interests of his community, and is always found ready to support any worthy public enterprise. In 1909, by solicitation of his friends, he was placed upon the Democratic ticket for the office of Supervisor, and although the township is strongly Republican, he was elected by a fair majority and took his seat in June of that year. He has stood for a "fair deal for the people," and has been one of the most useful members of the board. When the question came up of converting the county into a commission of three Judges, he voted that the people be allowed to vote on this question. Personally, he is much opposed to the issue and has advanced many good reasons for his opposition to the commission plan.

Mr. Hunter is an intelligent farmer, and for the past three years has given much attention to breeding high-grade hogs. At the head of his herd, is the pure-bred Polish China "Banker Second," champion at the Illinois State Fair, in 1909. Mr. Hunter has about fifty head of hogs on his farm at the present time. He owns 240 acres in his home place on Section 3, and also has 160 acres on Section 8 of Chatham Township. He has always been in favor of a good grade of horses and cattle, as well as hogs. His success attest the soundness of his judgment on agricultural matters.

HUNTER, William D., an enterprising young farmer and a business man of sound judgment, has recently purchased a fine farm in Section 12, Loami Township, Sangamon County, Ill., which he is stockling with high-grade cattle and hogs. Mr. Hunter has virtually had charge of his own affairs since he was twelve years of age, his father having died before he was born, and in this way he has acquired a degree of acumen and clear-sightedness not usually possessed by a man of his years. Mr. Hunter is a native of Sangamon County, born in Chatham Township, July 10, 1882, a son of George W. and Rachel Carollue (Campbell) Hunter, the former a native of Auburn Township, Sangamon County, and the latter of Chatham Township. A sketch of the father, to he found elsewhere in this volume, contains further history of the family.

The boyhood of William D. Hunter was spent on a farm and, after attending the district schools, he spent three years in the public schools of Springfield and took a course of six months in bookkeeping. After leaving school he went to live with his grandfather, Peter C. Campbell, and at the age of twelve years was entrusted with the resposibility of drawing a check against the bank account of the latter for personal expenses and given a voice in the transaction of all business in which he had a personal interest through property inherited by him. He remained on the farm until he was sixteen years of age, during that time superintending much of his grandfather's business, writing the leases of land which was rented out and on his own responsibility looking after large land interests.

August 31, 1900, Mr. Hunter married Miss Catherine Ramsey, who was born on the edge of Springfield, July 26, 1888, a daughter of Christopher M. and Catherine (Baskim) Ramsey, her father being deceased while the mother is still a resident of Springfield. Mr. Ramsey passed away June 4, 1900. He and his wife had four sons and one daughter, namely: Robert, of Springfield; Joseph and Chester, twins, the latter deceased; John, at home, and Mrs. Hunter. At the time of his marriage Mr. Hunter had sold his stock and prepared a pretty home on Allen Street, Springfield, for his bride, but after they had occupied it about a year mutually both decided they preferred country life. In February, 1910, he purchased his present farm of fifty-three acres in the northeast quarter of Section 12, Loami Township, for which he paid $205 per acre, the highest price ever paid for land in that vicinity. This is a well-improved and fertile farm and Mr. Hunter plans adding to its attractiveness and productivity as time goes on. He is a most enterprising and energetic farmer and has made a special study of scientific methods and modern ideas. He is stockling his farm with Poland-China hogs and Jersey and Holstein cows. He has selected this breed of hogs after much deliberation, and his choice has been due to their superior quality as a food product and their early fitness for the market. He pays high prices in order to secure the best quality of stock for the market, is commended for his excellent judgment in embarking in this very profitable industry and holds a high reputation for honest dealing and integrity in business transactions. He owns 525 acres. of land, a large part of it being in Sections 7 and 8 of Chatham Township.

Mr. Huntington is a member of the Christian Church, while his wife is a communicant of St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral in Springfield. In politics he is a Democrat, is popular among his neighbors and has many friends in various parts of Sangamon County.

HUNTER, Walter E.—The tendency of the age is toward specializing, experience having taught that through distinctive training along limited lines, the greatest measure of success is attained. There is no limit placed upon the work. Every line of activity is open to specialization, and one of those who has already made his name known in Illinois as a skilled trainer of horses, is Walter E. Hunter, one of the newer residents of Springfield. Mr. Hunter, whose place of business is located on South Fourth Street, was born in Effingham, Ill., August 11, 1877, the son of James and Mary (Toothacker) Hunter. The father was born in Effingham County, Ill., January 10, 1842, while his wife was born in the same locality, but died in 1893, at the age of thirty-five years. James Hunter served in the Civil War and located in Effingham County at an early day. This has continued to be his home ever since, and he has become prosperous as a farmer and stationary engineer. His work has won for him enviable distinction in his line of business, and he enjoys the respect and confidence of his associates.

Walter E. Hunter attended the schools of Effingham, and Champaign, finally taking the full course in veterinary surgery, at the Illinois State University. Prior to this he had learned the baker's trade, at which he worked for eight years to earn the money for his university course. While at the university he decided upon becoming a horse trainer, and his success has justified his adoption of this profession. The experience has been wide and varied, and while in Effingham County he was easily a leader in his line, as he is in Sangamon since coming there. He had gained a good knowledge of horses on his father's farm in boyhood, and understands them thoroughly.

Mr. Hunter had an interesting experience as a soldier, serving as a non-commissioned officer for eighteen months in the Spanish-American War, in the Philippines, and was a brave and faithful soldier. He is a Presbyterian and has always been a Republican, but is not an office seeker. His fraternal affiliations are with the Modern Woodmen of America. Although he has left Effingham, Mr. Hunter is still interested in that city, for he owns considerable property there, and it was his home all his life before his location in Springfield.

HUNTINGTON, George Lathrop (deceased), for many years identified with the business life of Springfield, serving for two terms as Mayor of the city, was born in Norwich, Conn., in May, 1812, and died in Springfield, Ill., May 26, 1874. He was a son of Jonathan and Anna (Lathrop) Huntington, both natives of Norwich, Conn. The ancestors of Mr. Huntington were prominent in New England in colonial times, having served in the colonial wars and also in the War of the Revolution.

Mr. Huntington received his education in Boston, Mass., and having a natural taste for music, received excellent training along this line and in the classics. He came west as a young man and embarked in the dry-goods business in St. Louis, Mo., later moving to Springfield, Ill., where for many years he conducted a similar business. He became interested in various other business enterprises, for a time being connected with the Great Western Railroad. He was also successful as a lumber merchant, displaying both business judgment and superior energy in caring for his financial interests, as a consequence accumulating considerable property, including city real estate and several farms in Sangamon County. Mr. Huntington took an active part in political affairs, being affiliated with the Democratic party, and the people of Springfield showed their appreciation, for two terms (1861-63) electing him to the office of Mayor, which he filled with ability and satisfaction. He always had at heart the progress and welfare of the city and assisted in laying out beautiful Oak Ridge Cemetery, which contains the tomb of Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Huntington took great interest in various benevolent societies, and being a man of kindly disposition and generous instinct, contributed largely to private charities as well. He was a loving husband and father, a true and kind friend, and became a social leader. He was very fond of music and fond of other arts as well. He became Musical Director of the Philharmonic Society, and his home was the scene of many of these gatherings which were well remembered by those present. He was much beloved in social circles and was highly esteemed and respected as a citizen. His loss was felt keenly in many circles and he is still remembered by those who had the pleasure of his friendship as a man of more than usual talent and worth. He was a member of the Episcopal Church.

Mr. Huntington was married in St. Louis, Mo., to Hannah Flagg Forbes, daughter of Franklin and Clarissa (Nichols) Forbes, both natives of Boston, Mass. Nine children blessed their union, namely: Mary, died in infancy; Charles, a commander in the United States Navy; Alice, Emily, George, Clara; Ellen, widow of Thomas C. Henkle; Arthur and Leonora. Mrs. Huntington was noted for her personal beauty and intellectual attainments. She was a social favorite in all the great functions during the time of Abraham Lincoln. She died in 1893.

HURT, David M., a retired farmer residing at Illiopolis, Ill., is a veteran of the Civil War and has lived in the neighborhood of his present home since 1867. He was born in Menard County, Ill., December 12, 1832, son of James K. and Malinda (Preston) Hurt, both natives of Kentucky, the former born in 1805 and the latter in 1808. The father was a farmer by occupation and came to Sangamon County in 1830, living for a short time on a farm north of Springfield, then moved to a farm near Athens, Menard County, where his death occurred in 1852, from cholera. His wife died at the age of eighty years. He was a soldier in the Black Hawk War. His parents and those of his wife were natives of Kentucky. Seven daughters and four sons were born to James K. Hurt and his wife, of whom two sons and three daughters survive: J. A., Justice of the Peace at Athens, Ill.; Frank, residing in Colorado; Julia Holland, living in Kansas; Adeline Peter, of Springfield; Maria Primm, of Athens.

David M. Hurt received his education in the country schools of Menard County, and after leaving school worked on the farm for his father. He learned the trade of cooper, at which he was very successful, and his name and his work are well known in Sangamon County. He served four years in the Union Army, just before the former enlisted in the Union Army. He enlisted at Athens, August 12, 1862, in Company K, One Hundred Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, served three years, and was mustered out in July, 1865. He took part in several battles, among them the siege of Vicksburg and the battle at Little Rock, besides many skirmishes. At the close of the war Mr. Hurt returned to Athens and in 1867 purchased a farm near Illiopolis, where he lived many years, then retired from active work and located in Illiopolis. He was an enterprising and industrious farmer and won a very fair degree of success. He has erected a comfortable home in Illiopolis and is enjoying the fruits of his years of hard work. He is a Republican in politics and cast his first presidential vote for Fillmore and his second for Lincoln. He served eighteen years as School Director in Athens, and also served as Commissioner of Highways. He is Commander of Morgan Post No. 296, G. A. R., and has been its Chaplain several terms. He has belonged to the Methodist Church fifty years, and is Trustee of the organization in Illiopolis.

Mr. Hurt was married, in Athens, to Susan Tice, a native of Menard County, whose parents came there from Virginia in an early day, and lived on a farm until their deaths. Her parents lived to an advanced age. Mrs. Hurt died in May, 1900, having been a faithful and loving wife and mother. Children were born to her as follows: Edwin N., a farmer of Illiopolis Township; Luelia, deceased; Minnie lives with her father. Edwin N. Hurt has four children: Ruth, Pauline, Lora and David N. Mr. Hurt owns his present home and a farm in Illiopolis Township.

IDE, Albert L. (deceased).—No compendium such as the present of this work defines in its essential limitations, will serve to offer a fit memorial to the life and accomplishments of the honored subject of this sketch, a man who was remarkable in the breadth of his wisdom, in his indomitable perseverance, his strong individuality, and yet one whose entire life had not one esoteric phase, being an open scroll, inviting the closest scrutiny. True, his were “massive deeds and great” in one case, and yet his entire life accomplishment but represents the result of the fit utilization of the innate talent which was his, and the directing of his efforts in those lines where mature judgment and rare discrimination led the way. There was in Mr. Ide a weight of character, a native sagacity, a far-seeing judgment and a fidelity of purpose that commanded the respect of all. A man of indefatigable enterprise and fertility of resources, he carved his name deeply on the record of the commercial and business history of the State, which owes much if its advancement to his efforts.

The name of Ide is familiar in mechanical circles throughout the civilized world for his designing, constructing and perfecting a high-speed automatic engine for electric lighting purposes, and at the time of his death was connected with many business and financial enterprises in Springfield, Ill. He was at that time the senior partner and original founder of the firm of A. L. Ide & Sons, proprietors of the Ide Engine Works, at Springfield; President of the Springfield Electric Light & Power Company; a Director of the Ridgely National Bank, and a Director of the Springfield Consolidated Railway Company. The Ide Engine Works reached phenomenal success and secured wonderful results under his able management, selling the finished product in many foreign countries, as well as throughout the United States. He was a natural genius, a mechanic of the highest order, and met success as a business man, an inventor and a manufacturer. He was the first steam fitter who established himself in business in Springfield and one of his larger contracts was the fitting of the present State Capitol with heating facilities.

Mr. Ide became a resident of Sangamon County in 1843 and was long accounted a leading citizen and representative business man of Springfield. He was one who, under the pressure of necessity and the stimulus of competition, rose to prominence in trade circles in Central Illinois, and in his career exemplified the fact that no country offers the advantages to its citizens as great as those furnished by America. Unhampered by caste or class, the people of this land may rise through the inherent force of character and the exercise of indomitable industry to positions of power and influence, and thus it was that Mr.
Ide became one of the leading representatives of industrial life in Springfield and won the proud American title of a self-made man. The Ide family of which he was a representative, was founded in Vermont in colonial days and was afterward established in Ohio. In the latter State the subject of this sketch was born March 29, 1841, his parents being Henry Harrison and Mary (Stockdale) Ide. The father, also a native of the Buckeye State, came to Sangamon County in 1843, settling on a farm near Williamsville. He there carried on agricultural pursuits through the summer months and in winter season engaged in teaching school. He resided in Sangamon County several years, but there was something attractive to him in pioneer life, as he took pleasure in claiming wild land and improving it for purposes of civilization. This induced him to move farther west, and he went to Sanford, Iowa, where he purchased land and began its development, there carrying on agricultural pursuits until his death. The mother of the subject of this sketch lived in Springfield, and the father was afterward married a second time, his union then being with Mrs. Reynolds, who is also deceasement.

Albert L. Ide acquired his education in the country schools, which were taught by his father near Williamsville. He was about two years of age when brought to the county and he made his home continuously in this locality until called to his final rest. When he had completed his education he entered upon his business career as an apprentice in the machinist's trade in Springfield, the trend of his mind and his native powers all tending in this direction. An incident of his early life showing this is related. While his parents were attending church one Sunday, Mr. Ide, then a small boy, amused himself by boring a hole in a stick of wood, fitting it with a chamber and touch hole, and used this toy cannon by loading it with powder and firing it off in the house. However, the cannon exploded and the flying pieces damaged the plaster of the ceiling, and he was trying to repair it when his parents returned. He also took considerable pride and pleasure in repairing the neighbors' clocks. At the age of fifteen years Mr. Ide entered the shop of Campbell & Richardson, in Springfield, as an apprentice, and as they built steam engines for saw and grist-mills, he thus became familiar with the work which engaged so much of his attention in later life.

At the first call for troops by President Lincoln, Mr. Ide enlisted in the Seventh Illinois Infantry and, at the close of his term of service, became drill master at Camp Butler, remaining in that post one year, when he enlisted as second lieutenant of the Thirty-second Illinois Infantry, finally being honorably discharged for disability after a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Upon leaving the army Mr. Ide clerked in a merchandise store, by diligence and care saving up a few hundred dollars, with which capital he purchased an interest in the jewelry business of Henry C. Meyers, of which he ultimately became the sole owner. After the war he superintended the building and equipment of the Springfield City Railway Fifth Street Line and became President of the company.

In 1870 Mr. Ide engaged in the steam-fitting business in Springfield, and soon after secured the contract for furnishing the heating plant for the new capitol building. In 1876 he purchased from the city the Market House property at the corner of Fifth and Madison Streets, and equipped a more complete and extensive machine shop and foundry than he had before been able to own, and this became the nucleus of the present engine works plant. Many of the large public institutions of Illinois have been fitted with heating and ventilating systems by Mr. Ide. About 1880 his attention became centered upon efforts which were being made to perfect and introduce a commercial and practicable system of electric lighting, and in the interests of this enterprise Mr. Ide visited Mr. Edison at Menlo Park to witness results which had there been accomplished. He discovered that the greatest difficulty encountered was in regulating and governing the engines furnishing the power so that this would not fluctuate and cause unsteadiness, pulsation and variation of the intensity of light. In a few years he accomplished much in studying the leading engines of the country, their use in connection with lighting plants and their various attachments and appliances for regulating power. His subsequent designing, experimenting, and perfecting of his engine resulted in the present product of the plant at which he spent so many active years. Besides the governing mechanism, he developed for his engines a self-oiling system, and in 1886, when he had completed his invention, his engine was named the "Ideal," after the surname of the inventor, with his initials added. This engine rapidly became popular in the trade, and various improvements were afterward added and patented. The trade constantly grew, commanding an enlargement of the plant, and today it is the largest enterprise of the kind in this part of the State. Mr. Ide continued in business up to the time of his demise, when he was also connected with other industries and enterprises of the City.

Albert D. Ide married Miss Adelaide Pierce, who was born in New York, and was the daughter of Simeon Pierce, who followed farming throughout his entire career, and died in Cass County, Va. Five children were born of this union: Harry L., who is a member of the firm of A. L. Ide & Sons; Albert who resides in Chicago; Francis P. and Roy W., who are also connected with the engine manufacturing business; and Chester E., a teacher of music, in Springfield.
Mr. Ide passed away on the 6th of September, 1897. He had never taken a very active interest in politics, but voted the Republican ticket. He was a member of American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Stephenson Post G. A. R., and attended the Second Presbyterian Church. Causes of local improvement elicited his attention and co-operation, and in matters of citizenship he was always progressive and public-spirited. In a business career of industry, integrity and success, he made for himself an honorable name, never incurring an obligation that he did not fulfill or making an engagement that he did not meet. He came to enjoy, in large measure, the respect and confidence of his employes, as well as his acquaintances of social life, and his death, therefore, was deeply regretted by a wide circle of friends. His widow resides in a beautiful home at No. 1535 North Third Street and the sons all own fine residences in that neighborhood.

IDE, Henry, an enterprising and progressive German-American citizen of Springfield, Ill., now living retired from active life and enjoying the rest he has so well earned by years of hard work, has been a resident of Springfield since 1828. He was born in Hessisch Germany, April 28, 1828, the son of John and Mary (Gottschall) Ide, both natives of Germany. The father was a farmer by occupation and served nineteen years in the German Army. In later life he conducted a large sheep ranch, and died at the advanced age of one hundred eight years. He and his wife spent their entire lives in Germany and she died at the age of ninety-five years. They were parents of ten sons and four daughters, of whom all are deceased except Henry, the subject of this sketch. Henry Ide received his education in his native town, attending school until he was fourteen years old, then went to Prussia and drove a team on a pike road there nineteen years. In March, 1850, he sailed from Bremen for America, landing in New Orleans after having spent forty-nine days on the ocean voyage. He came direct to Illinois and worked on a farm near Peoria until 1864, and in that year married Miss Emma Schmidt, of Peoria. He and his wife then moved to Alabama, where he owned and conducted a cotton plantation two years. Mrs. Ide died in 1866 and Mr. Ide then came back to Illinois, taking up the occupation of farming in Sangamon County.

Mr. Ide was married (second) December 19, 1892, to Mrs. Catherine Sauer, who was born in Germany and came to America in 1867, salling from Bremen to Hull, England, and thence to New York on a sailing vessel which occurred in 1843 and she was married before leaving Germany, to Frederick Sauer, who died in 1890. She has lived in Springfield the last thirty-three years. No children were born to Mr. Ide by either marriage. Upon first coming to Springfield Mr. Ide drove an ice wagon for the Stiffer Ice Company, then worked fifteen years for the rolling mills, after which he carried on farming and teaming sixteen years. He still owns a farm near Springfield besides his home at 1516 East Edwards Street, where he has lived for nineteen years.

Mr. Ide is a member of the German Lutheran Trinity Church and in politics is a Democrat. He has been industrious and thrifty all his life and is respected for his honesty and integrity of character. He is well advanced in years but is active and well and enjoys the society of his friends.

ILES, Elijah. (Vol. I, p. 286.)

ILES, Washington Thomas.—There are a number of farmers of Sangamon County who have lived through the various changes in agricultural life, emerging from the time when everything was done in the crudest fashion and the farmer never expected to earn more than a mere living; to the present when operations are conducted along scientific lines, and the earth tills the soil is thoroughly business-like in every respect. One of these men who has become well-to-do as a farmer, and still owns some of the valuable farm land here, is Washington Thomas Iles, residing on Section 14, Woodside Township. He was born in Springfield, April 5, 1833, a son of Washington and Ann (Foster) Iles. Washington Iles, Sr., was born in Kentucky, July 18, 1800, and married in that State. They had nine children, three of whom survive: Anna E., born in 1830, married William H. Bourne, is now a resident of Springfield, her husband being deceased; Elijah Foster Iles, born in 1838, is also a resident of Springfield; and Washington T. Iles. Having enlisted in the Black Hawk War, Washington Iles was impressed with the richness and beauty of Sangamon County through which he passed, and so returned, coming up the Sangamon River on the steamer Tallasman, the only steamer ever run on it. He located in Springfield, becoming the proprietor of a large baggage line, and the main thoroughfare of the city. His brother, Major Elijah Iles, donated the land for South Park, and also that used by the Wabash Railroad Company for their Springfield car shops. This public-spirited and patriotic man died near Springfield, July 4, 1871, and his wife August 25, 1896.

Washington Thomas Iles was educated in the Sangamon County schools and here laid a firm foundation for his future life. Adopting farming as a calling, he has followed it all his life, now owning 250 acres in Sections 13 and 14, Woodside Township. Mr. Iles was married in Butler County, Ky., in 1867; to Emma Jones, born in Bath County, Ky., April 4, 1844, a daughter of James and Mary (Robinson) Jones, and they became the parents of five children as follows: Julia J.; Linnie L., wife of John Norris, born July 14, 1869; Benjamin B., born May 28, 1872; William, born in February, 1874; and George, born April 6, 1879, is deceased. From 1887 to 1890 Mr. Iles was a member of the Grangers and enjoyed his associations with his fellow farmers. He has always been a good farmer, and has developed his land until it is now extremely valuable. Hardworking and thrifty, he has known how to make his labor count for something; and he stands very high in his community as a man in whom implicit trust can be placed by those who have business dealings with him.

INGLEDEW, Thomas, a well-known florist living at 1227 Phillips Avenue, Springfield, is a native of Bristol, Somersetshire, England, born April 20, 1841. He is a son of Thomas and Mary (Kemm) Ingledew, the former of whom was a commercial traveler in the employ of a London wholesale tea house, and when his son was a small boy lived five years near Dublin, Ireland. When the boy was seven years of age the family moved to London, and there he received his education, through private tutors. In May, 1865, Thomas Ingledew came to the United States, landing in New York when the city was draped in mourning for President Lincoln. He lived in New York and Brooklyn for ten years, being employed as hotel clerk and in various other capacities, such as street car conductor, etc., and in 1890 was there married to Miss Mary Ryan, who died in New York. In 1886 Mr. Ingledew located in Springfield, which has been his home ever since. He is honest and industrious and has filled many different positions. He has been in his present business since 1901 and has met with fair success in this line. He is an energetic and faithful worker and an excellent manager, and owns his home at 1227 Phillips Avenue.

Mr. Ingledew has formed many friendships and is popular with his associates. He was married (second) in Springfield, in 1886, to Miss Nettie Miller, daughter of James and Elizabeth (Gabel) Miller, old settlers of Sangamon County and natives of Kentucky. Mr. Miller was a "Forty-Niner" and died in California, and Mrs. Miller in Springfield, Ill. They had four children. Mr. and Mrs. Ingledew have one daughter, Mary E., who married R. F. Best. Mr. Ingledew is a member of the Episcopal Church and in politics is a Democrat.

INGELS, Nathaniel H., was born January 1, 1837, son of William and Parmella (Jacoby) Ingels, and grandson of James Ingels. James Ingels was born November 3, 1779. He was married, October 24, 1799, to Elizabeth Ducker, who was born March 4, 1780. They had children as follows: Mary, born September 10, 1800; Sarah, born October 1, 1801; William, born September 6, 1806; Noah, born November 10, 1805; Nathaniel, born December 31, 1807; Lucinda, born January 28, 1810; Catherine, born February 1, 1812; Clarissa, born December 6, 1813; Ann, born January 6, 1816; Elizabeth, born March 14, 1818; Emily, born July 19, 1820; Ely, born October 27, 1822. By his second wife James Ingels had: James, born July 8, 1826; Joseph, born January 13, 1827. James Ingels, the father, died April 3, 1857, and his first wife, Elizabeth, died October 28, 1822.

William, son of James Ingels, was born September 6, 1803, and died April 13, 1848. He married Parmella Jacoby, born January 28, 1810, and she died February 6, 1877. Their children were Mary E. Pritchard, born April 26, 1830; Sarah J. Pritchard, born February 11, 1832; J. J., born August 25, 1834, died January 22, 1863; Nathaniel N., born January 1, 1837; Clarissa G. It is supposed this family is of Scotch descent, and that their emigrant ancestor was one of a family that came from Edinburg to Philadelphia, Pa., about 1690 or 1700. The sons and daughters moved to different parts of the country, and one descendant, who lived in Pennsylvania, James Ingels, married Mrs. Catherine (Boone) Dehart, cousin or niece of Daniel Boone, and they moved to Bourbon County, Ky., in 1785.

Nathaniel H. Ingels was married, October 2, 1890, to Sarah Bell Lockridge, who was born January 1, 1841, and they became parents of children as follows: Sarah Parmella, born September 27, 1861; William B., born April 20, 1867; Henry G., born January 15, 1865; Frederick L., born April 17, 1866; John A., born May 13, 1869; Jessy N., born February 17, 1872.

INGLIS, Samuel M. (Vol. I, p. 297.)

INGRAM, James.—The present generation can have no conception of the spirit which moved the brave boys of the early 'sixties and sent them off to the front to fight in defense of their country. Only those who went through those trying days know anything about these matters. One of the veterans of Sangamon County, now living retired at No. 1906 South Grand Avenue, Springfield, is James Ingram. He was born in Putnam County, Ind., August 7, 1845, a son of Robert and Margaret (Miller) Ingram, natives of Kentucky and Indiana respectively. The father was a cooper who came from Kentucky to Indiana at an early day, settling near Terre Haute, where he followed his trade, this continuing to be his home until his death. His wife is also deceased. There were five sons and two daughters in the family, those surviving being: James; Oliver of Cuba, Ill., and two sisters living in Oklahoma.

James Ingram was educated in Indiana, and when still a boy, worked in a spoke and hub factory in Vermont, following this occupation for several years, or until he felt that his services were needed by his country. When only nineteen years of age, he enlisted from Fulton County, Ill., in Company D, One Hundred and Fifty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, serving under Colonel Woodall. His regiment was first stationed at Columbus, Ga., being on guard duty the greater part of the time. Returning to Camp Butler, he was discharged, and went back to Fulton County, having done his duty as a soldier. From then until 1807, he followed his trade in Fulton County, but in that year retired coming to Springfield, but is still the owner of property in Fulton County. While living in Fulton County, he was a member of the Joe Hooker Post, G. A. R., and is still a member of Astoria Lodge, I. O. O. F. He has always been a Democrat.

Mr. Hoffman was married in Schuyler County, Ill., in 1875, to Miss Mary Wallace, born in that county, where her parents were early settlers, and he worked at his trade of cabinet making until his death. Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Ingram: Edward, living with his father, and engaged in mining; Inez, at home; Robert and Clyde, both miners; Bruce, William, and Walter, all at home. There are two grandchildren in the family. Mr. Ingram is one of the reliable and substantial citizens of his community, whose probity and general kindness of character have won him respect and confidence.

INSLEE, N. J., a highly respected farmer who owns an estate on Section 5, Cotton Hill Township, Sangamon County, is the only one now surviving of the six children of Joseph and Sarah (Pease) Inslee, and was born six miles south of the city of Springfield, Ill., December 31, 1832. The father was born in October, 1796, and he and his wife were both natives of the State of New York. Joseph Inslee and wife came to Sangamon County in 1818 and located about six miles south of Springfield, where they spent the remainder of their lives. His death occurred in the year 1858 or 1857. He was a blacksmith by trade and he and his wife had four sons and one daughter, all deceased except Newton. Joseph Inslee served three months in the Black Hawk War. The only daughter of this family lived near Mineral Point, Wis. The family were among the earliest settlers of Sangamon County and have always been considered among the most useful and public-spirited citizens of the county. The subject of this sketch has always been ready to promote any cause for the general welfare and has a patriotic feeling for his native county.

In boyhood N. J. Inslee worked on the farm for his father, and when he could be spared attended school in the old log building which is still standing, and which was then fitted with primitive log benches and desks. At the age of eighteen years he took up the occupation of farming on his own account and has since followed it. His first independent farming was done on a farm southwest of what is now known as New City, where he spent three years, and in 1866 he located on his farm, which he purchased in 1865. He owns forty-one and one-half acres of fertile land, which he has developed into an excellent farm, and is known as a kind neighbor and desirable citizen. He is reasonably proud of his family, as is in every way proper, and in his own life has endeavored to keep up to his ideal of what a gentleman and a Christian should be.

Mr. Inslee was married in Sangamon County, May 16, 1852, to Eliza A. Keyes, daughter of Isaac and Mary Keyes, natives of Ohio, who came to Sangamon County in a very early day and located near where Mr. Inslee now lives. The father died there a comparatively young man and the mother died at somewhere near the same time. Five children have been born to Mr. Inslee and wife, three of whom now survive: Mary, wife of John M. Walker, of Sangamon County; Melissa, wife of William T. Dodd, was born in 1858; and they live in the State of Washington; Joseph W., born April 1, 1859, at home. Mrs. Walker was born in 1860. There are seven grandchildren in the family. During the Civil War Mr. Inslee was a member of the Union League. He is a member of the Christian Church, which he joined in 1870. He is a Republican in politics and in 1860 voted for Abraham Lincoln. He was elected School Director in 1858 and held the office two years.

IRWIN, Adolphus Quintin.—The financial standing of a community depends upon the solidity of its banking institutions, and as a result the officers of these institutions must be men of upright character and business reputation. Adolphus Quintin Irwin, Cashier of the Pleasant Plains State Bank, President of the Building and Loan Association, belongs to a family that has long been connected with the financial, business and political life of Sangamon County. He was born in Cartwright Township, December 30, 1864, a son of Amos Dick and Rebecca J. (Plunkett) Irwin, and a grandson of Robert S. and Ruth (Combs) Plunkett, pioneers of Sangamon County who located here in 1820 from North Carolina. The Irwin family is also an old one in Illinois where the general occupation of the family has been that of farming. Mr. Irwin's grandfather was a member of the company commanded by Abraham Lincoln during the Black Hawk War, and was intimately connected with the early history of the State. Adolphus Q. Irwin spent his boyhood on the home farm, going with his parents to Kansas when about five years of age and returning to the farm in 1870. In 1872 the family moved to the village, where Mr. Irwin attended the public school, and in October, 1882, he accepted a position as clerk in a grocery store, later taking charge of the books, and eventually becoming confidential clerk and book-keeper. He continued in that position until 1887, when he took a position as clerk in the grocery store of McCullough Brothers, No. 124 North Fifth Street, Springfield, later becoming book-keeper and finally head clerk. He remained with that concern until June, 1891, when on account of illness he went home, and after recuperating accepted a position in a general store. In 1892 he went West, where he remained for one year, and on his return commenced agricultural operations, with his brother as a partner, so con-tinning for two years, when he went to work for William Lynd, a grocery merchant. In 1806 the stock was sold to John Lehmman, with whom Mr. Irwin continued until the fall of 1904, and in 1905 he accepted a position as book-keeper in the Greene Bank, of Tallula, a private institution. He had full charge of the books there until June, 1906, when he was tendered the position of Cashier of the Pleasant Plains State Bank, which he accepted, and the bank was then incorporated as a State institution. The following officers were elected: Andrew At-erton, President; J. H. Irwin, Vice-president; A. Q. Irwin, Cashier; E. J. Atherton, Assistant Cashier; and A. Atherton, J. H. Irwin, W. S. Rearick, J. F. Tomlin, Isaac F. Tomlin and A. Q. Irwin, Directors. The bank's cash capital is $20,000, and the deposits run as high as $150,000. Knowing the people, he has entire confidence in the institution under its present management.

On June 25, 1903, Mr. Irwin was united in marriage with Frances M. Griffin, who was born in Pleasant Plains July 4, 1876, a daughter of William B. and Malinda (Farris) Griffin, the latter of whom is deceased. Mr. Griffin came from Ohio at an early day and located in Pike County III., there carrying on his trade of waggonmaker until his retirement from active life, since which time he has made his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. S. Hinsley, in Pleasant Plains. Mr. and Mrs. Irwin had one child, Francis Q. Irwin, born April 25, 1905, and another who died in infancy. With Mrs. Irwin he was a leading member of the Presbyterian Church, while Mr. Irwin is affiliated with the Christian denomination. In political matters he is a Republican and for some years has been a member of the Village Board of Trustees. For many years he was Secretary of the Building and Loan Association, and in July, 1906, was elected President of that body. In addition to his various other operations he farms a tract of 110 acres of fine land.

IRWIN, James H., a farmer residing on Section 3, Cartwright Township, and Vice-President of the Pleasant Plains State bank, was born on his present farm, two miles east of Pleasant Plains on the Beardstown Road, Nov. 25, 1855, a son of Alexander Blackstone Irwin and Jane (Broadwell) Irwin. His father was born in Cabarrus County, N. C., February 7, 1814, and was a son of Samuel Lynn and Rachel (Hudson) Irwin. His mother was born January 18, 1826, in Cabarrus County, N. C., and his wife, Rachel Hudson, in Rockingham County, Va., October 15, 1785. The latter was taken by an uncle to Cabar- rus County, N. C., where she and Samuel Lynn Irwin were married, September 23, 1802. They had ten living children born to them in North Carolina, and in the fall of 1818 with their family moved to the part of the country called the Cherokee Purchase, where one child, Robert T. Irwin, was born. Samuel Lynn Ir- win came to Illinois in 1819 and staked out a claim on land which is now located in the north- east part of Pleasant Plains. He then went back to Tennessee to bring his wife and children to the new home that he had found, and returned to his new farm, and finally returned, May 29, 1820. Upon his return he found John B. Broad- well occupying on his claim, having settled dur- ing Mr. Irwin's temporary absence, so Mr Ir- win went two miles farther down Richland Creek and took another claim, which is now known as the B. Lee Purvines farm, where he lived until his death on March 1, 1854. His widow died July 6, 1857. The children of Samuel Lynn and Rachel Irwin were: Hannah, born July 11, 1803, died August 30, 1850; Mary, born January 10, 1805, died October 20, 1852; Jane C., born January 26, 1806, died January 15, 1832; Deborah, born November 7, 1807, died November 26, 1852; William C., born February 7, 1809, died in 1851; James C., born May 6, 1827, died March 18, 1868; and John M., born April 24, 1829, died January 31, 1902.

Alexander B. Irwin married Cynthia Broad- well daughter of John B. Broadwell, October 18, 1832, and settled upon what is now the James H. Irwin farm, where he spent the remainder of his life, with the exception of the last few years, during which time he lived in Pleasant Plains. To this union were born five children: Anna, born December 17, 1824; Hugh B., born August 30, 1812, died October 18, 1852; Alexander B., born February 7, 1814, died September 2, 1894; Ra- chel, born March 26, 1816, died in 1862; Matilda B., born May 10, 1819, died in 1874; and Betsy Jane, born March 19, 1822, died December 8, 1906. James H. Irwin received his education in the district school of his neighborhood, and in the Springfield Business College, remaining on the farm assisting his father until his marriage, at which time his father moved to Pleasant Plains. On April 25, 1883, James H. Irwin was united in marriage, in Sangamon County, to Mary Etta Pur-vines, who was born in Menard County, November 23, 1892, a daughter of Green Lee Pur-vines, a history of whom appears elsewhere in this work. To them five sons were born: Or-mel Blackstone, born March 11, 1884, graduated from the University of Michigan Law School, and is now practicing law at Springfield, Ill.; Harry Clyde, born November 19, 1888, attended the University of Illinois Agricultural College, married Della B. Boynton, daughter of E. D. Boynton, of Pleasant Plains, December 8, 1909, and now resides on a farm at Scranton, Iowa; Emory Quinton, born October 10, 1887, attended the Illinois Agricultural College, married Octovines, born July 14, 1894 and now attending Springfield High School. Mr. Irwin has given his sons a good education, striving to fit them for any position they may be called upon to fill. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Irwin located on the old Irwin homestead where he has since made many improvements and where they still live. In 1901 he erected a commodious dwelling, filling it up in a thoroughly modern manner. His sons have materially aided his efficient management, until it is one of the best in that part of the State. He is also engaged in breeding thoroughbred Poland-China hogs and Hereford cattle. He has found time in the midst of his agricultural duties to fulfill his obligations as a member of the Christian Church, to which he and all the members of his family belong. He is one of eight substantial men who organized the Pleasant Plains State Bank, in 1879, being elected its first Vice President and still retaining that position. His fraternal relations are with the Masonic Order and the Modern Woodmen of America of Pleasant Plains, where his wife belongs to the Eastern Star and the Woman’s Club. She is active in these organizations and also in church and missionary work. In politics Mr. Irwin is a Republican, and although not a seeker for public office, is ever solicitous for the success of his party. Thrifty, hard-working, never neglecting a duty or shirking an obligation, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin have endeavored to rear their children to be useful members of society, and are people of whom any community may well be proud.

Hooker, also fought at Missionary Ridge in the Atlanta Campaign, was captured at the Battle of Jonesboro, Ga., taken to Andersonville Prison and held there seven months and eight days, being liberated when the war was over. In the Battle of Franklin (Tenn.), Mr. Jackaway was wounded on the top of his head by a saber, left on the battlefield for dead and taken to Knoxville, Tenn., by the Confederates, who captured him, and held there seven months. He was mustered out at Came Butler, near Springfield, Ill., having proven a brave and faithful soldier in every way. At the close of the war he resumed farming and is highly respected by all who know him for a man of strict honesty, integrity and industry.

Mr. Jackaway was married at Williamsonville, Sangamon County, to Miss Sarah E. Richard, born in Pike County, Ill., January 14, 1847, daughter of Jelan and Levisa (Coon) Richard, natives of Ohio. Mr. Jackaway and his wife were married December 14, 1865, and became parents of children as follows: John M., born October 16, 1866; William L., March 17, 1868; George J., 1871; Sarah, August 18, 1876; Lillie M., 1878; Mary E., 1885. Mr. Jackaway and his wife are members of the Baptist Church and in politics he is a Republican. He is a member of the G. A. R.

JACKSON, Charles, a member of the Springfield Fire Department, is a native of Jersey County, Ill., born October 15, 1841. He is a son of George and Elizabeth (Brown) Jackson, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of South Carolina. The father was a farmer by occupation and was an early settler of Jersey County, where he spent the last forty years of his life, and the mother died at Jerseyville. They were parents of three sons and seven daughters, and three of their children now survive: Charles is the oldest; Emily, Mrs. Daniel, lives at Jerseyville; George, also of Jerseyville, is Superintendent for the Bell Telephone Company there. The father was educated at West Point.

In boyhood Charles Jackson attended school in Jerseyville, where one of his teachers was a brother of ex-Gov. John M. Palmer. After completing his education he learned the trade of engineer, which he followed at Jerseyville, and when the war broke out he was working as engineer in a distillery there. He enlisted from that city in Company C, Sixty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which was under the command of Col. Fry, and participated in the Battles of Corinth, Parker's Cross Roads, Vicksburg and Shiloh, besides minor engagements. He was mustered out at Springfield.

After the war Mr. Jackson returned to Jerseyville, where he remained until 1866 and then came to Springfield. He first took a position as engineer in a paper mill, where he remained five years, then worked eleven years for the Springfield Woolen Mills. He later worked one year as engineer for the Roberts Laundry Company and one year in the Franklin Building. For the past two years he has been in the employ of the City Fire Department as watchman. He owns the home he occupies and also property in Jerseyville, and is a substantial, reliable citizen. In politics he is a Democrat and he is a member of Stephenson Post No. 30, G. A. R., of Springfield, and Camp No. 454, M. W. A. He is a member of St. Agnes Parish Roman Catholic Church.

Mr. Jackson was married at Jerseyville May 17, 1864, to Annie McBride, who was born in the north of Ireland, daughter of Charles and Rose McBride, natives of that country. Her father eventually settled in Springfield and both he and his wife lived with Mr. and Mrs. Jackson the last years before their deaths. There were several children in the McBride family, all of whom are now deceased. Mrs. Jackson died January 7, 1911, sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. No children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jackson.

JACKSON, John A. (deceased), an honored veteran of the Civil War and for some years a resident near Sherman, Sangamon County, carried on farming in that county for more than thirty years and was well regarded as a useful, patriotic citizen. Mr. Jackson was born in the northern part of Pennsylvania, October 6, 1833, both his parents being also natives of that State. The father, John Jackson, was a farmer and both he and his wife spent their entire lives in Pennsylvania. They were parents of three sons and three daughters.

The country schools of Pennsylvania furnished Mr. Jackson his education and, after his school days, he helped his father on the home farm until coming to Illinois in 1853, he located near Lerro, McLean County, and there engaged in farming, remaining several years. He then spent a short time in the city of Springfield, but later moved to a farm northeast of the city, where he successfully conducted a farm for thirty years and where he spent the last years of his life.

During the early part of the Civil War Mr. Jackson enlisted at Bloomington in Company F, Ninety-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in which he served three years, participating in many battles, including the notable siege of Vicksburg and battle of Corinth. He was once wounded but did not return home until the close of his term, when he spent some years in McLean County. He was a member of the G. A. R. and in politics he was a Republican; he was a Methodist in religious faith, and both he and his wife became active and useful members of the church organization at Sherman. A man of conscientious, reliable character, he endeavored to discharge his full obligations in all relations of life, thus winning the regard and confidence of all with whom he was associated.

Mr. Jackson was married at Bloomington, Ill., August 18, 1860, to Mary J. Ramey, born in Ohio, December 3, 1843, a daughter of John Ramey and wife, both natives of that State. The parents became early settlers of McLean County and lived near Bloomington several years, then moved northeast of Springfield and there resided until their deaths. They were parents of six sons and two daughters, of whom the following are now surviving: James, of Delphi, Ind.; William, of Gibson City, Ill.; John, living on a farm north of Springfield; Edward and George of Springfield; Mrs. Jackson of Sherman, Ill. One son was born to Mr. Jackson and wife, Alfred P., of Sherman, in the employ of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, who married Miss Nancy Hanrick, a native of Illinois, and they have three children: Andrew D., Ethel D. and Violet L. Mr. Jackson died in 1901 and his widow now lives in Sherman where she shares a comfortable home owned by her son.

JACOBS, James A., one of the oldest native-born residents of Sangamon County, Ill., was born on Section 24, Loomis Township, August 4, 1829, a son of Daniel Jacobs, who came to America from Germany when two years of age, and was reared in Kentucky, where his parents settled. His father died young and the boy was afterward bound out to a man named Daniel Spore, with whom he remained until he reached his majority. His birth occurred in Germany in 1795 and he was brought to America in 1807, the family remaining for a short time in Maryland, after which they removed to Kentucky. When he was twenty-one years old Daniel was married to a native of Clark County, and in 1825 they came to Sangamon County, Ill. Arriving in the fall they camped out for about two weeks, when they purchased a claim of eighty acres from an Indian. Mr. Jacobs paid $40 for this land, which contained a small cabin, and into this the family moved late in the same fall. After he had made this purchase, his money being exhausted, the family lived for a time mostly on wild game. He finally procured a load of corn from a Mr. Black, a Kentuckian, who lived on Sugar Creek, and was told to call at any time for corn for feed for his animals or for himself, until he could break land and raise a crop. Mr. Jacobs began improving his farm the next spring, and as five acres had been cleared before he came into possession, he was able to plant early in the following spring.

James A. Jacobs was born in the little cabin on the home farm, and his father entered more land, finally owning 120 acres at one time. In 1831 he erected a house on the land where his son now lives. Following the general rule of early settlers, he first located in the edge of the timber, but afterward bought forty acres of prairie land. This he broke with six yoke of oxen and an old wooden mold-board plow. The forty acres which he improved in 1832 was the first prairie land broken in his part of the county, and people came from ten to fifteen miles distant to see the operation. The prairie grass was as high as the head of a man on horseback. The year of the "deep snow" was one of much suffering for this family, as their cabin was almost covered with the snow for a time. The few fences had been completely covered during the notable fall of snow, which began December 28, 1830.

Daniel Jacobs was proud to witness the rapid development and settling of the community, and was glad to see the school house and church replace the Indian wigwam, or some fine home erected where once had been unbroken prairie. He died in 1882 at the age of fifty-seven years, his widow surviving until 1884, when she passed away at the age of eighty-four years. They were the parents of nine daughters and two sons, and the mother lived to see them all married and located on good farms with comfortable homes. But two now survive. Their children were: Henry W., died in Missouri, about 1873; Mary, married Franklin L. Neal, and both are now deceased; Amanda, married Thomas Wycoff, both deceased; Elizabeth, married Littleton P. Bradley, and both died in Girard, Ill.; Martha, married J. L. Foster, and both are deceased; Isabel, married Stephen Staley, a farmer of Maxwell Township, Sangamon County, but is now deceased; Charlotte, married Washington McGinnis, deceased; Catherine, married Greenbury McGinnis, who lived in Butler County, Mo., both deceased; Susan married H. S. Coley, and both are deceased. Those surviving are: Annis, wife of J. E. Dodd, a farmer of Talkingtown Township, Sangamon County, and James A.

The education of James A. Jacobs was acquired chiefly in the subscription schools of his locality, where his father paid $3 per quarter for him. He learned the "three r's" from a single book, and applied himself to good purpose to his lessons. For more than eighty-one years his home has been on his present farm, where at a tender age he began to practice tinsmithing and the long ox-whip over the heads of four yoke of oxen. In later years he purchased and made use of much modern farm machinery, and became successful through his enterprise and energy.

October 11, 1855, Mr. Jacobs was married to Miss Mary E. Neal, born near her present home, and has spent her entire life on these two farms, making but one move in that time, and that at the time of her marriage. She was born June 24, 1839, a daughter of John A. and Elizabeth (Greening) Neal, both natives of Kentucky, who died in Sangamon County. They began housekeeping in a log cabin, which was well weather-boarded and plastered. In those days an excellent home. They used the tallow dip for many years and when the tallow mold candles came into general use they rejoiced greatly.

Eight children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs, four of whom still survive: Amanda, widow of Thomas Miller, living in Chatham Township; Henry C., a liveryman of Auburn; Alpheus, an undertaker living in Auburn; John, married Ollie Workman, and a full sketch of them appears elsewhere in this volume; Charlotte, deceased, had married Scott McGinnis, of Canton, Ill.; one child died in infancy, and Lizzie died at the age of five and Fred at the age of two years. Mr. Jacobs and his wife celebrated their golden wedding anniversary several years ago.

Mr. Jacobs remembers many incidents of early days in Sangamon County. He then sold his hogs in St. Louis for $1.40 per hundred and wheat at 40 cents per bushel making the trip with an ox-team and driving his hogs, the trip requiring ten to fifteen days. In contrast to this kind of transaction is his sale of bogs for $9 per hundred, and his wheat at $1.07 per bushel, both sold near home. In 1873 the family left their log cabin and moved into their present handsome two story frame house of two stories. Here he has installed a telephone and has all modern conveniences. He rode on the first car on the Wabash Railroad which ran from Bates to Springfield, and which was drawn by mules. He has been very successful in his operations and now owns 360 acres of excellent land, the highest price paid for which was $8 per acre and most of it is now valued at $200 per acre. He has made many of the improvements himself and is considered one of the leading farmers of his locality.

In 1862 Mr. Jacobs joined the Masonic Order in Auburn, later becoming a charter member of Lodge No. 1, Loami. For many years he has been prominent in the organization and has taken seven degrees. He has been identified with the best interests of his town and county since attaining his majority, and in politics is a Republican. During his long life he has never tasted whiskey but once and has never entered a saloon and gambling house. His wife has been a member of the Christian church for the past fifteen years, and while Mr. Jacobs has never joined any church he has contributed generously toward the good work carried on by the religious organizations of his locality, especially when they were preparing to erect a new house of worship. He is hale and hearty, active for his years and appears to be younger than his years. He is always ready to tell a joke or laugh at one, and enjoys telling stories of his youth. His first pair of shoes he obtained when he was nine years old and he took them to bed with him, being very much pleased with his new possessions. The nearest grist mill of that time was in Vandalia. The first mill used by the early settlers was a home-made affair—a piece of tin with holes punched in it, nulled on a board and called a "gritter;" this was used three times a day to produce food for the family.

JACOBS, John.—The Jacobs family has been identified with the history of Sangamon County, Ill., for nearly a century, and a representative member of this prominent family of the present day is John Jacobs, who was born on Section 21, Loami Township, June 1, 1879, a son of James A. Jacobs, a sketch of whom appears in a preceding section of this work, and who was also born on the same farm. John Jacobs was reared on this farm and educated in the district schools. At the age of twenty-two years he was united in marriage with Ollie Workman, who was born in Loami Township, September 26, 1850. After their marriage, which occurred February 12, 1902, they settled on Section 23 of the township where both were born, and this has since been their home. Mrs. Jacobs is a daughter of Stephen and Sarah Workman, the former having died December 15, 1895. Mrs. Workman lives on the home farm. Stephen was a son of Jacob Workman, deceased, whose sketch also appears in this work. Mr. Jacobs and wife are both members of families that have long been well-known and respected in the county, have been identified with the best interests of the community in which they lived, and have always been ready to contribute of their means and influence toward the upbuilding of schools and churches. They are among the large landholders of the county and representatives of the best type of citizens.

Mr. Jacobs and his wife are parents of children as follows: Dorothea Lee, born July 21, 1905; Edrie Magline, born March 4, 1907; James A. Jr., born February 5, 1900 and Stephen S., born February 19, 1911. Mrs. Jacobs is an active member of the Christian Church, and though Mr. Jacobs is not affiliated with any religious denomination, he follows the policy of his father in giving his support to various churches, and is also much interested in the cause of education. He is a member of Lodge 901 I. O. O. F., and in politics is a Republican. He is a practical farmer and stock raiser and operates 170 acres of land, although he owns but sixty acres. He has been successful in his operations and has some Duroc Jersey hogs that are entitled to registration. He is progressive in his ideas and enterprising in his methods. His wife is a pellasant, well educated woman, and they have a very pleasant home. They stand well in local society and have many warm friends.

JACOBS, Taylor (deceased).—The visitor to Sangamon County, viewing for the first time, its fertile lands, well regulated farms, herds of well-fed cattle and general air of prosperity, finds it hard to believe that but a few years ago this section of the country was but a wild waste, principally swamp and timberland. Yet such is the case, and the present excellent condition of the country has been attained only through the untiring labor and perseverence of men of energy and persistent endeavor, who spent their lives in forwarding the development of the section. One of these men, whose lives were spent in agricultural pursuits, was the late Taylor Jacobs, who was born in Sangamon County April 29, 1847, a son of John and Elizabeth (Miller) Jacobs, natives of Virginia.

The parents of Mr. Jacobs came to Sangamon County at a very early date and settled in Cooper Township, where Mr. Jacobs purchased land and became an extensive farmer. Both parents spent the remainder of their lives there, reared a family, and now all are deceased. Taylor Jacobs was educated in the country schools and was brought up as a farmer by his parents, spending his time in the duties of his father's farm and sparing whatever time he could in securing educational advantages. He remained on the home place until his marriage, when he started farming on his own account and developed a good property on Section 14, Cooper Township, where he spent the remainder of his life, with the exception of one year when he lived in the State of Missouri. His widow now has a nice farm of fifty acres in Cooper Township. He was a Democrat in his political belief, and he was a member of the Christian Church, in the faith of which he died August 16, 1865. Mrs. Jacobs is a consistent member of the Methodist Church.

Mr. Jacobs was married at Taylorville, Ill., June 23, 1879, to Nancy E. Colburn, also a native of Sangamon County, who was born July 10, 1851, daughter of William and Eliza (Porter) Colburn, the former a native of Sangamon County and the latter of Iowa. In the early days they located at Loami, Ill., where for a long period Mr. Colburn operated a grist mill, and later went to Cooper Township, where he carried on the same line of business for many years. Both died in Sangamon County. Of their five children, Mrs. Jacobs and a brother, James Colburn, are the only survivors, the latter being a resident of Springfield.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs were born eight children, of whom there are six now living, namely: William, engaged in the teaming business at Taylorville, Ill.; Luther, a farmer of Sangamon County; Ada, the wife of Archie Welch, living on a farm near Mt. Auburn, Ill.; and Lee, Peter and Owen, all living on the fifty-acre farm in Cooper Township. In the family there are eleven grandchildren.

JANSEN, Mrs. Johanna, a lifelong resident of Springfield, was born in that city, May 17, 1854, a daughter of William and Margaret (Bowers) Fulner. Mrs. Janssen has three brothers deceased, one sister living and one deceased. She lived with her parents until she was twenty years of age, when she was married to Mr. Janssen. Mr. Fulner served for a number of years as Sheriff of Sangamon County, and was a man of stability and influence.

Miss Johanna Fulner was married to Harmou Janssen on June 16, 1874, at Petersburg, Ill., and five children were born of their union, namely: Elizabeth, Louis, Marie, Anna and Nellie. Mr. Janssen was a native of Germany and there received his education. He came to the United States at the age of eighteen years, and after coming to Springfield attended high school and was graduated therefrom. He made that city his permanent home and became one of its industrious and respected citizens. He is deceased, but Mrs. Janssen continues to reside there, surrounded by her children and enjoying their affection and companionship. She is a member of Grace Lutheran Church, and is interested in its good work.

JARRETT, Thomas Lewis, an attorney-at-law of Springfield, and a man well versed in his profession, has always been a recognized power in the community. He has been depended upon to conserve the most important interests of the people. During the time Mr. Jarrett has practiced his profession in Springfield, he has been identified with much important civil and criminal litigation and has acquitted himself in a manner to give him a high standing among the legal men of the community. Mr. Jarrett was born July 10, 1872, near Maxwell, Ill., son of Thomas and Flora (Lowry) Jarrett, who still live in Divernon Township, Sangamon County. Thomas Jarrett and his father, William W., were both prominently identified with the interests of the Democratic party in Sangamon County. William W. Jarrett came to the county from Virginia in 1826 and was well known among the pioneers. The family has been well known and prominent in public affairs, therefore, for a long period.

Thomas L. Jarrett attended the district school in his neighborhood, and helped with the work on his father's farm. He applied himself industriously to his studies and secured a teacher's certificate, teaching a short time in the public school at Coddington, near Tallula, Menard County, and with such success that he was called to the position of principal of the schools at Chestnut, Ill., later becoming principal of the schools at Shipman, Ill. He then gratified his ambition by attending Lincoln University, from which institution he was graduated, then afterwards completed a course at the Northern State Normal. He has for many years entertained an earnest desire to study law and for this purpose entered the University of Illinois, and was graduated from the law department of the same with the degree LL. B. Locating in Springfield in 1906, he has rapidly risen in the esteem and confidence of all who had dealings with him, and in 1908, he became a candidate for the nomination for State's Attorney and was considered a strong candidate, but was defeated. He is a man of considerable learning, not only in the line of his profession, but on general subjects, and since he began practice in Springfield, he has been a leader in all movements for the improvement and advancement of legal procedure, in both State and county. He is a man of high ideals in his chosen field and tries to live up to them as near as may be. He is a member of the Presbyterian Church, in which he is a Deacon, and belongs to Springfield Lodge No. 4, A. F. & A. M.

JAYNE, (Dr.) Gershom. (Vol. I, pp. 303-304.)

JAYNE, Dr. William.—No history of Sangamon County, Ill., would be complete without special mention of Dr. William Jayne, who has been a resident of the county since the days of the whipping post, and on numerous occasions has been called upon to fill positions of high honor and trust. Perhaps no man in Springfield has so extensive a knowledge of past conditions, political or financial, and his mind is a veritable mine of information. William Jayne was born October 8, 1826, in Springfield, Ill., a son of Dr. Gershom and Sibyl Jayne. This branch of the Jayne family may be traced back to William Jayne, who was born in Bristol, England, January 25, 1618, served in the army of Oliver Cromwell, and after the restoration of Charles II to the throne, came to America. He died March 24, 1714, and was buried at Setauket, Long Island. His son William, the second in line of descent, was born March 23, 1684, and was the father of Isaac Jayne, born November 22, 1715. Jonathan Jayne, of the fourth generation, was born March 4, 1758, and his son Gershom, born in Orange County, N. Y., October 15, 1791, was the father of Dr. William Jayne.

Dr. Gershom Jayne was educated in New York, where he practiced medicine until 1820, when he came to Illinois his route being down the Ohio River from Pittsburg by flat-boat, and he spent about six months in Southern Illinois before permanently locating in Springfield, then a place of but a few cabins, known as Calhoun. He began the practice of medicine here, and at a time when there was not a physician north of him in the State, and traveling on horseback in the frontier district, successfully practiced his profession for forty-seven years. He lived to the age of seventy-five and one-half years and his wife to the age of seventy years. She bore the maiden name of Sibyl Slater, and was the daughter of Elizah and Elizabeth Slater. Her grandfather lived to be ninety years old. Mrs. Jayne's sister, Julia Marla, acted as bridesmaid to Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, and later became the wife of Ex-Senator Lyman Trumbull; Captain Henry, a brother, served five years in the Union army during the Civil War, and is now a retired physician of Taylorville, Ill.; and Mary Ellen, a sister, died unmarried.

William Jayne acquired his education in the public schools of Springfield, Ill., and in 1843 entered the Illinois College, at Jacksonville, graduating with the class of 1847 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He was one of the founders of the famous Phi Alpha Society and was its first President. For several years Dr. Jayne had his father for preceptor. In 1860 he was elected State Senator for the district composed of Sangamon and Morgan counties, but resigned in 1861 to accept from President Lincoln the appointment as first Territorial Governor of Dakota (then embracing both North and South Dakota), and was Delegate to Congress from that territory, serving two years and then returning to Springfield. In 1869 he was appointed by President Grant to the position of Pension Agent of Illinois, and later was appointed by Governor Oglesby as a member of the committee chosen to complete the new State Capitol. He served as Mayor of Springfield in 1859, 1876, 1877 and 1882, was a member of the Board of Education and Vice President of the Library Board, and was acting President of the State Board of Charities. He is a member of the State and National Medical Associations. Since 1875 Dr. Jayne has been Vice President and a Director in the First National Bank, and is now President of the Lincoln Library.

In October, 1850, at Jacksonville, Ill., Dr. Jayne was married to Julia Wetherbee, who was born in Vermont in 1830 and died in March, 1877. She was a daughter of Seth and Elizabeth Wetherbee, natives of the Green Mountain State who came to Morgan County, Ill., in 1834. There were two children born to Dr. and Mrs. Jayne: William S., born in October, 1851, in 1875 married Margaret Palmer, daughter of Governor Palmer, but who died in May, 1903, leaving four children—Louis, Margaret, Perry and Susan, of whom Perry served in the Spanish-American War and Susan is the wife of George Fish; and Lizzie J., born in July, 1855, married in October, 1878, C. F. Kuechler, and died in 1902, leaving two children, Bessie, a former student in the Chicago School for the Deaf, and William.

Dr. Jayne is a recognized authority on matters of a political nature, and many reminiscences of political history may be found in his article in this work under the caption: "Political Representation."

JAYNE, William, (Vol. I, p. 304.)

JEFFERIES, Naran Allen (deceased), was a member of one of the early families of Sangamon County, being born there August 2, 1828, two years before the "deep snow." His parents located near Springfield and lived on a farm there until their deaths. They were Elias and Rachel (Johnson) Jeffries, natives of Ohio. The former was born in 1800 and the latter in 1805, and they were married March 11, 1824. They were prominent and highly respected residents of Sangamon County and became well known there. They became the parents of three sons, all now deceased.

The education of N. A. Jeffries was acquired in the public schools and in an Ohio college, and after leaving school, he took up farming, which occupation he followed the remainder of his life. In 1849, in company with several other men, he went to California in search of the gold, of which they had heard so much, and several years later returned East, spending some time in Ohio, after which he returned to Sangamon County and took up farming again. He later purchased the farm where his widow now resides and brought it to a high state of cultivation. He was an energetic and industrious man and a very fair degree of success attended his efforts. His farm is located four miles from Springfield, and there his widow now owns thirty acres of good farm land.

Mr. Jeffries was married in 1863 in Springfield, to Ruth J. Weese, who was born in Tennessee, her parents being also pioneers of Illinois, settling in Fulton County in an early day. A few years later they came to Sangamon County, where the father carried on farming until his death. Mrs. Weese died in Fulton County. Four children were born to Mr. Jeffries and his wife, of whom but one survives, John, a farmer of Sangamon County. Mrs. Ruth Jeffries died in 1873. In 1874 Mr.
Jeffries married (second) a sister of his first wife, Mallnda Weese, and of this union one daughter was born, Anna M., who died March 5, 1900, having received an excellent education. She was a musician, poet and artist of considerable talent, and had many friends. Mr. Jeffries died in 1883 and was buried in Strode Cemetery. He left many warm friends and acquaintances and his loss was deeply felt in many circles. He was a member of the Methodist Church and in politics was a Republican.

JENKINS, Chauncey Hobart, attorney at law and (1912) present Judge of the Probate and County Court of Sangamon County, was born near Cuba, Fulton County, Ill., son of David Milton and Mary Jane (Peterson) Jenkins, the former a native of Jefferson County, Ill., and the latter of the State of New Jersey. The parents of David M. Jenkins came to Jefferson County, Ill., in 1826, where their son was born in 1832, but in 1834 they moved to Waterford Township, Fulton County, Ill. In 1852 David M. made the trip from Pekin, Ill., overland to Sacramento, Cal., and for three years prospected for gold in that region. Then he returned to Fulton County, and in 1855 was married to Mary Jane Peterson, after which he engaged in farming which continued to be his vocation, but is now living in retirement in his advanced years. He was a member of Company I, One Hundred and Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Captain Wright, and was twice wounded, first at the battle of Missionary Ridge in November, 1863, and later at Resaca, Ga., in 1864. He served from the organization of the company until it was mustered out. Mr. and Mrs. David Milton Jenkins have seven children.

Chauncey H. Jenkins, the subject of this sketch, received his primary education in the common and high school at Cuba, Ill., during the winter, alternating his training in the schools by working on the farm during the summer season. Later he entered the Michigan University at Ann Arbor, that State, taking a literary course and later studying law, graduating from the latter department in the class of 1907. He was soon afterward admitted to the bar, and establishing himself in the practice of his profession in the city of Springfield, has there met gratifying success. He is a Republican in politics, in 1908 was chosen a Justice of the Peace, and in 1910 was selected as the Republican candidate for Judge of the Probate Court, to which position he was elected in November following.

Judge Jenkins was married, April 27, 1911, to Miss Ella McRoberts, who was born at Sherman, Sangamon County, and their residence is at 623 South Fifth Street, Springfield. He is also an active member of several fraternal orders, and the progress he has made in his profession since coming to Springfield furnishes abundant evidence of his ability and personal popularity.

JENKINS, William.—The Welsh have always been noted for their sturdy honesty and thrifty habits, and they retain these characteristics even coming to this country. However, that many people of this county show. One of the Welsh-Americans living in Sangamon County is William Jenkins, of Section 21, Cooper Township. He was born in Wales, July 27, 1840, a son of William and Margaret (Griffith) Jenkins. The elder William Jenkins was in the service of the British army for a number of years, but later became a farmer, and spent his life in Wales. He gave his children good educations, and then had them go to work.

William Jenkins, the younger, worked at whatever came in his way, and for five years was a member of the militia, being compelled to drill twenty-eight days each year. While in Wales, he married a wife and five children, took passage on a steamer at Liverpool, on May 6, 1871, for America. Landing in New York they made their way at once to Sangamon County. Here Mr. Jenkins found employment by the mouth on a farm owned by a Mr. Brown, near Dawson. For three years, he continued to work in this fashion, and then began farming for himself, on rented land in Cooper Township. Later he went to Christian County, but returned to Cooper Township, where in 1892, he bought his present farm of 153 acres on Section 21. In connection with its operation, he has farmed other land to the extent of thirty-four acres, and is one of the most successful farmers of Sangamon County. He has also devoted considerable attention to stock-raising.

Mr. Jenkins was married to Mary Evans, also born in Wales, and their children were as follows: Jennie, wife of Benjamin Barnes of Springfield; John, a farmer of Cooper Township; Maggie, wife of William Everger, a farmer of Rochester Township; Charles, a farmer; Anna, wife of Ole McMara of Chatham; and David, a farmer, all living, while the following are deceased: Edward, who was killed by lighting on the day of the St. Louis tornado, when twenty-three years old, and was buried in the Mechanicsburg cemetery; Lizzie, married and died in the Springfield hospital, October 17, 1902; two younger children died in infancy; Wm. T. Jenkins enlisted in Company A, Sixth California Infantry, United States Volunteers, under Captain Charles H. Dasher, and Lieutenant George L. Dall, and died in Balzersville, Cal. April 1, 1905, aged forty-one years, four months and twenty days. His widow survives, making her home in California. There are thirteen grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Jenkins and his sons are Republicans, and earnestly support the candidates of that party. They are honorable and upright, never shrinking from hard work or civic duty, and are among the best citizens of Sangamon County.

JERALD, Clarence H., a veterinary surgeon of Springfield, Ill., having an office and hospital on East Washington Street, has built up a good practice in his profession and won the confidence and esteem of his patrons. Dr. Jerald was born in Jacksonville, Ill., May 18, 1877, son of Nathaniel and Hester J. (Picket) Jerald. The father was a son of O. F. Jerald, a native of Co-hasset, Mass. Clarence H. Jerald was one of two children. He attended schools of Jacksonville, then took a course in Peoria Business College, after which he took a veterinary course at the Ontario Veterinary College. He practiced his profession in various locations and in 1903 came to Springfield, and has continued in the practice of his profession ever since, his office being located at 225 West Washington Street. He has won an excellent reputation for skill and efficiency in his chosen field of work and stands well among his fellow-practitioners. He served several months as City Veterinarian. He was reared in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church and fraternally is affiliated with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. His is a man of good principles and is considered a public-spirited, useful citizen, who has the best interests of the city and community at heart.

JOHNSON, Francis S.—The business interests of Springfield are many and varied and the men engaged in operating the several lines of activity find this one of the best centers in the State. Francis S. Johnson, photographer and coal operator, is one of the sound, successful and progressive business men there, who, not content with his advancement in one line, has branched out in another. He was born in Saline County, Mo., September 6, 1865, a son of Henry and Rose A. (Martin) Johnson. Henry Johnson was a farmer and blacksmith, who in 1849 joined a company of fifty wagons on the way to California. As he was a superior shot, he was engaged by the company to secure their game, and provided the entire company with all they needed during the long trip. He was then considered one of the best shots in the State of Missouri. Although so successful as a hunter, Mr. Johnson failed in his search for gold in the promised land, and returned a year or so later, to resume his farming and blacksmithing. This most excellent man died on his farm in Saline County in 1903, after a long and useful life.

Francis S. Johnson attended the high school of Marshall, Mo., and then clerked at Higginsville, Mo., and Erie, Kansas. On September 4, 1904, he came to Springfield and opened a photograph gallery, immediately becoming popular on account of the superior quality of his work. At present he has one of the best galleries in the city and does a large business. He has been equally successful in his operations in coal lands in Kentucky.

Mr. Johnson is a member of the Methodist Church and his political convictions make him a Democrat. He is a pleasant, affable gentleman, and one whose courtesy and polish make him a favorite wherever he goes. His business acumen is well developed and he would doubtless succeed in whatever he attempted.

JOHNSON, James D.—When the evening of life comes upon him, it is fitting that man should rest from the labors which have claimed his earlier years and made heavy demands on his energies. The duties of the more strenuous life should be put aside and a rest from further toil and care enjoyed. This has been vouchsafed to Mr. Johnson because of his business activity in the past, and he is now living in honorable retirement at 625 Wood Avenue, Springfield, one of the worthy and esteemed residents of the Capital City. James D. Johnson was born January 7, 1837, in Christian County, Kentucky. He is a son of James D. and Martha Elizabeth (Bradley) Johnson, his father was born in Virginia and his mother in Kentucky. Her parents were natives of Kentucky and were among the prominent people of that State, being large slave holders. Grandfather Johnson was in the war of 1776, and was a resident of Virginia. Grandfather Bradley was a native of Kentucky and came to Illinois in the early pioneer days following farming. Mr. Johnson was educated in Kentucky, in an old log school house. His childhood was passed on his father's farm, where he remained until he was thirteen years of age, and then came to Macoupin County, where he farmed for about two years, leaving that place, he came to Christian County, and lived for many years, making that his home.

At the time of the outbreak of the Civil War, he watched with interest the progress of events in the South, and noted the threatening attitude of a number of the Southern States, resolving that if an attempt was made to overthrow the Union, he would strike a blow in its defense. Therefore, in 1862, Mr. Johnson enlisted in Company A, at Camp Butler, Ill. He served two and one-half years and received an honorable discharge in December, 1864, at Quincy, Ill. He took an active part in the battle of Chickamauga, September 20, 1863, was seriously wounded in that battle, and was sent to the hospital, at Louisville, Ky., where he had his arm amputated. He was also in the battles of Chattanooga, Franklin and many skirmishes, under General Beard. He guarded trains from Nashville to Franklin and had many engagements with the Guerillas. His military record was most commendable and honorable; he gained the confidence, good will and respect of all whom he associated with during the long sanguinary struggle. Mr. Johnson's service embraced action in many of the most hotly contested engagements of the Civil War; he was often in the thickest of the fight regardless of his own personal safety, and inspiring his fellowmen by his courage and daring. He is today a prominent member of the G. A. R.

Mr. Johnson was united in marriage in Taylorville, Ill., October 6, 1859, to Nancy J. Hayward. She was born in Christian County in 1841, a daughter of Robert Hayward, born in Connecticut. He came to Christian County in the pioneer days and followed farming. Her mother, Indianame, was born on the road from Indiana to Illinois in the early days, hence the name. Her parents were natives of Indiana. To this union nine children were born: William H., born in Christian County, July 25, 1861, married and lives in Great Falls, Mont., has four children, one daughter Essie and three sons.—Earl, Olin and Gerald; George L., born in Sangamon County, died November 4, 1896; Elma, lives in North Dakota, married, had one daughter, Elma, who lives in North Dakota; Cyrus E., born in Christian County, January 1, 1878, married, has two boys.—Orville and Elmer,—lives in Idaho; Oscar D., born in Christian County, March, 1880, married and has four children.—Russell, Genevia, Ruth and Esther,—lives in Idaho; Omer E. born in Christian County, February, 1883, married and has three children,—Harold, Ernest and Lulu,—lives in Canyon County, Idaho; Mary, deceased, born in Christian County; Myranda, deceased, born in Christian County; Eliza Catherine, born in Christian County, married William Pierratt of Sangamon County, has two children,—Roy and Clarence; Luis M., born in Christian County, married to John W. Buddenhagen of Lockport, N. Y., lives in Springfield, Ill., has two children,—Harold, born August 23, 1906, and Helen, born December 25, 1907.

Mr. Johnson has been one of the best known stockmen in Sangamon and Christian counties, and Southern Illinois, having been in that business for thirty years, beginning when this was all grazing land, and only one railroad, the Wabash, which ran on wagon tires. He has used wood mold board plows with which he cultivated his fields. Mr. Johnson enjoyed a staunch friendship with President Lincoln, and his first vote was cast for him. He was always a Republican and has always taken an active part in politics. While Mr. Johnson is a member of the Methodist Church, he has many friends in all denominations. Perhaps one of his most marked characteristics is his loyalty which is manifested in his citizenship, and in all his social relations as well as his home life. In his family, he is generous, kind and loving, manifesting all the attributes of a devoted husband and father. He has a charming personality and enjoys the highest respect of his fellowmen.

JOHNSON, James P.—The change in land values in Illinois during the past thirty or forty years has been remarkable; the discovery of coal and oil have not only done their share towards sending up the prices, but have attracted vast industries from other parts of the country; eager to secure suitable locations for their plants and factories. None have been in a better position to note these changes than those who have dealt in real estate during this period, and one who has watched the values range year by year, for over a third of a century, is James P. Johnson, of No. 323 South Spring Street, Springfield, who has been a resident of the Capital City for over twenty years. He was born at Athens, Athens County, Ohio, June 30, 1844, a son of Henry M. and Margaret (Campbell) Johnson, a grandson of Andrew Johnson.

Henry M. Johnson was a native of Ohio, a tailor by occupation, and in politics first a Whig and later an ardent Republican. In 1849, coming to Illinois with a team and bringing his family, he had reached a point in Jersey County, when his horses in some manner got away and found their way back to the old home in Ohio. They were promptly returned by an uncle, who rode horseback the entire journey for that purpose. Mr. Johnson located at Jerseyville and worked at his trade some years, but later removed to Virden, where he lived until 1864 and then went to live with a daughter, Mrs. Wyatt, where his death occurred in 1908, when eighty-seven years old. Mrs. Johnson passed away in Virden in 1883, when forty-eight years old. They were the parents of five children, namely: James P.; John, Samuel and William, all deceased; Ada, deceased; and Maggie, Mrs. Charles E. Wyatt, of Springfield. Samuel was a scout with Gen. Crook.

James P. Johnson was five years old when the family came from Ohio, and his education was secured in the schools of Jerseyville, Ill. When seventeen years of age he accompanied his parents to Virden, and in August, 1862, when not quite eighteen years of age, enlisted for three years as a private of Company H, One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment, Illinois Infantry, Second Division, Second Brigade, Sixteenth Army Corps, and with this company took part in numerous battles, marches and skirmishes. At Trenton, Tenn., he was captured by guerrillas and was about to be hanged—indeed the noose had already been thrown around his neck—when the timely arrival of Union troops allowed him to escape, but only for a time, for while making his way back to his command he was again captured, this time by General Forest, and was taken to Parker’s Cross Roads. After the battle at this point he was paroled and sent to Benton Barracks, and when orders came to exchange all prisoners he was sent back to his regiment, then stationed at Corinth, Miss. He next participated in the battle of Paducah and at Nashville, and finally in the last battle of the war, at Mobile. Mr. Johnson, who was the second tallest man in his company, had a war record that was second to none and his honorable discharge took place at Mobile on August 10, 1865. On his return to Illinois he engaged in farming for a time and then established himself in the real estate business in Macoupin County, whence he came to Springfield in 1880. He owns several valuable pieces of property, including a farm of forty-one acres located near Chatham Square, and he has engineered some of the largest deals in real estate that have taken place here during the last two decades.

Mr. Johnson was married in February, 1866, to Miss Catherine Lumsden, a member of an old pioneer family of Virden, and a daughter of James Lumsden, of Scotch nativity, and Mary (Utt) Lumsden, whose brother, John Utt, sank the first coal shaft in Macoupin County. To Mr. and Mrs. Johnson there were born three children: Carrie, who married Horace Brooks; Bert, who is engaged in farming; and Myra, who died at the age of sixteen years. The son is a member of the Masons and the Odd Fellows. Mr. Johnson is a member of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, and in politics is a Republican. In addition to being a popular comrade of Stephenson Post No. 30, Grand Army of the Republic, he is connected with the Woodsmen.

JOHNSON, John, a miner living at 1213 Ledle Avenue, Springfield, is a representative and public-spirited citizen, and has lived in his present home, which he owns, for the past 38 years. He was born in County Westmeath, Ireland, January 14, 1836, and is a son of Michael and Julia (Coffey) Johnson, both natives of the same county. He received his education in the country schools near Dublin and afterwards worked on a farm. The parents spent their entire lives in Ireland. They had three sons and two daughters, all of whom are deceased except the subject of this sketch. One brother served in the Fourteenth English Regiment in the War with Russia, and was killed in service.

As a young man John Johnson worked on a railroad near Dublin, and in 1852 came to America, landing in Portland, Me. He at once came West, stopping a short time in Chicago, then came on to Springfield. He lived two years at Riverton, Ill., worked one year as a wood-chopper in Macoupin County, in 1865 moved to Oakland, Christian County, where he spent a short time on a farm. He then went to Louisiana and began working on a boat that ran from St. Louis to Lake Providence, remaining there until 1867, when he returned to Springfield and began working on the reservoir, which stands in the northeast part of the city. He spent a short time farming, was engaged in mining fifteen years, in teaming another fifteen years, then returned to mining and has followed this occupation since. Mr. Johnson has always been of honest, industrious habits and character, and has the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has had dealings. He is a member of St. Joseph’s Parish, Roman Catholic Church, and in politics is a Democrat. He was a member of the old Volunteer Fire Depart-Steffen, of Springfield; Mrs. Mary Speidel, of Quincy, Ill., and Otto, of Springfield. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have had five children: Otto C., Paul, Ella C., Carrie, and Wilbert N. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Lutheran Church, as are all the family. He is a Republican and has served as School Director for a number of years, as well as Highway Commissioner one term. He is one of the most responsible men of his locality and enjoys unlimited confidence and esteem from his neighbors.

JOHNSTON, James H., a veteran of the Civil War and a highly respected citizen of Illiopolis, Ill., was born in Richmond, Va., February 16, 1837, a son of John Johnston, a native of Scotland, who was a brickmason by trade. The father came to America in an early day and located in Richmond, where he lived for several years, then moved to Illinois and located near Danville, Vermillion County, but later returned to Virginia, where his death occurred. His youngest child, James H., subject of this sketch, is the only survivor of the family. The latter began his education in Richmond and continued it in Vermillion County. He learned the business-making trade in boyhood, worked at it a short time and then learned the trade of barber, at which he worked several years. At the time of the gold fever he went to California and remained several years prospecting. He returned to Illinois and later to Richmond, where he remained but a short time, then coming back to Sangamon County. He later lived in Springfield about a year, about a year in Logan County, and conducted a barber shop for over thirty years in Illiopolis, Ill. He suffered a paralytic stroke in 1900 and since then has lived retired from active business.

Mr. Johnston enlisted in Company C, Twenty-third Volunteer Infantry, as a musician, and served the remainder of the war. He took part in the battle of Gettysburg and many other notable engagements, and was wounded once. He discharged his duty with credit to himself and his company, and won the respect and esteem of his comrades. He is a Democrat in politics and a member of the Methodist Church. He has been successful in business and owns a comfortable home in Illiopolis. He draws a good pension and, though in poor health, is contented and happy, and wants for nothing. He has many friends and enjoys the good will of his neighbors and acquaintances.

Mr. Johnston was married, in Sangamon County, October 20, 1868, to Hester A. May, a native of the county, who was born May 10, 1851, daughter of Anderson W. May, a native of Ohio, who came to Sangamon County at an early age, and spent the remainder of his life on a farm near Rochester, where his death occurred, December 24, 1873. His wife who was born in Clermont County, Ohio, died April 20, 1904. Eight daughters were born to Mr. May and wife, of whom three survive besides Mrs. Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston had eleven children, of whom five are now living: John E., of Denver, Col.; Nora, wife of Charles Romick, of Whitehouse, Ohio; Fred R., of Decatur, Ill.; Bessie, wife of Charles Benvenuto, of Niantic, Ill.; Emil M., at home, teaching school near Lowder, Ill. There are four grandchildren in the family.

JONES, Elijah.—The highest meed of admiration is given to the veterans, even when the most selfish of times are at hand, because of the fact that they proved themselves ready to give up their lives for an unselfish love of country, and devotion to their flag which waved above them. The good soldier, although stimulated by his patriotism, suffered untold agony, and to his eyes, dimmed by pain, the glory of conflict did not appear nearly as great as the soothing realization that he had done his full duty, and exhibited him and his comrades in courage. One of the honored veterans of Springfield is Elijah Jones, Senior Vice Commander of Stephenson Post, No. 30, Grand Army of the Republic. He is now living retired at No. 517 Governor Street, Springfield.

Mr. Jones was born January 1, 1842, in Barron County, Ky., a son of John and Margaret Jones (Wilson) Jones, the latter being the second wife of Martin Jones. While residing in Kentucky, Martin Jones was a slave owner, but on account of his views and the subject of slavery, left that State and came to Illinois. A few years later he returned to Kentucky, where he married, but in 1852 returned to Illinois, locating at Mattoon. Mr. Jones was married three times, first to Miss Webb. After the death of his second wife, Lucy Wilson, he married Nancy Chandler. In 1861, he retired from active labor, although he resided on the farm with his son until his demise in 1867. He was the father of fifteen children, of whom Elijah Jones is the youngest.

The educational advantages of Commander Jones were limited to ten months in Kentucky, and several winter sessions in Illinois, and at the same time he did a man's work on the farm. On July 13, 1861, he enlisted for three years in the First Illinois Cavalry, and re-enlisted as a veteran, January 1, 1864, in Company A, Fifty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, being made a corporal of his company. At the first battle, Lexington, Mo., he was taken prisoner. He was wounded in a skirmish while crossing the river from Little Rock, by a minie ball, in the left leg. At the time, it was thought he had recovered sufficiently to join his regiment and he participated in the second fight at Corinth; was in the Siege of Vicksburg, the taking of Little Rock, and other less important engagements. He was finally mustered out and honorably discharged in October, 1865, after four years and three months' service.

Returning home, like many others, he resumed farming, but two years later opened a grocery at Mattoon, conducting it for three years. For the next two years, he was a commercial traveler, finally coming to Springfield in 1883, in connection with the State Board of JONES, George W., a prominent citizen of Riverton, Ill., and a civil employe of the Civil War, has lived in Riverton for the past forty-four years. He was born in Prince George County, Md., October 17, 1844, a son of Charles B. and Ann (Wilson) Jones, both natives of Maryland. The father was a farmer and machinist, and both he and his wife died in their native State. They were parents of six sons and four daughters, and seven children are now living, all in the East except George W. The father was of Welsh parentage.

George W. Jones received his education in his native county and in his boyhood, worked for a time in a machine shop. At the time of the war he went to Washington and secured a position driving a wagon for the Government, going to the front and serving in this post nine months. He was at Fredericksburg, Va., at the time General McClellan was in front of Richmond. From Fredericksburg he went to Washington and secured employment with the Government in that city. He remained at this post until ten months prior to the close of the war, when he became a member of an army construction corps, serving in that capacity until the close of the struggle.

He next secured a position as wagon master and took charge of a wagon train for the Government which started from Washington in the fall of 1865 and came over the old National Road to Springfield, going through Frederick, Md., Columbus, Indianapolis and Terre Haute. At Springfield the outfit was sold by the Government. At that time the Leland hotel was in course of construction and he secured a position on this building for a short time. He was also for two or three years connected with the Riverton Coal Company and other coal mining companies as engineer, and is at present employed as engineer for the Springfield Coal Mining Company.

Mr. Jones has always been active and energetic and has made good use of his opportunities to better himself and promote the interests submitted to his care. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs, and in politics is a Republican. He has the esteem and confidence of his townsmen and has served on both the Town and School Boards for a number of years. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen and has a large number of friends. Four sons and two daughters were born to Mr. Jones and his wife, and four of their children still survive: George E. of Joliet; Ellis, also of Joliet; Hillary and Stella, at home. There are also two grandchildren in the family.

Mr. Jones well remembers Abraham Lincoln, having frequently seen him in Washington and in Frederick, Md., during the war.

JONES, Oscar D.—Some of the farmers of Sangamon County have so prospered in their operations that they are able to retire from active labor and live in ease and comfort. One of the men who have enjoyed competent success from his farm land is Oscar D. Jones, who was born in Louisa County, Va., November 21, 1850, a son of David G. and Mary (Walker) Jones, both being born in the same county as their son. The father was a farmer and never came west, his death occurring in 1857. During the War of 1812 he was a brave and loyal soldier. His father, the grandfather of Oscar D. Jones, was born in England and was a Revolutionary soldier. The mother died in 1902. By the first marriage of David G. Jones there were the following children: Langdon; Spottwood; Mary, wife of James Williams, a farmer; Jane, wife of David Burnham of Illinois; and Caroline. By his second marriage there were these children: Nannie; Oscar D.; and Mattie, wife of Frank Stewart, lives at Berkard, Ill.

After receiving a good common school education, Oscar D. Jones worked for his father on the farm, until he was twenty-two years old. At that time he came to Fancy Prairie, Menard County, Ill., and spent fifteen years farming. In 1905, he came to Springfield, building his beautiful two-story residence on two acres of land. In addition to this he owns a large tract of land which he leases, and is in very comfortable circumstances.

On June 8, 1894, Mr. Jones was married in Louisa County, Va., by the Rev. J. J. Roads of the Methodist Church, to Sallie Boyd, born in Louisa County, Va., July 6, 1876. Her father survives, but her mother died February 15, 1905. Mr. and Mrs. Jones became the parents of the following children: Edith Virginia, born March 30, 1905, and Mary Louisa, born February 8, 1907. In politics Mr. Jones is a Democrat. He belongs to the Methodist Church and is one of its most loyal supporters. All his life Mr. Jones has endeavored to live according to his faith, and has not only succeeded in business, but has attached many friends to him because of his kindly nature and ready sympathy.

JOHNS, Owen W. of Mechanicsburg Township, Sangamon County, has spent his entire life on the farm he now owns and occupies, where he was born, March 9, 1868. He is a son of E. W. and Margaret A. (Campbell) Jones, the former born at Wheeling, W. Va., and the latter near Frankfort, Ky., he a son of William Jones, and she a daughter of J. J. Campbell, of Kentucky. The grandfather was a soldier in the Union army, and after the Civil War came to Charleston, Ill., later locating in Mechanicsburg Township. The father of Owen W. Jones located in Clear Lake Township, was married in Springfield in 1862, then purchased a farm in Mechanicsburg Township, which he cleared and improved. He originally had fifty-one and three-fourths acres, all in timber, but added to his land from time to time until he owned seventy-two acres. He died on this farm March 4, 1907, and his widow died in August, 1908. They were parents of children as follows: J. J., of Mechanicsburg; Owen W.; Eva, Mrs. Fred Cass, of Buffalo Hart Township.

JOHNS, Samuel T.—Samuel T. Jones, better known as "Thorn Jones," needs no special introduction to the readers of this book, not only because at the present time he is serving his third term as Clerk of the Circuit Court of Sangamon County, but also because he has been one of the leading representatives of the stock-raising interests in Illinois. In this connection he has gained a wide reputation, and his reputation extends beyond the boundaries of the State.

Mr. Jones was born in Logan County, Ill., on March 7, 1850 and at eleven months old was brought to Sangamon County by his parents, John R. and Mary A. Jones of Williamsville, this county. He acquired his education in the public schools of Williamsburg. In 1877 spent one year as a student in the State Normal at Emporia, Kan. In 1878, in order to still further advance his education, he matriculated in the Wesleyan University at Bloomington, Ill., where he pursued a scientific course covering four years being thus well equipped for important and responsible duties in business life. From that time S. T. Jones has been industriously and actively connected with live-stock breeding, the raising of both horses and cattle, and he is to-day considered among the leading live-stock judges of the State.

In connection with his brother, M. E. Jones, he carried on an extensive stock-raising business, making a specialty of pure bred stock. They were breeders of registered shorthorn cattle, made displays of their stock only at National and State Shows, and at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago they showed three herds, two pure bred and one grade herd, taking first and second prizes on pure bred two years old, first on pure and second on grade, and second on pure bred calves, first on grade two years old steer, second on grade yearling steer and first on grade calf, sweepstakes on two-year old, yearling and calf, pure bred, and grand sweepstakes, open to all ages and breeds, on the steer Banner Bearer. All of these animals were bred on the Jones farms. Mr. Jones also bred the dam and granddam of Banner Bearer. At the close of the Columbian Exposition in 1893 he sold his interest to his brother, who still conducts a large stock business. A few years later he entered the employ of J. F. Feather and Company (bankers) in the capacity of assistant cashier. There he remained until elected to the position he now holds, being the only Republican elected to that office in over forty years.

Samuel T. Jones' father, John R. Jones, was born in Louisa County, Va., December 18, 1827, and is of Welsh descent. His paternal great-grandfather came to this county from Wales at an early day. His father, Samuel Jones, was also a native of Louisa County, Va., and a son of Henson Jones. The former grew to manhood in that county and married Lucy Desper, a daughter of Isom Desper, who was also a representative of an early Virginian family. John R. Jones' father moved to Ohio in 1831 locating in Ross County, that State, and died in 1845, his wife dying in 1841. John R. Jones married Miss Mary A. Talbott January 24, 1856. She was born in Ohio, of which State her parents, Thornton and Louisa (Welch) Talbott were natives.

On the 22nd day of January, 1884, in Willamsville, Samuel T. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Annabell Brittin, a daughter of Evans E. and Elizabeth (Ridgeway) Brittin. Her grandfather, Evans E. Brittin, Sr., was born October 28, 1791, in Buck County, Pa. His mother moved to Virginia and from there to Ohio in 1800. He was married in 1818 to Mary J. England and they established their home in what is now Sangamon County. They had eight children, of this number Evans E. Brittin, Jr., being fifth in order of birth. He was born November 20, 1829, and married Melissa Ann Brittin, August 26, 1852. After her death he wedded Elizabeth Ridge-way, and unto them five children were born, Annabell, the first, being born January 22, 1862. Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Jones have two daughters, Grace and Mabel, who now reside with their parents.

Fraternally, Mr. Jones is a member of the Bott Lodge of Masons in Williamsville; Sangamo Lodge of Perfection, Fourteenth Degree, in Springfield; Orleual Consistory of S. P. R. S., Thirty-second Degree Masons, Chicago; Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Chicago; Benevolent Protective Order of Elks; Modern Woodmen of America; The Court of Honor; Yeomen of America, and is a member of Sangamo Club and the Chamber of Commerce, Springfield, Ill. He has ever been reliable in business and throughout his business career he has followed progressive methods. The same characteristics have been manifest in his official service and have made him one of the worthy representatives of the public affairs in Sangamon County.

JORDAN, Mrs. Elsie P.—Some of the most prosperous landowners of Sangamon County are women who have inherited their property from father or husband, and being left in charge of affairs, display a creditable amount of business sense and ability in attending to them. One of these is Mrs. Elsie P. Jordan, widow of the late Marion A. Jordan, who was born in Sangamon County, near Glenarm, uow her home, Jan. 30, 1852, being a daughter of Josiah Lard. The latter was born in Missouri, May 19, 1819, and was a farmer by occupation, coming to Illinois with his parents in 1836. On September 22, 1842, he married Jenina Jane Crowder, born in Hardin County, Ky., June 5, 1826, but brought to Sangamon County by her parents in 1833. There were six children in the Lard family: John J., Lydia A., Sarah L., Elsie P., George R. and Martha A. His first wife dying, Mr. Lard married, in 1855, Millie Funderburk, born in 1835.

Mrs. Jordan was educated in Ball Township, remaining at home until her marriage to Thomas H. Jackson, in Springfield, Ill., September 9, 1873. He was born in Scott County, Ill., May 10, 1853. They settled on a farm in Ball Township, and lived there until the death of Mr. Jackson, on May 11, 1882. His remains are interred in Stout Cemetery. The children born of this marriage were: Norn, born February 8, 1875, died in October, 1878, and two who died in infancy, while those living are: William H., born May 30, 1878; Minnie J., born February 16, 1880, and Thomas A., born June 3, 1882, all still at home. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Jackson continued for a year on the farm, then moved to Springfield where she spent two years. There she was married by Judge Matthews to Marlon A. Jordan, on January 11, 1886. Moving back to the farm, they remained on it until 1888, when they came to Glenarm, where Mr. Jordan went into the grocery business continuing until his death, January 30, 1894. He was buried in the same cemetery as her first husband. There were three children by the second marriage: Marie, born October 27, 1887, married Edward Newlin, May 8, 1905, and they live in Los Angeles, Cal.; Bessie M., born October 3, 1890, is at home as also is Orlo A., born May 21, 1894. Mrs. Jordan still conducts her husband's grocery stores, one of two fine farms in Sangamon County. She is a lady of exceptional business ability, and under her able care, the grocery maintains the same standard as when Mr. Jordan was alive. At the same time she has found time to cultivate fraternal associations, belonging to the Court of Honor, District Court No. 328, and the Royal Circle No. 316, both of Glenarm. Her husband was a member of the Modern Woodmen. She is one who makes friends everywhere and is loved by a wide circle of appreciative friends, who appreciate her excellent qualities and admire her business acumen.

JORDAN, Jacob, an honored veteran of the Civil War, is a retired farmer and well-known citizen of the village of Chatham, Ill., Mr. Jordan was born in Anderson County, Ky., where he was reared and educated, and in boyhood learned the details of farming, which he adopted as an occupation when he started out in the world for himself. He is a son of Isaac and Serelda (Serrey) Jordan, the former born in Virginia, in 1700, and the latter a native of Kentucky. The father moved from Virginia to Kentucky as a young man and became a farmer in Anderson County. Zerelda Serrey's parents were natives of Kentucky, where their entire life's work was spent.

After receiving his education Jacob Jordan took up agricultural pursuits, and August 22, 1802, enlisted in Company K, Ninth Kentucky Cavalry, at Eminence, Ky., where he was mustered out at the end of one year. He re-enlisted, January 15, 1804, in Company D, Fifty-fourth United States Infantry, at Louisville, where he was also mustered out in September, 1865. He served the first time under Captain William Edwards, and the second time under Captain L. D. Brown, being mustered in by Gen. John M. Palmer. He took part in the Battle of Richmond, October 8, 1862, and helped drive Bragg away from Perryville; fought against John Morgan July 4, 1862, in Kentucky, and followed him twenty-four days through Indiana and Ohio and captured him in the latter State, participating in many skirmishes. Near the close of the war Mr. Jordan spent about four months fighting guerrillas in the Kentucky mountains, and during this time suffered many hardships and had many narrow escapes, one of their most troublesome enemies being Ben Frohman. Mr. Jordan won a very creditable record during his service and was never captured or wounded. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

After the war Mr. Jordan returned to his native State, and in November, 1870, moved from Danville to Chatham, Ill., which has since been his home. He was married, in Anderson County, Ky., February, 1859, to Miss Sarah E. Rucker, a native of Anderson County, born October 6, 1843, daughter of Ezekiel and Rebecca (Cummings) Rucker, both natives of Kentucky. Her father was a soldier in the Mexican War and died in the city of Mexico, after which his widow lived many years on the farm in Kentucky. Mrs. Rucker moved to Chatham, Ill., in 1871, and there her death occurred in August, 1892. Mrs. Jordan had two brothers who served in the Civil War, one of whom was killed in service and the other is in the Soldiers' Home at Danville, Ill. During the time her husband was in the army Mrs. Jordan supported two children on the farm and for two winters hauled and chopped her own wood. She spun and wove the cloth for her family in her early married life. She and her husband had one son in the Spanish-American War. Sixteen children were born to this couple, as follows: Isaac S., born in Kentucky, October 24, 1859; Annie B., September 8, 1861; Richard T., April 18, 1863; John C., September 30, 1864; Ulysses S., July 25, 1866; Lillie M., September 26, 1866; Hattie S., July 17, 1870; William O., April 25, 1872; James P., February 14, 1874; Russell, August 14, 1876; Columbus, September 2, 1877; Raleigh W., May 7, 1879; twins, born September 25, 1881, lived but a short time; Lena M., born March 28, 1882; Seaburt R., July 16, 1884. Of these children ten survive, seven sons and three daughters. This is one of Sangamon County's largest families and all its members are highly respected by those who know them.

Mr. Jordan is a member of the Christian Church and is a staunch Republican. He has always taken an active interest in public affairs and has served many times as Road Commissioner and Village Trustee. He was a successful farmer and has for several years been retired from active life.

JORDAN, Winfield S., a substantial agriculturist of Sangamon County, who is carrying on operations on his well-cultivated tract of forty acres in Section 13, Cooper Township, was born in Lawrenceburg, Anderson County, Ky., June 3, 1845, a son of Isaac and Sorrendo (Sercey) Jordan, farming people of Kentucky, where both spent their entire lives. They were the parents of ten children, of whom the following survive: Mrs. Martha Caruthers, residing in Kentucky; Jacob, living in Chatham, Ill., John, of Franklin County, Ky., James, of Lexington, Ky., and Winfield S. All of the brothers of Mr. Jordan served throughout the Civil War.

Winfield S. Jordan was educated in Kentucky, and in his boyhood worked on the home farm. When the Civil War broke out, young Jordan was fired with patriotism, and eventually, in 1863, enlisted from Frankfort, Ky., in Company G, Thirtieth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until 1865, participating in many battles, among which were Perryville and Cynthiana, Ky., and Salt Works, Va., the latter being the place where Col. Breckinridge was captured. After the close of the war, during which Mr. Jordan made a gallant record, he returned home, and after his marriage was engaged in farming for a time. He then moved to Chatham, Ill., where for about ten years he was engaged in farming, and then moved to Glenarm, where he entered the employ of the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis Railroad Company, continuing in their service for five years and then removing to Springfield, where he worked for three years in the rolling mills. After five years spent in farming in Christian County, Mr. Jordan moved to Cooper Township, Sangamon County, where he has since carried on agricultural operations, although for short periods he has lived in Mt. Auburn, Rochester and Springfield. He is a Republican in politics and his religious connection is with the Methodist Church.

Mr. Jordan was married in Anderson County, Ky., in 1880, to Elizabeth Humes, who was born in Washington County, Ky., and to this union there were born two children, of whom one survives, Isaac, who is engaged in farming near Springfield. Mrs. Jordan died September 17, 1895, and on September 17, 1897, Mr. Jordan took for his second wife Mary Dobson, who was born in Missouri in 1864. Her parents, who were farming people of Missouri, moved to Illinois and settled in Sangamon County, where the remainder of their lives were spent. Mrs. Jordan is a consistent member of the Methodist Church.

JUDD, George, who owns a nice farm of thirty acres on the edge of the city of Springfield, Ill., has spent his entire life in this vicinity. He was born in Springfield, April 17, 1848, a son of Evl and Paulina (Southwick) Judd, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of New York State. The father came to America as a young man and spent a few years at Montreal, Canada, coming to Springfield in 1838. He entered land from the Government and carried on farming and also worked at his trade of brick mason, making his home at Springfield until his death, April 16, 1870. He took part in the Mormon War. His wife died at Carlville, May 14, 1869.

Mr. Judd was educated in Springfield public schools and in youth worked on his father's farm. For eleven years he worked in the brick yard for John Lauterbach, then took up teaming and followed that occupation three years, following which he spent thirteen years at the Black Diamond Coal Mine, and eleven years since he bought his present home and the small fertile farm he has so successfully cultivated. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Church and active in its good work, and in politics he is a Republican. He has many warm friends in the city and stands well with all who have had any dealings with him. He was personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and had much respect for him and his principles.

October 29, 1874, Mr. Judd was married in Springfield, to Helen Fitch, born in Jackson County, Ohio, November 8, 1852, daughter of Stephen A. Fitch, also a native of that State. Mr. Fitch was a carpenter by trade and died in Ohio, where he had spent his entire life, in 1856. His widow later came to Springfield, and died, at the home of Mrs. Judd, in 1881. Four children were born to Mr. Judd and wife, of whom three now survive: Anna, wife of Charles Bryant, of Springfield, who conducts a dairy; Nancy A., married James Thompson, a miner, and she conducts a grocery store on Laurel Street, Springfield; James, a miner living in Springfield. There are eleven grandchildren in the family. Mr. Judd's comfortable home is pleasantly located on the southwestern corner of Fourth and Ash Streets.

JUDD, Marquis L., a retired farmer of Dawson, Sangamon County, comes of old American families which have proven themselves reliable in times of public peril in successive generations. His parents were Rezin and Eve (Shinkle) Judd, natives respectively of Kentucky and Ohio. The father emigrated with his parents from Kentucky to Ohio when he was five years old. The family settled in Clermont county, that state and lived there twenty-eight years. When they removed from Ohio to Illinois, making the journey by wagon, and passing through the woods and unbridged streams, they found the "new country" plentifully peopled by Indians. They acquired 205 acres of government land two miles east of Clear Lake, where they made improvements and farmed until 1857. In 1858 they traded their land for houses and a stock of merchandise at Dawson, where the elder Judd died in 1876, aged seventy-four years, and his widow in 1888, aged eighty-four years. They had ten children, four of whom are living at this time. William W., the eldest, manages a store in Dawson, Ill.; Margaret E. (Judd) Alls, born February 15, 1839, lives at Roby, Ill.; Rezin A. V., agent for the Illinois Traction Company at Dawson, was born December 16, 1846; Marquis L., born December 23, 1841. Marquis L. Judd was reared on his father's farm and acquired his education in the public schools near his home. He was employed on his father's place most of the time until the family removed to Dawson. His father enlisted in Company F, Seventieth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for service in the Civil War, but was taken sick before the muster. Marquis then took his place in the company, was mustered in and served under Captain Cummings, being mustered out at the end of his term of three months and honorably discharged. Later he took part in the operations before Vicksburg, Miss., in 1863.

Mr. Judd was variously employed during his active years. Some of the time he farmed with considerable success. He was the first carrier of Dawson Rural Delivery Route No. 21, which he drove for six years. Previously he was in the employ of a coal company for a considerable time. He is a Republican and a Methodist. In Masonic circles he is known as a member of Dawson Lodge No. 556, Free and Accepted Masons, and is also a member of the allied Order of the Eastern Star. He has never married.

Mr. Judd is the owner of considerable property near Dawson and is popular and influential in his community.

JUDD, Rezin A. V., agent of the Illinois Traction Company at Dawson, is one of the trusted men of that corporation, and has proven his worth through years of steadfast endeavor. He was born in Clear Lake Township, Sangamon County, December 16, 1846, a son of Rezin and Eve (Shinkle) Judd, the former born in Mason County, Ky., December 26, 1788, and the latter in Brown County, Ohio, December 2, 1804. The father went to Ohio from Kentucky when only five years of age, being taken there by his parents, and Brown County, of that State, remained the family home until 1826, when migration was made to Sangamon County and settlement effected eight and one-half miles east of Springfield, in Clear Lake Township. In 1857 removal was made to Dawson, where the father conducted a store, and there he died in 1873. His widow survived him until 1888. William Judd, grandfather of Rezin A. V. Judd, founded the family in this country, coming from his native land, Wales, while on the maternal side the origin was of German stock. Ten children were born to Rezin and Eve Judd, six sons and four daughters, of whom there are three surviving sons, all residents of Dawson: R. A. V.; William W., a grocer; and Marquis, retired; and Rezin A. Y. Judd grew up in Clear Lake Township, where he was educated, and found employment for his boyish energies on his father's farm. Upon reaching maturity he engaged in farming for himself, being thus engaged for many years. He also clerked for his father, and finally entered the employ of the Illinois Traction Company, where he has proved to be the right man in the right place. He is a Democrat in politics. Fraternally he belongs to Dawson Lodge No. 712, Modern Woodmen, and Dawson Lodge No. 556, A. F. & A. M., being a member of the council of the former, and was secretary of the latter, as well as Junior Warden. The Methodist Church of Dawson holds his membership.

The marriage of Mr. Judd took place in Fulton County, Ill., March 23, 1853, when he was united with Sarah Bolander, born in that county, April 24, 1850, daughter of Stephen Bolander, a native of Ohio. Mr. Bolander was married in Ohio to one of that State's native daughters, and with his father-in-law moved to Fulton County in its early days, locating on a farm, which he developed into a valuable property. Both he and his wife are deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Judd are the parents of one daughter, Nellie, who lives with her parents. Mr. Judd owns his beautiful home in Dawson, where he and his family enjoy all the comforts of urban life without any of its disagreeable features. He is a man of influence in his community and has earned the prosperity which has attended his efforts.

KABURECK, George, District Manager for the National Protective Legion, of Waverly, N. Y., having charge of the work in twelve counties in Illinois, has been a resident of Springfield, Ill., for several years and has been connected with his present line of work since August, 1907. Mr. Kabureck was born near Paderborn, St. Clair County, Ill., November 10, 1883, and is a son of Albert and Elizabeth (Rapp) Kabureck, who have lived on a farm there since their marriage. They reared a family of seven children. George Kabureck was reared on his father's farm and attended the district school from the age of six to twelve years, then worked for his father until he was seventeen years old, when he spent the year 1899-1900 in the business college conducted by Prof. Joseph F. Foeller, at Belleville, Ill.

Upon leaving school Mr. Kabureck was employed as bookkeeper, collector and city salesman for Joseph Leopold & Brother, a wholesale liquor house of Belleville, where he worked from November 19, 1901, until September 1, 1905. He then accepted a position with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, for which he worked until August 6, 1907, when he joined the National Protective Legion and was employed by it as Assistant District Manager until September 1, 1908, since which time he has been District Manager. He has been very successful in advancing the interests of the order and his wife has for some time served as Secretary of Capital Legion No. 1981, of the city, and Mr. Kabureck holds the office of President. He is thoroughly informed on the principles and teachings of the organization, and is well fitted to impart his knowledge and enthusiasm to others.

December 29, 1908, Mr. Kabureck was married, in St. Patrick's Church, in Springfield, to Margaret Mary Ryan, born in Springfield, March 17, 1887, daughter of John W. and Anna Kusella Ryan, the father a native of Ireland and the mother of Canada. Mr. Ryan is a strong Republican; he and his wife are residents of Springfield, and are members of St. Patrick's Catholic Church. Mr. Kabureck and wife belong to the Church of the Immaculate Conception. He is also a member of the Knights of Columbus and of Pawnee Tribe No. 96, Improved Order of Red Men, which he joined in 1907. He is a man of honesty and integrity, has no bad habits, and is conscientious and industrious in carrying on any work undertaken, having made a success of every enterprise in which he has engaged since leaving home as a boy.

KANE, Charles P.—It is difficult to recall mentally a time when the busy and populous city of Springfield, was a scattered village of wooden houses, but when Philo Beers, the maternal grandfather of Hon. Charles P. Kane, decided to erect a brick house on the corner of Fifth and Madison Streets, be knew that he enjoyed the distinction of having the only one of that material. That was not so long ago, and there are those still living who can remember the innovation. The Beers family were distinguished, not only as pioneers, but also as military people, and they, together with the Kanes, were closely identified with early affairs in Sangamon County.

Charles P. Kane was born at Springfield, Ill., December 15, 1850, and his parents were Rev. Andrew J. and Caroline M. (Beers) Kane. Andrew J. Kane was born in Guilford County, N. C., February 11, 1817, and was ordained a minister in the Christian Church, in 1842. He assisted in building the first bridge over the Sangamon River, at Carpenter's Mill, in 1839, and his death occurred in 1896, when he lacked but three months of being eighty years of age. He married Caroline M. Beers, a native of Sangamon County, who is the only surviving child of Philo and Martha (Stillman) Beers. Mrs. Kane is prominent in religious and social affairs, and is active in the order of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her grandfather, Zachariah Beers, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War and served as an Orderly Sergeant in the Connecticut Militia, entering at the age of sixteen years. He also became a poet of considerable repute and was the author of many patriotic songs which were popular during the administration of President Jefferson. Mrs. Kane is nearly related by marriage, to Pierre Menard, first Lieutenant Governor of Illinois.

Philo Beers, son of Zachariah and father of Mrs. Kane, was a native of Woodbury, Conn. He served in the New York Militia in the War of 1812, and then came to Illinois, where he later served as a member of the General Assembly which met in 1824, at Vandalia, then the State Capital, at which session of the legislature Elias K. Kane was elected United States Senator. He married Martha Stillman, who was born at East Bloomfield, N. Y.

There were some interesting features about the marriage of the first white couple whose union was celebrated within the present limits of Sangamon County, the wedding taking place November 2, 1820, and Rev. Stephen England officiating as minister. It happened that he had no suitable shoes to wear in his official capacity and was forced to borrow a pair of Indian mocassins from his brother-in-law, Evan Brittin. Just one year after this first wedding was celebrated, Charles P. Kane, a grandson of Philo Beers, and a granddaughter of Evan Brittin were married in the same county. An interesting item connected with that first wedding forcibly shows the resourcefulness of the dimes and moids of long ago. The opportunities for providing a desirable wedding feast were few, and although the family of the bride borrowed all the white flour in the neighborhood there still was not enough to make the cake dear to New York housewives, so a toothsome cake of corn meal was baked, and when it was covered with icing, it presented a sufficiently festal appearance.

Charles P. Kane attended school at Springfield and completed the high school course, then entered the office of Hay, Green & Littler, as a law student, and was admitted to the Bar at the age of twenty years. He at once entered into practice, served three years as City Attorney, and in 1881 was elected Judge of the County Court. Upon retiring from the Bench he resumed private practice. In political views Mr. Kane is a Republican casting his first Presidential vote for Gen. U. S. Grant, and in 1892, was the candidate of his party for Congress. He has served as a member of the Board of Supervisors of Sangamon County two years and for five years was a member of the Board of Education of Springfield. At one time he was connected with the Illinois National Bank, having aided in its organization. He is a member of the State Historical Society, has contributed a number of historical papers to its records, and is the author of the article in this work entitled "Early Settlement of Sangamon County." He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, of the Illini Country Club, the Sons of the American Revolution, and the Masonic Order. In the latter he has taken forty-two degrees, including thirty-two of the Scottish Rite, and is Past Grand Commander of the Knights Templar of Illinois. Mr. Kane was married November 2, 1881, to Miss Flora Brittin, of Springfield, and they are parents of three children: Caroline M., Flora E. and Philo B.

KANE, William, well known as the old, reliable expressman, of Springfield, has demonstrated what persistent effort will accomplish. After years of hard work, he has accumulated a comfortable competency which will provide for his declining years. He was born in Ireland, May 9, 1833, and is one of the best representatives of that genial people to be found in the city. He is a son of George and Elizabeth Kane, both natives of Ireland. In 1846 George Kane, who was a machinist by trade, left Ireland and brought his family to Vermont, where his remaining years were spent. Although the family endured many hardships in their new home, none of them regretted the step that brought them to America.

William Kane is practically self-educated. He had learned to farm, and always managed to mingle plenty of helpful sport with his work, from childhood being of a happy disposition. Leaving home when still a boy, he came west to Ohio, working on various railroads. From there he proceeded to Menard County, Ill., and for five years farmed, later going to Cass and Christian Counties, where he continued that occupation. When there was prospect of railroad work in Sangamon County, he came there, and in 1852 helped to lay the first section of track on the Wabash Railroad to run through the county. Later he established his present express business, and for more than twenty-five years has faithfully carried it on, proving so trustworthy and reliable that his customers have kept with him, not caring to risk a change. In 1854 Mr. Kane was married, in Springfield, to Margaret Callahan, born in Ireland. Her parents came to America, settling first in New Jersey, but later coming on to Sangamon County. Mr. and Mrs. Kane became the parents of children as follows: John, born May 22, 1855; James, born June 24, 1856, and Elizabeth, born December 24, 1858. One of the sons served in the regular army. For a number of years Mr. Kane voted with the Republican party, but now prefers to support the man rather than the platform. A staunch Catholic, he holds membership in St. Agnes Church, of Springfield. Fraternally he belongs to the Maccabees and the Hibernians. Genial, obliging, with all the courtesy and good-nature of his people, Mr. Kane is known everywhere and universally liked, and his success is certainly well merited.

KAVANAUGH, Daniel.—It is a remarkable fact that so many soldiers of the Civil War, spared from death on the battle-field or in prison, were able to turn so quietly to everyday affairs and make so much of their after lives. That they have done so, the records of every town and hamlet of the country show. One of the men who chose Springfield as a permanent home after years of more active life, is Daniel Kavanough, of No. 526 East Miller Street. He was born there, in September, 1845, a son of Martin Kavanaugh, a native of Ireland. The parents came to America at a very early date, locating in Springfield, where the mother died in Daniel's infancy. The father was a surveyor, and assisted in surveying much of the land in and about the city. His death occurred in 1860, and all his children, except Daniel, are also dead.

The education of Daniel Kavanaugh was secured in the public and parochial schools of Springfield, while in his odd moments he worked at anything he could find to do. Later he learned painting and followed that trade for a number of years. Inspired by loyal sentiments, he enlisted, at Camp Butler, in Company E, One Hundred and Thirty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry for the 100-day service, then re-enlisted in Company G, Twenty-seventh United States Regulars, and served for the remainder of the war. Among the hard-fought battles of the war in which he took part were those of Lookout Mountain and Shiloh. He went from Cairo, Ill., under General Grant to Fort Donelson, and took part in the engagement there. He was mortised out of the regular service at Cheyenne, Wyo., and remained in the west for about thirty years, but then returned to Springfield, where he has since made his home, enjoying a well earned rest. He is a member of the G. A. R.

On July 27, 1877, he was married, at Black Hawk, Col., to Maggie Holland, born in Superior, Wis., who was a daughter of Irish-born parents, who died in Colorado. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Kavanaugh, two of whom survive: William, of St. Louis; Maggie, wife of Charles Smith, of Springfield, two children—Anna L. and Margarette. Mr. Kavanaugh was personally acquainted with Abraham Lincoln. He has a pleasant home at No. 526 East Miller Street. In political faith he is a Republican. A devout Roman Catholic, he belongs to St. Joseph's parish.

Kavanaugh, Michael, who owns and occupies a handsome home on Peoria Road, Springfield, has been engaged in mining since he was eight years of age. He was born in Lancashire, England, July 15, 1845, son of Martin and Andrea (Flanagan) Kavanaugh, both of whom died in early life in England. The father was employed on a railroad. One brother of Michael Kavanaugh came to America in 1802 and located in Atlanta, Ga., and became employed in a cotton mill, but he has not been heard from in twenty years. Michael Kavanaugh attended school in his native place and when a small boy won a prize of $500 for good scholarship. After coming to Sangamon County he attended night school in the village hall in Ridgeley, during the winter of 1855. He was employed in the West Shaft Mine in 1876. Later in the same year he made a trip to the Black Hills, and then walked nine hundred miles through Dakota, Montana, Idaho and part of Utah, but was not successful, and came back to Springfield. While going through Idaho he was held up by seven men, who searched him but found no valuables, and let him proceed on his way. He returned to Springfield and has continued mining in Sangamon County from then to the present time. He is a member of the Miners' Union and takes an active interest in all public affairs. He is an industrious and conscientious worker and has the confidence of his associates. In politics he is a Republican and he is a member of the Episcopal Church. He has lived in his present home since about 1900 and has lived in the neighborhood of his home since first settling in the county.

Mr. Kavanaugh was married in Springfield, March 10, 1878, to Margaret Wickline, a daughter of Jacob and Mary Wickline, and was born in Shippensburg, Pa., March 2, 1846. Her father came from Germany to the United States as a young man and her mother was born in Shippensburg. Mr. and Mrs. Kavanaugh became parents of three sons and two daughters: Margaret, David John, Frank S., Charles W., and Andrea, all single and at home. By her first marriage Mrs. Kavanaugh had two children: Martha, wife of John Alber, an electrician, living in California, and Mary F., a widow, whose husband took part in the Spanish-American War.

Kaylor, John, a retired farmer and prominent citizen of Iliopolis, Ill., is an honored veteran of the Civil War, in which he served with credit for three years. Mr. Kaylor is a native of Johnstown, Pa., born March 8, 1836, a son of Daniel and Margaret (Ekis) Kaylor, the former a native of Pennsylvania, and the latter of Hagerstown, Md. The paternal great-grandfather was a Revolutionary soldier. A relic of him and Revolutionary days is a sugar bowl over 200 years old, owned by Mr. Kaylor, but now in the possession of his daughter, Mrs. Clark of Iliopolis, Ill.

Daniel Kaylor was a farmer, who in 1850, moved to Edgar County, Ill., where he lived on a farm until his death in 1882, his wife having died two years previously. The family were originally from Germany, and the grandfather, Daniel Kaylor also served in the Revolutionary War. There were eight children born in the family to which John Kaylor belongs: William, John and Theodore, the sons, and Mary A., Louise, Ellen and Malinda, the daughters, in addition to one who died in infancy. William enlisted in Company II, Fourth Indiana Cavalry during the Civil War, and died in Andersonville prison.

John Kaylor received his education in Pennsylvania, spending his boyhood on a farm. As a young man he drove a stage, being in the employ of the Ohio State Company, along the Erie and Pittsburg turnpike, beginning this work in 1853. He drove a coach-and-six from Mercer, Pa., to Iowa City, and after the company moved their outfit of 200 horses and twenty-four stage coaches, he drove two years for the Western Stage Coach Company, operating between Des Moines to Adel, Iowa. He then moved to Edgar County, Ill., and took up farming which he continued from 1858 to 1862, meeting with very gratifying success. On August 1, 1862, he enlisted in Company H, Fourth Indiana Cavalry, serving during the remainder of the war, receiving his discharge August 12, 1865. KECK, Simeon.—Springfield and its neighboring towns afford the people of Sangamon County ample opportunity to carry on successfully almost every branch of Industrial endeavor. So many people come to Springfield on account of its being the capital city that there is a constant demand for all kinds of commodities, while its shipping facilities are excelled only by the largest cities in the country. One of the progressive men of Buffalo, Mechanicsburg Township, who has associated himself with a number of enterprises, is Simeon Keck, farmer, auctioneer and stock dealer. He was born in Lanesville Township, Sangamon County, October 31, 1871, a son of Benjamin and Polly (Alexander) Keck, the former born in Baden, Germany, July 27, 1838, and the latter in Mechanicsburg Township, May 29, 1842. The father was a farmer and stock raiser, who came to the United States, landing in St. Louis, in 1852, whence he traveled to Springfield in 1854. The latter city remained his home for ten years, and he then went to Williamsville, but in 1868 moved to Lanesville, where his son was born. In 1895 he moved to Mt. Pulaski, Logan County, Ill., and this is still his home. He is a Democrat, active in party matters, although not an office seeker. He belongs to the Christian Church, and fraternally is a Modern Woodman. During his long and useful life he has become a heavy landowner, and gained the confidence and respect of all with whom he has been associated.

Simeon Keck was given a good public school education in the schools of Lanesville, and worked on the farm. From boyhood he has been fond of a good horse, and a good judge of them. He never cared for hunting, fishing, or other sports, preferring to find his recreation in handling stock. He remained with his parents until 1868, when he left the farm, moving to Buffalo, where he began handling stock, buying and shipping horses, and during the past twelve years has handled over 1,500 horses, becoming very successful in this line of business. He is also an excellent auctioneer, selling in the Peoria stock yards for the Peoria Horse and Mule Commission Company; at the Union Stock Yards, and the St. Louis Stock Yards. For years he was Highway Commissioner in Lanesville, being elected on the Democratic ticket, and from 1898 to 1901 he was Highway Commissioner in Mechanicsburg Township. In 1900 was elected Supervisor from his township, and was re-elected to the same office in 1910, and is the present incumbent, being a member of the Hospital and Asylum Committee, the Jury and Jury Lists Committee and the Special Committee on Bridges. He is giving his township, as well as the county, a valuable and much-appreciated service. His re-election to the office of Supervisor shows his personal popularity, for the township is strongly Republican, and he has always been a Democrat. Fraternally, he belongs to Buffalo Lodge, K. of P.; Globe Lodge, No. 225, I. O. O. F.; Mechanicsburg; Lanesville Tent. Modern Woodmen; Springfield Lodge of Elks, and has always been active in the work of these various orders, sparing the time for them from his business cares.

Mr. Keck was married, at Rantoul, December, 15, 1904, to Georgia E. O'Connor, born September 17, 1876, in Buffalo, daughter of Rodney and Melvina (Boal) O'Connor, also of Buffalo. No issue. Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor were both born in Sangamon County, and the father survives, conducting a grocery store, but Mrs. O'Connor died a number of years ago. Mr. O'Connor served as Supervisor from Mechanicsburg Township for six years, being elected on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Keck is very energetic, and in addition to his other interests, found opportunity to conduct a thriving grain business at Buffalo and Dawson for three years, selling in 1907. He and his wife are leaders socially, and entertain extensively at their beautiful home, where all their friends are made welcome with true hospitality.

KEELING, Squire.—Some of Sangamon County's most capable public officials and substantial business men are native sons of that locality, and, having spent their lives there, are more than ordinarily interested in the development and progress of the county. One of these is Squire Keeling, a farmer of Section 19, Rochester Township, born in Springfield, April 26, 1839, a son of Louis and Nancy (Dawson) Keeling, natives of Kentucky and Virginia, respectively. The father, who was a brickmaker by trade, came to Illinois at an early day, settling in Rochester Township. At first he conducted a grist mill, but later engaged in the manufacture of brick. For eighteen years he continued in this business, and supplied the material for many of the older structures now standing in Springfield. Retiring from active business, he lived in comfort until his death, in 1857. His widow survived him until 1886. There were twenty-two children in the family of Louis Keeling.

While attending the Springfield schools, Squire Keeling helped his father in the brick yard, but when he worked on his own account, at first, it was at teaming. He then worked as a carpenter for several years. For eleven years he was a member of the city police department, under Mayor Jayne, Mayor Vincent and others, finally serving as Sergeant under Mayor Smith, for two years. Then, for the following two years, he was connected with the City Hall, but in 1905 he went to Rochester Township and bought land on Section 18, and since then has been farming.

The marriage of Mr. Keeling took place in 1861, to America Woodruff, born in Kentucky, where her father died, but her mother came to Illinois, settling in Clear Lake Township, where her death occurred in 1888. Mrs. Keeling died in 1902, having had no issue. Mr. Keeling is a Republican, and has always been active in his party. During his eventful life he has witnessed many changes, and enjoys telling of them. He has always endeavored to do his full duty as he saw it, and is justly numbered among the representative men of his time.

KELLEY, John Q. (deceased).—When a man has lived uprightly, striving through a useful life to care for those dependent upon his exertions, and has done his duty as a man and a citizen, his loss is keenly felt when he passes out of the community. When such a man is also genial and kind-hearted, then, indeed, his place is difficult to fill. Such a man was the late John Q. Kelley, formerly residing at No. 1917 East South Grand Avenue, Springfield. He was born in Chillicothe, Ohio, April 22, 1834, a son of Joshua and Elizabeth (Maryfield) Kelley. The parents were early settlers of Ohio, but came to Charleston, Coles County, III. in 1837, and this was the family home until the death of the father. The mother then moved to Springfield and made it her place of residence until death claimed her. She had four sons, all of whom are now deceased.

John Q. Kelley was educated in Coles County and early learned the carpenter's trade, following it in Charleston until 1875. In that year he came to Springfield and continued work at his trade on many of the public buildings. He did the carpenter work on the First Christian Church, of which he was a consistent member. When his country had need of him, he enlisted in Company C, Fifty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel MacMitchell, serving three years and participating in some of the important engagements of the great struggle. He was discharged at Camp Butler as Corporal. For some years prior to his demise he was an enthusiastic member of Stephenson Post, No. 30, G. A. R. In politics he was a Democrat.

On August 1, 1861, Mr. Kelley was married, in Charleston, Ill., to Miss Arrilla Maryfield, born there March 16, 1845, daughter of John and Hannah (Scholey) Maryfield, both of whom died when Mrs. Kelley was quite young. Mr. Maryfield was a native of Ohio and a brick mason, following his trade in Charleston until his death. Mrs. Kelley had one brother, John A. Maryfield, of Danville. Mrs. Kelley has five children now living: Nicholas, of Springfield; Mary, wife of James Hilton; Mae, wife of Jacob Neeceman, a tailor; Maude, wife of William J. Fitzgerald, in the employ of the Street Railroad Company; Joshua, in the employ of the City Water Works, lives with his mother. There are six grandchildren in the family. Mrs. Kelley is in receipt of a widow's pension from the Government, which recognizes her husband's services to his country. Mr. Kelley knew many great men of his times, including Abraham Lincoln, whom he always tenderly recalled.

KELLEY, Matthew, of Springfield, is a native of that city, born March 10, 1862, son of Andrew and Mary (Grennels) Kelley. Andrew Kelley was born in Limerick, Ireland, about 1822, and came to the United States when a young man, landing in New York. He came direct to Springfield, where he worked in the gin house until compelled by old age to retire from active life, and died in 1907. He was a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. By his first marriage Andrew Kelley had children as follows: John, went West; Margaret, deceased; Matthew; Kate, deceased; Nellie married William Culligan, of Joliet, Ill. His first wife died over forty years ago and he married (second) Mary Landregan, who still resides in Springfield, and they had three children, namely: James and May, of Springfield, the latter a physician; Margaret married Thomas Neely.

In boyhood Matthew Kelley attended the Catholic schools that were taught by the Brothers and Sisters of the Church, and when eight years old began driving a grocery wagon for Larry Fortune. When fifteen years old he began working in the rolling mills and in 1882 went to Hot Springs, Ark., where he conducted a restaurant. In 1887 he returned to Springfield and worked nine years as clerk for Thomas Hogan, then embarked in the transfer and hotel business, which he has since continued. His hotel is located at 1022 East Washington Street, and he runs three waggons. He is industrious and energetic and has been fairly successful in a business way. He is not a member of any church, but is a man of good principles, honest and upright in all his dealings. In politics he is a Democrat.

Mr. Kelley was married, in Peoria, Ill., in 1897, to Miss Lillie Miller, of Springfield, daughter of Mrs. Susan Miller, and two children have blessed this union: Willard Glenn, born in 1900, and Charles Herman, born July 14, 1902.

KELLY, Frank Joseph.—Springfield is not only the capital of the State, but a distributing center for a wide contiguous territory that looks to it as a source of supply. The railroad facilities are such that transportation is good and other conditions are admirable. Frank Joseph Kelly, who has made Springfield his home since 1855, and to whose influence and tact and ability, much of the present prosperity of D. A. Stuart & Co., is due.

Mr. Kelly was born in Cleveland, Ohio, February 13, 1866, a son of Keran and Ellen (Brennan) Kelly, natives of Ireland. Later, however, he embarked in a dray and transfer business, continuing it until his death, which occurred November 6, 1891. His widow survives, making her home in Cleveland, Ohio. She and her husband had ten children, four of whom survive, Mr. Kelly of this record being the only living son. In 1889 he came to Springfield, where he engaged in the retail clothing business, eventually establishing a successful partnership with J. B. Sturtevant & Co., which business he conducted for forty years. After the death of his partner, Mr. Kelly continued the firm until 1903, when he retired, receiving an annual income. He was one of the principal founders of the First National Bank of Springfield, and was its president for ten years. He was also a director of the Springfield Savings Bank, whose president he was for several years. The death of this good man occurred July 9, 1898, but his widow survives, and makes her home in Cleveland. Mr. Lynch was also a Democrat and Catholic. There were nine children in the Lynch family, of whom Mrs. Kelly was the second in order of birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly have an interesting family as follows: Frances Stuart, born January 6, 1896; Margaret Mary, born April 29, 1898, and John Matthew, born February 23, 1906. These children are all attending the Stewart School, and are bright, lively young people, the pride of their parents' hearts.

Mr. Kelly started out to make his own living at a tender age, but he has not suffered from the hard knocks he was forced to take early in his career. He and his wife are very prominent socially, and their pleasant home is often the scene of a merry gathering, for their many friends enjoy the hospitality of this couple whenever occasion offers.
